An earnest plea comes to us from Wyoming that our leaders shall attend the state convention of the W. C. T. U. to be held in Laramie on the Union Pacific road October 18. We quote the letter which is infused by a noble and progressive spirit:

If some of our wise and consecrated sisters could be with us at our convention, the blessing would be felt throughout the state; but our plans are better and more far-reaching than that. We would like to induce a number of our stronger workers to start out the week before the great gathering at Denver, and stop with us at various places along the road over Sunday. My home is in Mannville, on a branch of the Chicago and Northwestern. Tickets from Chicago to Denver may be purchased, I doubt not, as cheap over this road as over any other. There are four or more points along here where untold good might result from the realization of such a plan. We are too poor to offer much financially. It is a hard struggle for existence here now for almost everybody, but there are true hearts and clear brains that love God's cause and perceive the overwhelming importance of pushing it now in our young state. Outsiders cannot realize the growing need of Christian temperance work among us. We will give most willing inducements and collections to those who come, but I must warn you that the collections cannot be large. The National W. C. T. U. has given money for several years past to advance the work in Wyoming but all that has been given has not accomplished a tithe of the good that this plan would realize for us.

Last week our state prohibition convention was held in Cheyenne. The National prohibition committee sent Rev. J. P. Pinkham, of Minnesota, to lecture and organize. Nobly has he wrought among us for two months past. If the National W. C. T. U. could give us like help before the October convention we might enter the lists with the two old parties and have no mean following.

If one of our ablest women could come to us for a month or six weeks it would be worth years to us later on. Now is the time! Brother Pinkham says the interest he has awakened at almost every point visited is a wonder to him. It is education that our people need! Their ears are open now as they will never be again when prosperity has brought increased cares and pleasures. A lecture is the single event of the week or the month now and is heard with more avidity than it will be when it must share in the public interest with the drama, the opera or the church sociable, all on the same night.

I lay these matters before you confident that you will do the very best you can for us and remember that no part of the world is more in need of missionary work than our great West. Pray let me hear soon, for the summer is all too short for our preparations.

Yours for the cause, Emma E. Page.

We wish that some rich man or woman seeing what a wonderful opportunity there is for the best results in this most favored field would send us the money with which we could keep a good and capable woman at work in Wyoming from now until next fall. We are often asked why that state has not a prohibitory law, and our answer is, that its population, like that of all the new states, is largely transient; it has but one-fifth as many women as men,—is almost without railroads, is a mountainous and mining state, the people being in small groups and the women without organization or esprit de corps. It is our own fault that we have not supplied them with the sinews of war and the body of an organization into which could be put the soul of their material interest and enfranchised ballots.

We have urged this upon the W. C. T. U. for years but with less success than we had hoped. If we had but the money we could put the speakers and organizers in the field within one month. Shall we not hear from somebody who has the keenness of perception to see that an investment like this would yield a hundredfold?

Do not all speak at once but by all means speak!

We print the following extract from a letter from one of our missionaries in Midnapore, Bengal, India, to show how at a distance this whole subject of Sunday closing looks to Christian Americans, and in the hope that the letter may help to give a new incentive to our faithful workers who are doing their utmost to prevent the ignominy of an open and a beer Sunday at the great Exposition.

To the President of the World's W. C. T. U.:

We, a small band of American missionaries, have watched with interest the discussions in the papers with regard to the World's Fair, Sabbath opening, etc., and we read later, with great regret, that in spite of opposition the drinking element is to be largely represented. I take the liberty to write you to ask if all possible means have been adopted to prevent this disgrace. It seems to us a shame that there should be any discussion about opening the grounds on Sunday, or that there should be any opposition to the absolute exclusion of the whisky element. Have we no means of keeping the Fair pure? One of the arguments in favor of Sabbath opening and the liquor traffic was that our expected foreign guests are accustomed to no Sunday and are accustomed to be drunken. Since we are to pander to their low tastes in these things, instead of trying to make them better, why not provide for them also gambling saloons and haunts of infamy, to both of which they are probably accustomed? Oh, the shame of it! Is it not bad enough that irreligion, drunkenness and immorality are on the increase, but that we must advertise ourselves to the world as a Sabbath-breaking, drinking nation, without religious principle or any regard to religious principle in others? Cannot the W. C. T. U. prevent such a disgrace? Have not the good women of America the power to prevent this ignominy? If not, God help "the land of the free and the brave." I remain, Yours respectfully,

Mrs. M. W. Bacheler.

The Republican convention is now a matter of history. To our minds the following paragraph (from a Democratic paper at that!) sets forth the event in that great gathering that was most significant of good in store for humankind:

Then comes a novel feature of political conventions. One of the women delegates from Wyoming, arm in arm with John C. New, walks briskly down the aisle to a seat near the chairman, while delegates applaud and spectators shout. For the benefit of ladies interested in politics it may be noted that her dress is trim, well-fitting, blue, tailor-made, and that she has a white vest. Furthermore, her face is decidedly attractive, and her hat is undeniably on straight. Her appearance in that convention means a great deal to advancing liberality and intelligence. Then the band, hung from the roof, began to play national airs.

Another account mirrors even more clearly the progressive spirit of the convention:

John C. New's entrance came at this point, and, curious to say, the band was at that moment playing an entrancing strain from a popular ballad. Mr. New was escorting a remarkably beautiful lady of stately presence down the main aisle. It was the lady delegate from Wyoming, and the cheering that greeted both was a revelation even in a national convention. Mr. New was visibly embarrassed at the warmth of the greeting.

This delegate was Mrs. Therese C. Jenkins, of Cheyenne, who presented the equal franchise flag to the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Boston at our last annual meeting.

Nothing will do more to break any tendency to narrowness and individualism in our work than the stretching out of friendly and fraternal hands to other groups of Christian workers whose aims are in the last analysis the same as ours, namely, the enthronement of the love of God in society and government, and the triumph of the brotherhood of man. We see that a clear brain is a prerequisite to these results; others, while not denying this proposition, feel themselves called to work in different lines—as the educational, the missionary, purity, the labor reform party, the woman movement, and those specialists who seek the amelioration of certain bodies—as sailors, soldiers, railway employes, policemen, besides the great classes grouped under the heads, defective, dependent and delinquent. In our judgment we should send fraternal delegates to these brother and sister workers, inviting them to do the same to our own conventions. No episode of the recent meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Boston was more impressive than when the representatives of thirty or more different organizations appeared upon the platform, were introduced, and spoke two or three minutes each in explanation of their work, bringing greetings of good will.

"Out of our own weakness we may sometimes reach a helping hand just where we are. My heart goes out in sympathy to those whose sons are to their hearts a living sorrow. I have been where there was no help; nothing that was on record seemed sufficient, but as I abode in stillness, and helpless in the flesh, or by any power of mind, I have realized the blessed words, 'I am with thee,' and a living power arose in my soul and calmed the waves of trouble. My faith is built upon this immediate, divine revelation to my spirit in its hour of need. This is the thing that cannot be shaken, though creeds may be forgotten and destroyed. It is above reason, though never inconsistent with right reason, for both are of divine origin. Excuse this from one who has already proved the truth of what she pens."—From a personal letter.

***

Iceland is a nation of 73,000 people in which men and women are in every respect political equals governed by representatives of their own election. The boys and girls are taught by their own mothers and in the whole island there is not an illiterate person to be found, every child being able to read, write and cipher by the time he has reached the age of seven. And those voting mothers, who educate their own children, have produced a nation in which there are no prisons, no police, no thieves, no enormously rich, no miserably poor; just a plain, temperate, chaste, educated and intelligent people. In these days when over-cautious politicians seem frightened by the proposition to enfranchise their own countrywomen it may encourage them somewhat to let them see the practical working of full woman suffrage among 73,000 people. This is the judgment of an intelligent English woman who has recently traveled there.

***

Old Abe, the famous war eagle of the 8th Wisconsin, lived for many years after peace was declared, in honorable guardianship at the State House in Madison, and laid an egg during the time. This was kept quiet so that the honors of war would not have to be conferred upon a female! The bird which has so long stood as the emblem of our national liberty is the female of its species—so says John Burroughs, the great outdoor poet observer and philosopher. W. C. T. U., "please make a note on."

***

Miss Octavia Bates, of Detroit, is a prominent member of the dress reform committee of the woman's council. Miss Bates is a graduate of Michigan University, a noble and thoroughly cultured lady. No one on the street has a more unexceptionable appearance. She was recently interviewed and spoke to the following purport: "The Austrian government, by advice of its sanitary commissioners, has adopted a police regulation which forbids the trailing of anybody's garments on the ground, because of the unhealthfulness of such a custom. No law would have a right to say what anybody shall wear so far as it affects the wearer, but only as it affects the interests of others. It has, however, been clearly shown that long skirts dragging on the street stir up the dust which contains dried, unhealthy sputum, and this dust is breathed into the nostrils and so people following in the wake of the long skirts are apt to become infected. Then they carry home with them the seeds of disease and they are spread throughout the community. It is on behalf of the public health that we believe the courts will ere long legislate against long skirts."

***

A burly business man of Hartford, Conn., was talking to his partner in words like these: "I told B. that we must look to our laurels. I cannot help noticing how splintered and stunted the race of young men is while the young women are taking to outdoor exercises, the gymnasium, the natatorium, the wheel, the oar, the tennis ground, and even to base-ball. Then, they dress more reasonably now-a-days, at least during the pleasantest part of the year, for they go to the country, wear gymnastic suits and live in the sunshine of pure air. They have good rich blood and any amount of cheery spirits, while our boys as a class do not show as good, hopeful symptoms physically as they did when I was a boy, —not by a big majority." His wise and thoughtful friend made this reply: "Do you know the reason? I can tell you. The cigarette habit already claims ninety per cent of the boys in school in our large cities; tobacco, beer, saloons, gambling houses and evils deeper if possible and darker, that go with these, are tightening their devilish grip around the boyhood and young manhood of this country. The question is, what are we going to do about it?" and the two strong men fell to thinking. On Duty.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

STATE REPORTERS.

Alabama—Mrs. Jennie B. Gerald, Montgomery.
Arizona—Mrs. L. C. Hughes, Tucson.
Arkansas—Mrs. F. L. Sutton, 315½ W. Markham street, Little Rock.
California—Mrs. M. G. C. Edholm, Oakland.
California (Southern)—Mrs. Mary E. Garbutt, Temperance Temple, Los Angeles.
Carolina (N.)—Miss Bettie D. Caldwell, Greensboro.
Carolina (S.)—Miss Nettie P. Farrow, Spartanburg.
Colorado—Mrs. S. L. Teetor, Denver.
Connecticut—Miss M. Belle Smith, Rockfall.
Dakota (North)—Miss Emma F. Bates, Valley City.
Dakota (South)—Mrs. Irene G. Adams, Lake Helen, Volensia Co. Fla.
Delaware—Miss Annie Sutton, Smyrna.
District of Columbia—Miss Lizzie Kessler, 802 North I street, Washington.
Florida—Mrs. Emma L. Robinson, Orange City.
Georgia—Miss Missouri Stokes, Decatur.
Idaho—Mrs. Mary E. McGee, Nampa.
Illinois—Mrs. G. H. Read, 412 E. North street, Bloomington.
Indiana—Miss Sadie B. Whistler, Terre Haute.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Sarah Ford Crosby, Muscogee
Iowa—Mrs. Clara P. White, Volga.
Kansas—Mrs. S. S. Weatherby, Le Roy.
Kentucky—Miss Nellie Sloy, Lebanon.
Louisiana—Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge.
Maine—Miss Mary French, Auburn.
Maryland—Mrs. Margaret A. Lake, Mt. Washington.
Massachusetts—Katherine Lente Stevenson, 171 Tremont St., Boston.
Michigan—Mrs. C. H. Johnson, Flint.
Minnesota—Mrs. Amy B. Green, 2208 6½ avenue, Minneapolis.
Mississippi—Miss Laura A. Stout, Corinth.
Missouri—Mrs. Mary E. Jones, Humansville.
Montana—Mrs. W. W. Wylie, Bozeman.
Nebraska.—Mrs. Dora V. Wheelock, Beatrice.
Nevada—Mrs. Lena M. Westlake, Reno.
New Hampshire—Mrs. F. H. Bailey, Hopkinton,
New Jersey—Mrs. N. L. Caminade, Trenton.
New Mexico—Mrs. Ada Morley Jarrett, Socorro.
New York—Mrs. Frances Graham, Lockport.
Ohio—Miss Hannah A. Foster, Berea.
Oklahoma—Mrs. Sue Brown, Oklahoma City
Oregon—Mrs. L. A. Nash, Corvallis.
Pennsylvania—Mrs. Bertha Howe, Bradford.
Rhode Island—Miss Miriam Earle, Valley Falls.
Tennessee—Mrs. T. P. Holman, Fayetteville.
Texas—Mrs. Elizabeth Strong Tracy, Houston.
Utah—Miss Mary Howard Nutting, 2324 Madison Ave., Ogden.
Vermont—Mrs. Clinton Smith, Middlebury.
Virginia—Miss Lona A. Kern, Winchester.
Virginia (W.)—Mrs. Mary Cartwright, 1007 Main St., Wheeling.
Washington (East)—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.
Washington (West)—Mrs. J. W. Lee, Tacoma.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Maria F. Hanchette, 322 W. Washington Ave, Madison.
Wyoming—Mrs. Therese A. Jenkins, Cheyenne.

MISSOURI.

STIRRING WORKERS.

"If in thy path some thorns are found,
Oh, think who bore them on His brow.
If grief thy sorrowing heart has bound,
It reached a holier than thou."

The first district has been much benefited, and many new members were added to their number by the energetic work of Miss Clara Parrish, who filled seventeen engagements. Three new unions were formed with a membership of fifty-eight. Two sleeping organizations were awakened. At Kaboka, a most enthusiastic meeting was held on Sunday afternoon. Twenty-one recruits was the result of this gathering. Miss Parrish is a superior organizer. Fifteen engagements have been made in this district for Miss H. G. Moore, and the end is not yet.

The local union at Seneca are doing their part to make the world better, having circulated three petitions. They have a wall pocket which is kept filled with copies of Miss Willard's address, leaflets, temperance papers, etc. This union was strengthened very much by the lecture given by Mrs. Denny, of Indiana, some weeks ago.

Jefferson City was delighted with the result of a series of gospel temperance meetings, and several new members were added to the ranks. They gave a supper, and hope to have a reading-room soon. A summary of work done during the past month was reported at a meeting not long since by the St. Louis district officers and superintendents. Mr. Henderson, secretary of the colored Y. M. C. A., was present, and spoke in strong words of his sympathy for the W. C. T. U. This was, indeed, an enjoyable meeting.

The death angel has again called home a pioneer worker. Mrs. S. A. Seward answered the call. She was from the beginning president of the Laclede W. C. T. U. In all her work she was assisted by her husband, who is a minister. Her face will be missed in the local, county and district meetings, which she always attended when able, though she had more than reached the age of "three score and ten." The funeral services of Mother Seward were conducted by Mrs. Ida B. Cole, president of the second district W. C. T. U., in such an able, impressive manner, that it reminded all present how fitting it was that these services should be conducted by a sympathizing white-ribbon sister.

Brookfield had an enjoyable experience meeting, and added three new members to its list. Linn county held an interesting convention at Browning. Mrs. Cole gave an able address to a large audience at night, and on Friday morning she organized a Y. W. C. T. U. of twelve members. This makes nineteen new unions recently organized in this district. Who says Missouri sleepeth?

The Y's of Meadville gave a unique Easter entertainment on Saturday evening before Easter. The invitations were sent out in Easter eggs, on which were painted oak and ivy leaves. The W. C. T. U. of this city held an open meeting in the interest of Sabbath closing and prohibition of the liquor traffic at the World's Fair. The "wise" gave recitations and music, which all enjoyed.

A Chillicothe audience was delightfully entertained by a gold medal contest. To each person contesting was given a prize, but the medal was awarded to Miss Fay Hill. The proceeds of the evening amounted to twenty-two dollars. At the Livingstone county Sunday school convention the W. C. T. U. distributed the Temperance Lesson Helps for May, and urged the use of them. Resolutions were passed by this Sunday-school convention denouncing the liquor traffic and against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday.

Mrs. Ida B. Cole, who has so ably filled the office of president of the second district, has removed to Dwight, Ill. The prayers of her co-workers go with her, and she will be greatly missed by the many white-ribboners who love her. Mrs. M. L. Williams, of Chillicothe, has been appointed district president in her place. Down in the fourteenth district, which contains seventeen counties, work is progressing in a marvelous fashion. Miss Carrie L. Carter, district president; Miss Nettie Danforth, state president of juvenile work, and the treasurer of the district, have assisted in holding county conventions in the counties of Ozark, Howell, Oregon and Douglass. They were greeted by large audiences and new members were gained. These workers also attended county conventions in Dunklin and Campbell counties with telling results. New L. T. L's were organized as well as a goodly number of Y's.

The district convention, held at Pierce City, in the thirteenth district, this spring, was the largest attended of any district convention ever held by the W. C. T. U. in this section. The reports showed that much work had been done by those devoted to the especial work trusted to their care. Excellent resolutions were passed, and one, deeming it detrimental to the youth of our land to be instructed by teachers in our schools who are infidels or who use alcoholic drink or narcotics, passed with a ring. The establishing of an Industrial Home for girls at Springfield is among the important things which the do everything women of this district have accomplished. On Y evening Miss Carrie Carter gave an able address. The true and tried Mrs. M. B. Cushing was again elected president.

The Prohibitionists at Sedalia are holding important meetings every Saturday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. V. Wisker, of Green Ridge, visited the Sedalia W. C. T. U. and spoke many words of encouragement. A series of gospel temperance meetings was held at Columbia. The saloon men are now not so sure of victory as they were. At Fairplay temperance truths are being taught in the Sunday-schools and in the missionary societies.

Mrs. Alice Williams, one of Missouri's best workers, visited Stockton last week. She gave three addresses at night, and one on Sabbath morning, and visited many homes in the interest of the W. C. T. U. during her visit at this point. She has spoken in many other places within the past few months with telling results. Stockton held her first medal contest with marked success and another will be held soon. Several of these loyal women kept self-denial week and will send proceeds to the Temperance Temple. Mite-boxes are in demand in this city also. A thank-offering meeting was held by the W. C. T. U. of Kirkswood, rejoicing that the hall purchased some years since by the union was at last freed from debt.

The hall was beautifully decorated, special music was prepared and appropriate addresses were given. A letter was read from Mrs. S. F. Grubb, their first president, and who originated the plan of securing the building for the society. As these homes for our earthly occupancy are being builded, Christ himself is preparing mansions for us, and in that great day, verily the reward cometh.

Harrisonville liquor men are trying to obtain license, as the local option law has been decided illegal. They are as yet unsuccessful.

Let each worker consider it a duty to report to the state superintendents all the work done in her locality in all the departments. Hide not the light under a bushel. At Kaboka the W. C. T. U. have brought about the fining of three persons, forty dollars each, for the illegal selling of liquor. Petitions are being circulated, monthly gospel temperance meetings are held, and who dare say that public sentiment is not slowly but surely being established, and in time the monster will be destroyed. Our school of methods promises this year to be a great educator for all who attend. Miss Morris is doing her utmost, and unprecedented attractions are offered by the Chautauqua Assembly as well. Let every one interested in the work attend this meeting. Our president, Mrs. Clara Hoffman, spent May in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and will be in Minnesota and North Dakota during the month of June. Our state convention will be held at Springfield, September 9 to 12. As there is much work to be done at this convention would it not be well for each white-ribboner to secure a copy of the state minutes from other states and compare them with our own constitution which is to be revised this year? Then let us study the map of this state, and bring one with us for use at state convention, as we will be called upon to consider the re-districting of the state. Shall we follow the political gerrymander, or shall we have convenient W. C. T. U. districts? And let us all go to work in earnest for the Missouri Home Guard. Can't every white-ribboner purchase or agree to sell one share (one dollar) of Home Guard stock? If we will do this, Missouri work will prosper as it never has before. Let this be a topic at every convention.

MRS. MARY E. JONES,
State Reporter, Humansville.

MASSACHUSETTS.

GOSSIP AND GLEANINGS.

Miss Bumstead having been forced, through press of other duties, to resign her office as state reporter, it has taken some time for the new reporter to adjust this line of work with the well-nigh numberless ones already in operation. Therefore the unusual period which has elapsed since Massachusetts was last heard from in "News from the Field" must serve as my excuse for a longer retrospect than would otherwise be permissible.

The spring of 1892 will always be memorable in Massachusetts white ribbon circles. So much has been crowded into its days that we feel as if they must have been increased in number above all the springs which have preceded them; or else we are learning in a new sense what it is to have our days "long on the earth." First came the semi-annual convention at Amherst, graced by the presence of our two white-ribbon queens, Lady Henry Somerset and Frances E. Willard. Next came Lady Henry Somerset's lecture in Tremont Temple, already so fully reported in the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL. We shall never, as a state, forget that meeting or outgrow its beneficent influence. Wherever I go among our sisterhood, or even among those not yet united with us in white ribbon bonds, I hear, "Was not that the most wonderful meeting you ever attended?" and I always respond with an emphatic "yes." Our gracious English guest has left behind her a sweet memory and a far-reaching impulse.

Then came the busy tumult of our Easter sale, in which, for the space of one week, the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. kept shop, restaurant, art-store, grocery—what you will. They were indeed "busy" days, and the devotion of our women to our cause was never more clearly proven. It is good to know that so much hard toil was not in vain, and that we cleared for the state treasury through Lady Henry's lecture and the sale, above all expenses, a little more than three thousand dollars. At the request of Mrs. Livermore, who was the inspiring power in the whole transaction, without whom it would hardly have been undertaken, and who labored indefatigably, the executive board sent one hundred dollars to the Temple, thereby placing our president's honored name upon a tablet in Willard Hall. Of the remaining sum, part will doubtless be set aside for permanent headquarters; the remainder put at once into our general work. Our own eastern "temple" grows more and more clearly a definite thought in our minds. It will not attempt to rival "the Temple," but will stand, we believe, in the near future, as a lasting memorial to the courage and faith of our own sisterhood, as well as a monument to the eternal principles of truth and righteousness.

The days of county conventions are now upon us, together with meetings of various kinds among our local unions. Our state is divided W. C. T. U-ly into thirteen counties, nearly all of which hold quarterly conventions, though some hold only three a year. At these conventions, headquarters are usually represented either by the president or secretary. Although we count by no means the magnificent distances belonging to some of our sister states, we still find that a great many miles of travel are necessary in transit from the northwest extremity of Berkshire county, where our dear little Williamstown union nestles among its beautiful hills, to the southeast tip of Cape Cod, where Provincetown sits enthroned, to say nothing of our three island unions on Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket. It has been my happy privilege to make a tour of Cape Cod, skipping across to Vineyard Haven for over Sunday, within the last fortnight, and I wish I might give some adequate conception of that ideally beautiful trip, but reportorial space is not allowed for rhapsodies, so I can only say that I organized a new union of seventeen members at the little village of Orleans, spent two days at the county convention in Chatham; laid the foundation for a future organization at Bourne, besides addressing the Vineyard Haven union on the eve of Decoration Day. This last is an especially wide-awake, active union, and has won a high place in the esteem of the citizens of that beautiful, dream-like town.

While I was on Cape Cod, our state president, Mrs. Fessenden, was winning for herself golden laurels in Connecticut, and from those diverse paths we met, for the first time in nearly two weeks, at the Y conference in Worcester, June 2 and 3. That was an especially delightful gathering. I have always felt my heart drawn out very largely to our Y work, but I was never before quite so proud of our Y's both individually and collectively, as on that occasion. Miss Fessenden is an admirable leader, and has drawn about her a class of thoughtful, earnest girls, whose very faces prophesy eloquently of our future work.

The exercises were varied; nearly all the most important departments of our work being represented. Mrs. Rice was there to speak on the Sunday-school department. Mrs. Purington conducted a charming health symposium; Mrs. Gleason put the whole of her inspiring zeal into her tobacco hour; while it fell to my lot to conduct a franchise hour, made bright and helpful by the ready aid given by the Y's themselves. Mrs. Fessenden spoke on "The Temple," "The Great Petition," and filled in every available moment with wise words, being especially helpful in the parliamentary drill, which took the practical form of a discussion as to whether or not the next conference should be held in connection with the annual convention. The Y's themselves were by no means left out of the program. Miss Webber, of Bedford, told how her own union won the prize banner accorded to the Y reporting the largest gain in membership at the last convention. Then five-minute talks on "The Model Y Meeting," "The Model Y President," and "The Model Y Social," were given by Miss Porter, of Dorchester, Miss Thayer, of Boston, and Miss Dow, of Reading, and were each in their turn "model" talks. The Spencer, Wollaston, and E. Weymouth unions each reported through their respective presidents, and each report showed genuine work. The evening of the 2d was occupied by a "vesper service" compiled by Mrs. Alice J. Harris, president of the Lady Henry Somerset Y union of Boston. It consists of responsive readings, interspersed with solos, choruses, five-minute addresses, and we predict for it a wide popularity among our unions. It was doubly delightful that evening because Mrs. Harris herself was there to sing. A fact of especial significance was that the girls, at their own request, gave up part of their social hour to listen to an address on purity which was not on the program. Altogether it was a delightful gathering; the hospitality of the Worcester Y's, backed by the W's, was superabundant, and in blessing they must surely have been blessed.

Mrs. Rice has been out of the state for some weeks in Connecticut and Delaware. Mrs. Gleason has traveled many miles in Maine, and starts to-day for a second tour. Miss Tobey has been occupied in evangelistic work almost uninterruptedly during the year. We count as a state twenty-four unions not of us at the last annual convention, and several others coming. Our state paper has been enlarged from a four to an eight page monthly, and boasts a steadily increasing circulation, though by no means so large as its importance as a factor in state work demands.

The "dollar experience meeting" is taking hold upon us. Upham's Corner union netted fifty dollars at one held a few weeks ago. Lynn No. 2 has issued invitations for another to be held June 9. Dorchester, Clinton, Newton and several of our other unions are arranging for them in the near future. If, as THE UNION SIGNAL prophesied, "there's millions in it," Massachusetts wants her full share of the spoils. I must not forget our L. T. L. county conventions, which are becoming a regular feature in our juvenile work. Nearly all the counties are holding them this season, and a very genuine esprit de corps seems breathed through them into the hearts of the children who attend. Mrs. Rice seems well-nigh ubiquitous in her L. T. L. work. If I did not know that one body cannot be in two places at the same time, I should say that she was constantly in several. Perhaps she is the one exception proving the rule.

Both the state president and secretary were delegates at the Prohibition state convention held in Worcester, June 2. Mrs. Fessenden was also a member of the resolutions committee, and will probably attend, as delegate, the National Prohibition convention in Cincinnati. The Worcester convention was full of enthusiasm. Five hundred and seventy three delegates were present, fully one-third of which were women. White ribboners were many, who subscribed liberally to the campaign fund on behalf of their unions. Rev. Lewis A. Banks proved himself a most electric presiding officer, while the address of the nominee for governor, Hon. Wolcott Hamlin, of Amherst, was thoughtful and earnest.

From Worcester, the paths of the president and secretary again diverged, the latter filling engagements in Worcester county at Clinton, Northboro, North Brookfield and Westminster, also attending the county convention of Worcester North, on June 10th, while the former has before her a week into which are crowded the conventions of Hampshire, Middlesex and Franklin counties, with other engagements filling every available moment. That Massachusetts fully appreciates her president is proven by the fact that no gathering is ever willingly without her presence.

The continued absence of both president and secretary from headquarters could be possible at no other season, and is only made possible now by the thorough acquaintance of Mrs. Everett and Miss Coffin with every detail of the work, as well as the enthusiasm and consecration they bring to it.

KATHERINE LENTE STEVENSON,
State Reporter, Boston.

OREGON.

"OVER THE MOUNTAINS AND FAR AWAY."

Hither went our state convention this year, so that our sisters in eastern Oregon might have their turn for which they have been so long waiting. Unfortunately the distance and expense of the journey was so great that not many from the seaboard were able to get there. Pendleton, where it was held, is one of our rapidly growing cities, with a high and dry atmosphere, commanding wide wheat distances, and belted by blue horizons of mountains. The streets are rendered picturesque by the Umatilla Indians, with strange headgear and blanket dress, the squaws riding in straddle fashion, wearing bright bandana handkerchiefs and looking quite unconcerned. The cow-boy comes, too, with his sombrero and long lasso —but, alas for the many saloons that excite him to a stampede, and delude the citizens because of the revenue to their town. Mrs. Jennie Leet, our Benton county president, provides me with a full report, which I shall just pass on:

"The tenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon met at the First Baptist church in Pendleton on the morning of May 24th and held a four days' session. About thirty-five delegates arrived the evening of the 23d, and were provided entertainment by the ladies of Pendleton. The convention assembled at 8:30 a. m., and was opened with appropriate devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. M. E. K. Edwards, of Newberg, state superintendent of evangelistic work. Prayers were offered for God's blessing upon the convention, after which the roll of state officers was called, which showed they were all present. The rest of the forenoon was mainly taken up with preliminary work.

"The corresponding secretary read a report showing that there are one hundred and six unions in Oregon, twenty-six of which have been organized during the past year. The report of the treasurer showed the receipts of the past year to be tripled in three years which shows the progress of the work in this great organization. The afternoon was occupied with reports of department work and a mothers' meeting conducted by Mrs. Helen Harford, of Newberg. The remarks on the care and training of children were interesting and instructive. At the evening session there was an address of welcome by Mrs. De Spain, of Pendleton, and response by Mrs. Smith French, of The Dalles, after which was given the annual address of the president. Closing remarks were made by Rev. A. G. Evans. He paid a high tribute to the white ribbon women of the state.

"Wednesday's proceedings consisted mainly of interesting reports by the superintendents. The evening session was occupied by an able and stirring lecture by the National organizer, Mrs. Delle C. H. Cox, who has a rare gift of language and expression. Her theme was, "The Liquor Traffic in Politics." Thursday, the reports on department work were continued, and the discussions following each report showed great earnestness. A very profitable discussion followed the report on purity in literature and art, bringing out facts regarding the alarming extent to which impure literature is circulated, corrupting the minds of the young, and many methods of prevention were suggested. At the evening session there were brief reports presented by county presidents, showing a greater amount of work done than any previous year. Then Mrs. Helen Harford was introduced, and addressed the audience on the evils of the liquor traffic. She has an eloquent and pleasing style, and the lecture was enjoyed by all. On Friday morning occurred the election of officers. The afternoon was taken up by reports from different committees and electing superintendents of departments. The convention adopted the following additional departments: physical culture, work among railroad men, work among miners, and the department of neglected children.

"In the evening there was a flag presentation by Mrs. Smith French, of The Dalles, to the county having the largest increase of membership in the past year. Yamhill was the county which received this flag. A banner also was presented to the county having the largest increase in membership in the Loyal Temperance Legion. The banner was awarded to Polk county. There was then a prayer service for God's blessing upon the work and workers for the coming year, thus closing the tenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oregon.

Of county conventions we have had two in the month of May. The first for Washington county under the leadership of Mrs. S. H. Spangler, who is a true helpmate to her husband, occupying his pulpit (Methodist) whenever he is absent. They should know this at General Conference! The children were quite a feature. Mrs. Spangler is aided by her daughter, an adept at juvenile work, and the little ones were there, with their music and song, and Mrs. Ada Unruh, their state leader, to address them. No wonder the mothers' meeting which followed had special unction and helpfulness. Our state president gave one of her useful addresses in the evening.

The other county convention, that of Yamhill county, was held at Carlton and ably supported by a bevy of our Newberg Friends. Mrs. M. E. K. Edwards' closing address was inspiring; the departments of health and heredity, Sabbath observance and Sunday-school work were specially dwelt on and many useful points brought out. The public addresses of Mrs. Harford and Mrs. Unruh were warmly received, their telling hits often "bringing down the house" with applause.

One of our members, Mrs. Woodward, invited quite a large circle of friends to an afternoon tea (a "kettledrum" as it is called in England) at her house to meet Mrs. Harford, who gave them a pleasant talk on mothers' subjects. THE UNION SIGNAL readers will remember Mrs. Harford, as the former reporter for Missouri, her old state. She has had a cordial greeting from the women of Oregon, and already has spoken in twenty different towns, making thirty addresses and holding ten-day meetings. She has organized unions at Lafayette and Whiteson, in Yamhill county, and at Shirwood, Washington county, and attended the Yamhill county convention. The audiences have all been attentive, and in most places, above the average in numbers. As a result there have been eighty-five signers to the pledge, sixty of these being active members for the W. C. T. U., who have paid their dues. I am pleased to think that our eastern W. C. T. U. sisters know more about us "away off in Oregon" than our brothers of the Presbyterian Church (who held their general assembly in Portland) knew about their brother churches. The Presbyterian commissioner, when writing to the Portland board to make arrangements for the assembly (which, by the way, was to meet in the grand, new Presbyterian church, of which even Jerusalem of the olden days might well be proud), wrote: "I would like to suggest that our good brother borrow for his church a melodeon, piano, or some suitable instrument with which to lead the singing of the assembly." Said good brother's church boasts a pipe organ that would do honor to a West End, London, church, or to any one of the smaller cathedrals of Europe!

L. A. NASH,
State Reporter, Corvallis.

WESTERN WASHINGTON.

ORGANIZATION AND COUNTY CONVENTION.

Siftings from all along the line of temperance endeavor in our state bring to view much that is encouraging. Organization is being pushed; sixteen new locals are reported. Mrs. Mary B. Reese, National organizer, is working with all the vigor and energy necessary to success.

The special work of the year has been the completion and opening of the White Shield Home, also the city mission under the auspices of the Tacoma union, in charge of Mrs. C. B. Tibbitts, a consecrated Christian, who gives all her time to the work.

The seventh quarterly convention of the Pierce county W. C. T. U. met in Puyallup, May 11 and 12, Mrs. J. W. Lee, president, in the chair. The first half hour of each session was occupied by devotional exercises. The meeting was largely attended. The presidents and delegates from nine unions responded to roll-call. These, together with the county officers and superintendents of departments, constituted the members of the convention. A number of visitors, including some of the ministers of Puyallup and adjoining towns, were present to give us a "God-speed" in our blessed work. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Caskim, and was heartily indorsed by Mayor Meeker, of the city. The response was by Mrs. Turrell, of Tacoma. Mrs. Shaffer, state president, was with us throughout the sessions, and gave us many good suggestions on the different lines of work. A suffrage symposium was conducted by Mrs. Spinning, and many good things were said. Rev. Brunk urged women to insist on the right to protect their homes and ward off evil and danger from loved ones. Rev. Haugernt said, "In heaven we are all spirits; on earth, hearts and minds." Said Mrs. Shaffer, "Woman's cause is man's cause."

A children's temperance mass-meeting, under the management of Miss Reid, superintendent of juvenile temperance, consisting of music and recitations, occupied the evening. The sight of their bright faces and sweet voices was helpful and inspiring. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Mrs. J. W. Lee, of Tacoma, president: Mrs. E. P. Spinning, of Puyallup, corresponding secretary; Miss Cole, of Sumner, recording secretary; Mrs. S. B. Palmer, of Steilacoom, treasurer.

Resolutions were adopted, pledging ourselves to more active Christian temperance work; to the support of the National Temperance Hospital and the Temple, those two great object lessons of temperance; indorsing the management and promising our aid to the White Shield Home; and urging the unions to subscribe for our National organ, THE UNION SIGNAL, that well equipped armory, to which we may come in every emergency, and find just the line of truth we most need.

The convention adjourned to meet at Sumner in October, feeling we had been blessed and strengthened by our meeting together in the interest of our work for God and Home and Every Land.

MRS. J. W. LEE,
State Reporter, Tacoma.

NEW JERSEY.

IN BATTLE ARRAY!

May saw a continuous gathering of the clans in county conventions. They came from the northern, eastern, and southern sections, and by their goodly presence and unabated zeal have gone forth with stronger determination to battle for the right the coming six months.

Essex, who might be termed the mother of our woman's work, as she is of breweries, in our state leads the column in the best of fighting trim.

Bergen, with all its beautiful appointments and artistic grace, stands shoulder to shoulder with Middlesex and Monmouth, in the van of this increasing host, and thus cheers the heart of Mrs. Seabrook, who for so long has, almost alone, stood upon the ramparts and with bugle call summoned the forces to the conflict of equal suffrage.

Burlington, with steady tread is educating people and children for future effectiveness.

Gloucester, although the home of the famous "duke" of the race-track, is not all given over to lawlessness, for a band of faithful women, and men not a few, are burnishing up their armors, all ready to meet the enemy.

Atlantic and Ocean, by beach meetings on the Sabbath, as well as other days, give the heathen (?) who come to them a preacher, and wisdom on this iniquitous traffic, so that they are not doomed to destruction because of a lack of understanding, if they fail to profit.

Cape May and Cumberland close up the column with a compactness that leaves no chance for attack on rear or flank, and thus the enemy, whose hosts seem as a multitude, are confronted with an army of soldiers who can never be defeated, because they are like the phœnix of old, always rising from their seeming death, and taking up the line of march again and again until victory is on their banners, for so it must be, because God is before them, and behind, and around them, to strengthen and uphold them, therefore, they "fear not."

Mrs. Ellis has been in labors abundant in Burlington, Ocean and Cumberland counties. At Vineland she had a most successful week's service and many were made "wiser if not better by her earnest, eloquent words." New unions have been organized by the president, corresponding secretary, and other officers at different points and "Y's" also, as well as L. T. L's.

Mrs. Carter, of Essex, writes enthusiastically of the Coffee House opened last fall by the W. C. T. U. No. 2, of Newark. The room is most tastefully arranged with pictures, flowers, and tables, where dainty lunches are served at a nominal price. A homelikeness is given to the place by the presence of a motherly woman who "looks well after the ways of her household." The income is growing, and will, ere long, be a source of revenue to the society, as well as provide lunches to the poor through the kindness of societies and individuals who purchase tickets for free distribution, thereby prevailing on some to come to a better life, thus, "sowing beside all waters."

But, ah! if only there were no dark side to this encouraging outlook. Cumberland women are united and some of Cumberland men—but not all—and thus it behooves us to write of how they are, for a time at least, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. Millville, for nearly twenty years, has been free from the curse of licensed saloons, and has prospered accordingly. Peopled almost entirely by wage-earners, it has become a city of small, comfortable homes; because the working man has put his earnings in home surroundings instead of into the till of the saloon-keeper; but the devil couldn't stand this prosperity any longer, so he foisted on them the county excise law, and against the protest of a thousand voters at the ballot-box, less than a year ago, not to mention the petitions of the women of these homes, this board of excise commissioners have licensed five places to deal out poverty and damnation to satisfy the clamorings of a few who seek to enrich themselves by the enslavement of many. But God can cause even the wrath of man to praise Him, and it may be there was no other way to show these men that selfishness is not one of God's attributes; and if the iniquity was undesirable for them, it was also for other parts of the state, and as they cast out the evil for nearly twenty years by the ballot-box, so must they do when legislators are before them for their allegiance. May the lesson—though a hard one—be learned so effectually that never again a review need be taken.

The excise board in Trenton, too, is playing fast and loose; for over a month they have met "to adjourn for a week," whether it is because of the delegations of ministers, business men and W. C. T. U. women, which each successive week have added recruits, or whether it is (as some say) they have "struck for higher wages," we know not, but at any rate the saloon men, when licenses have about expired, are getting uneasy, while we of the better sort are satisfied.

A leading brewer from Essex and the "duke of Gloucester" are numbered among the delegates which go from this state to the National Democratic convention. The outcome cannot be otherwise than to nominate a candidate in opposition to all that is moral and we expect nothing different. But God is not dead, and ere long His power must be displayed. He only waits for His people to "go forward," at His command and put from among them the "accursed thing." Then shall come the reign of righteousness. May we help to hasten it.

MRS. N. L. CAMINADE,
State Reporter, Trenton.

RHODE ISLAND ITEMS.

"Love fills the soul, and keeps it full of help
For others; sweet refreshment to itself."

I was thinking as I read the following letter from the earnest young president of the Newport Y's, how truly these words apply to them: "The readers of THE UNION SIGNAL know that last June the Newport Y. W. C. T. U. opened a mission room in the loft of a boat shop on Long Wharf. A work has been carried on there from that time, but when cold weather came, it was thought impossible for the meetings to be continued in that place, so an effort was made to find another without removing from the wharf where the work is so much needed. While vainly searching for a suitable place, an offer came of a piece of land for five years if we would erect a suitable building for the work. This was accepted; appeals were made through the press and by mail, asking for donations for the work, to many of which very generous responses were received, and when one of the summer residents, seeing the appeal in the newspaper, offered to make up the required sum, work was commenced and pushed to completion. The building has been named 'The Beacon.' It is situated a short distance below Thames street on Long Wharf, the one place designed to save souls in the midst of ten licensed saloons. It is a building twenty-one by forty-one feet, one story high, with pointed roof, and is built of planed boards, the seams being covered with battens. The entrance is in the center of the front, and the room is brightly lighted by seven windows in the day-time and by gas jets in the evening. Over the door hangs a transparency bearing the words, 'The Beacon. Y. W. C. T. U. Mission. All welcome.' The plans have been very carefully made and it is believed that the structure is in every way suited to the work as it shall develop. The dedication of the building took place on the evening of May 9. The platform was very prettily and tastefully decorated with potted plants and in the front of the room hung the banner of the union and two or three Scripture mottoes. The exercises were presided over by the recently appointed president, Miss Mary L. Thurston, and were very appropriate in character.

"Miss A. P. Carr, chairman of the building committee, gave an interesting report. Beginning at the first little meeting held in November, 1888, in the boat shop, she traced the growth to the present time when we stand in our completed structure. At the close of her report she presented the keys of the building to the president.

"An address was given by Mrs. Barney, of Providence, based upon the dedication of Solomon's temple, and Miss Nichols spoke brief but encouraging words. Mrs. Walker gave some reminiscences of the first meeting at the old boat shop, comparing it to the present meeting, and in thought looked forward to the future results of the work.

"'All hail the power of Jesus' name,' was sung in closing. All the furnishings of the room have been given by friends. 'The Beacon' will be open each Monday evening for a gospel service. It will also be the headquarters of the union."

An interesting incident in connection with the furnishing of the above-mentioned room was that the first article brought in was a large, red Bible. A number of years ago a gentleman started a library and reading-room for the sailors and gave this Bible. The man passed to his reward and eventually the room was closed. His sister, hearing of this new mission, brought it here to continue its work of guidance and inspiration and repeat its message of promise and power, "My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

The Providence Y's have recently celebrated their tenth birthday, and lawyers, doctors, ministers and Christian workers in many lines gathered to offer their sympathy and congratulations to these active young workers. The tea room for young women has certainly proved itself a practical benefit to the hundreds of girls who have found in the large, cheery room, with its low rockers, cozy stands, cheap, wholesome lunches, and choice literature of the day, rest and refreshment for both body and mind.

Neither have the older workers in our state been idle. Parlor meetings, school meetings, petitions and lectures all have their part in the "stone cut out of the mountain without hands" which is smiting the feet of the terrible giant of the liquor traffic, with his head of gold which is held on high by the strong iron of oppression and the miry clay of iniquity. Thank God the image is doomed, and the stone grows slowly into a mountain.

Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason, National superintendent of the department of narcotics, has made two visits to the state, speaking to twelve schools in Providence besides giving lectures in churches and halls in various places.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Providence W. C. T. U. was made interesting and instructive by reports of department work followed by addresses on the same. The evening session was addressed by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, on "The World's Nobility."

The annual thankoffering service was held in connection with our last quarterly meeting, and was one of the pleasantest and most profitable that we have ever had. One good thing followed another throughout the sessions. In connection with the special service of the day, Mrs. A. M. Paine gave an interesting address on systematic giving, making very clear the advantage of having a certain amount laid aside regularly from which to draw whenever the call comes. A plan was proposed to distribute mite-boxes among the members of the unions and let each one put in a cent a week, and ask one friend for fifty cents or two for twenty-five, thus making a dollar a member to be brought in on our next thankoffering day.

The texts of Scripture presented by each union in connection with its offering proved that this is no formal giving, but a real heart service, a grateful acknowledgment of the source of "every good and every perfect gift."

"The fullness of His blessing encompasseth our way;
The fullness of His promises crowns every brightening day;
The fullness of His glory is beaming from above,
While more and more we realize the fullness of His love."

MIRIAM EARLE,
State Reporter, Valley Falls.

CALIFORNIA.

A BREEZY NOTE.

Nine counties in California are successfully enforcing prohibitory and restrictive ordinances against the liquor traffic. Santa Clara county has closed saloons on Sunday. The law prohibiting the sale of liquor to minors has been enforced in many instances. The San Francisco Daily Call has made a grand crusade against the dives in which it has been ably seconded by the Catholic and Protestant clergy, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Mr. Charles N. Crittenton, the noted philanthropist who is about founding another Florence Crittenton Mission, in San Francisco, for the rescue of erring girls. The debauchery of little girls in these "crime-hatcheries" is appalling, and their rescue is agitating all hearts. The daily Call also prosecuted so vigorously the enforcement of the law against selling cigarettes to boys under sixteen years that all the tobacco dealers pledged themselves to obey the law.

Among the temperance workers battling valiantly are Major and Mrs. E. T. Scott. Their lectures are most highly commended, and they are educating public sentiment admirably, especially along the lines of prohibition and woman suffrage. Miss Sarah Severance is pushing this department most vigorously also, and is rallying the women to secure many thousand signatures to a petition to be presented at the next legislature.

Mrs. D. Spencer, state corresponding secretary, invites all eastern W. C. T. U. visitors to the hospitable headquarters, as our union has now an entire house, and the "prophet's chamber" is ready, at 132 McAllister street, San Francisco. The first guests were a party of white ribbon women from Illinois, and the next an ex-treasurer from Minnesota.

The state W. C. T. U. school of methods, at Pacific Grove, promises to be most interesting, under the able supervision of the state president, Mrs. B. Sturtevant Peet, and National superintendent of school of methods department, Mary Allen West.

I noticed in a recent UNION SIGNAL a reference to myself as state superintendent of press. This is an error; Mrs. G. W. Kimball has that honor, and I am,

M. G. C. EDHOLM,
State Reporter, Oakland.

MICHIGAN.

STATE CONVENTION.

The place had been chosen and we were duly called to Detroit for the annual meeting of 1892. On Monday the four general officers and ten of the district presidents met by invitation at Mrs. Lillian Hollister's in executive session.

Tuesday morning the convention assembled in Plymouth Congregational church with two hundred and fifty-three accredited delegates. Among the notable visitors were Frances E. Willard, Isabella Beecher Hooker, Susan B. Anthony and Anna Gordon; during the week many fraternal delegates were introduced, representing all churches, many missionary societies and all organizations for reform. Our coming had been duly announced by the daily papers and the photographs of some and the kindly notice of all had been scanned and read by the public. This, as a convention, was in many respects a "none-such," and the reporters were ever present, ever accurate and often complimentary.

The church was large and convenient. A platform was built in front of the pulpit. The church balconies and pillars were draped in white as was also the organ loft, where hung our state banner in its frame of green and white, with county district and local banners on either side. The rostrum was banked with rare foliage and blossoming plants, and contained on easels the portraits of Miss Willard, Mrs. Lathrap, Mrs. Hollister, Mrs. Cushing (the latter of sainted memory). We arrived at this convention to teach along all lines, all avenues of the soul, and our Detroit sisters were wise in their mottoes easily read as follows:

"What you would have in a nation's life you must put in its schools." "The liquor traffic is the gigantic crime of crimes, the evil of evils that curses the world to-day."

The opening prayer and conference meeting was led by Mrs. Moots, state superintendent of evangelistic work. Committees were appointed as usual; the resolutions committee, however, had one from each of the twelve districts. The closing hour of the morning was given to a memorial service. Of these comrades "taken away for a little, not out of His household," no district has been exempt except the eleventh. From the second there was Mrs. Geddes, who had been district president, and was one of the first organizers, and Mrs. Partridge, of Flushing, known to many as the helpmeet of our prohibition candidate for governor.

The report of the state treasurer showed that dues had been received from three hundred and sixty unions in sixty-one counties. The corresponding secretary reported forty-one new unions organized, and an increase of 303 in honorary membership. This faithful secretary left us at this meeting for a new home in Canada. The districts presented her with appropriate gifts. Her work has been done thoroughly and acceptably.

We had a new departure this year in the plan of superintendents' conferences, grouped as they are in the state minutes; some one of the group is asked to preside, and then a ten-minute summary of reports is given. In the first conference, ten superintendents participating, under the head of evangelistic, the question was, Is our evangelistic work so conducted as to result in the salvation of souls? From the floor, a case was cited of a whole family converted through the influence of the W. C. T. U. This was the largest group under one head, but each day from six to eight so reported in conference until all of our twenty-nine superintendents had been heard from.

Our district presidents were crowded out this year for want of time, and this was a loss indeed, for they are a gifted body of women, and have done much hard work in their several fields. There were five papers; the first was given by Mrs. Moorhouse, subject, "What is involved in auxiliaryship, both in loyalty and law?" "Called into being by the dear Lord Himself, with an organization from the hand of the Father; auxiliaryship means something more than to live. Any woman anywhere may become a member by signing constitution and paying dues; but does this make her a living member? She must bring her talent and bestow it in harmony with the structure. First, meeting all constitutional requirements; second, maintaining our principles with fidelity, and the plan of the state with unanimity." Mrs. May had a paper, subject, "Is the state union right in asking from the local unions a larger income?" She clearly proved our inability to branch out on many lines that seemed desirable, because Michigan has never gone beyond her income. The third paper was by Mrs. Jeffers: "How shall we disburse the funds of the State W. C. T. U. to best advance the work?" This was followed by discussion which was spirited but good-natured, there being many women of many minds.

Another subject for a paper had been given Mrs. R. M. Kellogg, our indefatigable superintendent of franchise who was unavoidably absent. The topic to be treated was "Some Laws of Michigan which are of Especial Interest to the W. C. T. U." The fifth and last was read by Mrs. Dr. Henry A. Reynolds, "What Should be the Attitude and Work of the W. C. T. U. for the Principle and Party of Prohibition in the coming Campaign?" "If the W. C. T. U. women owe allegiance to anything it is the home. The time has come unless the W. C. T. U. espouse the cause of prohibition some other party of women will take our place. Let no man take thy crown. We want workers, want more workers. Let us go home and take for our watchword, 'The immediate and total prohibition of the liquor traffic.'" Dr. Reynolds was also present and said he "felt as if he had a perfect right to be here, a child of the Crusade eighteen years old the 4th of April; I thank God for the Crusade, and the continuation of it in the W. C. T. U."

Mrs. Benjamin gave one of her best parliamentary drills, and most successfully called for subscriptions to the Michigan Union and THE UNION SIGNAL, receiving for the former four hundred and ninety-six new names. Mrs. Boise, who has most ably edited the state paper for the past three months, said at present there are 1,773 subscribers. THE UNION SIGNAL received many renewals.

The resolutions were twenty-one in number, but so thoroughly expressed the feelings and sentiments of all, they passed without discussion. The strong franchise resolution introduced by Mrs. Hooker was adopted by a rising vote of the entire audience; the delegated body first, and then all visitors were granted the same privilege.

We have a little black-eyed woman in Michigan who is our leader indeed of the children; and so this state superintendent gathered her four hundred and they came with banners and song and gave us a delightful hour with perfect recitations, perfect figure drills, perfect singing and showed they were of the "Do wells." A large class received diplomas presented with a nice little speech by Anna Gordon and then four little lads and lassies, in well chosen words gave the general officers a basket of their own flowers—pansies.

I must tell of a baby brought forty miles to see the one for whom it was named. Mrs. Lathrap tied the white ribbon on with the fervent wish that it might grow up a second Frances Willard, and she did the same for Lillian Pansy Andrus, and so we had two "daughters of the regiment." We received a loving message from Mrs. Lathrap's mother and were honored to have presented to us her husband who stands so loyally by her, helping her in all her plans and who so kindly said to us, "I am very thankful for the work you do and sorry for your discouragements; the world has never taken kindly to reformers. You have my full sympathy and support as does also my wife."

The election of officers resulted in the re election of all by a handsome vote. The new corresponding secretary chosen is Mrs. Julia R. Parish, who brings to the work great literary ability as well as a consecrated life. The delegate-at-large to the National convention is Mrs. Emma A. Wheeler. Two changes of constitution were noticed for next year. Our place of invitation was Benton Harbor. Our doings made seventy-three pages of writing for the minutes, but I can tell you no more, except a little bit about the four evenings.

On the first evening were addresses of welcome by Mrs. H. N. P. Blodgett and Judge C. B. Grant, of the supreme court. The response in behalf of the W's was by Mrs. A. L. Dick; in behalf of the Y's, by Prof. Rena Michaels. Our president's annual address followed the recommendations left for convention. The singing at all the evening meetings was of a high order as was also the instrumental music. The address of the second evening was by Miss Willard, and listened to by a crowded house, many standing. Among her audience were twenty five reformed men from the McGregor mission. The third evening was our benefit night; we had the Silver Lake quartette, and the wit and logic of Rev. C. H. Meade were indeed entertaining and instructive. The last evening was Y evening presided over by Mrs. Hollister, opening with "Battle Song of the Y's," sung by a chorus of fifty voices. One feature was the Newsboys' Band, widely known out of Detroit. Fraternal greetings were brought from the Epworth League, Christian Endeavor, Baptist Young People's Union, Westminster League, Boy's Temperance Union, Uniformed Rank of Cadets—to all of which our president responded most eloquently. The address of welcome was by Miss Douglas and the response by Mrs. E. A. Law. The address of the evening was by Prof. Rena Michaels, subject, "The American Girl." I close with this thought of Mrs. Lathrap in one of her grand poems:

Prophetic souls with courage high
That hear the world's unworded cry
And plead a hope that will not die
For all who fear?

Oh! tell us if on any height
You see the glow of morning bright
Or hear His footsteps in their might Is Jesus near?

MRS. C. H. JOHNSON,
State Reporter, Flint.

IOWA.

WIDE AWAKE, UP AND DOING.

Owing to imperative demands for home, county and district work, your reporter has been unable to send items for some time, but if any imagine that the workers are dozing in any Sleepy Hollow a peep into the columns of our Iowa Signal would show them that we are wide awake, up and doing.

Sioux county convention was held at Rock Valley. Preparatory to the opening session a Temple sociable was held at the home of Mrs. Sadette Harrington, state superintendent of Temple department. Light refreshments were served and a variety of lovely W. C. T. U. souvenirs were sold. Among these were satin bannerets bearing a picture of Lady Henry Somerset, with a hand-painted spray of ivy falling over the top. Underneath the picture is printed these words from Lady Henry's pen: "The ivy leaf always suggests to me, clinging ever green through storm and sunshine, a beautiful simile of the spirit in which we will work."

Convention hours were largely filled with reports, discussions, plans of work, parliamentary drill and papers on "Literature," "Why I am a W. C. T. U. worker," "The Temple," "Work Among Foreigners," "Social Purity," "The Y's and Juvenile Work." One devoted woman closed her paper with these inspiring words: "I am only one, but I am one. I cannot do everything, but I can do something; what I can do, I ought to do, and by the grace of God, I will do." A silver medal contest occupied the first evening. Thirty dollars were cleared from the proceeds, an admission fee of fifteen cents being taken.

Diplomas were given to four girls and two boys, the first L. T. L. graduates in the state, who are now going on to complete the seal courses. These children were favored in having the help of Mrs. C. L. McCracken, our state superintendent of juvenile work, in the course of study. The state, district and one county president were there to help. Mrs. Dunham addressed a full house on "The Problems of the Day." Mrs. C. L. McCracken was elected president, Mrs. C. W. Carter, corresponding secretary.

Charles City entertained Floyd county convention. Mrs. Dunham was in attendance and rendered excellent service in many ways, conducting a school of methods and giving an address on one evening. Fine papers on department work were read and good, solid work reported. Osage ladies came down, lent a hand and received a benediction. A gold medal contest was held on one evening and a sweet unity of spirit prevailed. Floyd county has six unions and is in the fourth district. Mrs. Ella McKim was re-elected president, and Miss Marie Judd, secretary.

Mitchell county, in the fourth district, held its annual convention at Riceville. This was a fine success. No outside speaker could be secured, but Rev. Abby R. Hinckley, pastor of the Congregational church at Riceville, was an invaluable helper all the way through. A gold medal contest was planned, but owing to a failure to secure the requisite number of contestants, a gold dollar was awarded the successful speaker instead of the gold medal. Mrs. Lucia S. Aunis was re-elected president, and Mrs. Jenny White, secretary.

Cedar and Henry and other counties have held conventions, but have not reported. Constant rain and overflowing streams kept fifteen or more delegates from coming to Clayton county convention at Volga. One delegate was present from another union. Volga furnished seven ex-officio and regular delegates. Letters and reports were received from unions and county superintendents. Our state president addressed the meeting the first evening. The second evening was taken up with singing, welcome and response, a paper on "Health Culture," Delsarte drill by the little folks, and "Notes on the Boston Convention," by the district president. Mrs. Thera B. True was elected president, Mrs. Eva Minkler, secretary.

More medal contests have been held than can be reported in this brief space. Delaware county is fairly humming with them, being now ready to enter the lists for three or more gold medals. Mrs. R. L. Wallace, president of the third district, has organized a union at Cascade, which now has twenty-nine members, and supports a family of Loyal Temperance Legioners. It has secured over two hundred signatures to the World's Petition.

Our state president is almost constantly on the wing. Since my last report she has organized unions as follows: Hazelton, in the third district; Ossian, Nora Springs and Swaledale in the fourth; Dunlap, in the ninth; Borden, Larchwood, George, Lake Park, Dickens, Paulina, and Salix in the eleventh. Des Moines county convention was held at Burlington. Papers on "The Cigarette and Tobacco," and on "Department of Mercy" were read. Mrs. Dunham presented the interests of the Temple so ably that the convention adopted a resolution to raise $100, and to have the name of the county union inscribed in Willard Hall. The superintendent of scientific temperance instruction work was authorized to purchase and distribute literature to the teachers at the next session of the institute. A medal contest closed the exercises of the convention.

The eleventh and seventh districts have held conventions with Mrs. Dunham's and Mrs. Palmer's help and encouragement. Mrs. Anna M. Palmer has been at work in different parts of the state for the past two months, with the usual good results. The fourth district convention was held at Osage, June 3–5. Mrs. M. H. Dunham was to have been with us, but we gladly spared her to the seventh and eleventh district conventions, which occurred the same week, as they were quite unexpectedly deprived of other outside help by the sad affliction of Mrs. S. F. Grubb, of Kansas, who had engaged to be with them, but who was obliged to cancel the appointments. Helpful reports were given or sent by a majority of county presidents and department superintendents. Fine music, the welcome and response, a paper on "The Temple," and the president's annual address occupied the first evening.

A gold medal contest crowded the opera house, both floor and galleries, with interested spectators the second evening. One contestant failing to come, a five dollar gold piece was awarded in place of the medal. The successful speaker was Miss Gail Sweney, daughter of ex-Congressman Sweney, of Osage. Fifty dollars were raised by the convention towards purchasing an organ for the use of the unfortunate girls in the Benedict Refuge. Union services were held in the opera house on Sunday morning which was crowded with an attentive congregation, when our state and National evangelist preached the annual sermon. The old officers were re-elected as follows: Mrs. Clara P. White, president, Mrs. S. M. Wright, secretary.

CLARA P. WHITE,
State Reporter, Volga.

THE W. C. T. U. of Harvey, Ill., the famous temperance town, is presided over by Mrs. Mary C. Johnston and has over one hundred members.

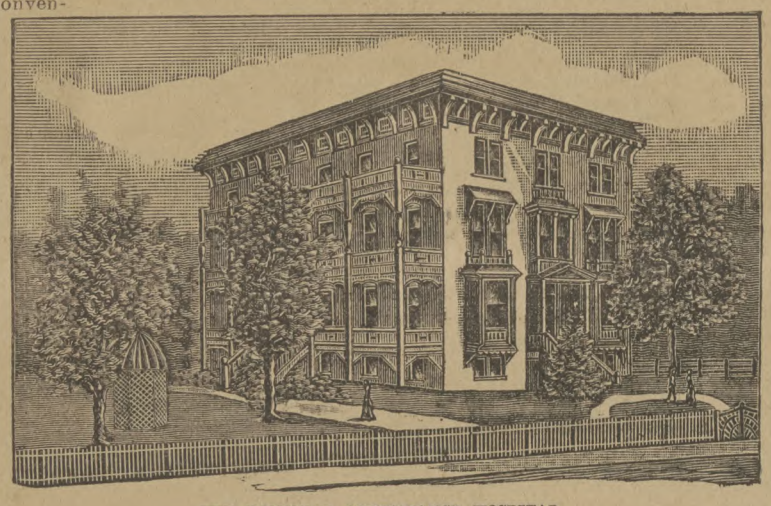
MINNESOTA.

HENNEPIN COUNTY CONVENTION

Was held May 3 and 4 in the Bloomington Avenue M. E. church, Minneapolis. It was the seventh annual meeting, and in some ways the best. The clouds did their best to dampen the ardor and enthusiasm of the white-ribboners, but did not meet with any remarkable success, for audiences were good and interest manifest. Our beloved president, Mrs. Neal, who has so long and faithfully devoted time and energies to the work of the W. C. T. U. was the presiding genius of the sessions. Her address was full of Christian thought and the wisdom of experience, and at the request of the convention was given to the White Ribboner for publication, where it will appear in full, but lest some may not see it there, I quote a thought that it were well for all to bear in mind: "As the years pass slowly away, we look less to results and are content to build." Therein lies the whole secret of earnest, patient, persistent work. The kindergarten, Sabbath-school and Loyal Temperance Legion departments were especially commended as lines along which this building for the future may be conducted, while narcotics, house-to-house visitation, and last and most important of all, "the great power of prayer" were urged.

The review of the year's work was encouraging. A new union has been formed at Richfield, and the old unions are pursuing the even tenor of their way. The Central, "the mother of us all," in whose grand achievements we all rejoice, has the greatest measure of success. It carries on eighteen different departments of work, largely the result of its wonderful coffee house. Here Mrs. Russell holds a gospel service every Sunday, also Sunday-school for the employes, and Mrs. Ellis has an L. T. L. composed largely of the children who come to the coffee house for broken food. The E. Augusta Russell Y has lately been formed under the auspices of the Central, also. Financially the Central leads the whole state, having raised over $5,000 for temperance work during the past year.

Both evenings of the convention were given to public meetings; on the first our state president, Mrs. Hobart, addressed the audience, setting forth the partnership of the church with the saloon. Mrs. Hobart was also present during the larger part of Wednesday, and ready, as she always is, to aid in every possible way. Wednesday evening Rev. D. S. McCaslin, pastor of one of the city Presbyterian churches, delivered an address of force and power, denouncing the apathy of the churches on the great question of the liquor traffic.



THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL.

The resolutions touched upon many phases of the work, indorsing and commending the various departments. It was also recommended that the county officers appoint a committee to call a mass-meeting of the W. C. T. U. to confer regarding the selection of a candidate for the office of county superintendent of common schools to be elected next fall, and urging our women to insist that a woman or women shall be placed upon the school board of this city!

MRS. AMY A. GREEN,
State Reporter, Minneapolis.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL NOTES.

This week we are glad to introduce to our friends in the distance the cut of the new hospital building. Though it is but a "bird's eye view," yet in your practical calculations, you can figure out the size and understand the amount of work that may now be done.

"Friends in need are friends indeed." Miss Kate Jackson, of Evanston, has selected one of the larger rooms which she will furnish. Mrs. R. A. Emmons will also furnish a room.

The quarterly meeting of the National Temperance Hospital Board was held Monday, June 6, at the new hospital building. With but two or three exceptions all the members were present and were glad to greet the members of the association who had responded to the invitation sent them to attend the meeting. After adjournment the ladies were shown through the building and all expressed themselves as being well pleased with the increased facilities for carrying on the work. The building is larger than the one heretofore occupied, and more conveniently arranged, as it was built expressly for a hospital. For patients there are thirty-five rooms which are light and well ventilated. The reception rooms and parlors are large and pleasant, and will not throw a cloud of gloom over a patient when he first enters the building.

The quarterly report of Dr. Linnie M. Ousley, the house physician, showed that the total number of patients received during the quarter ending May 31 was forty; attendance during quarter, fifty. Number of surgical operations, thirty-three; number of deaths, none; number of dispensary patients was eighty-nine. Many seeking the care of the hospital during the latter part of April and May were refused admittance on account of the anticipated moving. Now that the moving is an experience of the past, patients are coming in, and physicians and nurses are kept busy.

The following donations were received in December, 1891: Murdoch, Ill., Y's, one box fruit and jelly; Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell, Chicago, Ill., six floral pieces. January, 1892: Eyota, Minn., W. C. T. U., one barrel canned fruit and jelly; Table Grove, Ill., W. C. T. U., four cans fruit, six glasses jelly, six towels, old cotton, twelve cans fruit, six glasses jelly; Dover, Ill., W. C. T. U., six cans fruit, twelve glasses jelly; Goshen, Ind., W. C. T. U., twenty-four cans fruit; Healey, Ill., W. C. T. U., twelve pillows, twelve pads, one pair pantaloons, one vest, one peck dried apples, three glasses jelly; Dalton City, Ill., W. C. T. U., fourteen cans fruit, one-half peck dried apples, lint and old linen; Art Floral Company, Chicago, cut flowers; Elburn, Ill., W. C. T. U., eleven glasses jelly; Jacksonville, Ill., W. C. T. U., six glasses jelly.

Hospital address, 1619 Diversey Ave.

ELLEN SNYDER.

Official Communications.

KINDERGARTEN DEPARTMENT.

Please send at once name and address of state, county or local superintendents of kindergarten work. Send also name and address of kindergartens and kindergartners working under the W's or Y's supervision. The Kindergarten News, published in Buffalo, offers me a rare opportunity of reaching temperance women. If mothers, kindergartners and young women thinking of studying this system, will help me to secure a directory of those interested, I shall be able to send them a letter of instructions, also a copy of this bright monthly magazine. Send me news of your kindergarten work. What have you done? Have you white or colored, American or foreign children? How have you introduced temperance into your kindergarten?

Any items of news or of interest to temperance kindergartners, or any ideas that are clear, concise and condensed, can be used in the space offered me by The Kindergarten News. Awaiting your responses, faithfully yours,

MARY E. MCDOWELL,
Supt. of Kindergarten Dept., National W. C. T. U.
Address 117 Maple Ave., Evanston, Ill.

TO STATE AND TERRITORIAL PRESIDENTS.

DEAR CO-LABORERS:—In the interest of the circulation of the World's Petition, I sometime since wrote each of you within whose field there are Salvation Army stations, asking (as it is impossible for me to know suitable women in all such places the nation over) that you would send me the names of two women for each station, who would counsel with Army officers, and in harmony with arrangements thus made, visit a station and secure signatures. I inclosed a list of stations with names of officers commanding, that the selection might be made from unions in their immediate neighborhood. The number of signatures was greatly augmented by such effort in Great Britain, the way having been opened by General Booth, Commander-in-chief of the Army. Commander Bal lington Booth and wife have rendered like assistance in the United States. I am striving to carry out the plan kindly proposed by them, which, however, cannot be done without your aid. Thanks to the very few who have promptly responded to my request, but the great majority of presidents have made no reply. The effort has involved the preparation of nearly three thousand letters, one to each president, one each to the commanders of stations, and one to each woman visiting a station. These letters have been written and I wait your co-operation as requested, to send them out. Will you not grant my request at your very earliest possibility? Yours,

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE,
Sec. World's W. C. T. U.

Ravenna, Ohio.

OVER three hundred covers were laid at the annual alumni banquet of the forty-ninth commencement, Missouri State University, June 2. This institution has been open to young women in all of its departments for more than twenty years. At this banquet, one of the earliest girl-graduates, now a happy wife and mother, responded to the toast, "Our Girls," outlining the first girls' struggles in the university and woman's new possibilities in public life as well as in the home. She spoke eloquently for the cause of temperance and woman's ballot.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

BY FLORENCE A. JONES.

Did you ever notice, my little lad,
That the reddest apple on all the tree
Has always swung from the highest limb
Just to plague good people like you and me?
You may look and long, you may scold and sigh—
You will find as we all have found, in time,
That looking and longing will not avail,
If you get the apple you will have to climb.

Did you ever notice, my little lass,
That the sweetest rose is hedged about
With the sharpest thorns? If you gather it
You must conquer the thorns, or do without.
But the poison flower has no guarding thorns,
And the deadly fruit ever lowest lies.
They grow in our path within easy grasp,
With a fatal beauty to longing eyes.

You must learn this lesson and learn it well.
'Tis a lesson that all the world must learn,
Whether big or little, or rich or poor,
You'll meet it, no matter which way you turn.
In this queer, old world, the best things hang high,
So high that we ever must climb to reach,
But the evil lies low in easy grasp,
And the choice to be made, God leaves to each.

Hampton, Iowa.

THE TEMPERANCE SHOW.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.

Chapter III.

PLOTS AND PLANS.

The first thing after the consultation came the meeting one afternoon of all the Pansies except Jane. It was in Miss Robie's room.

Did Miss Robie leave Jane out? Yes. Because she was poor and otherwise unfortunate? Yes. But you must not think it unkind of Miss Robie. Wait until you know the end.

Maggie Meade said they could have her father's barn. If it were cold, there was a way of heating it, and, as they often had little entertainments, there were curtains and other fixtures ready.

Of course no objection could be made to this offer. Thus the first step was easily taken. As for what it should be, that too was soon settled. A simple but effective little play, dialogue, song and recitation. Miss Robie had arranged it for a half dozen.

It was a temperance play, and in it were represented a temperance girl to whom Health, Innocence, Joy, Hope and Benevolence came, giving their gifts and controlling her heart and life. Every part was pretty and bright, but that of the temperance girl had most opportunity for the exhibition of talent.

The four Pansies said at once, and almost together, that this was the part for Maggie. And it was plain that Health was the only suitable part for Jane. She was the picture of health; while Joy, Hope, and Benevolence were, alas! not for her at present. She might be Innocence, to be sure, only that part just fitted Lizzie Logan, who had such big, blue eyes and waving golden hair.

So they expressed themselves, not noticing that Miss Robie did not express herself in the least, until the rest had talked it over on all sides, so far as their young eyes saw the sides.

"Don't you think so, Miss Robie?" they asked at last.

"Before I tell you what I think, we would better be sure we understand what we mean by it all. Though I admit Jane would make a lovely Health."

Though every Pansy was sure she knew exactly what they meant, yet not one objected to more chatter about it. It is such fun to chatter about projects that appeal to one's enthusiasm and inclinations. If we could always do good and enjoy it, how much more good would be done. But, as it happens, the practice of doing good is apt to call for the commonest kind of hard drudgery and disagreeable sacrifices. This is why so many give up the mission of kindness and Christian service. They have not the talent for small sacrifices and forgetfulness of self.

Suppose the Pansies had lacked this! Especially Maggie!

"What do we mean by this enterprise, girls?" asked Miss Robie. "I will begin at the head of the row and pass around."

Lizzie Conner was at the head of the row, and looked as if she wished she were not. She managed to say that they meant to do good—which was true. And, as sure as you live, every little girl after her said the same thing. This is a common way in all meetings. Really original thoughts that go to the roots of things are not apt to be numerous.

Maggie Meade was more definite about it, though. Maggie said: "We mean to do good to the Jones family by getting enough money for Jane's school books and some clothes."

"Yes," agreed Miss Robie, "we cannot do good to Jane without helping them all. If we get her books and clothes she will be able to go to school. That will help her on in her education, and rest her poor mother's back a little, perhaps. At least it will relieve her mind, and let her do better by the boys. But I am anxious that this enterprise shall mean more than that."

Not even Maggie Meade saw how that could be.

"I am anxious," said Miss Robie, "to do good to Jane by the thankful heart it will give her, and I want to do her good by giving her such a part as will show off her talents to the best advantage. That will interest others in her and it will, perhaps, make her father feel a little pride in her."

"Don't you think 'Health' will show her off enough?" asked Maggie.

"She would do it beautifully," answered Miss Robie; "but she could do a harder part beautifully, too."

Maggie colored; she knew the best part had, by common consent, been given to her. It was the leading part, had most action, best chance to display her unusual skill. She had already thought how the greatest interest would center in her. But she knew Jane could do it, too, though she mentally determined that her position as a leader among the girls fitted her to have first choice, while Jane could not expect it. Rachie Perry spoke out, as Maggie was settling it thus in the silence of her own soul.

"It wouldn't seem fair for her to take Maggie's place away, when the whole plan is for her. It wouldn't be grateful."

"Oh, Jane hasn't anything to say about it, you know, Rachie, dear. She doesn't know anything about it. She will do whatever we ask, and be glad to. Only, since it is for her, and a labor of love with us, we want it to do its best in every way," answered Miss Robie. And when she finished saying that, Maggie Meade exclaimed:

"Miss Robie, I guess I will be Health. I am a good subject for that part, and Jane would make a splendid temperance girl."

None of the girls ever knew just what that cost Maggie. But Miss Robie understood.

(To be continued.)

GRANDMOTHER'S ADVICE.

I want to give you two or three rules. One is—Always look at the person you speak to. When you are addressed, look straight at the person who speaks to you. Do not forget this.

Another is: Speak your words plainly. Do not mutter nor mumble. If words are worth saying, they are worth pronouncing distinctly and clearly.

A third is: Do not say disagreeable things. If you have nothing pleasant to say, keep silent.

A fourth is—and, oh, children remember it all your lives—Think three times before you speak once!

Have you something to do that you find hard and would prefer not to do? Then listen to a wise old grandmother. Do the hard thing first, and get it over with. If you have done wrong, go and confess it. If your lesson is tough, master it. If the garden is to be weeded, weed it first and play afterward. Do the thing you don't like to do first, and then with a clear conscience, try the rest.—Selected.

ENGLAND'S RULERS.

First William the Norman, then William his son,
Henry, Stephen, and Henry, then Richard and John,
Next Henry the Third, Edwards one, two, and three,
And again after Richard three Henries we see,
Two Edwards, third Richard, if rightly I guess,
Two Henries, sixth Edward, Queen Mary, Queen Bess;
Then Jamie the Scotsman, then Charles whom they slew,
But received after Cromwell another Charles too.
Then James the second ascended the throne,
And good William and Mary together came on,
Till, Anne, Georges four and fourth William all past,
God sent England Victoria; may she long be the last!

—Selected.

"FREDDY," asked his teacher, "what does leap year mean?"

"One extra day of school," answered Freddy, sadly.—Harper's Young People.

THE MOTHERS' AID SOCIETY.

It was a beautiful morning in June when the sun was shining its brightest, the grass looking its greenest, and all the world seemed like paradise.

"I wish I could leave baby Arthur, long enough to go and make some visits," said Mrs. James, "but nurse is gone and I cannot leave him with Mary so I will have to give it up."

Maud, her oldest daughter spoke up and said, "Why, Ruth and I can take care of Arthur, and the others, too, if you will let us. We will take them to the woods to play. Why didn't you think to ask us, mamma?"

"I didn't know my girls were little women already, but supposed you would be going with the other girls somewhere this bright morning. I will be very glad for I will take Mrs. Jones some of the nice jelly Mary made and see how Mr. Adams is getting along who has the rheumatism so bad that he can't work. Take good care of Arthur, and I will call for Mrs. Baker right away," said the kind mother.

"Come, Ruth, let us invite Mrs. Baker's children, too, and get Mary to pack us a nice lunch," said Maud, after her mother had gone.

"All right, I will go over and ask her, then I'll tell Mary about the lunch."

They were busy getting ready when the bell rang and the servant announced Nellie B.

"I have not time to stay; I just came to ask you and Maud if you would go with us to the pond and woods to gather arbutus," said Nellie.

"I don't think we can. You see we have asked the Baker children to go with ours to the woods and we are taking care of them so that Mrs. Baker and mamma could go on some mission work," explained Maud, after the greeting was over.

"Why, have you? I'd like to help, too; I wonder if you and Ruth would invite me to join your 'mothers' aid society,'" said Nellie.

"We had not thought of calling it that, had we, Maud?" said Ruth, "and we feel bound to admit you for giving it a name."

"I will tell the girls in our Loyal Temperance Legion and I know they will all join," Nellie said, as she left the door.

An hour later she returned, saying, "They all want to join the 'mothers' aid society.'"

That afternoon not only Maud and Ruth with their baskets and children started for the woods, but quite a number of children who were glad to get into the sunshine.

And this is the way a mothers' aid society was started in a small village.

AVA M. ALLEN.

Mercer, Pa.

I wonder if there are not others of our Cozy Corner children who will write little stories. I am sure there are. Will you not try? And let it be a temperance story or about something that will be helpful and good.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

57.

CROSSWORD ENIGMA.

In ant not in bee.
In you not in thee.
In near not in far.
In mast not in spar.
In joy not in grief.
In sail not in reef.
In down not in up.
In plate not in cup.
The whole is a name we often see
Which brings glad thoughts to you and to me.

Holden, Ill. A. B. B.

58.

CROSS.

*
*
*
* * * a * * *
*
*
*
*

Down; ability. Across; a company of travelers. Left hand side; a railway carriage. Right hand side; the front of an army. Top; a covering for the head. Bottom; a large town.

CAROLINE L. HAWKE.

59.

CHARADE.

My first is a color, yet not one;
My second, of you 'tis a part;
My third, the first half of a French word,
Dear to each little child's heart.
My whole, though tiny it may be,
The temperance children all know;
All round the wide world its wearers they see
No matter how far they may go.

ACHSAH.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JUNE 2.

49. Miss Jennie Casseday.

50. Forget-me-not, Lily, Oleander, Woodbine, Eglantine, Rose, Marigold, Ivy, Snowballs, Syringa, Indian cress, Orange blossom, Nasturtium—Flower Mission.

Correct answers: Edith M. Thornton.

CORRESPONDENCE

WHAT NEW YORKERS ARE TALKING ABOUT.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The spring months have brought to the denizens of this metropolis a number of sensational events, the chief of which relate to the great temperance reform. It is not, perhaps, strange, after so long disturbance of the moral atmosphere on these momentous questions, affecting the destiny of church and the American people, that a cyclone should have burst upon this conservative horizon arousing and stirring to its depths the whole community of respectable and easy-going citizens and church-goers.

To those who accept conditions as they are, unwilling to be disturbers of the peace, the recent deeds and utterances of Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, as president of the society for the suppression of vice, have seemed altogether uncalled for. At first, like all brave and heroic reformers, the reverend gentleman stood alone: even good men and women hardly dared to indorse his fearless statements, questioning the facts of the case, or, if admitting their truth, hesitating as to the expediency of his methods of reforming abuses. But now the pulpit and the press heartily applaud this bold champion of righteousness; and Dr. Parkhurst is already in the role of a great leader in the cause of social purity and temperance.

In contrast with this modern Joshua, another divine—who has been known in New York as an earnest, devout churchman, being the successor of Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, and especially successful in missionary work among the poor—has come forward to recommend supervision of saloons by Christian people! The opposition to this startling proposal is vigorous and sarcastic. Were not Dr. Rainsford so respected a member of the ministerial profession, as well as a sincere advocate of his novel ideas, he would have cause to tremble under the sturdy blows of opponents; but fierce attacks and caustic ridicule of critics have not closed his lips. Yesterday, after a eulogy of the Anti-vice Society, with an earnest plea for the enforcement of good laws, he uttered these shocking doctrines:

"My friends, the saloon has come to stay; men will drink, nor is it a sin to drink, nor is it a sin to keep a saloon! If, in the vast body of civilized men, the use of alcohol in some form or other is universal, you may be sure that the Creator of all things meant the vast body of civilized men to use alcohol in some form!"

To us who are educated in the scientific truths regarding stimulants and narcotics, and acquainted with the deceits of alcohol—a subject now studied in nearly all the schools of the land—such ignorance is deplorable. Consistent, this clergyman is, in his interest for the poor who are seeking places of resort away from their families, where he would find for their comfort what the rich find in club life; but I venture to say there is no married woman—excepting among the ultra fashionable, or the lowest and most depraved classes—who favors the separation of her husband from his family for the sake of comradeship with his fellows. There is no doubt that the intelligence of educated people in our community will soon disperse the clouds upon Dr. Rainsford's mind on the fallacy that alcohol is a good creature of God, unless, indeed, he will not see the nineteenth century light of science, accepted by every unprejudiced student.

In pleasant contrast to this false teaching is the work just inaugurated for the veterans of the Grand Army by Dr. Talmage and the publisher of his paper, Mr. Louis Klopsch. Every three months our government pays out in pension money to its old soldiers, living in New York, about $200,000. The checks received by them have been heretofore cashed by the polite saloon-keepers, who on pay-day have carried on a very profitable business, not only exacting a commission for the favor done, but receiving a large return in sales of liquor and lunches; sending the men home to their families drunk and demoralized, and frequently, penniless.

Colonel Hadley, a well-known city evangelist, aided by some prominent soldiers and citizens, started a Grand Army mission in a basement under the pension office—holding meetings every evening; here the publisher of the Christian Herald began the good work of cashing checks for the pensioners. A finer "Rescue Mission" could not have been started than this offset to the grasping, avaricious saloon. Let the example be followed everywhere, and thus reduce the victims of the dram shop, as well as their shameful and usurious profits.

Memorial Day witnessed a magnificent parade; never were flowers more profusely displayed, nor did flags give stronger evidence of patriotic devotion; the lily of the valley almost covered Lincoln's monument, in memory of the "Emancipator's" favorite among nature's floral gifts. At General Grant's tomb the ceremonies were unusually impressive, an oration being delivered by Gen. Horace Porter, by whose strenuous effort the money has been raised for the completion of the Grant monument. It was a pleasant thing for him to be able to make an announcement to the comrades at Riverside Park that his efforts, begun only three months ago to add $350,000 to the fund, had been successful.

And now an order comes from the Adjutant General of the Grand Army of the Republic, to this effect: "I am directed by the Commander-in chief to inform you that it is the intention to celebrate Discovery Day, October 12, in the public schools of the United States by patriotic exercises, and the Grand Army of the Republic is asked to make common cause with the schools, by acting as escorts to them in parades; and at the morning hour, when the scholars raise and salute the flag, that a detail of comrades be present to assist."

What a lesson in patriotism this will be to the thirteen million school children of America!

I would like to give some idea of the Sunday school children's parade in Brooklyn, on the 25th of May. Fancy seventy-five thousand children of the churches on the streets in procession, "in gorgeous array," marching to martial music with flowers, flags and banners covered with mottoes suggestive of Christian teaching! This is a unique feature of the "City of Churches," and a sure promoter of zealous adherence to the Sunday-school. I am assured that the large majority entering into the annual parade are pledged to total abstinence, thus forming Loyal Temperance Legions in the children's Grand Army which will, in the near future, do veteran service for God and Home and Native Land. How this cheers the heart of

AN OLD CRUSADER.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE WAR-SHIP TEXAS CHRISTENED WITH WATER.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It falls to my good fortune to be the chronicler of an incident which has stirred the hearts of all white-ribboners in the Lone Star State. We ask each W. C. T. U. to join with us in the pride we have in the young lady, Miss Madge Williams, of Independence, Texas, who has been selected to christen the war-ship Texas at Annapolis, Md., (United States navy-yard) and who has asked Secretary Tracy for permission to use a bottle of San Jacinto river water for the ceremony instead of the customary bottle of wine. This is the first instance of the kind on record, I believe.

I had the pleasure of meeting and being introduced to Miss Williams on her recent visit to our city, the occasion being the anniversary of the battle of San Jacinto, of which her grandfather, Gen. Sam. Houston, was the hero. Texans revere the name and memory of this great chieftain, who was commander-in-chief of the Texas army during the war between Texas and Mexico.

Gen. Houston was at first obliged to retreat before the Mexicans under Santa Anna, for nearly three hundred miles, but suddenly turning on his pursuers, he fought the remarkable and decisive battle of San Jacinto on the 21st of April, 1836, at one blow annihilating the Mexican army and achieving the independence of Texas. He was elected the first president of the republic of Texas and was re-elected in 1841. On the annexation of Texas to the United States in 1845, Gen. Houston was sent to Congress, and in 1859—the year I came from Ripon, Wis., to Texas, was elected governor of the state. He was opposed to secession, making a speech at the Academy in this city—named for him—urging his people to think well before they took a step which he believed would not result as they expected. His opposition proved fruitless and he retired to private life, dying in 1862, at Huntsville, where he is buried.

Miss Williams is the "worthy scion of a noble race." Mrs. Stoddard, state president W. C. T. U., and your correspondent have written to Miss Williams, asking her to honor us still further by wearing a knot of white ribbon at the christening. The Houston W. C. T. U. has adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, Miss Madge Williams, who has been chosen to christen the war-ship, Texas, desires that water instead of wine shall be used in this ceremony, and

WHEREAS, We deem it a gracious and womanly decision, and a noble example not only to the sailors of our land, but to the whole nation; and

WHEREAS, We consider it fitting that the ship that is to bear the name of our state shall be christened with the symbol of purity, and not with that which is the great curse of our nation, be it

Resolved, That we, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Houston, Texas, do earnestly thank Miss Williams for the stand she has taken in this matter; that we admire her courage in thus asking that an established custom be set aside, and fervently hope and pray that her request may be granted; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Miss Williams, and one to the "Houston Post," for publication.

Committee, { MRS. ZINA FAIRCHILD DAVIS. / MISS JENNIE J. RUE.

Your correspondent echoes the prayer of our state president that God may bless this noble girl; and that her action may be emulated by others in breaking down customs that are pernicious to the welfare of humanity.

ELIZABETH STRONG TRACY.

Houston, Tex.

WISE COUNSEL FOR PROHIBITIONISTS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—As a reader of your paper, I take this opportunity to send a few thoughts to your columns, respecting some of the points to be considered in our approaching convention at Cincinnati. It is fitting at this time for workers in the cause of the reforms of our day to exchange views as to the best means of accomplishing needed and hoped-for changes in governmental affairs, and to this end, that careful selection of the standard-bearer of our party should be the foremost effort to bring about what we so much desire.

I have been thinking the matter over, much of late, and have come to this conclusion: When our convention meets in Cincinnati, first, change the name of the party to "National Reform," then meet the People's party half way, and nominate General Weaver, of Iowa, that is, if he is a good enough temperance man to suit all. The People's party convention coming so soon after would be almost obliged to nominate him. Any good temperance man would rather see him in the Presidential chair than either Harrison or Cleveland, and things look, at the present time, as though one or the other of them will be there, unless some way can be devised to unite the reform forces.

Would it not be better for us to meet the People's party half way, and by uniting have some chance of working a change in the affairs of the nation, than to allow the reforms for which so many are battling to meet with so great a defeat as they are sure to, if working each for a different leader? The old Free-soil party gave up its name, and joining with another party, gave us the grand old Republican party, and so gained much that was needed at that time for truth and justice.

We have plenty of good and true men in the Prohibition party, who will not allow their names to go before the convention as our candidate for President, because they do not want to face the defeat which they are sure to meet under the present circumstances. Then, too, the prejudice against our agitators will surely prevent electing them.

I certainly will stand by whatever the convention may do, but it seems to me that we should not be too set in our way as to the name of our party or the means (if fair and honest) of carrying out the objects for which so many are working.

Very truly yours for reform,

WM. B. PHILLIPS (per wife).

Wilmington, Cal.

N. B.—"Per wife" is good.—EDS.

IMPORTANT HISTORY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I notice in a late number of your able periodical, a reply to a call for the action of old political parties on prohibitory enactments in the various states. In that reply you credit the Democratic party with statutory prohibition in Iowa in 1855. Van Bennett roused Republican wrath in Indiana by crediting Democracy with the first prohibitory act in Iowa. He gave the date as 1851, at a subsequent visit here he brought page 144, code of Iowa, 1851, with him, to refute the assertion of Republican county papers, which declared the Democrats did not pass a prohibitory law at any time in Iowa, because they never had the power politically to do so. Clarkson and Senator Mack have both vehemently declared the Democrats passed the law in 1851, and amended and strengthened it in 1855. Shortly after the Republicans repealed the portion of the act pertaining to wine and beer, hoping to catch the German vote. Bennett, at that time a member of the Iowa legislature and a Democrat, tried to exempt whisky also, because of his Irish constituents.

Of the Indiana law of 1855, the state had at that time two United States Democratic senators, Bright and Fitch, and gave its electoral vote for Buchanan in 1856, so it was reliably Democratic. The law was the outgrowth of a combination of Whigs and Democrats, forming a liquor crusade, the majority for prohibition being 12,000 votes. You do not mention the Dakotas which should be put to the credit of the Republican party. Can any one see anything more in your answer not exactly correct, or is there any further information to be given?

Truly, S. V. WRIGHT.

Greensburg, Ind.

DID you ever hear of a man who had striven all his life faithfully and singly toward an object, and in no measure obtained it? If a man constantly aspires, is he not elevated? Did ever a man try heroism, magnanimity, truth, sincerity, and find that there was no advantage in them,—that it was a vain endeavor?—H. B. Thoreau.

DO RIGHT, and God's recompense to you will be the power of doing right. Give, and God's reward to you will be the spirit of giving more; a blessed spirit, for it is the spirit of God himself, whose life is the blessedness of giving. Love, and God will pay you with the capacity of more love; for love is heaven, love is God within you. —F. W. Robertson.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA
PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

HAY-FEVER
A GIBBS'
ORONASAL RESPIRATOR
used at home, will afford absolute relief throughout the season. A wonderful invention, Convenient, Scientific, Infallible; thoroughly tested for many years. Costs but little—relief obtained is beyond estimate. Equally good for Catarrh. Sent postpaid. Pamphlet with testimonials free.
GIBBS RESPIRATOR CO., 36M La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR
DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT
or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE
A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction
By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.
A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. $50 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All, Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

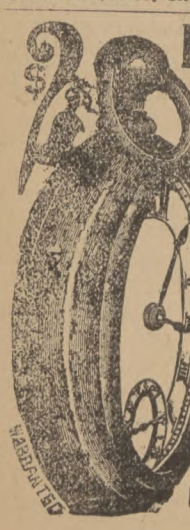
IN THE WILDS OF AFRICA.
TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. A missionary agent writes: "I have sold TOKOLOGY in various parts of South Africa; it gives universal satisfaction, and is pronounced a God-send."
Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF
Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.
We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.
GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.
For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

FREE SILVER SPOONS
We will give any lady One Dozen Silver Plated Tea Spoons of extra quality, warranted to wear, who will sell among her friends one doz. boxes of "Star Pills" at 25 cents per box. Cures Headache, Constipation, Nervousness and all disorders of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels. NO MONEY IN ADVANCE. We send the Medicine to you post paid, when sold you return the amount, $3.00, to us and we send the spoons. If you sell but half a doz. we give you half a doz. spoons. If you can't sell medicine we take it back. We take all the risk. I. M. Association, 265 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS Coin Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Every woman buys. Best and cheapest cooker sold. Big Profits to good workers, male or female. Sample's weight 12 oz. Adv'g matter furnished
For circulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, Baltimore, Md.

PERSONAL—THE BEAUTY OF THE ROMANS was largely due to Anointing and Dr. O. P. Brown's celebrated HERBAL TISSUE BUILDER, made from an old Roman Oil formula, has a wonderful effect on the skin, acting as a tonic. It feeds the tissues, fills up wrinkles, plumps the figure, beautifies the complexion and hands. Most skins, hungry for nourishment, absorb it as thirsty plants do water. Send 10c for SAMPLE and Lady's paper illustrating WOMAN'S LIFE. The Dr. O. P. Brown Med. Co., 47 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J. ALL DRUGGISTS.



DUEBER
SOLID SILVERINE.
Genuine Dueber, solid silverine watch, dust and damp proof; guaranteed for 20 years. Fitted complete with our very highest grade imported movement, magnificently jeweled and guaranteed to run and keep correct time for ten years.
It is a heavy 3 oz. full gents' size watch, and a beauty. Our former price was $5.00, but for the next 60 days we offer them for $2.98 each, and a handsome chain and charm free with each watch.
CUT THIS OUT, send it to us with your name, post office address and name of your nearest express office, and we will ship it there for your examination. If, after examination, you are convinced that it is a bargain pay the express agent $2.98 and express charges, and it is yours. Otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. Address
THE NATIONAL M'F'G & IMPORTING CO.,
334 Dearborn St.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Publisher's Dep't.

OUR NEW DRESS.

We are receiving words of admiration for the new gown so recently donned by THE UNION SIGNAL. We were not, however, quite satisfied, and some changes have been made. Do you not like this better? But you want to hear what others said, and we take space for just two testimonials. Read:

One of our white ribbon leaders in the Old Granite State writes as follows:

"I did not know that I was a fashionable old lady until my pet, THE UNION SIGNAL, came in all decked out in its new campaign suit. I knew for weeks it was getting ready for something, for every week it made my old heart beat faster, and my dim eyes grow dimmer with joy as I looked into its brightening face. Once in a while I had to shut my eyes and dream of my old native country as I read Lady Henry Somerset's vivid sketches of the beautiful island where I spent my first thirty years. Yes, I loved our paper away back in the years when it was a prim little girl called Our Union, but I love it better with the word "Signal" attached! My! My! It has not only grown handsome, but stalwart, its towering Temple, its watch tower, its side lines, its railroad ties, its editorials, its extempore addresses, its wide-awake correspondence, indeed, a thousand and one things in it stir the blood and rouse a warm-hearted interest for God and Home and Every Land."

And Mrs. Letitia Youmans writes from Canada:

"THE UNION SIGNAL found its way into my room this morning in a bran new summer suit, a forcible illustration of the motto: 'A thing of beauty is a joy forever.' The new costume is exceedingly becoming, and is suggestive of the artistic skill of the modiste who planned it. I read the SIGNAL with increasing interest, for it really furnishes a weekly treat of dainties, fresh, rich and rare. In this respect last week's issue surpassed every previous number."

Introduce it to your friends and neighbors and secure an invitation for it to call again.

READY JULY 1.

The promised "next thing" for the Loyal Temperance Legion.

On every hand the graduates of the Legion are multiplying; we do not propose to be behindhand in supplying their needs. They are young people just approaching the threshold of responsible citizenship. What do they need?

1.—A knowledge of the history of the Temperance Movement.

2.—A knowledge of the trend of thought in the world to-day as regards reform efforts, especially those along temperance lines.

3.—Temperance material for recitations, declamations, etc.

4.—In a word, familiarity with the varied phases of the temperance work of the times.

These needs we hope to meet by the issue of

The Advance Guard.

This is but an old friend under a new name, for it is Vol. 5 of

The Library Series.

But it will be issued monthly, and changed in character, to correspond with the demand of the hour. Watch the official column next week for details of the plan. Send for sample copies.

Price per year, $.50; single copies, $.05.
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DO NOT FORGET

That we publish the only magazine devoted to reform in the country. If you desire the best of arguments and most learned debates on questions of that character, you should subscribe for Our Day. It is not too late to send for the June number, which contains very valuable articles. "Temperance Needs in Foreign Lands" is discussed by Miss Willard, Mrs. Hunt and ex-President Hamlin. The question, "Is Roman Catholicism Christianity," is answered by Prof. L. T. Townsend. The latest Boston Monday Lecture is on "Fresh Lights from Ancient Monuments." In Vital Points of Expert Opinion "American Injustice to the Chinese Empire" is followed by "Dr. Parkhurst on Municipal Corruption in New York." The Memorial of "Fifty-five Female Physicians of India on the Evils of Child Marriage" is given in full, while editorial notes discuss many interesting subjects. It will well repay attention.

Single copy, 25c.; annual subscription, $2.50; to students and ministers, $2.00.
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

There is NO SURE CURE FOR EVERY CASE OF ASTHMA or EVERY CASE OF HAY FEVER, but the worst cases, if uncomplicated by organic disease, can be CURED TO STAY CURED
by constitutional treatment, and this at the patient's home.
ASTHMA AND HAY-FEVER
We treat no one without a thorough knowledge of the case.
Incurable Cases Declined.
Examination free by mail.
We want name and address of every sufferer from Asthma or Hay Fever.
P. HAROLD HAYES, M. D., BUFFALO, N. Y.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

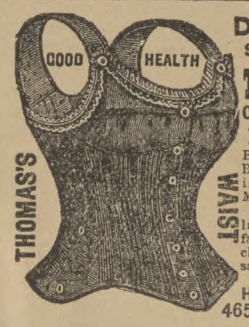
DON'T YOU THINK

Your baby would look pretty in a carriage like that?
We have prettier ones.
Also cheaper ones.
All shown in our catalogue, which we will mail FREE if you write for it.
FREIGHT PAID BY
WALTER HILL CO., 218 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.
Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL.
Ladies $1.50
Misses 1.25
Children, 60
Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.
Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.
Agents wanted everywhere.
H. A. Thomas & Co., Mant's
465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

MISS BEACH'S
Curling Fluid.
Keeps the hair in curl for days. Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.
30,000 Ladies Have Endorsed It
At druggists, or prepaid, 50c.
LADY AGENTS wanted.
DENISON CHEMICAL CO.,
56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory.
Agents Wanted. Also
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.
111 State Street,
Chicago, Ill.

SAVE MONEY
SAVE $40.00 ON NEW $140.00
BICYCLES
New, Latest Pattern $140 Bicycles for $100. Cheaper grades in proportion; cash or time. Agents wanted.
A. W. GUMP & CO.,
Dayton, Ohio.
BICYCLES, GUNS & TYPEWRITERS taken in exchange.

SAFEST OF ALL INVESTMENTS
CITY AND COUNTY BONDS
Secured by tax lien on all property within their limits.
Descriptive Bond Lists furnished on application.
N. W. HARRIS & CO., BANKERS,
163-165 DEARBORN ST. - CHICAGO, ILL.
New York. Boston.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
TAKE A COURSE IN THE
SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW. (Incorporated.)
Send ten cents (stamps) for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y,
DETROIT, MICH.
525 WHITNEY BLOCK.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL
in your own home. First class Sewing Machines shipped anywhere to anyone at wholesale prices. All latest improvements. Warranted five years. Complete set of attachments FREE. Send for catalogue. Standard Singer Machines, $9.50 to $15.50
$50 Arlington Sewing Machine for $19.50
$60 Kenwood Sewing Machine for $23.50
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 160 W. Van Buren St. B 26 Chicago.

A MODERN BATH.
The Latest and Best.
Quick Self-Heating, or Toilet Cabinet in place of Heater. No bath-room required. Ornamental, Inexpensive, Complete, Practical. Desirable for either city or town. Send for Catalogue.
THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB Co.

180 So. Canal Street, Chicago.

THE COBLENTZ CURE
Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

HOME STUDY BOOK-KEEPING SHORTHAND
Each person sending us before July 1st $1 for HENDRYX'S COMPENDIUM OF BOOK-KEEPING and BUSINESS FORMS for SELF INSTRUCTION, will receive instructions by mail free. Special inducement also given during the summer to SHORTHAND students. F. H. HENDRYX, 178, Bath, N. Y.

WHEREVER THE ROCKER WASHER is used the Washboard becomes a Relic of Barbarism. It is warranted to do the washing of an ordinary family in one hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for full description and prices. Rocker Washer Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Agents wanted.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

New W. C. T. U. and Prohibition Song Book. By the Silver Lake Quartette and W. A. Williams.
Larger than their former books. 35c. Ready June 15. Advance orders, 30c. Also music chart 40x90 in. $1; Parliamentary Chart, $1. Address
W. A. WILLIAMS, Warnock, Ohio.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

Well Designed
Wall Papers. Let us show you how to select and order. Send eight cents for 100 samples. Prices range from five to fifty cents a roll.
A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Phila.

Wall Paper Retailed. Good Paper 3c Gold Paper 5c. Send 10c for postage on samples, and his guide "How to Paper" will be sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

DIAMOND DYES give the fastest, brightest handsomest colors, and make the old clothes look like new. They are the original and only reliable package dyes. Sample card free. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

EYES tested free by mail. New method. Send stamp for test card. KEENE OPT. CO., 1301 Washington-st. Boston, Mass

SEND for our list of 19 Catalogs of Music and Musical Instruments.
W. STORY, 26 Central St., Boston, Mass

Cuts a Circle.

No Good Kitchen complete without a Chicago Rotary Biscuit and Cake Cutter, they sell at sight. AGENTS WANTED. Sample mailed for 15c. Columbia Specialty Mfg. Co., 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free.
G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take Crochet work to do at home. Steady work. Write for particulars. L. WHITE & CO., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

Kernels.

A PARISIAN wit once defined experience as a comb that one became possessed of after having lost one's hair.

WATTS—I was at a spiritualistic seance.
Potts—Were any spirits exhibited?
Watts—There were. I exhibited a spirit of investigation; the faithful exhibited a spirit of resentment, and that's what is the matter with my eye.

THIS occurred in a city Sunday school: the teacher had been reading the story of the centurion who had great faith, and whose servant was healed at the Lord's word. The teacher dwelt on the lesson of the story and had seen that that was properly enforced, and then she said to a bright boy in the class:

"And now can you tell me what a centurion is?"

"Yes'm," said the boy very promptly; "it's a horse with a man's head on him!"

"JOHN," she said, gently, "you are interested in temperance movements, are you not?" "Of course I am," he answered. "Well, suppose you go and make a few of them with the pump-handle. I need a pail of water right away."

"I KNOW what nights of labor are," said the mother of six boys as she sat down to repair the pile of trousers and jackets.

A YOUNG Aberdonian, on taking up a newspaper lately, turned to the column of births, and said—"I wonder if there is anybody born that I ken!"

MAMMA (to Noel, who is inclined to be talkative)—"Hush, Noel! Haven't I told you often that little boys should be seen and not heard?"
NOEL—"Yes, mamma! but you don't look at me!"

A CERTAIN doctor, having heard a village poet repeat some verses on a scolding wife, was so delighted with them as to request a copy. "There is no necessity for that," said the poet. "You have got the original."

AFTER the Sunday-school picnic. First Deacon: "There were nearly a hundred sandwiches left over. What shall we do with them?" Second deacon: "Store 'em away in the vestry. They'll do for next year."

A COUPLE of visitors from a rural district in the House gallery were trying to pick out their member on the floor. "I can't distinguish him," said one, after a hopeless visual observation. "Of course not," was the honest reply, "he can't even distinguish himself."

A LITTLE boy asked his mother to talk to him and say something funny. "How can I?" she exclaimed. "Don't you see I am busy baking these pies?" "Well, you might say, 'Charlie, won't you have a pie?' That would be funny for you."

"OH, yes," writes a Harlem man who believes that his own home is the coolest place on earth in midsummer, "it is all very well for you to ask me to come down to your Long Branch hotel for rest and change. I tried it once; the porter got all the change and the landlord took the rest."

THE night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one,
Yet the light of the bright world dies
With the dying sun.

The mind has a thousand eyes
And the heart but one,
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done.
—Dr. W. Bourdillon.

SLEEK STRANGER:—I am hunting for work, sir. Have you any scrubbing, washing, or cleaning of any kind you wish done? Mr. Morrison Essex:—You don't look like a man for that kind of work. Sleek Stranger:—I am not, sir. It is for my wife I am hunting work.

JUSTICE FLYNN:—What's the charge, officer? O'Rourke:—Breakin' the Sunday law, yer 'Anner. Justice Flynn:—How's that? O'Rourke:—Sure he was tryin' to git into Cassidy's saloon by de front dure instead of de family entrance.

HE:—Sorry to have kept you waiting, but my watch was wrong. I shall never have faith in it again. She:—It's not faith you need, but works.

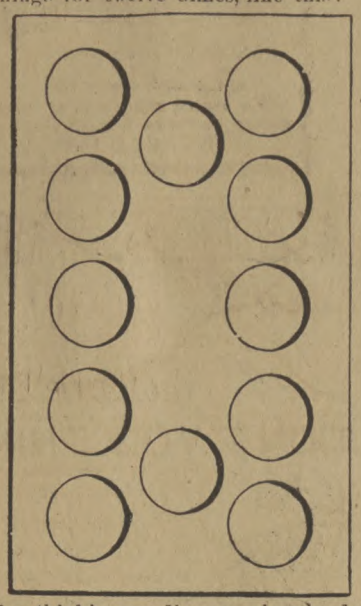
THE following conversation occurred recently just before a wedding. Bride to be:—What do you think is the reason that marriage is so often a failure? Best man:—Because the bride does not marry the best man.

"The East is as different from the West as can be," said the professor. "For instance: on entering holy places the Oriental removes his shoes. We in the Occident remove our hats."—Harper's Bazar.

Publisher's Notes.

A NEW WAY.

Did you ever try to send silver money in a letter? Here is a way that will prove successful. We have had cards made with openings for twelve dimes, like this:



Now thinking, reading people, who desire to know for themselves the all aroundness of everything, but who do not want to subscribe for a paper of which they have no knowledge, for a whole year, will pay a dime in order to read it for one month, just to see what it is. Then, when they find that it has for editors Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mary Allen West, Miss M. A. Sudduth and Mrs. H. B. Kells; for contributors, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Kate Sanborn, Mary Lowe Dickinson, Emily Huntington Miller, Abby Morton Diaz and many others equally gifted; that it can be secured for only $1 per year; they will want you to call again so that they may become regular subscribers—or if not able to send $1 for a year, will take it for one or for three months again. Now we have this proposition to make:

Any person who will secure twelve names and twelve dimes—we will send these cards to all who desire them—and forward the same to this office with the request that THE UNION SIGNAL be sent to the persons whose names are given for one month, may select one of the cabinet photographs of our leaders (see catalogue) and it will be sent without charge. This offer is to apply to any person, young or old. Address,

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

AN INTERESTING EPISODE.

June 8, 1862, is the date of Mary Willard's death, whose memory is enshrined in the well-known little book entitled "Nineteen Beautiful Years." The thirtieth anniversary of this event occurred on Wednesday last, and Miss Willard, her mother, (nearly eighty-eight years old) and Misses Kate A. Jackson, Anna Gordon, Alice E. Briggs and Irene Fockler visited the old Willard home, No. 508 Sherman avenue, (formerly on the grounds where William E. Deering's mansion now stands) and entered the room where Mary Willard died, and the large, front room in which "Nineteen Beautiful Years" was written.

This book has been translated into French, Danish and Spanish, and is circulated in all parts of the world. The English edition, published by Morgan & Scott, London, has had a large sale.

Do you own this book which others prize so highly? If not, send 75 cts. for a cloth bound copy, or 25 cts. for paper covered copy, or 10 cts. for library series edition to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE LATEST OUT.

The freshest thing we have to offer to our readers is a dainty booklet entitled "A Defense of the Jericho Robbers," by W. W. Satterlee. The endeavor is to secure the acquittal of the robbers, on trial before the Sanhedrim on the plea that "they were engaged in a lawful pursuit, a Judean industry, legally sanctioned, regulated and restrained according to the highest idea of modern civilization." The claim is that "the man who went down that way was wholly to blame for the catastrophe." He knew the danger and might have gone another way. The whole agreement in favor of licensed evil is so transparent that it must benefit all who read. Send for a copy. Price 20c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

The 1892 Model Remington Typewriter

Presents many points of improvement which will readily commend themselves to all users.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT,
327 Broadway, New York.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR COLD BLAST ON DUST ON CHICAGO

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

DO YOU KNOW
That the PERFECTION
FLOUR BIN & SIEVE
Combines Sack or Barrel, Sifter Pan and Scoop, preserves flour from mould and mustiness.
Keeps out dust, vermin, etc. YOU OUGHT to HAVE ONE. Ask our agent or your dealer for them, if they cannot supply you, write to us Satisfaction Guaranteed.
Prices to hold { 25 lbs. $2.50 / 50 lbs. $3.00 / 100 lbs. $4.00 } AGENTS WANTED.
SHERMAN & BUTLER.
26-28 W. Lake St. B 136 CHICAGO, ILL.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH
Taken internally and used locally with Insufflator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.
Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.
DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

There seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance than by placing Drinking Fountains on the streets of our cities and towns.
Special prices given to W. C. T. Unions.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue and full particulars.
J. W. FISKE,
21 and 23 Barclay Street, NEW YORK.

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP
For the Skin, Scalp and Complexion.

The result of 20 years' experience in treating skin diseases. For sale by druggists, or sent by mail for 50c. A Sample Cake and 145 page book on Dermatology and Beauty sent sealed for 10 cents. Illustrated on Skin, Scalp, Nervous and Blood Diseases. Also Disfigurements like Birthmarks, Moles, Warts, India Ink and Powder Marks; Scars, Pittings, Redness of Nose, Superfluous Hair, Pimples, Facial Development, etc. Consultation free at office or by letter.
JOHN H. WOODBURY,
Dermatological Institute, 125 W. 42d St., New York City.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble, Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SIR HENRY THOMPSON, the most noted physician of England, says that more than half of all diseases come from errors in diet.
Send for Free Sample of Garfield Tea to 319 West 45th Street, New York City.

GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation

YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

BORSCH-OPTIGIAN
103 E. ADAMS ST.
CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT
SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

FAT PEOPLE You can reduce your weigh 10 to 15 lbs a month at home without starving or injury by DR. CLARKE'S Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials, Free F B CLARKE, M. D. Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Signal Notes.

THE last vestige of the state debt of Iowa has recently been liquidated. Iowa, it will be remembered, is a prohibition state.

OUT of 2,700 Congregational ministers in England and Wales, at least 1,600 are abstainers; of 361 students, 320 are abstainers.

HALF a million persons, it is said, are, in one way or another, employed on the Sabbath in connection with the drink traffic, and 200,000 of these are young women.

THE Free Church of Scotland has six hundred and thirty-two ministers, all of whom are abstainers, and a total membership of nearly sixty four thousand teetotalers.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON, in recalling the hard names that have been, and still are, hurled at temperance reformers, reminds them, in his usual happy style, that "fanatics are earnest men in a minority, and a faddist is one who knows something more than the rest of people."

THE Synod of the Covenanter church at its recent annual meeting in Mansfield, O., passed strong resolutions on temperance and approved the W. C. T. U. in the following words: "That the women of the W. C. T. U. be commended for untiring efforts, not only in behalf of temperance, but of national religion and the protection of God's day of rest, and we pledge them our aid in all these efforts that have in view the welfare of men and the honor of our God."

"THE most serious trouble with drinking, so far as the mass of saloon drinkers is concerned," says the New York Sun, "is that it uses up so large a part of the money of the people; and that evil would not be lessened by Dr. Rainsford's plan. If he gave away his beer and wine, he would encourage drinking, and therefore he proposes to run his saloons as a money making enterprise. Hence, they would not diminish the wastefulness of expenditure in drink by the poor. The money would only go into a different till."

THE Pall Mall Gazette does well to call attention to the curious unfairness with which the House of Commons treats lady visitors. At the recent vote on the preliminary suffrage bill for women, every available seat in both of the ladies' galleries was occupied, and many who desired to be spectators were turned away. Might it not be well to petition for a better opportunity to look on? Possibly the thought in the minds of the progressive British women is that before long they will be themselves, in Parliament, after which the interests of women will be duly attended to.

PREMIER ABBOTT, of Canada, has recently said in reply to ladies who represented the women of Canada, coming to him with a petition for enfranchisement, that he was, personally, in favor of admitting women to vote. He said he had studied the question for years, and the more he pondered over it the more he was confident that not only should women vote, but the necessity of the country and the times was close at hand when it might be granted. He could not promise that the government, at the present session, would introduce a bill, but the near future would certainly bring about the results that they desire.

IN each county in England there is a lord called lord-lieutenant, designated by the Queen. He appoints the magistrates, and all petty suits are tried by them and the magistrate throws up what he will. He is often a squire or a clergyman who drinks, and who sometimes has buildings rented to men who sell drink, and it is in his interest to saddle liquor on the community. He has entire control of licenses. This is the British method. The magistrates could absolutely prevent the legalizing of the sale of liquor; but they have never done so unless in instances so exceptional as not to be known to the public.

LONDON has 8,325 miles of streets and a population of 5,847,000—more than the whole of Scotland or of Ireland. It has only 439 church buildings. It has about 8,500 people to the square mile; 145,000 paupers, one-third of whom are children. London has over 36,000 registered, habitual criminals. There are over 14,000 policemen, which cost the city over $7,000,000 a year. London has also 14,000 grog-shops. How much these cost nobody can figure up. Never will there be any way out of "darkest" London, or the bottomless miseries and degradation of any other city, so long as the grog-shop curse is tolerated.—Advance.

Sickness Among Children,

Especially infants, is prevalent at all times, but is largely avoided by giving proper nourishment and wholesome food. The most successful and reliable is the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk Your grocer and druggist keep it.

Economy is not in the purchase but in the use. Few articles of clothing are extravagant to purchase, but they are extravagant to wear. Especially is this true of laces, embroideries, and all delicate fabrics. The washing of such articles should never be attempted without Ivory Soap. Ivory gives a fine lather, free from oil or grease. It is mild but effective. Dirt rots the fibre of all textiles, but it is nothing compared to the speedy destruction which comes with the use of impure soap.

COPYRIGHT 1890, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

WOMAN'S SYNDICATE.

The above is the Nichols Chemical Co's plant to be erected at once at South Waukegan.

We have under contract about 2,000 lots scattered throughout the town, costing $500,000, but now worth according to prices of adjoining lots, $662,500.

The location of such enormous factories employing such a vast number of workmen, is increasing the value of our property very rapidly.

We now offer for sale our second series of Bonds of the denomination of $10.00, which are secured by above named lots.

Each Bond owner shares in the profit derived from the sale of the lots. Every one who investigates our plans buys bonds. Investigation is invited.

We refer by permission to the Commercial Loan & Trust Co., 115 La Salle St., and General Singleton, Pres. Total Abstinence Life Association, Royal Ins. Building, Chicago.

Complete information will be mailed on request.

...WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE...

Mrs. R. A. EMMONS, Mgr., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE WAISTS

Fit all ages and shapes—infants to adults

Lake Erie Seminary

FOR WOMEN.

PAINESVILLE, OHIO.

Early application necessary for September, 1892.

BAKER'S COCOA.

ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS

EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

Ladies and Children's dress-cutting learned at home by most perfect TAILOR SYSTEM. Big money to live agts Circulars free. Miss ANNA GRAVES, Box 665, Chicago, Ill

BEATTY Pianos, $175. Organs, $49. Want ag'ts Cat'lg free. Dan'l Beatty, Wash'ton, N.J.

3,000 Job Lot BICYCLES 20 to 50% off. Lowest prices on all '92 makes & 2d hd Easy payments. We sell everywhere. '91 Cush'n $85 Juno, balls. $65 | 40 in. $37 Victor Jr. balls. $17
'90 Crescent ('91 make) " $50 | '91 $135 Rambler " $90
'91 $145 Cush'n High Grade $90 | And 20 other styles as cheap.
Largest stock & oldest dealers in U. S. Agts. wanted.
Cata. free. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 S. St., Peoria, Ill.

READERS can have PAPERS and MAGAZINES sent them from Publishers all over the country, by sending 25 cts. to the CENTRAL SUPPLY CO Chicago. Mention this paper

SEWING MACHINES Our List Prices are about ONE-HALF those of any other manufacturer of Sewing Machines. We will cut these prices IN TWO to INTRODUCE them. We have the newest and best. LIST FREE. AMERICAN MACHINE COMPANY, Chicago.

TAPE-WORM Expelled alive in 60 minutes, with head, or no charge. Send 2c stamp for circular. Dr. M. NEY SMITH, Specialist, 721 Olive-st. St. Louis, Mo

HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES. Agents Wanted. Catalogue free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

Free-fishing & Bicycle Goods if you tack up circular for Rudolph Mfg. Co., Chicago.

OUR AIM

Is to make the washboard a relic of barbarism, and wherever the Rocker Washer is used this condition of affairs exists. You can do the washing of an ordinary family in one hour as clean as can be done by hand, and parties wanting more time for the temperance work, or wanting to take the agency of an article in which all women are interested, will do well to write the Rocker Washer Co. at Ft. Wayne, Ind., for particulars.

NEW YORK AND RETURN $16.

July 5th, 6th and 7th, the Wabash Railroad will sell tickets to New York and return at the very low rate of $16. Are you interested? Then write F. A. Palmer, A. G. P. A., 201 Clark Street, for excursion folder, giving maps, rates, routes, etc.

BURLINGTON ROUTE.

The Burlington Route is the best railroad from Chicago and St. Louis to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, Deadwood and Denver. The scenic line via Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Leadville, Glenwood Springs, Salt Lake City and Ogden to all California points. All its trains are vestibuled, and equipped with Pullman sleeping cars, standard chair cars (seats free), and Burlington Route dining cars. If you are going West, take the best line.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad.

Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

Half Rates to the Great Christian Endeavor Meeting at New York via B. & O. R. R.

For the meeting of the United Society Christian Endeavor at New York, July 7th to 10th, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company will sell tickets to the general public at the low rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets at this rate, reading via the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, will be on sale from July 5th to 7th inclusive, at ticket offices in all of the principal cities and towns in the East and West, and will be valid for return passage until July 15th inclusive. The time limit of tickets may be extended until August 15th, 1892, if deposited with the agent of the Trunk Lines in New York on or before July 15th. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company operates daily Vestibuled Limited Express trains, equipped with Pullman sleeping cars, between New York, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, and all intermediate stations, with close connections from all points South, Southwest, the far West, and Northwest. All through trains between the East and West cross the Alleghany Mountains via Deer Park and Oakland, the famous summer resorts, amid the most picturesque scenery in America, and pass through Washington in full view of the Capitol and other public buildings and Washington's Monument. For full information as to rates from any point, time of trains, and sleeping car accommodations apply to L. S. Allen, Chicago; O. P. McCarty, Cincinnati; C. P Craig, 415 Broadway, New York; A. J. Simmons, 211 Washington Street, Boston; C. R. Mackenzie, 833 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia; S. B. Hege, Washington, D. C.; E. D. Smith, Pittsburgh; W. E. Reppert, Columbus, O.; W. H. Lewis, St. Louis, or Chas. O. Scull, G. P. A., Baltimore, Md.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

Vol. XVIII.—No. 26. CHICAGO, June 30, 1892. Price, $1.00 per year in advance.

Mrs. Dietrick
2419 19th St.

THE WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE HEADQUARTERS AT HARVEY, ILL.

CLIPPING FROM A LETTER WRITTEN BY

MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, of OHIO.

June 25, 1892.

"Leaving Chicago Friday evening last, at a speed usual after a delay of an hour and a quarter, I was suddenly shaken from reverie to active thought. Before me was that living panorama of people called to the city by the great convention, and I asked, If 50,000 added to the population so blocks the thoroughfares and fills the hotels, what will be done with the 200,000 which it is expected will be the average daily addition during the World's Fair?

"Quickly came the pleasant reflection that thousands who may attend the Exposition need not enter the vast crowd, to their own and others' discomfort, until, having seen the exhibits of the world, they turn themselves about to see its second wonder, Chicago itself, as Walter Thomas Mills & Co. have become benefactors to their race, in the preparation of a home at Harvey to which all worthy people who will, may come.

"Happily the Exposition grounds are midway between Chicago and Harvey, with some charge to and from either point, yet I could but think that in addition to a saving of time, strength and patience, there will be innumerable advantages to be secured by choosing Harvey.

"1st. It is the terminus of the suburban passenger line of the Illinois Central R. R. No crowded trains will stop at Harvey en route to the Fair, but starting at that point, there will be ample room for all, and 80 trains will pass each way during the day.

"2d. Quiet will prevail, there being no saloons, or riotous, noisy element in the place, hence no better spot can be found for nervous persons or semi-invalids, who must see the great sights, though it be with fear and trembling, because of weakness.

"3d. The Hotel and its furnishings will be perfectly new.

"4th. Fresh air will not be excluded by heated walls, as in the city, but comfort by day and sleep by night will be promoted by its abundance and purity.

"5th Only temperate, moral people are to be entertained, and the names of those who have taken stock are a guarantee of the character of the guests, many reformers and humanitarians being among the number.

"6th Every possible effort is being made to establish among them a home feeling and a spirit of fraternity, with the belief that great good will come from their council with one another.

"7th Arrangements have been made for Sabbath meetings to be addressed by leading speakers of this and other lands. The grove in which they will be held will also be another attraction to mothers whose children will there find space, shade and safety.

"8th. The restaurant will be of the most attractive and satisfactory character, being under the charge of Mrs. E. A. Russell, than whom a greater in her profession is not."

ORDERS BEING PLACED FOR 320 CARLOADS OF BUILDING MATERIAL, 1 1-5 miles of Veranda, 10 acres of Floor.

ONE DOLLAR Deposited now secures a room for yourself or friends for the World's Fair at the greatest Temperance Headquarters in the World. See special offer below. The rooms are large and light, pure water, perfect ventilation; all outside rooms. Twenty-five minutes' ride to the World's Fair Grounds; probably a five-cent fare. Healthful wholesome, perfect quiet. No disorderly persons allowed. NO SALOONS IN TOWN.

Great Changes Necessary. The first plan was for a thousand guests, but orders for rooms already received make it necessary to more than double the original design, which has been done without making any inside rooms and without increasing the height above three stories.

The Management. The business managers of the hotel are the WARING BROS. (Hon. G. P. Waring and C. L. Waring); they are the President and Treasurer of the Company and among the largest stockholders. They are men of wide experience, have always been successful and are of large financial responsibility. They have closed a contract with MRS. E. A. RUSSELL, at present the manager of the W. C. T. U. Coffee House at Minneapolis, the most successful temperance coffee house in the world, to manage and have complete control of all matters pertaining to food, rooms, household conveniences or in any way affecting the comfort of our guests. See THE UNION SIGNAL two-page editorial of April 7.

Our Supporters. Among those who will be our guests or have cordially approved of our plans may be mentioned: Frances E. Willard, John P. St. John, I. K. Funk, Miss Esther Pugh. The editors of ALL the religious papers in Chicago and numerous others of other cities; the authorities of the World's Fair on public meetings, in short, the best MEN AND WOMEN in America and the world are filling our great hotel.

How to Act. Those who order and pay for rooms now get their lodgings at present rates, 4 in a room, 50c. each per day; 2 in a room, $1 each per day; 1 only in a room, $1.50 per day; and moreover among them will be distributed ONE-HALF OF ALL THE PROFITS of the enterprise during the WORLD'S FAIR. Meals need not now be paid for, they can be gotten on the European plan at from 15 cents to 75 cents as you may elect. Send only money to pay for lodgings. The way this is arranged is GUARANTEED PROFIT-SHARING STOCK CERTIFICATES are sold in $10 Shares. This stock entitles one to rooms at above rates, if taken now, to the full face value of the stock, either for themselves or their friends.

Special Offer. We will accept subscriptions, until further notice, on the following plan: Send us ONE DOLLAR or more for each share of TEN DOLLARS each which you may wish to take, and we will enter your name and reserve for you rooms to the full amount of shares subscribed for. You can send the balance in monthly payments of ONE DOLLAR or more for each share taken, until fully paid. Use the form at the right in sending order.

ONLY $100,000 WORTH OF THESE CERTIFICATES OFFERED. SHARES $10 EACH.

The Harvey World's Fair Hotel and Entertainment Company.

All Orders for Stock should be addressed to

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.

Our exclusive agents for sale of stock,

161 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

A CUT THIS OUT OR COPY IT,

Fill the blanks, SIGN IT, and pin it to a ONE DOLLAR BILL or ONE DOLLAR postal note for each share ordered, and mail it at once to Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

..... 1892.

Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.:

I hereby subscribe for and agree to take and pay for rooms in The World's Fair Temperance Hotel at Harvey, Ill., on the Guaranteed Profit-Sharing plan, amounting to —— shares of Ten Dollars each, total $——. It is specially understood that these certificates are, when fully paid, non-assessable, without liability, and receivable at their full face value, and at the regular rates, in payment for rooms at the above Hotel during the World's Fair, besides entitled to pro rata share of one-half the profits of the enterprise. Inclosed find $—— cash payment on this subscription, the balance to be paid in installments of not less than One Dollar per share each calendar month until fully paid, but in the event of the default of any of these payments, or in the further event of grossly immoral or improper conduct on my part at any time prior to or during the World's Fair, all rights or claims hereunder are forfeited to and at the option of the said World's Fair Hotel and Entertainment Co.

Signed.....

Address.....

ON WILLARD STREET IN FISK ADDITION

THE HANDSOMEST LOTS ARE OWNED BY THE

HARRIMAN IMPROVEMENT CO.,

WHICH BUYS, AND BUILDS, AND SELLS

IN THE HAPPY CITY!

On FISK AVENUE, in the same BEAUTIFUL ADDITION, and in other parts of HARRIMAN, this Company has a large number of other Lots, well located. It has sold many at a GOOD PROFIT, and has built and sold Several Houses. It has under contract several more, for which parties are waiting. It is helping to make true the words of General Clinton B. Fisk when he said, "We are going to build Harriman."

Its PREFERRED STOCK IS GUARANTEED 8 PER CENT ANNUAL DIVIDEND, and shares handsomely in the final division of profits, besides.

If you want the best possible Real Estate Investment, paying Large Cash Interest, plus possible Large Profits, and giving you no care, inquire for full particulars of

GEO. R. BARNS, Secretary, L. S. FREEMAN, President,

HARRIMAN, TENN.

See Here.

JUST THE THING FOR YOUR PUBLIC MEETINGS

—IS—

WHITE RIBBON VIBRATIONS.

With Its Stirring Music.

IT WILL HELP IMMENSELY.

Young People Like It.

The Children Enjoy It.

Old Folks are Interested.

Price, 35c. Per Copy.

Send for sample to

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,

THE TEMPLE,

(Rooms 1102-1110.) CHICAGO.

FOR YOU!
WHAT?
OUR LATEST BOOK.
WHY?
BECAUSE IT WILL HELP YOU!
LISTEN!

"A YOUNG WOMAN JOURNALIST"

Is a delightful book; Instructive to the Young; delightful to those no longer young. It is edited by LADY HENRY SOMERSET and MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD. It contains Miss Ames' letters from Europe, three of the literary papers she wrote, MISS WILLARD'S SERMON or FUNERAL ORATION, and much more of interest. Beautifully illustrated. Price $1.50. Send orders to WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N, The Temple, Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago. N. B.—Agents wanted.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES:
The Home "Fourth" ... 8
Temperance and Labor ... 8
Associated for Progress ... 8
Satan Rebuking Sin ... 8
Why Don't We Do It? ... 9
THE WATCH-TOWER ... 9
CONTRIBUTED:
Poem, A National Hymn. By Sarah A. McClees ... 2
Triumviri—A Fourth of July Discussion. By O. B. Bird, M. D. ... 2
Our New Missionary to South Africa—Miss Alice R. Palmer. By Frances E. Willard ... 3
The Woman Question—A Radical View. By A Minister Man ... 4
For a Pure, Fine Arts Display at the Columbian Exposition. By Josiah W. Leeds ... 4
The Relation of Purity to Temperance. By Edith S. Davis ... 4
Prayer for Our Country. By J. Fowler Willing ... 5
The World Abroad; or, Temperance Notes from Foreign Lands. By Felix L. Oswald, M. D. ... 5
PRESIDENT'S COLUMN ... 6
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Bay View Season ... 6
The Work of Salt Lake City W. C. T. U. ... 6
Letter from a Farmer's Wife ... 15
THE HOUSEHOLD:
Poem, Rally for Our Homes! ... 7
Dick Ellsworth's Grandfather ... 7
How to Awaken Patriotism in Children ... 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS:
Only One Saved. By Eva Kinney Griffith ... 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
Arkansas—Wisconsin—Kentucky—Missouri—Eastern Washington—District of Columbia—Ohio ... 10-13
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
Sunday Closing and Our Duty ... 13
Temple Receipts ... 13
News in a Nutshell ... 13
OUR CHILDREN:
Poem, Uncle Sam's Birthday ... 14
A Fight for the Flag ... 14
An Awful Story ... 14
KERNELS ... 17
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT ... 16, 17

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy.....and when he saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.....rise up and walk.—Luke 5: 18-20, 23.

We have now paid $85,000, beside five per cent interest on the $251,000 stock purchased in February from Marshall Field. At this rate we will be entire owners of the Field's stock in a year, instead of two years, which the contract allows us for its payment; we will then own the controlling interest. This is a consummation which we look forward to with desire unutterable, and with the building entirely rented, as it surely will be in another year, the stock will then be earning a net dividend of at least sixteen per cent. Holding as we do an option to purchase the balance within ten years, by the payment of five per cent from the time parties invested, we will soon be able to become owners of the entire capital stock. We hope this statement will set at rest the minds of all our timid sisters, many of whom seem to be ready to take up any silly rumor started either by friends who do not understand the financial plan of the enterprise, or enemies who willfully misrepresent. We assure our friends the great undertaking has arrived at such a stage that it cannot possibly fail, unless an earthquake should annihilate Chicago, or our constituency.

It is a pity, however, that so many of our white-ribboners should be so blind to the interest of our great cause both in their own state and the nation, as to stand idly by, many of them carping at the plan, while others are nobly at work doing their part to complete the enterprise. If all would do as some have already done, every dollar of the $600,000 capital stock would be in our hands by next June, when the building is to be dedicated.

***

Mrs. J. S. Nash, Strong, Maine, sends $5 and writes: "I am a poor woman and have very little money, but I give the Lord one-tenth of all that comes into my hands." Suppose every white-ribboner, the coming year, should try this plan for the Temple fund—and we believe every woman is just as able to do it as Mrs. Nash—the outcome next June would be that our 200,000 women would have paid into the treasury $1,000,000. Here is another case. Mrs. Harriet Hemsted, Des Moines, Iowa, says: "I send you postoffice order for one dollar, the result of the mite box you sent me. I have done the best I could. I have been sick all winter, am a poor woman living on charity. I am nearly eighty-two years old." Suppose each white-ribboner of our 200,000 sends $1 before next June, what would be the result? It would place in our treasury just $200,000. What cannot you do, oh, my sister who reads this, if the dear, aged saint in her extreme old age, poverty and sickness, can raise one dollar to send to the Temple fund? Surely there are few in our ranks in such straitened circumstances as Mrs. Hemsted, and if all cannot send $5, they can at least send $1, as she has done.

***

How easy it is for a union to raise $100 by the mite-box system. We are reminded of this by receiving a check for $21.90 from the Strasburg, Pa., W. C. T. U.—the contents of six mite-boxes. Now, if there can be found twenty-eight faithful women in each union who will see to it that a penny a day is placed in the box each one takes for a year, the gathering in of the boxes at the end of that time will show a total of $102.20, more than enough to place the name of the union on a tablet; beside each person who fills a box will receive a photographic group, with autographs attached, containing the pictures of Miss Willard, Lady Somerset and the founder of the Temple.

***

The Great Falls, Mont., W. C. T. U. sends $75—which completes their pledge of $100. The eleventh district, Michigan, W. C. T. U., send $85 on their pledge; $70.16 is sent by the Erie county, Pa., W. C. T. U. on their pledge. Twenty-five dollars comes from the Allegheny Co. union on a pledge. The Presque Isle, Me., union sends $75 on a $100 pledge. Fifty-three dollars comes from Belmont Co., O., W. C. T. U. as a first installment on a pledge of $100. Pleasant Hill, Mo., W. C. T. U. send $30 as first payment on pledge of $100. The Stockton, Mo., W. C. T. U. send $28, first installment on pledge of $100; $2.50 of this came from a self-denial fund of nine members of the union. The Ann Arbor, Mich., W. C. T. U. pledges $100, $30 of which has been paid. Mrs. P. B. Chapman, superintendent of Temple work of Monroe Co., Mich., writes as follows: "The W. C. T. U. of Monroe, Co., Mich., has pledged the sum of $100 to the Temple fund, requesting that the name of our worthy and efficient county president, Mrs. Jennie H. Lockwood, be inscribed on a tablet in Willard Hall. It is with great pleasure that I send to-day to our county treasurer $40 to be applied on this pledge, thus assuring you of the faith our temperance workers have in the beautiful temple, built in the service of God and humanity." Seven dollars comes from the twenty-fourth district, Ohio W. C. T. U., which completes the $100 pledged for the Charlotte Boyer tablet. The Y's of St. Louis, Mo., send $25 on their pledge—$27 from the Y's of Blue Earth City, Minn., on their pledge.

***

Mrs. F. H. Maynard, Providence, R. I., sends $10 on a pledge of $100, to have the name of his "sainted aunt, Albina I. Hamilton, engraved in memoriam on a tablet in Willard Hall." "Enclosed find $4.31, the contents of our mite-box," writes Mrs. Lucy Chapin, Euclid, Mich. "The thirty-one cents is from our little Charlie's pocket-book. It was given him during his last sickness, and is too sacred to be used for anything but the Temple. He was four years old when he went home two years and a half ago. He was buried with his L. T. L. badge pinned on his dress as he had worn it last." One dollar comes from Mrs. C. R. Harmon, Cortland, N. Y. It was set apart for missionary purposes by her father, Mr. E. P. Brainard, and found after his death. Mrs. J. A. Passmon, of Keuka College, N. Y., writes: "Enclosed find $1 in memoriam, for Harold Copeland, Mauck, the first white-ribbon baby of the Keuka Park W. C. T. U., who died April 8, aged eleven months."

***

Among the latest purchasers of Temple Trust bonds is Mrs. Helen Barker, president of South Dakota W. C. T. U., now one of the resident lady managers in Chicago, of the World's Columbian Exposition, and also one of the Temple trustees. Another one is Mrs. Dr. Gordon, president Boston, Mass., W. C. T. U. Only $120,000 of the Temple Trust bonds remain unsold; those who desire a safe and good paying investment should write at once to our financial agent, Mr. H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle street, Chicago, for all information in regard to them.

A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite-box ($3.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

Publisher's Notes.

THE HANDY MANUAL.

This little book of 440 pages is a perfect encyclopedia of information. It answers almost every question that you might ask, whether of law, history or concerning mercantile business or farm interests. Social matters have due attention. It also contains fifty maps. The price of this manual has been 50c. We will send it to any address for 25c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

READY JULY 1.

The promised "next thing" for the Loyal Temperance Legion.

On every hand the graduates of the Legion are multiplying; we do not propose to be behindhand in supplying their needs. They are young people just approaching the threshold of responsible citizenship. What do they need?

1.—A knowledge of the history of the Temperance Movement.

2.—A knowledge of the trend of thought in the world to-day as regards reform efforts, especially those along temperance lines.

3.—Temperance material for recitations, declamations, etc.

4.—In a word, familiarity with the varied phases of the temperance work of the times.

These needs we hope to meet by the issue of

The Advance Guard.

This is but an old friend under a new name, for it is Vol. 5 of

The Library Series.

But it will be issued monthly, and changed in character to correspond with the demand of the hour. Watch the official column next week for details of the plan. Send for sample copies.

Price per year, $.50; single copies, $.05.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Do you desire to aid in extending the principles of the W. C. T. U.? Then send THE UNION SIGNAL into homes where it does not enter. Send it a month on trial, or induce those you desire to interest to subscribe for one month. To any one who will send twelve monthly subscriptions, at ten cents each, or five quarterly subscriptions at twenty-five cents each, we will send, in return for service in securing the same, a photograph of any one of our leaders they may select. We will send card to aid in soliciting such subscriptions on application.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

TWO HARVEST EXCURSIONS—HALF RATES TO THE WEST.

August 30th and September 27th.

On these dates the BURLINGTON ROUTE will sell tickets from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis to the farming districts of Nebraska, Colorado and Northern Kansas. Half rates will apply, and tickets will be good for twenty days. Nebraska in one year produced three hundred million bushels of corn, besides other grain, fruit and live stock. Write for free pamphlets, maps, etc., to P. S. Eustis, G. P. A., Burlington Route, Chicago, Ill.

WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE.

Elsewhere in this paper is published the advertisement of the Woman's Land Syndicate, a combination of talent and capital born of a purpose to better woman financially. Mrs. R. A. Emmons, the Manager, is favorably known all over the United States as the former Secretary of the Woman's Lecture Bureau. To her genius and foresight is the syndicate indebted for life and for the success attending it. Her plan appears faultless, judging by the approval it has received, for the success is far beyond her most sanguine expectations. The bonds, which are of the denominations of $10, are sold to women only, and are based upon the security of about 2,000 lots in South Waukegan, Lake county, Illinois. These lots were originally scaled at a low price, but have so appreciated in value that a credit dividend upon the first price of bonds has been made of $62,500. The second series is now on the market.

South Waukegan is one of the most prosperous and promising of the Chicago manufacturing suburbs....Located there are the famous works (in active operation) of the Washburn-Moen Wire Works, of Worcester, Mass., the United States Sugar Refinery, United States Starch Works, Lanyon's Oxide of Zinc Manufactory, Morrow Bros. Factory, Nichols Chemical Works, etc. It is estimated by conservative people that the factories already placed in South Waukegan, will warrant and call for a population of from 30,000 to 50,000 people.

Study it carefully, and for fuller and deeply interesting information send to THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, ROOKERY BUILDING, 217 La Salle Street, Chicago.

If you mention this paper a handsome souvenir of the World's Fair, with pictures of its buildings, will be included.

INDUSTRIAL ASTRONOMY.

THE ONE STAR WHICH OUTSHINES ALL OTHERS—COMPOSITION OF ITS RAYS AS REVEALED BY THE SPECTRUM ANALYSIS.

For the past two years, observers of the industrial heavens have been deeply interested in the appearance and development in the Chicago constellation of a new star shining with unparalleled brilliancy and with great steadiness. It is called HARVEY, and the more it is watched the more interesting it becomes. We are enabled herewith to present an analysis of its rays, which will explain in some measure why it is regarded as a Star of Hope by thousands of workingmen in this country.

Copyright 1892 by the Harvey Land Association.

THE STAR OF HARVEY.

P. S.—Some persons remembering Emerson's advice about "hitching your wagon to a star," have been trying to attach their penny go-carts to the great Harvey enterprise, but there is no connection whatever.

The Harvey Land Association.

It is easy to remember that, and if you direct as above you will deal only with the founders and builders of the town.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, June 30, 1892. Number 26.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

St. Petersburg is threatened with an outbreak of cholera.

Dr. Talmage preached in the City Temple, London June 26.

The Mississippi river has well-nigh outstripped all previous highwater marks.

Prohibition delegates are gathering in Cincinnati for the convention which opens June 29.

Henry M. Stanley made his first stump speech, June 23. He is a candidate for a seat in Parliament.

The poet Whittier has accepted the invitation to write the opening ode for the Columbian Exposition.

Miss Willard went to Cincinnati Saturday, the 25th, and not the 26th, as our types said in the last issue.

Six hundred and two young people, chiefly girls, were graduated from the high schools of Chicago last week.

Mr. Gladstone is temporarily disabled by a painful though not serious accident to his eye, caused by a flying missile.

It is reported that the steamship Vega has collided with a British sailing vessel, and that six hundred lives are lost.

A frightful accident on the Pennsylvania railroad, June 25, caused the death of twelve people and severe injury to forty others.

There has been more weather to the square acre the past week than ever beheld in the northwest. Frogs are growing faster than flowers.

The Democratic convention adjourned Thursday afternoon, having been in session three days. It nominated Grover Cleveland for president, and Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois, for vice-president.

Eight ladies gracefully and with becoming dignity acted as ushers at Lincoln Park Baptist church, Cincinnati, last Sunday and will continue to serve, so says the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette of June 25.

All legal obstructions being removed, it has been decided to erect a permanent Art Exposition building upon the lake front in Chicago, the city having the option of purchase for $1,000,000 at the expiration of five years.

Two women have been awarded gold medals by the United States government—Miss Bettie O. Burr, of Lasell seminary, for saving the lives of two companions, and Mrs. Martha White, of Washington state, for rescuing three drowning sailors.

THE breaking of a dike in the river, added to the heavy rainfalls of the past week, has caused immense damage to health and property in Chicago and vicinity. Streets were turned into rivers by the raging flood, and people escaped from their homes on rafts.

The Temple Items will be found on the inside cover page.

AND now comes a white-ribboner with one suggestion more as to the name of the party of moral ideas. She says we ought to call it the "Golden Rule" party. Who next?

AN editorial in our last issue contained a slight misstatement concerning the collection for the World's W. C. T. U. meetings last May. The total collections were four thousand dollars and the average per union, three dollars.

ONE of the guests at Rest Cottage now is Miss Frances E. Griffin, of Montgomery, Alabama, National lecturer and organizer, who is to work and speak at the North for the next year or more. Miss Griffin is one of our bright, blithe-hearted, winsome speakers, and will attend conventions, speak at anniversaries or lecture, as may be desired. Address her at Evanston, Ill., care of Rest Cottage.

WILL correspondents please remember that the W. T. P. A. and W. C. T. U. do not occupy all the Temple, and that mail must be addressed to the names of the association or union or individuals in order to reach them promptly and securely. The Temple is a large office building with hundreds of tenants besides the temperance people, and it is just as necessary to have the full business address as it was when we were at 161 La Salle street.

MRS. MARY MCGEE SNELL, of Columbus, Mississippi, who is declared by Mrs. Judge Merrick, of New Orleans, to be "Sam Jones and D. L. Moody boiled down" in her power as a gospel temperance speaker, has been invited by Miss Willard and the other General Officers of the National W. C. T. U. to give the annual sermon at the nineteenth convention of that society, to be held in Denver, Col., October 28 to November 2. Mrs. Snell has accepted the invitation.

THE proportionate giving movement grows apace. Our National superintendent has been trying to influence women's missionary boards to adopt a plan essentially like that of her department, and we have just learned that the Woman's Board of the Interior has acted favorably upon the suggestion. The territory of this board includes the Congregational churches from Ohio to the Rocky Mountains, and under the able leadership of Mrs. Moses Smith it commands unusual influence.

MRS. HENRY M. STANLEY is out in the canvass with her husband, both of them engaged in exploring for the votes that shall put him into Parliament. The husband is a little heavy on the hustings, but charming Mrs. Stanley wins every time. "Look at him," she says, "he is straight as a die; he is afraid of nothing; he weighs — stone." And the rough electors nod their heads, set their jaws and answer, "We'll vote for um, mum!" That's how it is done over yonder, and ladies of the highest fashion are thus "in politics."

CHAUTAUQUA, always on the alert for the best and the latest, has introduced a new feature into its summer feasts. It is a club for girls, to be called "The Outlook," and to be under the skilled management of Miss Mary Mather, of Wilmington, Del., a graduate of Smith College, and a writer of well-known ability. It will hold sessions of one hour each, five days in the week, from July 11 to August 12, and it is proposed that all who enter "The Outlook" (and all young women will be welcome) will bring their very best thoughts so that these conferences will add valuable experiences to the triple theme—Our Neighbors, our Homes and Ourselves.

THAT pathetic and heroic figure, Miss Susan B. Anthony, sure to stand out in history as plainly as any of our Presidents, has given added significance to the two great political conventions of the year. She has gone before the committee on platform, pleading for the recognition of woman's right to the ballot. Her presence has been spoken of with respect in every instance so far as we can learn. Neither party has recognized her plea, but both have innumerable adherents who openly declare themselves in favor of her principles, and everybody knows that what she has invested (a whole lifetime of indefatigable toil) to secure for woman, is coming up the heights of time at railroad speed. Miss Anthony states that for the first time she felt this year that she had a pivot on which to hang her quadrennial plea, and that pivot was Wyoming, the men of that equal-minded state in both conventions holding up her hands. Miss Anthony's pathetic eyes reveal that she has attained to loneliness—the guerdon of great spirits that struggle from any direction toward the mountain-tops of human liberty. But on the heights such souls meet God, and one day all women shall call her blessed.

IT is well known that a protest against the candidacy of Sir Charles Dilke was signed by leading women of England some weeks ago and sent to Mr. Gladstone, who took the ground that the voters must settle that question. The forces of "applied Christianity" then determined to take the "appeal to Cæsar," thus suggested by the Liberal leader, and so have gone to the electors, and among the speakers rings out the clarion voice of one who is rapidly becoming a leader of leaders—Lady Henry Somerset. This is the situation in a nutshell: The husband of Mrs. Crawford secured a divorce from her on Scriptural grounds, Sir Charles Dilke being the partner of her guilt. Her home is forever disgraced and she is banished from society. Meanwhile good men and women do not propose to sit quietly by and see her partner re-enter Parliament. All honor to them for this heroic crusade. The cause of equal rights between men and women has its Gibraltar in their equal right to be pure, and their equal punishment for crimes that blast the home.

THE Democratic Convention was a "sight to behold" in its "shanty" holding twenty thousand people, just by the lake shore. We were present when the Vice-President's nomination occurred, to the tune of heaven's thundering orchestra, with bottle green clouds and mighty flashes from their portentous depths. It was delightful to note the equal applause given as the bands played "Marching through Georgia" and "Away down South in Dixie," "Yankee Doodle" and "My Old Kentucky Home, Good Night." Clearly "the cruel war is over." It was good to see the tall Alabamian, who rose, and with his "hand on the head of the oldest surviving Confederate general," pledged his delegation to "the one-armed soldier of Michigan." Albeit that soldier was not nominated, but another was—Hon. Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois—of whom we are told that he is a clean man in his personal record, and fully capable of the duties involved. "Cleveland and Stevenson" is doubtless as good a ticket as could have been put forward by the party that declares against "sumptuary legislation" in order to placate Tammany, and then whispers to the Christian voters of the South, "Of course you know and we know that prohibitory legislation is not sumptuary!"

A BOY seventeen years old was hung the other day in Wyoming for a murder committed when he was fifteen years of age. That was an official murder, and the worse crime of the two, because it was done in cold blood and with the state and courts as accomplices. That boy had none of the rights of citizenship, he could not vote nor will away his property, nor would any contract made by him have legal recognition. But above all, the law was violated in trying and condemning him without a jury of his peers; only a jury of minors like himself would have been his peers. Since a minor has no rights of citizenship under the state, neither should he have its penalties; his privileges and government inhere in the parent. If the parent dies without making other provision, the state recognizes the minor's incompetency and assumes the guardianship of his property. The state is prodigally negligent of its child-life. It provides for education, but leaves the welfare of the minor (without parental care) to the benevolent public, the church or whoever may or may not "happen." In the "age of consent," it provides for the moral and physical wreck of its girl children and for the reckless debasement of its males; it gives legal right to the saloon to destroy all the children it may outside saloon walls, and after all this criminal training, takes the boy's life when he commits a criminal act. The only just conduct of the state would be to extend the same guardianship to the character and life of the child that it gives to his property; if he has criminal tendencies, commit him to the reformatory and industrial school for correction and training, and cease to shock the public sense of justice and humanity by the judicial murder of a subject not amenable to the law under which he dies.

A NATIONAL HYMN.

BY SARAH A. MC CLEES.

TUNE:—America.

GOD bless our native land;
All glorious and grand
To all oppressed.
No false lights may they meet
To lure their gladsome feet,
When first they come to greet
This harbor blest.

God bless the United States,
May their wide-open gates
Lead on to peace.
To cities free from vice,
Pure from unholy strife,
Where plenty crowns the life
When wars shall cease.

God bless the people pure;
The voters who secure
Our righteous laws.
Men who will take no bribe
Nor ever turn aside,
Tempted by pelf and pride
From noble aims.

God bless our statesmen brave
Who would our country save
By love of right.
Whose hate of sin and wrong,
Exalts above the throng
Who voice the earth-born song
That "might is right."

God bless the nation grand;
Whose fathers wisely planned
Themselves to free.
Now let Columbia pray
For freedom's noblest sway,
O'er self the mastery,
Nor slaves to be.

New York City.

TRIUMVIRI—A FOURTH OF JULY DISCUSSION.

BY O. B. BIRD, M. D.

Time—July 4, 1891; place—Adirondacks; circumstances—under a tent because of a rainy afternoon; speakers—a doctor, a lawyer and a clergyman; subject—a new one every hour, or as often as they could reach a point of agreement or hopeless divergence.

The doctor was a quiet man, never surprised, never off his guard, a reasoner by nature, a close thinker and expert analyzer, with a persistence that stopped far short of obstinacy, but not often short of its object, and a readiness—like most good thinkers—to admit himself in the wrong with as pleasant a manner as he showed when victorious.

The lawyer was a match for him in everything but self-possession. Not that the discussion brought out any ill feeling, but he was more demonstrative, and sometimes spoke without due deliberation, and so was oftener caught up by his wily opponent. He was the soul of honor and honest cordiality.

The clergyman, as became his "cloth," was more reserved, and although he outstripped the others in some subjects, in others he was rather slow in forming his thoughts, evidently because he had not given them much attention.

The three were fine young men, in the thirties, and had been school and college mates up to the time when special preparation for different professions called them to different institutions. Now, after ten years of successful work, each in his own sphere, they had met by previous appointment, for a two weeks' vacation. Old times were talked over, jokes revived, escapades discussed and re-enjoyed, and altogether they were boys again, with a freedom of manner and address which might have shocked certain of their prim constituents. They called each other Doc., Judge and Dominie. At the point where this writing begins, they had finished praising their wives, who, for once, were left behind, decided a Latin declamation contest in favor of the dominie, roasted and eaten a dozen trout, concluded that man had neither descended nor ascended from anthropoid apes, settled the point that Shakespeare was the author of his own works, agreed that the New Version is an improvement upon the King James', and for as much as ten seconds had kept silence, when the following conversation occurred, as near as the writer can reproduce it from memory.

JUDGE.—Say, Doc, how do you propose to vote this fall?

DOCTOR.—By putting a ballot in the box, as usual.

JUDGE.—I know, smarty, but I mean, with which political party do your internal convictions most nearly coincide? for I know you will vote with your convictions.

DOCTOR.—Correct; but my convictions are so totally at variance with political parties that I shall not vote with either of them.

JUDGE.—So ho! Why I thought you would be the last man to miss the chance of voting.

DOCTOR.—Yes, and I do not intend to miss it.

JUDGE.—Explain, instanter.

DOCTOR.—Simply this: I do not call the Prohibitionists politicians.

JUDGE.—A light illuminates my cranial ventricles. You train with that crowd, do you?

DOCTOR.—I do, indeed; and I cannot help feeling that those who do not are lacking in knowledge or goodness.

DOMINIE.—Strong language, my medical friend. Now here's your humble servant, who has always voted with the Republican party, and did not consider himself hopelessly ignorant or depraved, either.

DOCTOR.—Not depraved, certainly, but I fear you must be ignorant in certain directions.

JUDGE and DOMINIE.—Try us as you used to at college.

DOCTOR.—All right, I'm in for a good old-fashioned quiz. Now, Judge, speak up like a little man—I believe you weigh two hundred,—and tell why you have voted with the Democrats.

JUDGE.—A bull's-eye shot the first time. I vote with the Democratic party because it represents the time-honored principles of Jefferson, and stands for the development of the whole country, with government of the people, by the people, and—

DOMINIE.—Easy, Judge, you're trespassing on my premises, for I suppose Doc will give me the same question.

DOCTOR.—Yes. And now, to save time on this subject, and give more for us to run the earth on others, let me assume that in general your reasons will be quite similar; that your differences will be upon minor points, mostly of a nature that change like the fashions; and that at last I shall condemn you both.

JUDGE.—Monumental cheek of the century! But, go on; we can't get away in this rain,—and I don't want to, it is so glorious to hear it on the leaves.

DOCTOR.—You both call this country a Republic, which means majority rule and direct representation in government; you both want our resources to be developed, which means tariff in some cases and not in others; you both want good laws enforced and bad ones repealed; you both—

DOMINIE.—Struck it right, didn't he, Judge?

JUDGE.—Yes, that's my party; is it yours, too?

DOMINIE.—Certainly. Now, Doc, give us some points of difference.

DOCTOR.—That's easy enough. You know of the man who said he and his wife agreed perfectly in one thing—both wanted to be master? So your parties agree perfectly; both want to hold the offices. The differences are only such as arise when it appears that they cannot both hold them at the same time.

DOMINIE.—Down brakes a little, Doc. Didn't I run the war, and free the slaves, and clap on protective tariff and invent national currency, and build transcontinental railroads, and boom the patent office and post-office, and other good things too numerous to mention?

JUDGE.—And didn't I help with the war, and accept the result, and furnish some of the best men that ever swayed a people with political oratory, or—

DOCTOR.—Give it to the stars. Dominie, what war did you refer to?

DOMINIE.—C. S. A. versus U. S. A., 1861 to 1865, when we were boys using our fathers' canes for guns.

DOCTOR.—I didn't know you wanted to take up ancient history. My question was why are you what you are, not why were your remote ancestors so and so.

DOMINIE.—Judge, he means to corner us up like sheep in washing time. But speed the conflict. I'm in a mood to hear the worst, even if I am led to admit that I am wrong.

JUDGE.—Hear him, O ye people! Well, I too, am open to conviction,—but I'd like to see any ten men in this or any other country who can convince me!

DOCTOR.—Yes, Dominie, the war and emancipation are chiefly yours; and I give you credit for most of the good legislation since that time; your—

JUDGE.—Woe is me!

DOCTOR.—Your principal fault is that you do not keep up with the times.

JUDGE.—Dress him down! Do I keep up with the times?

DOCTOR.—No; the moss is an inch thick on your back. You both run along in time-worn grooves, but each having for his chief object the defeat of the other. But come; let us have a good, honest reason for your politics, and then we will see about your differences.

DOMINIE.—Well, the Republicans have given us about all the good laws we have, and are generally in advance on all reforms, while in a number of instances they have not only been in advance, but have pushed their measures against the most vigorous opposition.

JUDGE.—And I claim the same for the Democratic party.

DOCTOR.—This is a question of fact, not opinion; and while I do not attempt to decide it, I rule it out of the present discussion, and remind you again that we are to use the present tense. You are what you have been made by your teachers—this or that because your fathers were. Now, wise men often change their minds; some folks never. To me, you appear to belong to the latter class. How say your platforms? Read them in parallel columns, and you find the words almost identical. There is no important, clear-cut issue between them—or if there is, I cannot find it.

JUDGE.—Ho, Dominie, speaks yonder lord the truth?

DOMINIE.—I fain would lay him low; but my dull wits fail to suggest the issue.

DOCTOR.—There was my cousin, lumbering in Michigan. He said that if Cleveland was elected, the duty on Canadian lumber would be removed, and he be ruined by "furrin cheap labor." But he was elected, the duty was not removed, and now in Harrison's time a Republican member introduces a bill to remove that very tariff. So of many things, they should be settled on their merits, and not by party lines. A borough-council studies for the good of the borough, irrespective of party. So should it be in the general government.

JUDGE.—Correct, if ruled by Democrats.

DOMINIE.—Ditto, Republicans.

DOCTOR.—The reason I say you are behind the times is, because you stick to your party first and always, and when new questions arise you give them only so much attention as you think you can without endangering your hold on the places of power.

DOMINIE.—Judge, he seems to be taking your photograph.

JUDGE.—How much whiter are you?

DOCTOR.—For centuries, and notably since the war, the liquor traffic has been creeping upon us like a great black dragon, and you, instead of throttling it, or even trying to stay its deadly ravages, actually go into partnership with it, and vote to sustain it.

JUDGE.—Halt! and give the countersign.

DOCTOR.—I can prove it by a simple syllogism.

DOMINIE.—Bring it on but point it towards the Judge.

DOCTOR.—Not at all. You claim most of the good legislation, but let me tell you that his party has enacted more temperance laws than yours.

JUDGE.—Hey, Dominie? A Daniel come to judgment.

DOMINIE.—Look here, Doc, seriously, if that is so I want to know it.

JUDGE.—Of course it's so! Perhaps I furnished most of the Copperheads, but I now furnish most of the prohibition.

DOCTOR.—A general summary, which is no one's opinion, but simple history, will show that republican legislatures have enacted about eight prohibition laws, and have repealed ten; while democratic legislatures have enacted twelve and repealed five.

JUDGE.—Hooray for our side!

DOMINIE.—Let's have the syllogism to prove that we vote for the traffic.

DOCTOR.—Very well; now answer three questions. First, do saloon-keepers, either party, as a rule, vote for or against the traffic?

JUDGE and DOMINIE.—For it, of course.

DOCTOR.—Do you vote the same ticket as the saloon-keepers?

JUDGE.—Dominie, let's change the subject.

DOMINIE.—Why, of course, since there are but two tickets, we cannot do otherwise.

DOCTOR.—Exactly. There are the premises. Do you need a microscope to see the conclusion? If saloon keepers vote for it, and you vote the same ticket, then you vote for it. See any avenue of escape?

JUDGE.—Dominie, did you bring along your last ditch?

DOMINIE.—No; and it begins to look as if he had his sheep in the pen, ready for the fatal plunge. But see here, Doc; how about the partnership?

DOCTOR.—Don't you tax it ninety cents a gallon? Don't you give the distillers three years for payment, thus practically furnishing capital? Don't you pursue and even kill the distillers who try to escape the tax? And you are not a fair partner, either. You do no work beyond collecting, and yet you take three-fourths of the entire value of the product. How much more could a literal partner do?

JUDGE.—Dominie, don't you think the world lost a good lawyer when Doc took up medicine?

DOMINIE.—I think it behooves us to look into these things more carefully. I confess I have given them too little attention.

DOCTOR.—And while you wallow in the gutter under the influence of the dragon, you ignore or repress a white-winged host from the other direction, who could sweep him out of existence and set you on your feet in a moment.

JUDGE.—Women?

DOCTOR.—Yes, and all Prohibitionists. The one great need of the country is to be freed from the liquor business: and the women offer to help in securing that freedom. You stagger along, yelling for the deeds of your party in the past, while these living issues are ignored or opposed in the most relentless manner. That is why I say you are behind the times.

JUDGE.—Say, Doc, can't you give us a ride?

DOCTOR.—Yes, there's plenty of room in the Prohibition wagon, and I'd be glad to have you both get in.

JUDGE.—It would only be throwing our votes away.

DOCTOR.—Yes, all you care for is that the other party would get into power. My conscience will not let me vote for liquor, and I'm not a dominie, either. I look upon it as an absolute sin and I would just as soon vote for licensing theft or murder.

DOMINIE.—But don't we put on a heavy tax, and make the business pay for itself?

DOCTOR.—How?

DOMINIE.—Why, if we collect money to build sidewalks and schoolhouses, doesn't that reduce the tax rate?

DOCTOR.—Yes ; go on.

DOMINIE.—That's all, on that point.

DOCTOR.—But you haven't balanced the ledger.

DOMINIE.—What do you mean?

DOCTOR.—Don't your saloons cause any expenses in the way of jails, asylums and courts?

DOMINIE.—I understand. I suppose they do, but I never investigated the figures.

DOCTOR.—I have, and can tell you that the expenses are fifteen times greater than the income.

DOMINIE.—Impossible!

DOCTOR.—That is simply the money side of the question, and does not touch the far greater one of broken homes and hearts, nor the still greater one of right and wrong.

JUDGE.—Dominie, pluck up, or he'll wipe us out.

DOCTOR.—A child could wipe you out, or any one who will listen to reason. The rank and file of your parties will not listen to reason, nor even common sense. Come, now, boys, I challenge you, singly or doubly, to give a solitary reason for the existence of the liquor traffic that will bear the light.

DOMINIE.—I thought I had one in the payment of taxes.

JUDGE.—Doc, shut your ears while I confer with my colleague,—albeit my political enemy. Say, Dominie, can't we talk about the sociability and encouragement of generosity as shown in treating, a place to drop in for a social chat or something ?

DOMINIE.—No ; he'd blow them away with a breath. There is no need for us to try, since we both believe it wrong and so try to regulate it.

DOCTOR.—'Try to regulate it' ? Do you succeed ?

DOMINIE.—Why, yes, in a measure. We have laws against Sunday opening, and we surround the business with various restrictions.

DOCTOR.—Yes, I know the tiresome list, and I should like to ask you, first, if the various laws are enforced, and second, if full enforcement would stop or materially lessen the practice of drinking—in other words, are these little laws aimed at the traffic, or in any way seriously objectionable to liquor dealers ?

JUDGE.—"Sic 'im, Tige!" Guess I'd better do most of my hard work by listening.

DOMINIE.—Doc, let me honestly own that I have been wrong—or asleep, which is just as bad, as far as facts are concerned. The 'little laws' as you call them—and a good name it is, for we do not have any little ones in theology—the 'little laws' are not all enforced ; but I have all along supposed that, in so far as they were enforced they lessened drunkenness.

DOCTOR.—Take any one and analyze its operation. First is your blood-money—I mean license money. You have never yet made it high enough to close all the saloons, nor have you even tried to do so. You have closed a few of the higher places where drunkards graduate ; but the primaries, with their wealth and glitter, where boys and young men begin the study, are allowed to go on, in fact, are aided by increased patronage.

DOMINIE.—You must be right; but I had not looked at it in that way before.

DOCTOR.—Take your little law that tries to close the saloon during certain hours. Any one with a tithe of the drunkard's cunning, can lay in a stock to last over the dry season. Or take that beneficent midget over which several hours of a whole legislature were spent, providing that no less than a quart be sold at once, and that it be not drank on the premises. That only means keep your barrel next door, and then a number of men send over for the quart, and bring it to your room to drink it. It would be amusing if not sad, to see the game between liquor men and legislators. I am reminded of our old fat dog playing with a young greyhound.

JUDGE.—Say, Doc, which is the legislature?

DOCTOR.—The one that gets left. And now, Dominie, since we've struck this sober vein, and you seem willing to listen, let me give you another seed-thought: I believe that this support of the liquor traffic, by voting to license it, high or low, or failing to work against it by voice and vote, is wholly at variance with Christian teaching, and inconsistent with church membership.

DOMINIE.—Do you mean ——?

DOCTOR.—Yes, I do mean that a church member who in any way sanctions the unholy business, is doing something which the great Head of the church will not overlook, whatever you may do. "It cannot be legalized without sin," and each one who helps to legalize it sins.

DOMINIE.—But look here, Doc, if you hadn't snowed me under so, I would say that many of my party are Prohibitionists, but are working for prohibition inside the party.

DOCTOR.—I know a great many good men who are working in that way, some of my own brothers, with a zeal that is worthy of the highest praise. If they would but open their eyes and get some of their information from temperance papers, they would see the utter hopelessness of the task. It is irony gone mad, and sarcasm in tatters, to see them earnestly praying for the downfall of the business, and working to educate a handful of children already practically safe, and then go out on the one day when their work might count and vote with liquor men to perpetuate the thing they hate. I hope God will forgive them this iniquity, for sake of their sincerity,—which of course I do not doubt.

DOMINIE.—How do you explain the persistence in the old ways, and the unwillingness to take hold of new ones?

DOCTOR.—Oh! Dominie, "if mine eyes were a fountain of waters" I could weep them dry over the opposition to progress which I see on every hand! It is only—

JUDGE.—Hey, there, Doc, don't let that crystal drop fall on the picture of my wife you are looking at so intently—or is it your wife? Anyhow, don't get it wet.

MISS ALICE R. PALMER.

DOCTOR.—It is only a higher manifestation of what we see in mules, pigs and balky horses,—an immovable persistence in the old way just because it is old. It is particularly so in church membership; one cannot change from the denomination of his fathers without friction that sometimes ruptures social relations. Look at Gallileo, Harvey, Jenner, Hahnemann. Look at Luther and the many martyrs. Look at Christ and His disciples. Antagonism to new ideas, indeed! I'd rather be a yellow mule and kick myself to death, than be so hide-bound! Why not "prove all things and hold fast that which is good?" Why not look at new things without prejudice? Why not—?

JUDGE.—Hold him, Dominie, till I climb a tree!

DOCTOR.—Judge, you dear old scoundrel, that's the way you act when you are interested. It's a part of your profession to maintain a cool self-possession,—mine, too, for that matter.

JUDGE.—I move we adjourn. See that sunshine?

DOMINIE.—Well, I'm willing to adjourn this meeting, but not my thoughts. I wonder at my blindness, but henceforth I shall see. And Doc, dear old chum, if I live till another election day, I shall cast my vote for prohibition and God's truth!

JUDGE.—And so shall I! You cracked my shell in spite of my levity.

DOCTOR.—Amen! Thank God!

"Deem'st thou thy Lord can dwell more near,
To saints at rest than toilers here?
If but thou diest day by day
To sins that clog thy onward way,
Each night shall be a grave of care,
Each morn a resurrection fair."

OUR NEW MISSIONARY TO SOUTH AFRICA—MISS ALICE R. PALMER.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

In the year 1886 I attended the state W. C. T. U. convention of good old Indiana. Among others who attracted my special attention and interest was the young lady whose picture adorns the present number of THE UNION SIGNAL. She responded to the address of welcome, taking for the thread of her bright little speech the text : "For if this counsel or this work be of men it will come to naught, but if it be of God ye cannot overthrow it." Her bright, intellectual face and self-possessed manner and fervent spirit seemed to me to betoken that we had a new worker from whom we might hope much. I learned that she had graduated with honor from the excellent State Normal School of Indiana, and had been a teacher for years, that her father had been a Presbyterian minister, an Ohioan by birth, who had graduated from Hamilton College and Lane Theological Seminary in Cincinnati, entering the ministry in 1850, and giving his life for twenty-three years to building up weak churches in the state of Indiana. I learned that her mother was a native of Indiana, of Scotch-Irish extraction and strong Southern proclivities, her parents being descendants of the F. F. V's. She was reared in the college town of Hanover, her father being one of the chief supporters of the institution. She belonged to a family of preachers and missionary teachers, her mother's brother, William Martin, having been one of the early promoters of Presbyterian Christianity in Indiana. This uncle reared three sons, two of whom went to China in 1849, while the oldest of his children, a daughter, married Rev. Henry Venable, and went to South Africa in 1844. Another relative of Mrs. Palmer was Rev. William Holliday, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Indianapolis at the time of his death. His daughter is now a missionary in Tehrez, Persia, and a loyal white ribbon woman. Others among her relatives are missionaries in New Mexico and Africa, and others still are associated with Dr. and Mrs. Sheldon Jackson in their great work for Alaska, and are missionaries there. This bright young woman, Alice, had hoped all through her childhood to become a missionary ; but upon her father's death in 1873, her mother was so loth to give her up that she postponed offering herself to the Woman's Presbyterian Board of the Northwest, and in 1884, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union being organized in her own town of Franklin, she and her sister became members, because they thought it was "a good idea," and that they ought to help advance its work. The entire family are now white-ribboners. Miss Palmer was so fortunate as to have a father great enough to say, as one of his family proverbs, "Boys may be able to become honorable and useful without schooling, but girls must be sent to school to be prepared for life." Hence, it was a matter of course for these girls to determine upon an education, although left without the care of father or brother when they were quite young. They therefore procured excellent school advantages for themselves, and Alice graduated in 1878, her certificate being a qualification to teach in any of the common schools of Indiana. She has had seven years' experience in these graded schools, from primary to high school. Since the day I heard her speak Miss Palmer has traveled over twelve thousand miles within the borders of her own state, has visited and worked in ninety-one of its ninety-two counties in the interests of the white ribbon movement; has assisted in conducting forty-one county and joint county conventions, and has organized one hundred and thirty-nine local and eight county unions. We therefore consider her amply fitted by endowment, education and experience to go forth as our missionary to Africa, her sisters remaining with their mother, for we do not believe in disregarding home duties and that sacred loyalty which, if ever manifested in this world, should be found between mother and daughter. One of Miss Palmer's sisters is principal of the high school in their own town, and two others are teachers near by. In a friendly letter to me, recently received, Miss Palmer says:

If I were to send a message to the honored women of our great army, I should like to say that I am very much honored by being the choice of the World's W. C. T. U. officers to carry their message to our beloved comrades in South Africa. I trust I may represent them worthily, seeking, as I gladly go forth, for that wisdom which cometh down from above, having found already that "her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace."

The expenses of Miss Palmer are paid from Indiana to South Africa. She goes with Miss Campbell, who was present at our World's convention, and with another lady missionary of high standing, both of whom return to their work in that far-away land some time during the month of June. Our white-ribboners there, in their warm and urgent letters asking for a helper and leader, agreed to see that she was, as we say, "floated financially" after she arrived, and this will be necessary in Miss Palmer's case, as she has done her great work at much financial disadvantage, never having received more than enough to cover bare personal expenses in these years of her self-denying work. This sketch is written that our great constituency may become acquainted with Miss Palmer and feel a personal interest in her, as we know that their daily prayers will go up to our Heavenly Father for this young and adventurous spirit who thus answers our call, separates herself from home and country, even as so many of her kindred have done before her, because of a deep inward call that says, "Come over and help us," while she responds, "Here am I; send me."

Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, for years president of Indiana, and Superintendent in the World's and National Society of the Department of Expositions and Fairs, writes concerning Miss Palmer as follows:

As her president, to whom she has always been faithful, true and loyal, as she has been to the work and the women of Indiana, I wish to write you a few lines about Alice R. Palmer. For years she has endured all kinds of fatigue and discomfort in organizing the state, and she has done more than any one else to bring up its membership, for which she has received a mere pittance. The women in the state love her dearly, for she has never complained, and has, under all circumstances, been a cultured, Christian lady. She is thoroughly conscientious and fearless to stand for the right and the best interests of the work. I have always found her perfectly reliable in every respect. Nothing could have made such a break in our work as her going away. With the women all over the state, who appreciate her unselfish devotion, I commend her to you, and say, God bless her, wherever she goes.

We must not think of our young white-ribbon missionary as going to a barren land, for South Africa has been settled for generations; its climate is not unlike our own, its scenery far more magnificent, and there is no comfort, no modern improvement or means of education that is not enjoyed by the favored inhabitants of that far-away and happy land. Theone great drawback there, as here, is drink. Concerning our brothers and sisters there as here we must sorrowfully quote the beautiful lines from Lalla Rookh:

"Poor, suffering mortals," said the pitying spirit,
Dearly ye pay for your primal fall.
Some flowerets of Eden ye still inherit,
But the trail of the serpent is over them all."

Miss Palmer sent this last greeting and farewell for her white-ribbon friends from the steamer Anchoria, in New York harbor, as she set her white wings for the Southern Hemisphere:

Sitting at my window a few days ago I noticed in the door-yard of all the cottages in the row in front, a large bush with roses in full bloom. They are the products of one small plant set out years ago by the corner house, the result of one woman's cheery, "My pink rose has put out a new sprout; would you like to have it?" repeated till the whole north end of my home village is fragrant each June with the odor of pink roses. It is the law of giving, the law of life. Nobody but a philosopher (the true Christian) would have said, as Thomas Carlyle has said: "The other name for life is help." It is the idea of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the way it makes "the whole world homelike;" its thoughts have sprouted, its love has sprouted, and it goes about with the glad question, "Don't you want some? Can't we help you?"

Thomas Carlyle says, "The other name for life is help; the other name for death is separation." He knew enough to give us the first part first, that proving that we may hold fast for time and life eternal, all that is best. It is not separation, it is a closer union with you all, beloved, that takes me so many miles away.

Pray for us in the journeying time, in the resting time, but above all, in the working time, that we may carry the water of life in its purity and freshness.

THE WOMAN QUESTION—A RADICAL VIEW.

BY A MINISTER MAN.

I read that in England, the England of this day and hour, upward of a million women, married women, are supporting themselves and their children.

What a commentary this upon Gladstone and his "way-back" theories as to woman. One is led to ask after the one million "lords" of creation, who once took these wives and solemnly said, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow." ? ? ?

But then history, and history is, after all, only another word for evolution, does work marvelous wonders. Woman is demonstrating in hundreds of ways her title to co-equality. Over the wash-tub, in the factory, as a servant, and upon the farm even, she has proven that she is not the "weaker vessel." The papers have just been telling us how many more hundreds of men die in the great cities than women.

Stubborn, mighty, eternal truth works its way, slow, but it works to the front.

Brain and brawn at last do not lie. They establish themselves for what they are. I stood a long time, the other day, on the Exposition grounds, in the "Woman's Building," and gazed admiringly upon the dream of the little woman architect, at last wrought out in such simplicity, beauty, strength. Then I halted that same afternoon, and looked with pride upon the Temple in Chicago, conceived, projected, raised at last by woman's wish and woman's will. What a monument to everybody who has given it a good wish, a prayer, a dollar or a loan, since first your Queen Matilda "laughed at impossibilities," and cried, "It shall be done."

Then I saw, at least foresaw, the changes to be—woman's grand, upward, onward march! What changes already, in the church. The dear old term or phrase my mother used upon her blessed lips, when she told me she was going to the "female prayer-meeting," how very odious it has become! And then, that "Female college"! Why have the learned boards of D. D.'s had it removed from sundry catalogues during the last five years, and substituted "Ladies' College"? 'Twas needful. And then, co-education! Why, sisters, not long and you shall not be obliged to inquire of that matter about any college; if you do, depend upon it, the college will not represent the higher education in America. The college will be open to young people; the "lay delegation" will mean the rank and file of the people; the pulpit, the editorial chair, the doctor's office, the lawyer's, etc., will be open to the best brain for the position, and money will not be paid to sex but to skill.

Capacity and not function is the idea. Man, hitherto, has had most of his transcendent privileges as man, because able, generally, to knock a woman down. Brute force was the Roman measure of power; physical beauty, the Grecian. Men and women have gone off, respectively, with these, or coming into partnership, have laid each, his or her kind, upon the altar. She has been the ideal of his pleasure. He has been the ideal of her admiration, as the lord of force and achievement. She—soul, he—intellect. Time has revised all this. Woman's sphere enlarges just in degree as the world's opportunity comes to her. If the world has given her a chance, she has proven her ability to meet the exigency, and, from threading a needle, riding a safety, leading an army, on, upward, to a throne, she has not failed.

The moral part of this question is one that no longer counts in fair discussion. If she is to be made worse by association with man, then here is man's opportunity to be better. Virtue is a thing of the race, not of sex. If woman is less fallen than man, then for his sake, let her take the reins of a team, driven slow and zigzag enough since Adam started. If she is made worse by a larger opportunity, perhaps man will be made better by a less. Together we climb, or together fall backward.

I am sure that since three hundred years ago, four learned doctors of the law, in Dijon, France, decided that a girl must not learn the alphabet; she—"that girl"—has learned a heap o' things, and is not yet done. God bless her. My wife is a woman.

Evanston, Ill.

FOR A PURE, FINE ARTS DISPLAY AT THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

BY JOSIAH W. LEEDS.

A year or more ago the ex-Empress Frederick of Germany went to Paris, incognito, on a somewhat curious mission. There was about to be held an exhibition of fine arts at Berlin, but the Parisian artists, on account of the unfriendly relations between the two countries, were averse to displaying their productions at the German capital. It was hence thought that the presence of the ex-empress might remove this antipathy. Her errand, however, proved to be altogether unsuccessful; indeed, she was treated, as was alleged, so discourteously that there was considerable angry talk upon the subject, and a rupture between the two countries threatened.

Perhaps it was well that she did not succeed. While a large proportion of the subjects of French paintings are of an irreproachable sort, there are a great many, nevertheless, of which the same cannot be said. This has so far affected our speech, that to say of a picture, "It is Frenchy," carries with it the imputation of its being of a trivial or immodest character. The influence of the gay, French metropolis in this direction has been mischievously felt in the other European capitals, so that now the reputation of Berlin, Dresden and Vienna, as regards morals, is rated as pretty nearly on a par with Paris. The atheism of the latter city, spreading abroad, has, of course, had much to do with this falling away from purity. This was not always so. It was the testimony of their Roman conquerors that the Germanic tribes were noted for their chastity; with the spread of the Christian religion among them, they became a religious people.

Were the Germans of to-day wise, they would say—and say it not on the ground of political prejudice, but as desiring the best welfare of all their people, "Let French artists keep their pictures in their own country, unless they can invest them with a covering of decency which will make it morally safe and reputable to send them abroad." Imperial united Germany stands exposed to greater danger from the arts than from the arms of France. The story of Samson and Delilah has here an international application. It may be added that there are men of worth in Paris and other parts of France who have keenly felt the reproach that has been brought upon the French name by this strain of impurity manifest in the works of some of their artists, dramatists and novelists, and who have exerted themselves to erect a better standard.

The same baneful influence of French atheism, and of indecency in literature and art, has long been felt in this country. At the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia in 1876, many samples of the sensuous school of French art were displayed, and a good many people of refined taste were shocked and offended. Yet it was not thought worth while to offend the exhibitors by rejecting any of their indelicate offerings. The leaven of evil, however, has continued to work, so that at the annual exhibition of the Academy of Fine Arts at Philadelphia, in the winter of 1890-91, the large number of "nude" canvasses displayed on the walls became a public scandal and grievance, earnest and indignant protests being made against their exposure. Some of the directors seemed inclined to heed the appeal for purity, but the daily papers generally stood by the "hanging committee" who claimed for themselves and their fellow artists the license to follow their fancies with a free hand. The exhibit of the succeeding season, just closed, was said to have shown no improvement over that of the previous year.

Although there is a law of Pennsylvania against pictorial indecency, exception is made in it in favor of "works of art." In other words, a cheap, roughly executed and grossly immodest lithograph may be seized and the exhibitor fined; but a high priced painting, an "exquisite work of art," not a whit less indecent, yet morally more dangerous as being more "true to the life" cannot, it is claimed, be touched.

This mischievous exception does not obtain in the Revised Statutes of the United States. Not long ago announcement was made of an intention to import and publicly exhibit in this country a large, notorious painting which had been displayed in the Paris Salon. But upon complaint of a citizen to the treasury department, assurance was given that the painting would be seized, if offered for entry, should it be found to be of the objectionable character described. In no state should excellence in the execution of any handiwork be permitted to serve as a shield for the exposure of the indelicate and impure.

We are now nearing the time when exhibits for the imposing Columbian Exposition at Chicago will be gotten in readiness for shipment to their place of destination. Committees of selection have need to recognize the fact that there is a line of refinement, of delicacy, of decency, which may not lightly be over-passed. While the law of the land may not be invoked to prevent the exposure of some very sensuous, immodest paintings and statuary, there should be a recognition of the fact that such productions do weaken the barriers of purity and eventually result in a lowering of the general standard of morals. That is true patriotism, a true love of hearth and home and demonstration of its defense, which stands against the inroads of whatsoever is demoralizing in literature and art. We have an object lesson for a perpetual warning in the fate of that Italian city, buried eighteen centuries ago, beneath volcanic cinders, from the ruins of which were gathered figured representations of so shameless a character that they are kept away, under lock and key, from the public gaze.

Let us, therefore, have a pure, morally unoffending fine arts display, or none at all. The mocking remark of a certain Broadway importer of foreign works of art, who said, "People who are afraid of being contaminated need not go to see it," falls very far short of meeting the line of objection advanced. There is a sense in which we are our "brother's keeper," and in which we cannot rid ourselves of an accountability for the charge.

Germantown, Pa.

THE RELATION OF PURITY TO TEMPERANCE.

BY EDITH S. DAVIS.
Asso. Supt. Purity Dept. of W. C. T. U.

Marion Harland says that in an old book of oriental travel is a story of two Turks who sat smoking their pipes while an earthquake was shaking the city to ruins. Hurrying parties of fugitives called to them that the walls were tottering. "Allah wills it," muttered the Moslems reverently, scarcely withdrawing the pipe-stem from between their lips. The falling building buried them beneath its ruins.

This stolid fatalism of the doomed Turks has a parallel in Christian lives. How often we hear it said of all kinds of vice, of all kinds of disease, of all kinds of unlawful appetites, "Why, it runs in the family, what can we do about it?" And so we fling wide open the door of the saloon because the love of strong drink runs in the families of some of the inhabitants of our cities and villages, and "they will have liquor, you know, and we may as well have the license money." And then we think it a strange kind of providence that God allows more and still more to be born into this world with the same sinful love of strong drink.

Based upon that love there are other unholy desires beginning "to run in the family," until distinct, separate classes, all those whom St. John saw in his wonderful vision stand outside the gates of the temple—the "dogs and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters and whomsoever maketh and loveth a lie."

I believe in heredity, I believe thoroughly in what Mandeley says, that "multitudes of human beings come into this world weighted down with a destiny against which they have neither the will nor the power to contend." And in all this wide world there is nothing so pitiful as those of whom the Scotch say, "They are not all there."

Think of the little ones robbed of their birthrights; little ones, who in place of the precious heritage of strong minds in strong bodies come into this world crippled mentally, morally and spiritually. Now add starvation to this robbery, and you need not wonder that to-day, in this great nation, there is a class kept criminal, and that grows larger and larger every year.

Physiologists say that neither a bright nor a good man can be made in a starved body; they also say that criminals are below the average both in body and mind. When to this number is added the hundred thousand American girls whom it is estimated every four years go down into the whirlpool of sin and shame, can any one wonder that in every one of our large cities, and even in some of our very small ones, there is what is known as the black hole, a place unfit for man or woman to walk within?

But these poor, degraded men are our brothers; these lost, sinful women are our sisters! "No, no; not my sisters," you say. Do you remember the story which grim old Scotch Thomas Carlyle tells? Once, in the city of Edinburgh was a poor woman who could get no recognition of sisterhood from anybody, so she took typhus fever and died, and gave her disease to seventeen others in the alley where she lived; and thus she got recognition of sisterhood.

By the suffering of the whole social body to-day, we ought to know, even without the word of God, that we are all members of the same family; nay, rather all members of the same body, and when one member suffers, all must suffer with it.

"Freedom is growth and not creation.
One man suffers, one man is free;
One brain forges a constitution,
But how shall the million souls be won?
Freedom is more than a revolution;
He is not free, who is free alone."

And as long as this great criminal class exists no one is free, my brother; and as long as these hundreds of thousands of American girls are lost in sin, you are not free, my sister.

But are we in any way responsible for the present condition of these poor, lost brothers and sisters? We know that starvation, the bitterest kind of poverty, is one great cause of crime. Why in this land of such wonderful opportunities is there such poverty? Wendell Phillips, who, perhaps, understood life more keenly and deeply than any other man who has lived in this century, said: "Intemperance is one cause of poverty, but poverty is also one great cause of intemperance, and whatever lifts the masses to self-respect, secures them just laws and better education and their full rights, and helps the temperance cause."

Now, what is the relation of the purity work to temperance? They are twin sisters; they must go hand in hand. Without the one the other cannot be. It is argued that we are getting away from the great temperance movement by taking up these other branches of work that seem so widely separated from it. My friends, we are getting nearer to it. We are getting at its very foundations. Years ago our grandfathers started with effects, to-day we are reaching the causes. The holy crusade that is to-day being carried on in the slums of our cities is making startling revelations. Years ago, when Thomas Hood wrote his "Song of the Shirt" and "Bridge of Sighs," he touched a comparatively new chord in the human heart, but that chord has never ceased its vibrations.

Women as well as men are but children of a larger growth and the child-girl whose school has been the street, the theater, the dance-hall, the beer garden, comes to years of maturity and is the woman of infamy. Careful students of philanthropic work in England make the statement that of the thousands of children used in the theaters, there are but few who reach the age of sixteen without being morally ruined. Now, how can such a girl ever be saved? She cannot obtain a position in a Christian home. If she tries to sew how can she live on the miserable pittance extended to her?

Did it ever occur to you that the marvelously cheap rates of underclothing advertised by our great dry-goods stores mean that the women who are making them are starving to death?

Did it ever occur to you that to the homeless girl clerk who loses her place there is but one place in the wide world that is open to her—pitilessly open?

Did it ever occur to you that when the repentant, fallen woman comes to Christ and He tells her, "Go, and sin no more," that unless she goes to the river there is no place to which she may go and sin no more?

Did it ever occur to you that the only possible enjoyment these poor, dwarfed, stunted lives ever can have is the very lowest form of the theater and dance hall?

Did it ever occur to you that the mother love in the W. C. T. U. has a great field of work right here?

We have to remember that it is the preventive work in this great field of purity that shall bring in to us the greatest and richest returns. A lady teacher in one of our public schools said to me recently that it was becoming an absolute necessity to have some instruction introduced into the schools along the line of purity, for she had sent again and again to the mothers of the children asking them to grant her an interview that she might talk with them concerning their duties as mothers, but in almost every instance they had failed to comply with her request.

Teachers would be more than willing to co-operate with us in this work and it might be possible to hold mothers' meetings in the school-room once every month, some Friday afternoon, and have the poor, tired, unread mothers come together and receive God's light on their great duties and responsibilities.

"The child is father to the man," sang Wordsworth, and I could not help thinking of it the other day as I saw a small boy come out of a barber-shop with his arms filled with Police Gazettes and call to a number of other boys to come and share them with him. And then running along the street they paused before some of the vilest advertisements of a low theater with which a bill-board was covered. Oh! we know the power there is in that kind of an education, through the eye to the heart—"and out of the heart are the issues of life."

Is there anything for the W. C. T. U. to do along this line of prevention? Ought not the fathers as well as the mothers to be reached and made to see "that the woman's cause is man's? They rise or fall together, dwarfed or godlike, bond or free." Yes, here we must use the glorious white cross movement, which means Christ coming again into the social life of the world. It must be put into our churches, into our high schools, into our colleges, into our Loyal Temperance Legions—and it can be put in every one of these places if consecrated womanhood in the strength of the Lord will take it there.

What we want and what God wants us to have, is a massive wall of protection around the womanhood of the world, and this wall of protection is best made up of strong, true men. We want civil law the best that it can be made, but the moral law will, after all, be woman's strongest protection. We want the light of God on this great subject. Need we shrink from allowing the gospel rays to fall in direct lines upon that which has been covered by the darkness of centuries? There is no room for darkness in a place flooded with light. Let us flood the world with the light of God on this great work for purity, and then shall we be helping to bring about the time when "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

Milwaukee, Wis.

PRAYER FOR OUR COUNTRY.

BY J. FOWLER WILLING.

Most of us pray so much for ourselves and for our nearest of kin, especially if their sins are of a disgraceful sort, that we find no time to pray for those outside our own four walls. It is a sign of growth in grace for us to be so at leisure from self that we can reach outward and upward for blessings upon people whose welfare does not affect us personally.

Some children are over-tutored. Poor little prigs! They need a good, wholesome letting-alone, more than anything else. Sometimes good people get their souls into a similar condition. If they would leave their spiritual interests in God's hand, and do some good praying for others and for general affairs, it would be greatly to their advantage.

When we get about it one most important subject is our country. We ought to pray for her daily; not in a perfunctory, Fourth-of-July fashion, not as a bit of expected rhetoric, but as we ask for things that we must have.

Let us look for some reasons for this duty. America is one of God's best messengers of good to His poor. She has already given competence, education, self-respect, the Lord's dear favor and service, to a host greater than we can number. Hundreds of thousands yet in the Old World are looking toward her as their land of promise. Of all others, she ought to have clean hands and a pure heart.

The Lord's answers for her encourage us to pray. He has done great things during the last half century. It shook her terribly when slavery went down; but He swept it away. Polygamy is also going under. Her Indian policy is on the mend. She is turning her glass on her immigrant millions with an interrogation point in her kind face as to duty. She is bending her ear toward the strife between capital and labor, ready to lend a hand when the hour strikes. God bless her! Let us say it every day. God bless her, and give her strength for the right!

But she is not "out of the woods" yet; as Lincoln said of the war, she has "a big job on hand." Illiterate voting, political intrigues, heartless monopolists, gambling, the social evil, the rum traffic. She has not a moment to lose.

The papers say that the women of Poland will all wear mourning this year, because it is the hundredth anniversary of the destruction of their country. The world is a sheol of doomed nations. Sin sealed the destiny of every one that went down. When we look at the list of our national vices, the mercury drops, and we begin to fumble for the crape. Let us betake ourselves to prayer.

American women can work as well as pray. They can think. They must put this and that together and govern themselves accordingly. The more deeply they think into the great questions of the hour, the surer will they be to lay aside petty personalities, and do the wise, strong thing for the good of the people. They can talk, and they may talk to good purpose. With their heads full of facts, they will have no time for twaddle and nonsense, chit-chat and gossip. But of all they can pray. I heard Mark Guy Pearce say that he would regard it a magnificent gift if God would let him have fifteen millions of dollars to use for this poor. "But," said he, "I have an infinitely greater gift than this, I can pray." All men, from poets down to politicians, believe in letting women do their full share of the praying. Now let us use our privilege and we will find that nothing counts more mightily upon the final outcome for good.

I know a woman who does her praying by rule. She has a special subject for every day of the week. Why would not that be a good plan to adopt? Let Saturday be given to prayer for our country. A hundred thousand praying every Saturday would tell gloriously for good.

Will not THE UNION SIGNAL send up a rocket to call our clans to prayer every Saturday for this blessed land of ours?

New York.

THE WORLD ABROAD; OR, TEMPERANCE NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.
Author of "Physical Education," "The Bible of Nature," "International Health Studies," etc.

A RISKY EXPERIMENT.

The inland provinces of Venezuela are in a state of fierce revolt against the despotism of President Palacios, a military autocrat whose political sins are aggravated by the frequency of his drunken orgies. Caracas newspapers suggest that constant worry may have tempted the dictator, "by way of experiment," to drown his cares in more than ordinary doses of alcohol; but, during one of those non-lucid intervals, the experimenter caused the arrest of the patriot Bermudes, an outrage that has probably cost him the last remaining vestige of public sympathy.

WISDOM BY PROXY.

The Hudson Bay Fur Company has issued a circular instructing its agents to take more stringent measures for the suppression of the illicit traffic by which smugglers continue to supply the Indians with intoxicating beverages. The prevention of drunken riots may not be the only motive of the directors, but their solicitude once more illustrates the queer fact that in their management of domestic animals, children and dependents, many of our fellow-men appreciate the importance of health laws which they persistently disregard in their personal habits.

HALF-WAY MEASURES.

Professor Julius Larsen, of Stockholm, in a public lecture denounces the Gothenburg system as "a practical failure, tending only to screen the drink vice behind the sham of a factitious respectability, and making the government a partner in the iniquity of legalizing an outrage against the health and happiness of its supporters." Divested of its official jargon, a high-license contract between the state and the rumseller, means, indeed, just this: "In consideration of a large, prepaid percentage of your probable proffits, I herewith authorize you to poison your fellow-citizens."

RETRIBUTIVE TAXES.

In a speech before the Municipal Council of Buenos Ayres, General Calandez urged the expedience of increasing the assessment of the local breweries, even at the risk of taxing them out of existence. "In that way," he concluded, "we may hope to recover at least a small portion of the expenses incident to the increase of disease, indolence and crime, caused by the sale of those pernicious beverages." The citizens of our sister republic evidently are no converts to the gospel of "milder stimulants." Beer and "cheap, good country wine" have never prevented the introduction of more virulent intoxicants, and are themselves responsible for half the alcohol-begotten crimes of the nineteenth century. The beer habit, indeed, is characterized, in a high degree, by the progressive tendency of all stimulant vices, and topers advance from a pint of ale to twelve quarts of lager beer, as they advance from claret to port, and from port to brandy.

ALCOHOL INDISCRETIONS.

A Swiss journalist ascribes the eccentricities of Kaiser William to his fondness for champagne suppers, and quotes a Greek proverb to the effect that "the wine-press is a fountain of insanity." "And these temporary aberrations," he adds, "are often more dangerous than absolute idiocy. The brother of the Emperor's grandfather suffered from softening of the brain, and nobody but him was the worse for it—the regency being a decided improvement on the administrative system of the preceding year. The present King of Bavaria is a far-gone imbecile, but contents himself with dressing dolls and trotting about his parlor on all fours—amusements which most of his subjects would greatly prefer to the alternative of truculent political threats and after-dinner orations in praise of absolutism."

A LESSER EVIL.

The English Premier has offended the Cobden Club party by recommending a modification of the free trade principle in the case of foreign highwines and similar articles of import, which in no sense can be considered objects of national necessity, like Swedish timber or American cotton. Protective tariffs have, no doubt, often been carried to a ruinous extreme, but it is a question if their application to health and wealth-destroying poisons would not be, on the whole, a lesser evil. The pro and con arguments turn on a problem very similar to that of the "personal liberty" question. Legislative interference with private concerns should be restricted to a minimum, but that minimum clearly ought to include the right to interfere with gamblers and the publishers of obscene literature, even if all their customers should have volunteered their patronage.

PERSISTENCE OF THE DRINK VICE.

A historian of the Mogul dynasty of Northern India relates that Mohammed Baber Khan undertook to eradicate the opium habit of his subjects by the total destruction of poppy plants throughout his dominions, in the hope of thus saving at least the rising generation, since he had given up the attempt of reforming confirmed poison-eaters. The alcohol vice, too, is apt to perpetuate itself from the smallest remaining germs, and radical measures alone can achieve deliverance from its evils. Some twenty years ago the American and British Governments made a simultaneous effort to restrict the liquor traffic among the aborigines of Alaska and the adjoining territories, but the root of the stimulant curse was suffered to remain, and is now producing a crop of new sprouts in a rather unexpected manner. "Our Indians have begun to make their own beer, or Kwass, as they call it," says the Rev. O. R. McKinney, of Unga, Alaska, in a letter to a correspondent of the New York Voice, "and though it costs but little, it is nevertheless a deadly intoxicant. While sober they are a good, kind people, ready to be taught and ever eager for knowledge; but, it seems they will drink almost anything that will stimulate. Only a few days ago news came to our village that a Russian priest, up the bay, had killed himself drinking Hostetter's Bitters. Every Russian holiday is celebrated by the natives making an unusually large amount of Kwass, and, as a necessary result, getting drunk, fighting and smashing things in general." In other words, the liquor traffic has started the flames that devour the poor aborigines, and they should not bear the exclusive blame if they should be unable to arrest the progress of the conflagration.

A SENSIBLE COMMANDER.

Colonel Manuel Garcia, of the Brazilian regulars, declines to lead an expedition against the revolted Province of Matto Grosso, unless the commissary department agrees to leave the supply of intoxicating liquors behind. "The government," he says, "has been careful to suppress the distribution of insurgent pamphlets, but I would sooner undertake to maintain discipline among a brigade carrying a hundred wagon-loads of rebel literature, than among a regiment carrying a car load of alcoholic liquors." More than one campaign has, indeed, miscarried in consequence of such commissary supplies. The battle of Zorndorf, fought in the crisis of the Seven Years' War, was lost to the Russians chiefly because their soldiers had got access to the brandy barrels in the camp, and befuddled themselves on the eve of the decisive engagement.

COMPARATIVE DESPOTISM.

French papers a few weeks ago published a sensational report to the effect that an old lady, for long years a resident of Metz, in Lorraine, had committed suicide because the increase of the German income tax had reduced her to the alternative of death or slow starvation. Investigations have, however, developed the fact that during the three years preceding her rash act, the alleged martyr spent fifty marks a month for liquor, while her taxes for the same period amounted to only fourteen marks. As the traveler Gerard said of the beast-of-prey-ridden highlands of Algeria: "The natives pay ten francs to the lion for one franc they pay to the government tax collectors."

(To be Continued.)

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.
AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., The Temple, La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, 57 Gordon Square, N. W.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.
President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 57 Gordon Square, N. W. London, Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Assistant Secretary—ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

In the case of scandal as in that of robbery, the receiver is always thought as bad as the thief.

The scholar without good breeding is a pedant; the philosopher a cynic; the soldier a brute, and every man disagreeable.

***

A man of the world must, like the chameleon, be able to take every different hue, which is by no means criminal or abject, but a necessary complaisance, for it only relates to manners and not to morals.

***

When a man of sense happens to be in that disagreeable situation in which he is obliged to ask himself more than once, "What shall I do?" he will answer himself, "Nothing." When his reason points out to him no good way, or at least no way less bad than another way, he will stop short and wait for light.

***

Nota Bene.—The editors often write items by request of representatives of our different enterprises and sometimes these notices get woefully out of their proper classifications. Think of a Temple item in this column advertising my own photograph! Pray, charitable reader, forgive and forget.

***

Miss Robinson, the soldiers' friend, famous throughout the British army, writes us that she cannot accept the position of superintendent of work among the soldiers, her health not permitting. We greatly honor our sister in her work, and regret the necessity of her decision.

***

We do not always perceive that even the writing of a note of congratulation, the fabrication of something intended as an offering of affection, our necessary intercourse with characters which have no congeniality with our own, or hours apparently trifled away in the domestic circle, may be made by us the performance of a most sacred and blessed work; even the carrying out, after our feeble measure, of the design of God for the increase of happiness.—Anna, or Passages from Home Life.

***

Mrs. Judge Merrick, of New Orleans (we have named her "Queen Caroline"), president of the Louisiana W. C. T. U., is the daughter of one of Andrew Jackson's chief stand-bys in the battles of the past. Her father was a lion-heart, a man of great breadth of thought and liberality of opinion; these he imparted to his gifted daughter. Indeed, a careful comparison of women in the white ribbon host shows that, as great men are apt to be "their mothers' own sons," these are their fathers' own daughters. No more interesting study in heredity could be found than in a thorough, scientific tracing of the antecedents of the leaders in this army. It is strange that some wise physiologist and psychist does not survey and map a field so new, so varied, and so interesting as this. It only shows how much knowledge goes to waste in this world, and perhaps gives a sidelight on the power of the human mind to resist knowledge.

Mrs. Merrick was born free, as Paul hath it. She has an irresistible drollery in her composition, a humorous gift that has carried her through the dark places of her life and gilded the brightness of her happier years. Her imitations of the negro dialect, given with an infinite love for the race whose deep heart qualities she delights to illustrate, are among the best private theatricals we ever witnessed. She is so bright of pen that if she had not been a rich woman she would have made her mark in literature. It was her good fortune to meet one of New England's noblest young men, Judge Edwin Merrick, a man of the finest culture and training, who went South long before the war, and became chief justice of Louisiana under the Confederacy. His grave dignity is an admirable offset to her irrepressible fun and geniality of nature. Having served us faithfully for ten years, Mrs. Merrick, at the last convention, which was the most brilliant ever held in Louisiana, insisted on retiring from her position, and her right hand helper, Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, was made president, while Mrs. Merrick retains the position of honorary president.

Frances E. Willard.

THE BAY VIEW SEASON.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The Bay View Assembly Herald is out, radiant with the attractive summer university announcements and the Assembly programs at that favored place. Your readers who are hesitating where to spend their summer vacation will be interested in the splendid climatic, recreative and educational advantages at this famed northern Michigan summer resort.

The University opening on July 12 is ranked by the Review of Reviews as the second, if not the first in this country. It comprises seven complete and remarkably well equipped schools, college, school of methods, Bible school, schools of music, art, elocution, physical culture and business. Its distinguishing feature is its advance character. It has a faculty of forty five instructors, most of whom are persons of special university training, and at its head is Prof. Richard T. Ely, the well-known educator and political economist. On July 20 the Assembly opens, continuing with the university to August 11, when both close. The general program this year is of unusual interest, and one may hear three or four times daily such eminent persons as Bishop W. X. Ninde and J. M. Thoburn, Dr. John H. Barrows, Thos. Dixon, Jr., Dr. A. J. F. Behrends, Geo. W. Bain, Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, James Lane Allen, Geo. W. H. Gibson, the famous Lotus Glee Club, Royal Hand Bell Ringers, celebrated soloists and readers, besides a score more widely known celebrities.

Besides, there are four or five stong departments, in charge of leaders and ably supported. There is the Missionary conference conducted by Dr. S. L. Baldwin, and the popular Woman's council, in which this year Miss Mary A. Greene, the brightest woman lawyer in this country, will give a course of business law lectures for women. But of special interest to the white ribbon army, is the W. C. T. U. School of Methods, which for many years has been a successful feature here. Our national corresponding secretary, Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, continues in charge, and is preparing an effective course. Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, president of the Michigan W. C. T. U., will be present all the season to participate, and will give the anniversary address. It is expected Miss Pugh will be there, also Miss Mollie G. Hay, the Indiana treasurer. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek sanitarium, will give a series of health talks, and many more well known workers will take part. The dates are July 21 to 30, inclusive.

There will be several special days of great interest, including our W. C. T. U. day and two new departments added, a school for writers, conducted by Mr. Edwin L. Shuman, one of the editors of the Chicago Journal, and a Field and Forest Club, for the outdoor study of plant and animal life. This will be in charge of Miss Martha R. Mann, a conductor of unusual ability. It will pay all our women who know the effective power of the press to go and join the school for writers.

Any one desiring to know more about the university should send for the University Review, or about Bay View, the Assembly, expenses, how to go there, etc., for the Assembly Herald, to JOHN M. HALL,

Bay View, Mich.

THE WORK OF SALT LAKE CITY W. C. T. U.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In a short and narrow street in the least reputable part of Salt Lake City the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has established its coffee house and reading room. The Variety Theater is near at hand, saloons are on all sides, and houses of ill-repute flourish in the vicinity. If there should be those who criticise the placing of union headquarters in such a locality they need only step in of an evening and witness the good work being done to be convinced that, while it may not be worldly wise, it was certainly a Christ-wise policy that goes out into the byways in search of souls perishing for lack of the bread of life.

Gospel temperance meetings have been conducted by the W. C. T. U. for a year on Sunday evenings, but for the last two months and a half they have been held every evening.

When the union removed from its more respectable location there were prophecies of failure, but the hearts of a few loyal women were strong in faith. The first evening the meeting was composed largely of Christian people who came to look on, and filled the space which the superintendent wanted to see occupied by men who now thronged the saloons, so she gave all Christians but those desiring to work heartily in the cause a cordial invitation to stay away. The result the next evening was an empty room. Mrs. Hester Griffith, the superintendent of gospel temperance work, and Miss Turner, the president,

(Continued on page 15.)

RALLY! FOR OUR HOMES!

BY ELMER HILL.

HERE'S a muttering in the distance
As of thunder rolling deep,
And the sky is black and threat'ning
While our comrades idly sleep!
Louder grows the dang'rous mutt'ring,—
Through the land the echo runs—
Like the rush of angry waters
Or the roar of distant guns!
Wake, my comrades! Wake to danger!
On our shores the foemen stand!

Stars and stripes are waving o'er us
Proudly floating in the air;
Shall that flag still float in honor—
Or o'er saloons be hoisted fair?
Are we free men? Answer, brothers!
Shall we bow to Rum as slaves?
Were't not better we should perish
And the grass grow o'er our graves?
Wake, my comrades! Wake to danger!
On our streets the foemen stand!

Satan's hordes are coming swiftly
In a countless, mighty host,
Vice and ignorance, hand in hand,
Seek to rule at any cost!
Light the beacons! Send the signal
Blazing bright o'er hill and vale!
Ring the bells, or louder ringing
We will hear our children's wail!
Wake, my comrades! Wake to danger!
On our streets the foemen stand!

Chicago, Ill.

DICK ELLSWORTH'S GRANDFATHER.

BY MRS. O. W. SCOTT.

(Concluded.)

The driver checked his span of sleek bays an instant later and looked back. "Young man," said he, "would you like to ride?" The farmer's kindly, intelligent face won Dick at once, and he gladly climbed to the seat beside him. The horses jogged quietly along the country road; sunset clouds of red and gold filled the western sky, fading gradually to somber twilight tints; and, under the influence of the hour and sympathetic questioning, Dick told more about himself than would have been possible under different circumstances. He did not tell his name, even when his companion said: "My name is Hodge, Timothy Hodge; and I shall keep you over night, for I want to tell you my story."

Food had never tasted so good to Dick as when that night he sat at the farmer's well-spread table with his family. To be sure he heard one of the bright-faced girls ask: "Well, father, what are you going to do with that tramp?" but he was not in a position to resent even this appellation.

After everything was quiet for the evening, Mr. Hodge took Dick into a warm, cozy room where they could talk without disturbance.

"I want to tell you," said he, "why I was drawn to take you in this afternoon. Some men wouldn't think to look twice at a young fellow walking along the road, but I've been watching for years to find whoever needs helping, and people generally find what they look for. You see when I was your age I was in a bad way. I ran away from home and went to Conway, the very place you've come from. It was a quiet little place then, with no saloon; and you'd think a boy could have behaved himself without half trying. But I was so given over to the evil one that I banded with a set of ne'er-do-wells and we went to the next town and bought our liquor. Then we'd go back and make night hideous.

"Well, there was a man living in Conway that had kept saloons out of the town for some years, and a grand man he was, too. But we boys called him 'old bottle-smasher,' because we thought he interfered with our personal liberty. We used to go to his house and carry off his door-steps and his gate. Sometimes we'd let his horse out of the barn, or take a wheel off from his wagon; and we were such idiots that we called it 'fun.' One night there was considerable snow on the ground, and we planned to pile it up against his side door; and about ten o'clock, after everything was quiet, we went to work with our shovels. It was a cold night, but we drank to keep our courage up, and worked on till the snow was almost to the top of the door. I climbed up softly to put on the finishing touches, when the door flew open, and I went head first into a small entry with the snow piled on top of me. Of course, the door was opened on purpose, for the old man and his wife had been watching. They pulled me out, and before I could get away took me into the warm kitchen and brushed off the snow; and I declare! that woman had me in an easy chair with slippers on my feet, and up to the table drinking hot coffee before I hardly knew what she was about. By that time the snow was shoveled out, and the door locked. To make a long story short, that man talked and prayed with me till morning. Yes, sir! he wouldn't let me go, and between 'em, he and the Lord saved me that night. If things looked as different to Saul after that time he had at the gate of Damascus as they did to me the next morning, I don't wonder he has so much to say about having his eyes opened. What a night that was! If I ever forget Jacob Ellsworth, may the Lord forget me when His great day comes!"

The farmer's voice faltered, and he paused to wipe the tears from his eyes.

Dick sat as if spellbound. The unseen influence from which he was trying to escape, filled the room, and held him with gentle force.

"You've lived in Conway, and you must have heard of Jacob Ellsworth, though I guess he died before you was born," said Mr. Hodge, questioningly.

"Yes," replied Dick, with lips which did not seem like his own. "He was my grandfather."

The farmer clasped his hands and half rose from his chair. "Your grandfather! Yours! Is it possible? Then I've got a chance to make another payment on that debt. You must let me help you, my boy," and he laid his hand on Dick's shoulder.

Conquering his emotions, he continued after a moment: "I dare say folks haven't let you forget your grandfather, and maybe you haven't enjoyed hearing about him," and Mr. Hodge smiled, for he understood human nature.

Dick shook his head.

"I see! I see! But you've had a hard time doing wrong, I'll warrant. You see, there are lots of boys who have everything against them—parents, surroundings, everything, and I pity 'em when they try to do right; I do, indeed. But they don't have as hard a time, after all, as the other kind—the boys who have a good, clean ancestry and turn against it. Such boys are the problems of this generation. They can't sin without many and many a tussle with conscience; so you see they're so uncomfortable they get desperate. And there's just where you are. We don't keep family lines in these days as we ought to, but if we did, they'd be like the chapters in the Bible where we read: 'Which was the son of —' 'which was the son of —.' Every boy has to own his father and his grandfather, and so on to the beginning. And Jacob Ellsworth, with his honest life and his hatred of rum and tobacco, and his courage in putting down sin—why, my boy! you're in the life line, and you've got to be true to the old stock, or you'll be a miserable, miserable man! It's borne in upon me that you must carry on your grandfather's work."

And there Mr. Hodge paused. He had talked with many young men, but the old arguments and the old eloquence evaded him to-night.

A silence fell between the two—a critical silence like the sleep which foretells a fever crisis. For the first time in his life Dick began to "see" with his spiritual eyes; and, as though swung by an irresistible power, his moral nature turned away from its weak and wicked past toward a future of grand possibilities. He looked at the farmer with the expression of one awakening from sleep. "I never thought of that," said he. There are certain signals by which souls indicate to other souls their real condition, and Timothy Hodge read in that one glance enough to confirm his great desire. There was but one thing to be said just then, and he said it—"Let us pray."

The next morning Dick told Mr. Hodge he was going home. "That's right, that's right," was the hearty response; "go home and begin over. Go to work and keep busy all the time for your mother and the Lord, and may the mantle of your grandfather fall upon you."

Twenty-five miles seemed a longer distance than it had the day before, but it was a never-to-be-forgotten walk. Dick's muscles grew stronger with every mile, and as for the muscles of the "inner man" they, too, were developing under the training of a new master. It was dusk when he finally reached home. Opening the door of his mother's cottage softly, he stood a moment in the little hall. She was not alone, and he soon recognized Lida Minot's sympathizing voice. "Don't cry any more to-night, Mrs. Ellsworth, you will be sick. It may be the best thing for him, because you know he can't run away from God."

"Yes, Lida, but he's my only son, and I thought in spite of his wild ways he loved his mother too well to go away without saying good-bye." The sentence was punctuated with sobs, which hurt Dick's heart. He couldn't stay outside any longer, and, opening the door he knelt at his mother's side.

"I knew the minute he came in," said Lida to her friends, "that he was changed. Why, there was none of the old, hard look in his face, and then the way he kissed his mother! I wondered when he had cared to kiss her before. Well, I just stole away and went home, and cried and cried, I was so glad. And now," turning to her kindred spirits, "now is the time to help him. Be nice to him, girls, and bow when you meet him as though you meant it. And you, Judson Blake, must happen around to take him with you to the Y. M. C. A. and to church. Mamma says his grandfather did so much for young men when he was alive, that every one who can ought to help—Richard."

Lida blushed a little and laughed as she gave Dick's full name, but her companions understood, and Judson Blake said: "Richard it shall be."

And so it came to pass that the life which had been so well lived, was, after all, perpetuated in this new life, the flower of a new generation, through influences which seemed as subtile and as natural as rain and sunshine. Uncle Jed was no philosopher, but he came pretty near the truth when he said:

"I look at it this way. Here I was mournin' in my shop because our Dick wasn't like his grandfather. Now look at him! Did you ever see a boy so made over? And he's growin' more like Jacob Ellsworth every day. Well, you see the likeness must have been there all the while, but it didn't show any till the Lord brought it out!"

Norwich, Conn.

HOW TO AWAKEN PATRIOTISM IN CHILDREN.

BY LUCRETIA WILLARD TREAT.

The commemoration of "Independence Day" suggests the question: How shall we educate our children to be patriotic?

A German lady once visited our kindergarten; it was in the very worst part of the city; the daily papers called the children "gutter snipes" and "water rats"—they were Poles, Italians and Bohemians of every sort. This lady heard them sing "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "Marching Through Georgia," and the historic "John Brown," marching with heads and chests erect like soldiers worthy to carry their country's flag, and then with reverent faces and softened voices sang,

"Our Father's God, to Thee,
Author of liberty,
To Thee we sing."

She watched them fondly kiss the flag as they hung it up, and threw good-bye kisses to it as they passed out of the door to go home. "Ah!" she said, her eyes filling with tears, "they tell us in Germany that in America you do not educate patriots, that you allow the children to grow up, and expect some way, some how they will be true to their country if it is ever required of them; but I shall tell them that I never saw patriotism taught until to-day." It was not formal words, but a true, loyal love for that flag; and not one of those children, whatsoever his nationality, could ever dishonor it, or see the rights of the country it represents insulted, without rising in his might to defend it.

But before we can give this thought to the children we must fill ourselves with it. Froebel says, "Remain (not get there by fits and starts, but stay fast) remain there in the unity of life thyself"—that is, in harmony with God and man—"or thou canst not lead others therein." If I do not love my country myself, I cannot expect my child to do so. Water is no purer than its source, if that is impure the whole stream may not be clean, but granted we are true ourselves, and love the country of our birth or adoption, lead the child gently with the same feeling. From earliest babyhood have a flag in sight; speak of it and treat it always with respect. Gradually tell them, as opportunity offers, what the country does for us; public free schools, mail service, lighthouses, harbors, navy ships, military schools and stations on the frontier. How in every land our government has officers stationed to protect and care for us; if we ever get into trouble away from home, we have only to go where we see our flag floating and claim its protection. Tell them how fondly we welcome this flag when we have been separated from it awhile. A little alienation shows us only too clearly in many instances how "blessings brighten as they take their flight."

We told our children this true story: A lady traveling around the world was wrecked on the coast of Africa; the sailors were of every nationality, and many of them could not speak English at all. They tied some garment to a broken mast and in turn held it aloft to attract the attention of ships sailing near. At last one was seen at a great distance; with the accustomed eye of a sailor they recognized a Portuguese flag, but even the Portuguese sailors said: "They will not come to help us." Several ships passed in this way; at last after many weary hours of waiting in the hot sand the stars and stripes came in view. They all threw themselves on the ground and wept for joy, saying: "That flag never fails us," and it came and brought them all to the haven where they would be.

Can we help loving a flag with such a record? Filled with this thought, we are taller and grander; the feeling reacts upon us physically. In Ireland the people tell us that the sky is higher above their heads, and the air purer when they land in New York; is this not the freedom within them externalized? Why do soldiers stand erect with chests leading? is it because they look better? It is true they do present a better appearance standing well; but Delsarte tells us the posture the body assumes will react upon the character. If we take a cringing position, we can scarcely expect to be brave. Mrs. Parker said once that a timid girl with sunken chest came to her for help. She told her to stand in some high place, square her shoulders and repeat in a firm voice, "I am monarch of all I survey;" to do this many times a day, and the girl actually grew brave and strong.

A mother who has reared three sons most successfully, says she encouraged them to spend a half hour every night before sleeping, reciting Macaulay's Lays or Walter Scott's poems commemorating deeds of heroism, or sacrifice for a country's cause. They would learn them during the day to be able to shout them across the hall to each other at night. The rafters rang with their eloquence, but the boys were filled with lofty thoughts and heroic deeds—and it did react upon their characters.

We take this course with our kindergarten children; let not a timid child be our color-bearer; no one can carry the flag who is not able to stand straight and follow our leader, who is chosen because he knows how to do the right thing himself; of course he does, or how could he show us. Our children respond instantly; we find them coming under the law, considering other people, and watching how they can serve.

With older children we could read "Sheridan's Ride," "Barbara Frietchie," "Paul Revere," "How They Brought the News from Ghent to Aix" and "A Man Without a Country,"—that most pathetic of all stories. Seeing obedience to the law in their homes, in the kindergarten and schools and lovingly obeying this law, can they fail in their duty themselves when they are called upon to serve their country in any capacity or make good laws, when they become the law makers?

Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Union Signal
AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth.—Ps. 8:9.

THE HOME "FOURTH."

Garfield never said a truer word than that the verdict of the American people, in so far as it means salvation for the state, is determined in the home group at the hearthstone or round the evening lamp. For you cannot get out of a child what you did not build in, and the warp and woof of that good character whose outward form is noble conduct, must be woven in the home. The igneous rocks are thrown up suddenly in mountain peaks, the aqueous rocks are laid in regular stratifications by the slow, sure processes that every river bank illustrates. Even so, some volcanic crisis may attract wide attention, but the every-day life of the home forms the true substratum of the nation's life.

For this reason we have always been partial to a home celebration of the day for which all other days are made in the calendar of American patriotism. We would associate in forming minds, the shelter of home with the shelter of that larger home we call the state, illustrating in a thousand helpful, ingenious and poetic ways, one by the other.

Perhaps this method of unconscious education and happy play turned to the best account, comes to us largely as a sacred reminiscence of the past. For when one's childhood is invested (not "spent") several miles from anywhere, the observance of times and seasons is apt to be inversely as that distance—unless by reason of the fit survival of maternal purposes that "laugh at impossibilities and cry, 'It shall be done.'" For on high holidays the "head o' the house" is least of all likely to be within hailing distance of his home.

Writing of the Empress Catharine's ice palace, the poet says, "No forest fell when thou wouldst build, but thou didst span the floods;" and "No sound of hammer or of saw was there." In like manner it may be said of that old-fashioned "Home Fourth," no cannon roared, no firecracker emitted its smothered, sulphurous snap, no small torpedo trodden under foot sent forth its mimic shot. Upon the cool, balm-breathing morning, we did our chores as usual, then clambered to the ridge-pole of the house and barn. We flung our banners to the breeze, lifted aloft on hickory poles that we had carved with motto and device. Our flags were but old "pillow cases," with thirteen red calico stripes sewed on and the proper number of gilt paper stars pasted upon the corner, but we have seen none since that have made our hearts beat with a holier passion. Only five persons beside the dog and cat joined the procession of mother and her children three, good Irish Mary entering with all her heart into the ceremonies. But to our fancy, stately and tall under the Wisconsin oaks trod an illimitable throng, of whose great deeds mother had told us in song and story on many winter nights. Deeply in our young hearts we felt the gratitude that generous youth is glad to give when taught aright, to the great ones who fashioned the new world into a nation and pledged "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor" that it should endure.

Gathering on the sweet greensward, around the table spread with its snowy cloth and simple fare, we all stood up while she invoked the blessing of the God of Freedom and of the Christ of human brotherhood. Then after due consideration of the "Fourth of July dinner," with which no beer or cider intermingled, and no tobacco smoke "topped off," we proceeded with decorum to the toasts, the New England Home Madonna calling them off. "Our Forefathers and Foremothers" brought her eldest daughter forward to recite which she had rehearsed times not a few to her only "guide, philosopher and friend"—her mother. "Our Revolutionary Chiefs," called for "The Sword of Bunker Hill," from another little girl, and "The Present Crisis" introduced from our brother a clear-cut putting, from the northern point of view, of what we have learned in these kindlier years to call "the late unpleasantness." Then mother had us all recite in concert the "Order of the Presidents," beginning "First Washington, the chieftain." Then Irish Mary sang, "The Harp that once through Tara's Halls;" we all took hold of hands in a patriotic "ring around a-rosy" and made the woods echo to "Hail Columbia, Happy Land," and the "really, truly" celebration was over, the rest of the day being occupied with pitching quoits, shooting at a mark with bow and arrows, fishing, rowing, and toward night going to ride with our parents. Later on, as neighbors came, and a town grew up a few miles off, we joined the forces that arranged to celebrate on broader lines, but the home side of the national birthday had indelibly impressed its lesson.

"The breaking waves dashed high,"

We know right well that all who read THE UNION SIGNAL do not bow to the red, white and blue. We rejoice to remember that the white-ribbon organ is read in fifty different countries every week. All that we meant to suggest by our picture of how one family of little folks was taught to love and be everlastingly loyal to native land was for the sake of enforcing this one thought: Whatever your flag is, love it, and remember a child's memory is "wax to receive, but marble to retain." Cultivate fireside patriotism; render a reason to the curious-minded lad for the devotion that makes you lift your hat to the ensign of your country; let your little lass learn that "the world was made for women too," and that she will ere long be part and parcel of the government no less than of the home and church and school, whose broadest and most determinative expression is after all the state, and you can not close the evening of one of the great national days better, whether under the Union Jack or Star Spangled Banner, than by singing with your children from Anna Gordon's "Marching Songs" that great chorus by Lide Meriwether, of Tennessee:

"We'll rally round the ballot-box,
For Temperance guard the ballot-box
Till right has crowned the ballot-box
When we are twenty-one."

Children thus taught will not praise other countries at the expense of their own, or simper out "I prefer a monarchy," when born and bred in a republic.

TEMPERANCE AND LABOR.

For many years we have had a department devoted to the elucidation of the relations between temperance and labor. Unfortunately, it has not developed as we had hoped it might. Its aim is set forth in the annual leaflet as follows:

The aim of this department is to induce employers to require total abstinence in employees; to extend the discrimination in favor of abstinent habits to every branch of insurance risks; to induce all organizations of workingmen to introduce the same discrimination into their societies, and to study the correlation between the temperance and labor questions. The methods are circular letters, personal appeals, articles for the press and efforts to secure editorial co-operation; also to make the people more intelligent regarding the waste, pauperism and crime resulting from the liquor traffic, by gathering the latest statistics, properly classifying and placing them before the people in leaflets and through the press. These will be of service to our speakers and writers, and should come before the public in every possible way.

The admirable ladies, who have at different times been placed at the head of this department, have been too busy to give it the necessary attention, or they were not expert in the lines to be taken up. The work has now been left in the hands of the general officers who have already so much to do that it seems hopeless for them to give the adequate attention to so great an undertaking. The superintendent of this department ought to be one of our ablest women, and one who has given careful study to the subject.

The general officers, at their first meeting in the beautiful new Temple, carefully canvassed this subject, and agreed that the best recommendation to make for the present is as follows:

That each local and state union become acquainted with the labor organizations in their respective localities and states; asking the leaders in those organizations to speak before our society or at meetings which we arrange; also, that we endeavor to secure opportunity to address the labor organizations, speaking from our own point of view and not from theirs, as we are not expert in theirs. By hearing them, we can learn what their ideas are, and by hearing us they can learn ours. From this will come a mutual understanding, and without doubt a sense of greater harmony. It would be well for our local unions to ask the local labor societies to pass resolutions on the temperance question, covering the lines indicated in the statement of the object of this department; also, any others that may be voted desirable by our white-ribboners in the different localities. It would be well, also, for us to declare our sympathy with the general principles of the labor reform, in so far as we can have an intelligent opinion concerning them. Especially is it desirable that the presidents of the state unions should invite fraternal delegates from the labor societies to be present at our annual meetings, and through their ablest speakers—who will often be women—to participate in the exercises of the platform. In return, these organizations will no doubt welcome representatives of our societies, and give them a similar opportunity. We have proved during many years, that these methods of fraternity are a great help in consolidating the opinion and good will of the reform elements of this country. On a large scale, we have illustrated this in the National W. C. T. U., which has for years sent fraternal delegates to the Knights of Labor, and we hope may do so to other organizations of like character; such organizations so far as approached having always returned us cordial messages, either in person or by letter and telegraph. Let the good work go on; nothing but good can come of it.

ASSOCIATED FOR PROGRESS.

It seems to have escaped the attention of our people that there is an ancient, as well as a modern temperance reform. The former was occupied with the circulation and signing of the total abstinence pledge. Women worked well and earnestly in this pioneer movement, the results of which are with us to-day in the uncounted thousands that refrain altogether from the use of stimulants, for their own and other's sake. But in these days of scientific thought, of sublimated intellect, of super-sensitive nervous systems, of the incalculable momentum of modern life, the movement has come actually to be what Richard Cobden predicted it would, when he said, "The temperance reform lies at the foundation of all reforms." That great man saw that the labor movement is inextricably interlaced with the cause of a clear brain and a steady hand, and that the commercial interests of the nation were inseparably linked with the triumph of our movement as it stands to-day. Co-operation of women in this cause has been classified by experts into forty distinct departments of work, under the heads of Organization, Preventive, Evangelistic, Educational, Social and Legal. There are hundreds of women to-day outside the ranks of temperance reformers, who are themselves possibly total abstainers, but who are working along other philanthropic lines, and who have not seen how inextricably our special reform is interwoven with every other. But if a superintendent were appointed for that particular interest, and wherever she spoke she represented our share in that phase of reform, sympathy would be created for temperance among many who to-day believe that we are short- sighted and narrow; and we should prove that which we so strongly hold, not that all work should be in temperance, but that temperance should be in all work.

We have women in our midst who are interested in such kindred philanthropies, and who, if they were officially our representatives, would carry a weight into their work that would tell wonderfully for our cause at the present political crises, when the education of our women on the right use of their municipal vote, the proper forms for the presenting of petitions, the representations to be made at licensing sessions, the right means of introducing scientific education in schools, are becoming hourly burning questions. Nothing will so arouse our constituents as the feeling that at the head of each of these great movements there is a woman to whom they can refer for advice and assistance, and who will deal with their specialty with the wisdom of an expert. This system is recognized in our government; the affairs of no country could be conducted by a committee. For what is everybody's business it is truly said often becomes nobody's.

Time is pressing, the enemy is gathering its forces, the brewers are organizing on a large scale. It remains for us to be true to our motto, "Associated for Progress," and to look with far-seeing eyes along the winding way that lies ahead, content to adopt new methods when we feel that the exigencies of the time demand a fresh line of action, and resolve that the conflict in which we are engaged is so desperate that we need a union of all the forces we can command, and a catholic spirit that enables us to see the absolute necessity of permeating existing Christian work with the principles of that cause which we believe to be Christ's message to our age.

SATAN REBUKING SIN.

A New York daily paper (never famous for standing by the right) has a scorching editorial on the recent meeting in New York City to endorse the action of Dr. Parkhurst in securing the prosecution of a woman who kept a house of infamy. The paper says: "The laws of the state directed against these outcasts are intended for their regulation rather than their destruction, and are enforced in all the cities of the world with some degree of laxity and reasonable latitude. The police by their conduct express a humane sentiment. Men will not torture women whom men have led astray and subjected to a social punishment in itself so terrible. . . . The meeting was a shame to womanhood. It was an outrage to the purity of Christians. It was a sin over which angels might weep. It would reform society by transforming it into a body of hypocrites and by destroying the principle which is the salt that saves us from corruption."

While we do not indorse these utterances, we do heartily coincide with the vigorous declaration that follows :—"The bitterest punishment demonstrated by society—the surest, the most unvarying and the most persistent is inflicted on women who have departed from chastity. The men who are partners in their guilt escape unscathed. Murder and all other crimes against the state may go unpunished, but the Magdalene is spurned and trampled on without exception. She becomes a pariah,—she is at the mercy of ruffians, and even the men who have made her an outcast, who consort with her in her degradation, join in covering her with reproach and driving her to destruction."

But what we object to in the editorial is that it takes as its major premise the necessity for this degraded class of women, and in so doing takes it for granted that men must always be the victims of their own passions, besides making women their victims also. In the interest of men we repudiate this theory, for civilization has tens of thousands, nay, millions of men as chaste as the best women are, and it is the business of decent people to legislate and plan for a state of society in which men shall not be looked upon as we look upon their analogies in the lower orders of creation, for this is the poorest compliment ever paid to the image of God in human form. White-ribboners are "persuaded better things of men." We believe that, when women shall have been lifted out of dependence so that they cease to be tempters of men by reason of their so-called necessities of food, clothing and shelter, then men will have their first fair opportunity to be as self-controlled as women are. We do not believe that women will voluntarily seek to support themselves by methods unutterably base when they can do so in an honorable way. We think the temptations of men have been immeasurably increased through the dependence of women. We would, therefore, make women independent of men by giving them honorable bread-winning employment, by giving them intellectual strength and mental exercise—thorough education—by giving them an equal share in the making of the laws by which men shall be punished who misbehave toward women and women shall be punished who misbehave toward men. We believe there is no sounder philosophy than that upon which these three reforms are based, and we are devoted, heart and soul, to these reforms because of our love for men and women, the home and school, the church and state.

WHY DON'T WE DO IT?

We sometimes wonder to what extent our women have learned by eighteen years of experience to utilize forces around them that make for righteousness but do not make especially for the W. C. T. U. The mighty power of the press (second to none in this or any country) can be, to a notable extent, enlisted to spread the temperance propaganda by simply offering to the editors well considered and carefully prepared paragraphs, statistics and selections worthy of their columns, and pointed enough to catch the attention of the public. If this one fact could so sink into the mind of one capable woman in every village, town and city, it would be worth millions of dollars to the temperance cause. Any woman, whose heart God has touched and whose brain He has illumined in this cause, can constitute herself a special temperance reporter for some local paper, with whose editor she has influence. This is done to some extent. We judge that as ten is to a hundred, so is the amount of influence we thus exert, although the subject has been presented in every variety of form and dinned into the ears of our blessed women well-nigh without cessation.

Then there are the Sunday-schools of this country, which handle millions of dollars in a year. They are constantly buying library books and circulating weekly and monthly journals among the young people. If one woman in each church had her heart touched and her mind illumined she could quietly bring it about in the teachers' meeting that temperance Sunday-school books should be put into the libraries when orders are being sent out for new books (which is done once or twice every year), and temperance papers could be introduced into the schools. It requires no official commission in order to do this, simply let the woman who has the wit, the wisdom and the devotion proceed to "purpose in her heart" that this shall be, and it will be. Sunday-school workers are our friends—they are glad to put in temperance books, but do not always know what to select.

Any one who reads this paragraph and who will send a postal card to Mrs. F. H. Rastall, business manager of the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, The Temple, Chicago, asking for a complete catalogue of our publications, will receive it by return mail. You will then have a basis of operations, and there is no reason why this silent, persuasive movement (as sure to win in the long run as the tides are sure to rise out of the sea) should not become universal and persistent in this and other countries. Nothing is lacking except the arrest of thought in the womanly brain, the warmth of affection in the womanly heart and the motive power of prayer, which is sure to result in the consecration to the movement for home-protection, brain protection, flag-protection, boy-protection, "in the land of the free and the home of the brave."

It is claimed by white-ribboners generally that one of the reasons why men in these days are becoming so broad, and opening every channel of independence to women, is that these men know right well that women are as much concerned as they to do what is for their own well-being. An illustration of this came to us recently in conversation with the wife of a learned professor in a celebrated university. She spoke somewhat as follows: "In olden times the question was naturally asked concerning the husband, 'Is he a good provider?' but in these days it hardly applies; for women do the providing to a great extent, their husbands turning over what money they have to their wives for that purpose. I speak of professional men, who are so occupied with their intellectual duties that they are glad to be exempt from business entanglements. A few days ago, ten wives of as many professors in our university met to talk over the best interests of their families. Each found that every other was the treasurer of the household, having in her charge all the money that came in, which meant the husband's salary. They told each other how they expended this amount; how much for rent, fuel, clothing, grocer's bills, etc. They then conferred together as to the best method of expending what was saved each year. One said she was trying to lay up enough to buy a house; another hoped to be able to take the family to Europe: a third wished to entertain largely, and so on. But one wise little woman said, 'Ladies, why do you not invest the extra amount in giving your husbands a good, thorough-going vacation? As it is now, most of them write review articles to piece out the income, or drudge away with special classes, or go to the Chautauquas to lecture, and do not get the renewing of body and soul that can come only by a complete change of scene and work. Your husband is the supporter of your family. The better health and spirits he has, the more reputation he makes, the higher he rises in his profession, the larger outlook will your children have. Therefore I vote for putting the money into the form of a perfect vacation for 'himself,' and I believe that once in awhile he ought to be sent to Europe to learn of masters who know more than he does, since he is always giving out to his classes, and has not half a chance to acquire, and to build up as a specialist in his chosen line.' " This sensible speech was received with applause, and we doubt not all these women went home, not sadder, but wiser, and that their husbands gladly "learned of them."

Miss West writes from San Francisco :—The news of President Blanchard's death, which has just reached me, smites me with a sense of sore personal bereavement. His influence, more than that of any other one person, was potent in forming my character and fixing my life purpose. He was one of my father's dearest friends, the pastor who received me into the church, the president under whom I took my college course and at whose hand I received my diploma. From early childhood he was indeed my 'guide, philosopher and friend,' always inspiring me with determination to do my best and make the most of every power God had given me. Never did a teacher have more power to arouse in his pupils enthusiasm for the good, the true and the beautiful, never were sweetness and strength more perfectly blended than in his character. Thousands of men and women all over this and other lands are stronger and purer and better fitted for heroic service, because their training for life's conflict was received from Jonathan Blanchard. He rests from his labors and his works do follow him."

Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, for many years president of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U., has been obliged, on account of increasing home cares, to resign her position and Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, of Evansville, Wisconsin, was chosen at the recent convention to fill the vacancy. We have reason to believe that Mrs. Campbell will do as good work as Mrs. Morse has done, which is saying a great deal. As a student beloved in other years when she was among the best scholars in our university at Evanston, we delighted in the co-operation of Mrs. Morse, but offer with warm regard the right hand of fellowship to this new general of a brigade in our old home state,—one of the fiercest battle grounds in all the nation.

The papers said that "the platform of the Democratic Convention was crowded with men of fine intellect and national reputation, also with handsomely dressed ladies." That the degradation involved in such a sentence is not so much as recognized by the average reader of the gentler sex, shows how far we are from victory for the "woman movement."

Edward Eggleston says :—"To possess the gift of helpfulness is to be mortgaged to all humanity."

***

We have it on unimpeachable authority that Grant Allen, the brilliant writer, who has taken such a miserable position on the woman question, even going so far as to say that everything ever done in this world, except adding to the numbers of the human race, has been far better done by man than ever it has been by woman,—has recently joined a woman's suffrage club. It seems that a young lady of progressive ideas has snared this literary bear and he now thinks better of us. This is a good thing for us and certainly a blessed thing for him.

***

Men and women who ride a wheel never ride a hobby. Clergymen and reformers should ride a wheel.

***

Some penny-a-liner has lately furnished the following for the newspaper corner : "What a man cannot forgive in a woman is strength." This is deliciously absurd. The strength of women to bear pain is the supreme physical fact of animate existence. The strength of woman to work is proved in the far fields of France, Germany and Italy on every hand, while men take their ease in the barracks with pipe and beer mug. The strength of women to endure is the admiration of doctors, dentists, milliners and corset makers, and we might go on ad infinitum, but here for the present we will rest our cause.

***

"It is impossible to keep up to concert pitch without tuning now and then."—Lady Henry Somerset.

***

Dr. Alice Stockham has just completed her tour around the world, arriving in San Francisco from Japan just in time to attend the National Editorial Convention. While in India she visited Ramabai's school, of which she brings a good report. She saw much of W. C. T. U. work in various countries, and repeatedly addressed the unions.

***

The Congregational Theological Seminary at Hartford, Conn., now in its fifty-eighth year, announces in its catalogue that it is open to women on precisely the same terms as to men. In token of its good faith this excellent institution has appointed a woman's advisory committee to give information and help to young women desiring to study theology. There is no expense of tuition and special funds are available for rendering scholarship assistance in case of need, besides two prize scholarships for the best entrance examination. The chairman of the committee of ladies is Mrs. F. B. Cooley, Hartford, Conn.

***

Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper, of San Francisco, has a Bible class larger than many of the churches, yet even in that new land it would be esteemed almost unpardonable for her to occupy a pulpit of her own denomination. She is graciously permitted to speak from the platform just below where the pulpit stands. I wonder how long this will be thus; how long things will "continue in one stay?"

***

Our Mrs. Mary Woody, president of the W. C. T. U. of North Carolina, at a yearly meeting of the society of Friends in England, asked all present to join the British Women's Temperance Association. This brought out an expression from this great, influential group of Christian workers showing how they rejoice in the temperance work of women in their own and other countries, and they commissioned the secretary, Mary Jane Dorcas, to set going in all the meetings of the Friends, Anna Gordon's suggestion of securing the autographs of children to the pledge and sending them to her at Evanston to be festooned in the headquarters of the World's W. C. T. U. at the approaching World's Fair. They also were favorable to forwarding the temperance work of the coming elections in England by having questions put to candidates for Parliament. This is quite a forward movement for the Friends, and what was most surprising of all, this discussion was followed by the late clerk of the women's meeting and its ex-president rising to introduce the subject of woman's franchise. She was warmly supported in what she said, the ground being taken that this is now a religious as well as a political question. The opposition was very feeble but of course the yearly meeting is composed of a large majority of picked women and is probably ahead of the rank and file of the society so far as progressive sentiment is concerned. Nothing of all this was pre-arranged in the meeting. Surely this must bring to our world workers in Great Britain and everywhere a waft of cheer.

On Duty.

ONLY ONE SAVED.

BY EVA KINNEY GRIFFITH.

We had just started a nightly gospel meeting held in the main street of our growing city. It was in a building formerly occupied by a store, and stood midway between two railroad stations. Strangers from either station would have to pass the little meeting on their way to the up-town hotels, and we hoped to attract a great many of the "floating class" that are always drifting in and out of a new and prosperous town. The work had progressed nearly two weeks and no converts had been made, when one evening a surprise came to us.

A handsome and elegantly dressed man with a beaming face came in, took a seat near the front, and glancing at the nearest singing book joined in the singing with a rich, sweet voice that soared away above every one's else, and floating out on the street attracted the attention of passers-by. Men paused, listened, turned and came into the meeting. Soon the little room was full of an eager throng waiting to hear that wonderful voice, and the astonished leader gave out song after song that all might enjoy the unwonted treat. At last the meeting was thrown open to testimony, and in an instant the stranger was on his feet. He spoke with a slight foreign accent, but his radiant face helped to tell the story.

"I am passing through your city," he said, "on a business trip. I have to change cars and I must wait two hours; I wonder to myself how I shall spend my time. Suddenly, as I walk along the street, I see the words on your window, 'W. C. T. U. Gospel Meeting. Stranger, Come in. All are Welcome,' and I say to myself, That is the place for me, for I was born into the kingdom of heaven in a W. C. T. U. gospel meeting.

"I will tell you my story," he continued in his lisping English, "that you may know what the Lord has done for a poor sinner like me. My earthly life began in Germany. My parents belonged to the lowest class of traveling actors. We never had a home, but went from town to town giving shows. When we had good success we lived high, when our money was gone we starved. I was given beer to drink when a baby, and dice, cards and tobacco pipes were my playthings. I never went to a church or Sunday-school, and never heard the name of God or Jesus Christ except in an oath. When I was fifteen we emigrated to America, and a few years later I drifted to Chicago where, on account of my voice, I obtained a permanent position as star singer in a concert saloon. They gave me my board and all I wanted to drink, and not much salary besides. I sang every night and drank myself drunk every day. When I was twenty-eight years old I had hardly been sober for ten years. One night I was too drunk to sing and they sent a man with me out in the street to walk me sober. We were walking up a crowded street when I heard a woman's voice singing, I'm a child of the King.' I stopped to see where the voice came from, and I read on the window, 'W. C. T. U. Gospel Meeting. Come in.' I started to go in, but the man held me back.

"'It's no place for you,' he said gruffly; 'it's women praying.'

"'But it says come in,' I said angrily; 'and I will go in.'

"I shook myself free, and darting in at the door went straight to the organ. They gave me a seat near by and the lady sang again and again, while I listened entranced at the beautiful words and music. By and by the lady stopped singing and another woman attempted to read the Bible. But I began to make a disturbance and cry out for more singing. At last the leader of the meeting got out of patience with me, and told some one to call the police.

"'No, no, wait till I pray for him,' exclaimed an old woman rising from her seat and bursting into tears as she came forward; 'it may be his only chance to be saved, let me pray once for him.'

"Kneeling beside me she poured forth such a fervent prayer it thrilled me through. The only words that I remember of it were, 'Oh, Lord, save him! Save him quick, for maybe Satan will never let him come again.'

"Then the spirit got hold of me, and conscious of some great and impending peril, I scarcely knew what, I, too, knelt, and cried out with all my might, 'Oh, Lord, save me, quick!'

"Suddenly a great light from heaven fell around me, and springing to my feet I shouted, 'I'm saved, I'm saved.'

"Since that hour, now five years ago, not one drop of alcoholic drink has passed over these lips of mine. Not one word of profanity has come through them. I no more sing in a concert saloon, but my voice may be always heard in the temperance gospel meeting."

The stranger came forward and sang two or three solos for us, then, taking his hat, he passed out and on to his train. But his testimony was the starting of a great revival. He seemed to have left a radiance behind him which penetrated the hearts of the hearers and broke through the coldness that had been over us. From that hour our work was successful, and many were brought into the fold.

Visiting Chicago a few months later I inquired out the president of the union which had held the gospel meeting and asked her concerning the stranger who had given such beautiful testimony of the Lord's working through them.

"Oh, I remember him," she said, plaintively, "we ran that gospel meeting a whole year, and he was our only convert. But go to Mr. H——, he will tell you the rest of his story."

To Mr. H—— I went and found him in his handsome office quite in the mood for story telling and more than willing to talk of this particular case.

"Yes, I remember the man," he said, as he leaned back in his revolving chair; "he is now one of my dearest friends. But I would not dare tell you his story if you did not believe in miracles. He came to me one morning about ten o'clock bringing a letter of introduction from the president of one of the suburban unions of Chicago. He was ragged but clean, having taken a bath at the Bethesda lodging house the night before. His face glowed with a surprising light as he came in. He was singing, 'I'm a child of the King, I'm a child of the King,' and before he reached my door I was touched by the beauty of his voice. The letter said he had been converted in the W. C. T. U. meeting the night before and now wished some respectable work to do. I was very busy. Work was crowding and I hated to spend the time to bother with him. Besides I had not much faith in sudden conversions in those days.

"'What do you want to do?' I asked sharply.

"'Whatever the Lord wants me to do,' he answered smiling into my face with childlike confidence.

"'What do you think you can do?' I asked again.

"'Anything the Lord gives me to do,' he answered and I saw it was no use questioning him. He was nothing but a child and some one else must judge for him.

"'The Lord, He send me to you,' he added, presently; 'you are His servant, eh? I do as you say,' and with that he leaned back in his chair and commenced singing again as if he had no responsibility in the matter.

"'Oh, dear,' I thought, 'what can I do with such a perfect child? I'd give three hundred dollars this minute to get rid of him this busy morning.'

"'Then give it,' said an inward voice, and before I realized what I was doing I had written out a check for that amount and handed it to him.

"'Take that,' I said in my sharp, business way, 'get it cashed, buy yourself a decent suit of clothes, then go up to the commercial college and tell them to teach you all they can about business for the money; and then get you a situation. Remember, it's the Lord's money and He only loans it to you. When you get to earning you must pay it back.'

"He had hardly gone out of the office before I was frightened at what I had done. I told myself a dozen times that he would only use the money to go on a long spree. I did not dare tell even my wife what a foolish thing I had done. Imagine my surprise one day some eighteen months later, when I heard a light step outside my office door, and that never to be-forgotten voice singing the old song, 'I'm a child of the King, I'm a child of the King.'

"I could hardly believe my senses when the same bright-faced man I had seen but once came in and paid me that three hundred dollars. He had done exactly as I had told him, went to the business college and learned book-keeping, securing a position before leaving college. His salary had been several times advanced, and in an incredibly short time he had saved up the money and come to pay me the debt. He is now manager of the business firm where he began work. He has married the proprietor's daughter, has a lovely home and bright little boy out in the suburbs.

"One peculiarity I've noticed in him. Every man that works for him is very soon converted and becomes a faithful, working Christian. I asked one of his young men the other day what his manager does or says that influences all his work people to be good.

"'Oh, he doesn't say anything,' the young man answered, 'he just shines.'

"Yet the women of the union that had charge of the gospel meeting where he was converted feel very much discouraged because he is the only convert they made during a whole year of effort.

"Well, he's been the means of leading a hundred or more to Christ already. Besides, he is destined to become a very influential Christian business man some day."

Chicago.

ARKANSAS.

DOINGS OF THE STATE CONVENTION.

Searcy has been aptly called the Athens of Arkansas. The name is not misapplied, for a semi-circle of colleges outlines her bright horizon and gives promise of an ever-increasing light and knowledge. Her bright, sparkling waters, bubbling fresh and free from nature's fountain, bring health to many who quaff the crystal drops. Her flowers bloom by cozy cottage and mansion home, and her people are like her flowers, her waters, her light and knowledge, and are full of the fragrance of hospitality. Thirteen years ago her doors were opened to receive the Arkansas W. C. T. U., and without superstitious fear of the fatal number, she bade them come again, and in numbers from nearly fifty strong they went, each delegate with her best dress and bonnet packed neatly away in her grip-sack alongside her annual report and her temperance literature. Worship, wit and wisdom went hand in hand with beauty, brains and bounty. The men of Searcy and surrounding towns gave abundant praise for the (to them unexpected) display of business-like dispatch that marked the deliberations of the convention. Reports and speeches were made, songs were sung, prayers were said, the noontide hour observed, and in most particulars, the convention followed the usual order of business of such gatherings. Among other appointments, the writer was made state reporter for THE UNION SIGNAL and The Woman's Chronicle.

At night the M. E. Church South was crowded to standing room. The pulpit platform was beautifully decorated with potted plants and trailing vines. A background of silken banners added brightness to the scene. A large picture of the Temperance Temple was draped with the stars and stripes; the silk flag of the W. C. T. U. of Arkansas occupied a conspicuous place on the platform. Papers were read by Mrs. J. W. Harris, of Searcy, Mrs. D. L. Austin, of Judsonia, Mrs. Julia Holmes, of Malvern, and Mrs. O. E. Blair, of Little Rock, closing with an original poem, dedicated to the work. Short talks were made by the ministers present, five in all. Good singing was furnished by the Baptist and Galloway choirs. Recitations were given by Miss Sallie Yarnell, teacher of elocution, Galloway College, Mrs. Blair and Miss Rhoda Thomas, of Little Rock. Mrs. T. A. Dunlap was unanimously re-elected president. Her annual address was crisp and bright. On motion, the union voted to invite Miss Willard to visit Arkansas during the present year. The discussion on Sunday observance during the World's Fair resulted in a decision to circulate a petition. The subject of scientific temperance instruction in our public schools was taken up and discussed. Pledges were distributed to the audiences by request of the men, and thus closed the fourteenth annual convention of Arkansas.

MRS. O. E. BLAIR,
State Reporter, Little Rock.

WISCONSIN.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. was held in Christ Presbyterian Church, Madison, June 7–10. The commodious and modern church was new, having been dedicated only two weeks before our convention, and the local union was exceedingly gratified at the cordial permission for its use.

The first session opened with a consecration meeting, led by Mrs. K. S. Lewis, of Hudson, our state evangelist. This meeting closed with a solo, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," sung by Mrs. A. W. Smith, of Madison, very sweetly and effectively, and a prayer by Mrs. E. M. Jordan, of Milton. State president, Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, was in the chair, and the roll-call of officers and superintendents of departments showed but six absent. The committee on credentials reported one hundred and forty-eight delegates present, the whole number of voting members being one hundred and seventy-six. The reports of the executive committee and the district presidents occupied the afternoon.

Article third of the by-laws was amended by adding to the clause "auxiliary L. T. L. and other auxiliary temperance societies shall be entitled to one adult delegate," the words "such delegate being a member of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U." The following article was also added to the by-laws: "The fiscal year of the state union shall close March 31." It was decided that the name of a subscriber to the state paper shall be taken from the list two months after her subscription expires, unless a request is made to continue it.

The Y department was made a branch, and Mrs. Maude R. Barkey, West Superior, was elected secretary of the same.

A good sized audience was present at the evening meeting and all joined in singing "America," led by the Presbyterian choir, and the music of the sweet-toned pipe organ. Rev. E. G. Updike, pastor of the Congregational church, Madison, offered prayer and Rev. W. A. McAtee, pastor of the Presbyterian church, welcomed the delegates in behalf of church and city, expressing his earnest sympathy with the W. C. T. U. and the great need for temperance work in Madison. Mrs. Fanny K. Earle, vice-president-at-large, responded in a witty and inspiring manner. Mrs. Maude R. Barkey, secretary of the Y branch, sang a solo, "Our Queen," Miss Frances E. Willard being the "queen." The words were arranged by Mrs. Barkey to the music of "I am King o'er the Land and the Sea." Mrs. Earle took the chair while the president read her annual address, a very able, interesting and suggestive paper. Miss Anna Littell, one of the Milwaukee Y's, gave a pleasant talk on the possibilities for good opened to young people through the Y. W. C. T. U.

The corresponding secretary showed, through her report, that work throughout the state was in a prosperous condition, notwithstanding the fact that an unusual amount of sickness had prevented many of the workers from taking as active a part as usual. The superintendents' report showed work accomplished, although in varying amounts, Extra time was given to the superintendents of L. T. L's and scientific temperance instruction, as we feel that only by educating the children along these lines can we hope for a better public opinion in the future. Mrs. Alice Ames, state treasurer, read a very detailed statement of the receipts and disbursements for the year, the amount received being $4,041.20. Disbursements, $3,413-.50. This does not include money sent for Temperance Temple and for many other purposes. The new financial plan under which we worked last year has proved itself a blessing; the treasury has never been so well balanced throughout the year nor so far from being "lean" at the end of our financial year as now. Mrs. Emma J. Curtis, our former corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ellen Lamb and Mrs. Helen R. Olin, were presented to the convention and warmly received.

The election of officers was preceded by a prayer for the divine guidance. Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, of Evansville, president of the first district, was elected president, Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse not being able to serve us again in this capacity on account of removal to another state. Mrs. Campbell accepted the office with some reluctance, and at her request prayer was offered that she might be strengthened and guided. Mrs. Morse, the retiring president, thanked the convention in a brief speech for the kindness and love which had been shown her during the eight years she has served as president. In response a rising vote of thanks for her services was given and Mrs. M. B. Miltimore, Janesville, offered a fervent prayer for the future welfare of our outgoing president. The other officers were re-elected.

A memorial service for our loved and promoted sisters was conducted by Mrs. H. A. Miner, Madison. Tears came to many eyes as the familiar names were read, calling up memories of those dear ones who had worked with us in the past. Mrs. M. A. Pilcher, Portage, read a valuable paper, "The Lessons of '91" which was voted to be deserving a place in the next issue of The Motor, the name by which our state paper, The W. C. T. U. State Work, will hereafter be known. Wednesday evening, Miss R. Anna Morris, of Des Moines, Iowa, associate superintendent of physical culture, National W. C. T. U., gave a very interesting lecture on that subject. Mrs. Helen M. Barker, South Dakota, lectured to a full house Thursday evening—her subject being, "The Irrepressible Conflict." Her masterly handling of the subject made herself and the cause many friends. Eight delegates to the National Convention were elected, being one more than we were entitled to last year, which shows that the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. "do move." The two children of the retiring president were introduced to the convention and a souvenir spoon presented to each by the recording secretary, Mrs. A. E. Strong, in behalf of the convention. The necessary sum to have the name of Mrs. Morse inscribed on a tablet in the Temperance Temple was quickly pledged by the district presidents.

Among the noticeable features of the convention were a solo and chorus entitled "Deliverance," the words written by Mrs. Fannie K. Earle, Lake Mills, the music by Mrs. E. Terry of the same place. Also a "Temperance Battle Song," words by Mr. Fred P. Hanchett, an honorary member of the Madison union, arranged for the music of "Marching Along." These and other selections were beautifully sung by our white ribbon sister, Mrs. Eleanor Terry, Lake Mills. Master Rex Welton recited "Wanted, a Boy," in an earnest, enthusiastic manner that made a great impression, and Miss Gussie Wood gave Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap's stirring poem, "Woman's Hour," on the last evening, it being preceded by the solo, "Not Ashamed of Jesus," sung by Mrs. W. S. Watrous, one of Madison's best singers.

Among the resolutions we find the following :—Protesting against licensing the liquor traffic, and extending it to other lands through the aid of government officials; against the sale of intoxicants at the Columbian Exposition and urging the unions to send protests to the Illinois legislature against any enactment to permit such sale; expressing thanks to those political parties which have prohibition and equal suffrage planks in their platform; in favor of the passage of the Sunday rest bill and against opening the Columbian Exposition on Sunday; protesting against the use of pictures of women on advertisements, and giving children prizes for gathering cigarette cards or tobacco tags; condemning lotteries, the use of tobacco and liquor candies, and the indiscriminate use of alcoholic stimulants by physicians in private practice and in public and private hospitals; favoring the early closing of stores, and urging merchants to furnish stools for their clerks; in favor of using the Bible in our public schools as a moral text-book, and teaching the English language in schools supported by public money; deprecating any fashion in dress which interferes with the highest physical development, and favoring the enactment of state laws requiring physical and industrial training to become part of the public school system; favoring the establishment of hospitals for inebriates; urging upon church members the necessity and importance of upholding by voice and vote the declarations of their respective religious denominations. A strong resolution was added on franchise.

An invitation for a boat ride on one of the beautiful lakes was given by the Madison union, but declined for want of time. The plan of work was most excellent and complete. Rev. H. A. Miner and Dr. Charles Hall offered prayer during the convention, many other influential citizens responding in helpful, pleasant remarks.

Mr. J. B. Smith, of Madison, was presented as fraternal delegate from the Prohibitionists of Wisconsin. During the session lunch was served in the church dining room by the ladies of the various churches. Handclasps and warm good-byes were given, and then we took up our work for another year, with the blessing of God and of love toward one another to sustain us.

MARIA F. HANCHETT,
State Reporter, Madison.

MRS. ALICE E. PETERS, of Columbus, Ohio, one of our leading white-ribboners, has been appointed a member of the National Woman's Suffrage executive board.

KENTUCKY.

DISTRICT AND COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

I am indebted to Mrs. R. V. Cutter, of Louisville Central W. C. T. U. for a report of the Jefferson county convention, which was held May 18, in Trinity M. E. church, Louisville. The attendance was very good and so was the lunch which was served by the ladies. Mrs. Margaret Watts, state superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, read an admirable paper on "Needs of Local Unions"; Mrs. Hobbs one on "Systematic Giving"; this was a very practical paper and if her advice is heeded there will be a stream of money poured into our empty exchequer. The work is sadly crippled for want of money, and those who sit over by the treasury, see, alas! a few casting in their mites, where the many might cast much did they only know how.

Mrs. Snodgrass gave a paper on "Mothers' Meetings" which has been pronounced "soul-stirring." Miss Emily Beebe gave a very gratifying kindergarten report, and Miss Gertrude Ferguson's memorial on Mrs. Geo. Mathews' death was beautifully written. The gem of the convention, the best of all the good things, was the address in the evening at Walnut street Baptist church, by Col. Geo. W. Bain. The house was full and the people delighted. The result of both convention and lecture was very gratifying. The unions have all received new additions and the old members have been revived and encouraged, and are resolved to do more and better work this coming year. Mrs. Sue M. Davis was re elected county president.

Fayette county's third annual convention was held at Bena church, near Doverail, May 21st, and entertained by Doverail union. Mrs. F. E. Beauchamp, county president, delivered the annual address. Miss Laura Clay read a very fine paper on "Woman's Status before the Law." Miss Latham (a young teacher) read a paper on "Scientific Temperance Instruction," Miss Phelps an essay on "What can we do?" Miss Susie Holey an essay on "Tobacco." The following resolution, which shows that these women are alive, very much so, on the subject of Home Rule, was adopted, "That, as in the family, children are by the order of nature under the mother as well as the father, so we think women should have equal control with men in the management of the public schools, and to this end we will endeavor to have women elected as district school trustees." Mrs. Beauchamp was re-elected president.

The seventh district convention was held at Paris, Ky., May 4. Eight unions were represented, and the proceedings were very instructive. Two physicians were present, and were made members of the convention, Dr. Julia Washburne, of Ohio, now practicing in Lexington, Ky., and Dr. Furber, of Newport. Mrs. Josephine K. Henry gave a very fine address, subject, "Prohibition." It was well received. Mrs. Beauchamp spoke to the children on Thursday evening, and organized an L. T. L. Quite a number of new members were added to the Paris union after the address by Mrs. Beauchamp. The resolutions adopted were pointed utterances on the important topics of temperance education, school and political suffrage, social purity and Sabbath observance.

Mrs. Daisy Carlock says in a recent letter, "We have an L. T. L. which is really a marvel, only a year and a half old, and it now numbers nearly two hundred, with ten full classes. They held a grand L. T. L. rally in May, consisting of exercises in chapel, followed by a parade with banners and flags headed by a drum corps." Their union (Bena), co-operating with the Prohibition Club, had Col. John Sobieski to give three lectures. His coming was a rare treat and much good was done. Mrs. Carlock has been untiring in her labor of love with the L. T. L., and when she goes to lecture in Illinois she will be much missed.

As state superintendent of Sabbath observance I beg of the Kentucky unions that they will be diligent in the petition work. Let each union write to its congressman, and cease not to pray that the gates may be closed on the Sabbath day, and the American women will be heard.

NELLIE SLOY,
State Reporter, Lebanon.

MISSOURI.

STIRRING CONVENTIONS.

Yea, verily! the girlhood of to-day will be the womanhood of this country a few years hence. We begin to look forward to better days when they will occupy places of responsibility beside their brothers in church and state. The relics of barbarism are dying, and we heartily rejoice when we see churches in their assemblies and conferences placing women where they justly belong.

The first district held their annual convention at Memphis. The attendance was large considering the weather. The Scripture lesson, David and Goliath, given at the opening of the convention by the president, Mrs. C. P. Dobyns, was very significant in its application. Every W. C. T. U. woman should faithfully use the means "at her hand" as David did his simple weapons to slay the giant. Reports showed good work all along the line. The departments of evangelistic work, communion wine and Sabbath observance were discussed at length and the president recommended mass-meetings and vigorous work for Sunday closing at the World's Fair. Shelbina, La-Belle and Kirksville have each been working to close the whisky drug stores. Much was said favoring medal contest work. Miss H. G. Moore said, "The way to interest others is to be interested ourselves. Speak no discouraging word of the work or workers. Believe in the work, work and trust." Mrs. Nuttie, of Lancaster, reports eighty-five children interested in L. T. L. work. The president asked if Mrs. Nuttie could instruct eighty-five children in her little city why it could not be done in all parts of the state. Mrs. Richcreek gave a chalk talk to the children, much to their delight. A beautiful banner, the gift of the district president to the union that gained the largest per cent of membership, was given to Mrs. Sue Page, of Canton. The topic of "Doing and Giving" was ably discussed. Miss Moore's talks and lectures were attractive features of this convention. The clergy and citizens did their part to make this convention a success.

The third district held their convention at McFall. The delegates, forty-seven in number, came through seas of water and amid great difficulties; verily "there is no Alps" for the women of the third district. Although this district has had no president or secretary for some time, the reports showed much work had been done. After the address of welcome and the response were given at the evening session, a gold medal contest was held. Miss Ida Miller won the medal on the recitation, "Courage to Act." Many subjects of interest were discussed. Mrs. F. Johns, of Kansas, gave an able address on "Woman Suffrage."

The fourth district held their eighth convention at Tarkio. There were thirty-one delegates and officers present. Dr. Adams led in the discussion on "Woman Suffrage" in a very able manner. Many of the superintendents failed to send in their reports. The people of Tarkio entertained the convention in a fitting manner and their kindness will long be remembered. One of the interesting features of this convention was the meeting given by the L. T. L. and "Helping Hand" of Tarkio, under the direction of Mrs. Finnie, their superintendent. Mrs. Sue De Haven gave an interesting chalk talk on "Cigarette Smoking." Under Mrs. M. Y. Rhoades' direction a "Cooper" medal contest was held. This was well attended and about fifty dollars were realized. At the close of this convention a stirring address was given by Rev. Casely, of Tarkio.

The Holt county convention was held at Craig, and was very instructive and interesting. The district president, Mrs. C. E. Howe, presided. Excellent music was furnished by the choir. The subjects were, "The Relation of the W. C. T. U. to the Keeley Cure," "The Temperance Temple," "Character Building;" and many of our departments were topics of interest to the convention. Rev. Roberts gave an able address. On Tuesday evening a reception was given at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Gwilliams which was attended by the delegates, visitors, local union and choir.

The fifth annual convention of the Johnson county W. C. T. U. was held at Holden. The attendance was good and seven unions were represented. Papers of rare merit were read by ladies Hedges, McNary and Stitt. A gold medal contest was held on Thursday evening and was largely attended; many could not gain admittance. Several of our leading departments were ably presented. Mrs. Alice Williams gave an address on Friday evening which delighted the large audience that greeted her. The music furnished by a select choir was very fine.

The Cass county convention was held at Raymore. The district president, Miss Harrison, all the county officers and delegates from every union save one, were in attend ance. The program consisted of choice music, recitations and discussions which was fittingly carried out. A fine lecture was given by Mrs. Robinson, of Lamar. An excellent plan of work was outlined for future effort, with two conventions a year instead of one.

St. Charles county was organized by district president, Mrs. Millie M. Lewis, of Paynesville. A rousing county convention was held and officers elected. A gold medal contest was given by the young ladies to an overflowing house. Thus the educational work is going on, despite the opposition we encounter, and thus it will continue,

Mrs. J. H. Clark has just completed a twenty-eight days, tour through the southern counties in the eleventh district with marked success. She traveled, after leaving the railroad, over rocky ranges, pleasant ridges and through delightful valleys by many kinds of conveyances, through all kinds of weather, never missing an appointment, and holding twenty nine public and day meetings. Sunday and day schools were visited and L. T. L's were organized. Seventeen subscribers were secured for THE UNION SIGNAL and several for The Home Guard and other temperance papers. She found some disheartened workers, but others were on the alert and zealous. Among the latter was the president of Vienna union, Mrs. F. M. Terwilligar, aged sixty-five years, who walks in from the country, a distance of two miles, to attend the weekly meetings. Such devotion to our cause is not found everywhere in the Ozark hills or in towns more highly favored. A union of twenty-three members was organized at Mt. Grove; nine honorary members are also among their number. Mrs. Clark will attend the district convention which will be held at Lebanon soon.

Verdella union has a liberal band of workers, who take stock in The Home Guard, send money to the Russian sufferers, and to the Temperance Temple. They supply Young Crusader supplements for two Sunday-schools, gave a supper and sold books which netted them seventy-nine dollars. Twenty copies of "Glimpses of Fifty Years" were sold. This union has a loan library.

The new union at Nashville, self-organized a few weeks ago, numbers twenty-three regular and ten honorary members. Mrs. M. L. Wells gave nine able addresses in St. Louis a short time ago. On Sunday morning she spoke to the soldiers at Jefferson barracks. They were delighted with her and invited her to come again. In the afternoon she gave an address under the auspices of the Keystone Y, and in the evening spoke in the Clifton Heights M. E. Church. The young people were charmed with her address and a Y was organized. At one of her meetings the devotions were ably conducted by Dr. Caradine. Mrs. Wells gave instruction regarding schools of methods, and her experience in this work while in the South as related by her, was listened to with deep interest.

Flower Mission day was observed by the Central W. C. T. U. this year giving plants and flowers to the children in the Mission L. T. L. This was indeed a day of pleasure both for the children and those who kindly remembered them. The St. Louis district have engaged Mrs. Clara H. Smith for the third week in November to give a course of lectures on physical culture. St. Joseph daily papers gladly give space in their columns to the W. C. T. U., and press work is being pushed with a vim. The St. Joseph union is doing much good work. The members say the holding of our state convention there last year has greatly benefited them.

The Y's recently organized at Linney are doing bravely, and the children are progressing. A colored union of twenty members is now organized, and should be encouraged in its work. Miss Josephine Kelley, of Independence, has a column in a Mormon paper which has a large circulation. A gospel temperance revival meeting was a five days' meeting, which rejoiced the good people of Oceola, Rev. William Welty conducting the services. The W. C. T. U. is working hard to keep out a saloon which is trying to enter.

Miss Carrie L. Carter spent nineteen days in the seventh district. Three new Y's and one L. T. L. were organized. Several new members were added to the old unions. J. L. Parsons, of St. Louis, gave one of the most able addresses ever delivered in Paynesville on "Woman, Pagan and Christian." He paid the highest tribute to the W. C. T. U. work and workers.

The members of the St. Charles W. C. T. U. are sending free to each of their pastors, twelve in number, a copy of The Home Guard. Wellsville is arranging now for its eighth medal contest. A very interesting district convention was held at Montgomery City by the seventh district W. C. T. U. All the counties were represented. The delegates were welcomed to the city by the mayor, the I. O. G. T., the clergy and the W. C. T. U. Many departments of work will be vigorously pushed the coming year. This district is endeavoring to hold medal contests enough so that there can be a grand gold medal contest at our state convention which meets in Springfield in September.

Fairplay has just organized an L. T. L. The Bolivar W. C. T. U. offered a prize to the student attending the Southwest Baptist College who would deliver the best original oration on "The Needs of Prohibition and its Benefits," at the commencement exercises. The day of the contest the ladies of the W. C. T. U. decorated the college chapel beautifully with cut flowers and white roses. The members of the faculty, the school board, ushers and contestants each wore a buttonhole bouquet consisting of a white and yellow rose, tied with a white ribbon. Many reported this the most interesting entertainment during this year's commencement.

MRS. MARY E. JONES,
State Reporter, Humansville.

EASTERN WASHINGTON.

THE GATHERING OF THE CLANS.

The tenth annual convention of East Washington was held in Davenport, May 11 and 12, with meetings of the executive committee on the 10th and 14th. The five general officers were present, six superintendents, one delegate-at large from Whitman county and delegates regular or visiting, from nineteen unions, representing seven counties of our part of the state, "east of the Cascades." Considering the fact that of our fourteen counties about half are very sparsely settled, and Davenport is one of our northernmost unions, we felt that thirty-nine was a fair number. A cold, rainy day preceded the meetings which doubtless kept a number of women at home.

The corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. Penn, reported more unions organized during the year than any previous year. The treasurer, Mrs. L. R. Berry, reported $951 raised during the year. A loan of $300 had also been secured by Mrs. Berry from a friend at low rates. This had been done to take advantage of the president's offer to deduct $100 from her bills against the state for expenses and to secure cash terms for printing minutes. The treasurer also stated that at the beginning of last year the indebtedness was more than $600 and is now reduced to $300.

The convention evening was one of great interest. Mrs. Jennie L. Green, recording secretary, presided. The Davenport musical club furnished fine music, including a welcome song, arranged by Rev. Benedum, pastor of M. E. church of Davenport. Rev. J. A. McArthur, pastor of the Presbyterian church where the meetings were held, and husband of our Mrs. Rena G. McArthur, welcomed the convention in an earnest speech in behalf of the citizens of the city, and Miss Carrie D. Green, our promising young assistant recording secretary, gave the address of welcome in behalf of the union. Mrs. Clara K. Bowers, from Goldendale, responded wittily, and requested Rev. McArthur to allow her to tie the white ribbon on his coat. As Mr. Mc A. is one of the most radical prohibitionists in the synod this created no little merriment. Perhaps not many ministers would be willing to work till midnight to insure the preparation of the church for a woman's temperance convention. This one good brother did.

The president's annual address started out with Professor Blackie's working motto, "All things noble are difficult to do," and touched upon the increase of crime; statistics of liquor traffic; the low public sentiment of the north Pacific coast; the gratifying fact that the churches in their resolutions at ministerial meetings are more pronounced; departments, new and old; "woman's enlarging sphere"; reports of municipal suffrage in Kansas, and school suffrage in Illinois. The W. T. P. A., the Temple, the World's Petition, and the Million Voters' Pledge were not forgotten. The president recommended the establishment of a White Shield Home at Spokane; a state paper; a semi-annual convention to be held at a central point in September, to arrange for petition work, as the state legislature will meet this winter. This convention was invited to meet at Oaksdale, and the time of annual convention was changed to September.

The committee on resolutions consisted of Mesdames Roberts, of Conlee City, Wiseman, of Colfax, Bowers, of Goldendale, Potter, of Garfield, and Bowen, of Spokane. The resolutions were radical on all important issues, not forgetting the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday, prohibition of liquor at that great gathering, and a resolve that the deadly cigarette should be prohibited in manufacture and sale. Mrs. Delle C. H. Cox, of Oregon, National organizer, recited a poem, "Found Dead," on convention evening, and addressed a mass-meeting on Thursday evening, subject, "What shall we do with the Drink Traffic?" Mrs. Cox was invited to remain for the evening following but subsequent engagements prevented. She has given universal satisfaction as a speaker wherever she has visited in East Washington. Mrs. Cox also led a praise and thankoffering service on Wednesday afternoon, at which time fourteen dollars and fifty cents was raised.

Mrs. Amanda Strong, now of Huntsville, led the memorial services on Thursday morning for those who have left us during the year. I omitted to say that we followed Miss Greenwood's suggestion as far as practicable in a short convention, and held a half hour's prayer-meeting at the close of Wednesday morning's session, led by Mrs. Cheatham, of Pullman.

Both the corresponding secretary and president declined to serve during the coming year.

The new officers are: President, Mrs. A. C. Singer, now of Spokane, whom our National speakers will remember as the efficient president of Ritzville union, in former years; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Amanda Strong, formerly of Walla Walla, now of Huntsville, for some years superintendent of Sunday-school work. Both these ladies are wives of ministers; the husband of the president is Rev. E. J. Singer, Sunday-school missionary for the Congregational church, and Mrs. Strong, corresponding secretary, is the wife of Rev. D. G. Strong, presiding elder of the Walla Walla district, well known on the coast. The other officers were re-elected.

Mrs. A. M. Oliver, chairman of committee of entertainment, the members of the Davenport union, and the people generally, did all in their power to make the convention a success. The Davenport union printed the programs, and assumed other expenses.

Mrs. Penn, the former corresponding secretary, accepted the department of young woman's work in place of Mrs. C. B. Schon, who wished to be relieved, and your correspondent was given the honorary presidency, and Dean Wright's course of evangelistic study.

Space will not permit mention of reports of superintendents nor of all those who served on committees and helped in many ways to make the convention a success.

From the annual address I quote these closing words of my report: "Woman's distinctive work is of utmost importance NOW. When all ministerial boards admit women, when all the colleges open their doors to us and we can vote on all questions in every land, we may then feel, perhaps, that the need for woman's distinctive religious and philanthropic work is not so great as now."

The delegates to the National convention are, Mrs. A. P. Crystal, Conlee City; Mrs. Clara K. Bowers, Goldendale.

The items as follows are sent to me by the state secretaries: Members reported, 737; honorary, 265; Y's, 21 (reported); honorary, 20. There are many more, but they fail to report, it seems. Juvenile, 8 L. T. L.'s; 584 members; 42 honorary; new unions, Dixie, Starbuck; Dayton reorganized with 69; Riverside organized by Mrs. D. C. H. Cox, with 52 members, president, Mrs A. C. Hull. Our active membership must be about 800.

LUCY A. SWITZER,
State Reporter, Cheney.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

EXCELLENT REPORTS.

The quarterly meeting of the district union was held June 3d at Wesley M. E. church; the corresponding secretary's report showed that there had been five mass-meetings held, two in the interests of the children, one for Sabbath observance and two to promote alley evangelization. Two unions have been organized. A committee addressed a letter to the district commissioners, urgently pleading that the weight of their influence might go toward locating the girls' reform school upon grounds separate, distinct and entirely remote from those now occupied by the boys.

This spring the union tendered a reception and tea to their friends generally at Hotel Fredonia; the parlors were tastefully decorated with palms, potted plants and cut flowers. Rosalie Bartlett, a member of one of the Loyal Temperance Legions, gave some attractive recitations. Lemonade and coffee were dispensed, and the occasion was very pleasant. The unions reported good work done. We are honored in having Mrs. G. R. Alden (Pansy) as one of our local presidents.

The last union organized this quarter reports active members twenty-six, honorary, eighteen, increase, eighteen; five business meetings, one social, two children's meetings, seventy-three signers to the pledge, and these folks have only been at work six weeks.

The treasurer's report showed receipts, $453.32, and disbursements $303.75. We are grieved to record the death of Mrs. L. E. Deane, who exchanged labor for reward, March 25; we have lost an earnest advocate. She was formerly a district superintendent, and it could be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

A new feature in our work is that of the alley missions, two of which have been dedicated recently; the police are making less arrests already in Willow Tree and Glick's alley. I would like at this point to give a word of experience (as the Methodists say). I had charge of a children's meeting in one of these alleys on a recent Sabbath afternoon. Talk of "Darkest Africa," it is in our very midst, and we knew it not. I taught the same lesson that had been given in our Sabbath-schools in the morning, "Daniel and his companions." I do not know the result of the teaching on the benighted ones, but as I walked home it seemed that I was lifted out of the body, so great was the blessing that came to my soul.

The superintendent of juvenile work reported that three Loyal Temperance Legions had been organized, three hundred and ten members added to the ranks, and two public meetings held. At the first, Pansy read a most telling story. The second meeting was addressed by Mr. Butler, of Iowa; the children took part in both of these meetings, which added greatly to the interest.

The superintendent temperance literature reports 52,000 pages distributed, and 3,400 copies Young Crusader supplement used in Sabbath schools, May 22. The superintendent social purity reported that two of the girls who had been inmates of our home had died, leaving the assurance that they were Christians. She has made five visits to the hospital, and distributed considerable literature. The prison and jail works superintendent tells of twelve visits; papers distributed, 1,444; magazines, 26; leaflets, 50; envelopes and papers, 18. A young woman has distributed 1,000 pages of literature to the woman's workhouse; 300 Easter cards with Scripture texts were distributed at the jail and almshouse. The hospitals have been visited six times.

The flower mission workers have been allowed to sing and pray in hospital wards; one old lady rejoiced that she was permitted to hear the voice of prayer once more. The patients in the freedmen's hospital are particularly grateful for any attention shown them. The Scripture texts do incalculable good. Three hundred and ninety-six bouquets were given out (this does not include flower mission day). Fifteen visits to hospitals have been made and ten poor families supplied with clothing. Literature has been distributed to the amount of 4,538 pages. The mission visits fourteen different institutions. The superintendent was much helped by THE UNION SIGNAL of recent date, that gave such full accounts of this department. In scientific temperance instruction much work has been accomplished by visiting the schools, superintendents and principals. Their attention was called to the importance of this study in the new schedule for the coming year. An arrest of thought has been gained and seed sown.

The Sabbath observance report told of a hearing before the house committee on Columbian Exposition, which gave its time for three consecutive days, listening to arguments for and against Sunday closing. Petitions have been prepared and deposited with Congress representing more than 347,828. A mass-meeting was held, April 4th, at which Rev. M. M. George, of New York, and others, advocated with great power the Sunday closing. The same day the unanimous consent was received on the subject from the First Congregational Sabbath school. A protest was sent to the proprietor of the barge who runs to and from Glen Echo on the Sabbath, also desiring commissioners to use their power to prevent the ice cream venders from selling on the Sabbath, also to prohibit the base ball games in the vicinity of St. Aloysius church. Twenty-three letters and postals have been sent with pledges and petition heads, hundreds of pages of literature have been distributed by this superintendent.

The report of Hope and Help mission for past five months is as follows: Women received, 93; meals given, 4,540; lodgings given, 1,605; callers, 544; sent to hospitals, 13; to their homes 4; services, places found, 38; articles of clothing made, 116; given away, 190; services held, 45; conversions, 8.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union filed with the commissioners a series of resolutions urging the commissioners to make no concessions whereby any boys or young men under twenty-one years of age will be permitted to enter pool rooms.

The Y. W. C. T. U. of Metropolitan M. E. Church, gave a reception not long ago at Hotel Fredonia. Miss Helen Hurst, daughter of Bishop Hurst, presided and welcomed the guests, assisted by Miss Cora Thomas, district superintendent Y's. Boatswain Langston, of the U. S. receiving ship Dale, decorated the parlors most handsomely with flags, and his daughter made a bright and interesting speech.

MISS L. C. KESSLER,
District Reporter, Washington.

OHIO.

ON AND ON.

. . . . . Heights of duty
Catch and hold the sunshine long.

Ex-Justice Strong's amendment to the World's Fair appropriation bill should receive the prompt and hearty indorsement of every good man and woman in this republic. Now is the time to speak out so as to catch the ear of Congress! Ohio white-ribboners in local, county and district conventions are "resolving" against "Sunday opening of the Columbian Exposition." A strong and growing sentiment is ripe throughout the state, that the very foundations of this government will be strengthened or shaken by the "for" or "against" of the World's Columbian Commission on this question.

I picked up a paper yesterday, our Ohio W. C. T. U. Messenger, so ably edited by Mrs. H. E. Hammond, Cleveland, and read the following statement: "There are over 10,000 saloons in Ohio, an increase of 124 for the six months ending January 1, 1892. The liquor tax collections are $1,324,835.81 including an increase of $22,383-.81 over the same six months last year." Surely our regulation law-makers have not struck their ax at the root of the tree!

Though a little late in reaching me, I am sure a few notes from the Jennie Casseday mission, of Cincinnati Central W. C. T. U. will be timely. This was started two years ago, by placing half a dozen children back to back on an ironing board (belonging to one of the dear Shanty-boat-town women), as the beginning of a Sabbath-school. At that time gospel temperance meetings were being held under the willows on the banks of the river, a little later in a tent, and finally in their new and convenient house of worship. From the first there has been a strengthening of Christian principle, a continuous growth of spiritual power. A dear sister writes: "Our Sabbath-school now numbers some sixty scholars, old and young, and is superintended by Mrs. Mary Bowen, of the Glen Home. But I want to tell you of our Easter Sabbath. A majestic quietness seemed to reign; the stillness lingered as the people from Shanty-boat-town assembled at half past two o'clock to render praise and thanksging to their risen Lord. Responsive scripture reading, interspersed with anthems of praise by the choir of the Friend's church, made this Sabbath one long to be remembered. One hundred and nine assembled to participate in these exercises, who but a few months ago sat in darkness, through which the light of hope now shines. The blind have received their sight, the lame walk, and we, the Central W. C. T. U., rejoice, as this, our child, lays aside its swaddling bands and walks forth—so much stronger to-day than on last Easter morn!"

"What ought to be done, can be done." "The palm is not without the dust of labor," were the stalwart mottoes on the program of the Trumbull county semi annual convention recently held at Champion. This county has eighteen unions with a membership of three hundred. Nine departments were reported. Seven L. T. L.'s have been organized; that of West Farmington numbers sixty-one, has a handsome banner and is taking up Band of Mercy work. Greetings were given by Miss M. S. Rutan and Rev. Stephens, the latter wise, witty and to the point. Mrs. Mary Shepherd responded. "What to do and how to do it," was the theme of a fine paper by Mrs. Traxell of Bristolville. The able address by Rev. W. H. Shultz, was much appreciated, subject, "How the W. C. T. U. helps the church." The church was beautified with bunting, banners, mottoes and flowers. Elegant refreshments were served both noon and evening by the Champion ladies in the charming home of Mrs. McComb. Good music throughout. A medal contest followed adjournment

Miss C. S. Burnett, the county president, and preceptress of Farmington college, is one of the best W. C. T. U. workers in the state. One month of her summer vacation will be spent in filling lecture engagements in Cattaraugus county, New York, the remaining weeks in Geauga and Columbiana counties, Ohio.

The eighth district convention was entertained by the good people ot New Comerstown. Our state president, Mrs. Monroe, was present and delivered an inspiring address. Miss Emma Goodwill's lecture on "Vivisection" was very interesting and instructive. Mrs. S. J. Baden was elected president, and Mrs. Maud Johnson corresponding secretary; both ladies reside at New Concord. Excellent work is being done in this district.

Ohio Y's are "coming right along." New societies are reported at Covington, Piqua, Sidney and Berea. The Wooster Y's gave their first parlor meeting at their new headquarters in Downing Block. A short, spicy program, including Y songs and selections by the Prohibition quartet was followed by a delightful social during which several new members were obtained.

The third annual Y conference of northeastern Ohio recently held at Cleveland was notably earnest, interesting and enthusiastic. Among the W. C. T. U.'s who proffered helpful suggestions and words of cheer were Mrs. S. M. Perkins, editor of A True Republican, and Mrs. H. E. Hammond, of The Messenger. One of the many good "moves" of the conference was a resolution disfavoring the trailing street dress skirts. This resolution was commended in the city papers.

W C. T. U. day at Lakeside August 2d will be attractive. Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman has been selected as speaker. Children's meeting, in charge of the state superintendents, Mrs. H. B. Miner and Mrs. A. F. Brown, good music, hosts of representative women from various reform fields, are but hints of the good things in store for us.

Defiance union honored itself and guests by the reception tendered Mrs. L. H. Richards, superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, together with the teachers and the school board. Each guest was presented with a beautiful card, on which was a white rose and the state temperance law neatly printed.

The revision of our W. C. T. U. state constitution is engaging the attention of an efficient committee, Mrs. F. M. Leiter, chairman. We trust the new version will prove entirely satisfactory. Free-will offering day, June 17, was generally observed. A fine program for the service was published in the April Messenger. The battle for social purity has been unceasingly waged during the year. So arduous has been the efforts of the state superintendent that she is compelled to rest awhile. She has been granted a three-months' vacation, but the work does not stop, even though hands are sometimes folded for awhile. Organization goes forward—five new unions just reported.

BUCKEYE BITS.

Trumbull county has taken its eighth gold medal.

Our beloved Mother Stewart is suffering with sciatic rheumatism.

Defiance union has paid $1,070 besides the insurance on their headquarters.

Fifty five Ohio cities come under the law providing compulsory physical education in the public schools.

Green county W. C. T. U. at its last convention resolved that "hereafter we will carry our own lunch to conventions." Amen!

HANNAH A. FOSTER,
State Reporter, Berea.

Official Communications.

SUNDAY CLOSING AND OUR DUTY.

We have need of the patience of hope and the courage of faith. Up to the present writing neither House of Congress has acted on the general appropriation for the World's Fair, the preliminary skirmish in the House simply resulting in a provision that the governmental exhibit shall be closed on Sunday. It may be deemed politic to leave the $5,000,000 appropriation bill with its related troublesome questions till after the fall political campaign, yet it may be taken up at any time.

In the meantime petitions, and especially letters to members, are quite as important as they have ever been, and only those should be excused from working that have already done all they can. We regret to see that pending the settlement of this question, plans are still being pushed for Congress, hotel endeavor and various religious exhibits for model Sunday-school buildings and appliances. Friends, will it not be wise to condition giving our funds for the Sabbath-school project or any other, till this Sabbath question is settled? Should we not first "Be sure we are right," according to the old motto, before we "go ahead" in any plans for the Fair?

Mother Wallace long ago urged, as have some of our state presidents, that the W. C. T. U. should not patronize the Fair unless it respects the Sabbath and state law. Mrs. Henry in THE UNION SIGNAL of May 26, while rightly maintaining that white-ribboners can go anywhere to do good to others, and should do so, says: "Going for pleasure and sightseeing would be the greatest hypocrisy." It will be to many of us one of the greatest privations of our lives, and we may well pray that Christianity may not be so discriminated against as to shut out the conscientious from its unprecedented opportunities for education and enjoyment.

It is not strange when so many, even among the ministry, travel on Sabbath without hesitation, and others advocate Sunday opening, that managers have small fears of alienating patronage by their course. Governor-General Palmer and the directory justify the opening purely on the plea that five and a half million dollars can be made by it. The arguments used by others are mainly two, that the working classes need such opportunity, and that sightseers would better go there than to saloons. The latter is insulting to the sober, intelligent people who would throng our Mecca six days in the week, whatever may be said of those who break the Sabbath.

They seem ignorant, too, of the plans on foot to provide other holidays for the daily toilers, and that the number of working people favored by Sunday opening, even if they generally desired it, is far less than the number, who, on the grounds, the railroads, the street cars, etc., would thereby be forced to lose their rest day. I think none of us realize how far-reaching and disastrous will be the result of such a national stride toward irreligion.

"What more can we do?" is constantly asked. My sisters, pray more. We haven't begun to test the Lord's readiness to answer faith-filled, united prayer. And we must exert a more decided influence for Sabbath keeping in our communities, privately and through public meetings. When Israel turned their backs on the enemy, the Lord said to Joshua, "Get thee up. Israel hath sinned, they have even taken of the devoted thing and have put it even among their own stuff." So have many Christians taken the sacred day as their own and scarcely know it.

Thirty thousand leaflets, "Shall the Gates be Opened?" have been scattered and another edition may yet be demanded. We cannot do better than circulate our Sabbath pledge and get signers. Many unions have done nothing with this. The cards containing pledge and reasons therefore, are sold at ten cents a hundred—the actual cost. Address

MRS. J. C. BATEHAM,
26 Charlotte St., Asheville, N. C.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

RESOLUTIONS in memoriam were passed by the Feesburgh, O., W. C. T. U. on the death of a valued member, Mrs. Sophia Kendal, June 7.

MAJOR AND MRS. SCOTT have been working in California to excellent acceptance. We think this is the report wherever these good friends go.

A W. C. T. U. county convention met at Riverton, Neb., June 15, and so helpful were the sessions that all united in saying it was indeed "a day well spent."

THE Y's of Dover, N. H., have raised about fifty dollars from entertainments this spring. A strawberry festival was held at which a temperance farce was successfully given.

TEMPLE RECEIPTS.

Arkansas—N. Smith: Mrs. McElvain, $1; Eureka Springs: Mrs. J. C. Frake, $4.30.

California—Santa Ana: Baby Band, $3.10; Mrs. B. J. Martin, $1; San Jose: Mrs. S. E. Batter, $5: Alameda: Helen McLean, $3.65; San Francisco: Mrs. A. M. Huntley, $100; Mrs. D. J. Spencer, $5; Waukenia; Mrs. P. E. Hoffman, $3.15.

Carolina (North)—Olive: Mrs. L. A. E. Stikeleather, 50 cents; Statesville: Mrs. Billingsley, 50 cents.

Carolina (South)—Johnston: L. T. L., $4.67.

Colorado—Falcon: Mrs. L. A. Thomas, $3.65; Mead Thomas, $1; Boulder: M. M. Campbell, $1; State Union, $17.80; Denver: Central W. C. T. U., $12.63; Boulder: Y. W. C. T. U., $5.33; Greeley: W. C. T. U., $12.47.

Connecticut—Windham: W. C. T. U., $9.25; Stratford: Mrs. Geo. Bartram, $3; Vernon Center: W. C. T. U., $3.

Dakota (South)—Spearville: W. C. T. U., $3; Roscoe: Mrs. W. G. Bickelhaupt, $3.65; Brookings: W. C. T. U., 27cts; Mrs. C. S. Harza, $1; Miner; Mrs. V. Tanzy, $3.65; Clark: W. C. T. U., $2.70.

Dakota (North)—Minto: W. C. T. U., $50.

District of Columbia—Washington: M. J. N. McLean, $5.

Delaware—South Wilmington: L. T. L., $1.

Florida—Sanford: Emma Taber Thorp, $25; St. Augustine: Y. W. C. T. U., $15; De Funiak: Mrs. R. F. Moore, $1; Melbourne: Ethel Stout, $50.

Illinois—Wheaton: First Congregational Church Sabbath-school, $6.25; Humboldt Park: W. C. T. U., $7.32; Mendon: Mrs. E. Chittenden, $1; Mrs. Samuel Chittenden, $1; Mrs. Caroline Austin, $5; W. C. T. U., $7.70; Monticello: W. C. T. U., $2.38; Prophetstown: Y. W. C. T. U., 50 cts; Belvidere: W. C. T. U., $48.30, W. C. T. U., $3.65; Chicago: David B. Carse, $100; Mrs. H. R. Smith, 70 cts., Mrs. R. C. Dick, $5; Mrs. J. H. Brandt, $5; Miss Jennie Rogers, $4; Mrs. E. L. Ploss, $5; A Friend, $100; Englewood: Rev. Florence Kolloch, $5; West Peotone: W. C. T. U., $26.60; Grand Ridge: W. C. T. U., $6.50; Edinburg: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; Amboy: W. C. T. U., $50; Irving Park: W. C. T. U., $20; Seneca: W. C. T. U., $9.45; Elmwood: W. C. T. U., $5; Grand Crossing: Y. W. C. T. U., $20; Peoria: $25; Moline: Mrs. Eells, $2.05: Oneida: W. C. T. U., $6; Middle Creek: Miss M. M. Cravens, $1.85; Coral: W. C. T. U., $10.75; Astoria: Mrs. Julia A. Lemon, $5; Morris: Arthur, Anna and Edna Woods, $2; Mary Hau, 20 cts.; Mazon: Mrs. S. H. Davey, $100; W. C. T. U., $3.65; Evanston: W. C. T. U., $7.83; Griggsville: W. C. T. U., $67; J. D. Philbrick, $100; La Salle: Fannie Blanchard, $1.10; Sumner: W. C. T. U., $10; Palatine: V. A. Lambert, $5.

Indiana—La Porte: Malinda Ridgway, $100; M. N. Morrison, $51; Michigan City: Minnie Leeds, $1; Richmond: M. F. Thomas W. C. T. U., $50; Brazil: $20; Wolcott: Anna Nichols, $1; State W. C. T. U., $100; Elkhart: Alice Parker, $1.

Indian Ter—Afton: W. C. T. U., $5.

Iowa—Franklin Grove: Rob't W. Ramsdell, $1; Manchester: Ida W. Kaye, $3; Rock Valley: W. C. T. U., $60; Corning: W. C. T. U., $5; Washington: N. F. Eckels, $3.65; State W. C. T. U., $100; New Providence: M. D. Andrews, $1; Prairieville: W. C. T. U., $1; Stanwood: W. C. T. U., $12; Forest City: Per Mrs. Rust, $4.54.

Kansas—Halstead: Mrs. Floyd Morris, $3.65; Keelville: M. J. Goodrich, $3.65; Burlington: Mrs. L. P. Heddens, $4; Weir City: Carrie Beaty, $1; Burlingame: W. C. T. U., $5; Granada: Mrs. M. J. Penn, $2.50.

Kentucky—Louisville: Mrs. S. J. Lundy, $25; Berea: W. C. T. U. and L. T. L., $10.41.

Louisiana—Sulphur City: Miss S. J. Henning, $3.65; New Orleans: Mrs. C. E. Merrick, $5.

Massachusetts—Holyoke: Y. W. C. T. U., $12.25; Mrs. M. Phillips, $2.15; Yarmouth: W. C. T. U., $5.50; Norwell: M. L. Littlefield, $3.65; Amesbury: Mrs. S. A. Wilde, $5; Springfield: W. C. T. U., Armory Hill, $8.40; Lenox: Mabel Roberts, $4; Whitman: W. C. T. U., $3.65; Beachmont: Agnes Babcock, $5; Chicopee Falls: Mrs. A. C. Russell, $3.75; West Roxbury and Roslindale: W. C. T. U., $26.54; Reading: Carrie Todd, per W. C. T. U., $1.50; Blackstone: W. C. T. U., $50; West Cummington: W. C. T. U., $1; South Royalston: L. T. L., $4.58.

Maine—Calais: O. B. Rideout, O. B. Rideout, Jr., Mrs. Mary Rideout, $1 each; State W. C. T. U., $100; Orono: W. C. T. U., $15.

Maryland—Baltimore: Mrs. Baldwin, $25; Mt. Lake Park: Miss Swan, $25; Barton: Rev. Mrs. Weeck, $3.65; Snow Hill: Mrs. Esther Townsend, $4; Elkton: Mrs. Emily Frazer, $3.65.

Michigan—Vermontville: W. C. T. U., $10; Ovid: W. C. T. U., $5: Fenton: W. C. T. U., $14; Battle Creek: W. C. T. U., $5; Saranac: W. C. T. U., $3; Centerville: Baptist Loyalist Society, $6.72; Saginaw: Kindergarten, per Kate Bassett, $2.12; St. Louis: W. C. T. U., $11.23; Owosso: W. C. T. U., $10; Belding: S. S. and W. C. T. U., $4.55; W. C. T. U. Ninth District, $67.60; Dutton: Union Sunday-school, $1.30; Ionia: Mrs. H. M. Wilson, $100: Brighton: W. C. T. U., $5.50; Flat Rock: L. T. L., $1.

Minnesota—Winnebago City: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; Excelsior: W. C. T. U., $3.50; St. James: W. C. T. U., $25; Glenwood: Mrs. Phebe Elsey, $4; Fosston: Mrs. L. Lohn, $3.65. Winona: Harry Nagler, $1; Minneapolis: Lucy Hayes W. C. T. U., $10; Eighth Ward W. C. T. U., $7.45; Dover: W. C. T. U., $6.25; Byron: W. C. T. U., $5; Rose Creek: W. C. T. U., $13.50; Litchfield: W. C. T. U., $2; Argyle: W. C. T. U., $10; Princeton: W. C. T. U., $2.50; St. James: W. C. T. U., 25 cts.; Alma City: W. C. T. U., $3.75.

Missouri—Sumner: W. C. T. U., $4; Braymer: Mrs. L. D. Moffut, $1; Wright City: W. C. T. U., $5; Dudenville: Mary H. Mills, $3.65; Eight Mile: David Sharp, $12.25; Ashburn: Annie McGee, $1.07; Kansas City: W. C. T. U., $8.

Nebraska—Wellfleet: W. C. T. U., $13.33; Schuyler: Mrs. Mary Shultz, $400; Third District W. C. T. U., $35.25; Aurora: W. C. T. U., $2; Havelock: J H. Prickett, $5.

New Hampshire—Dover: W. C. T. U., $68; Wentworth: Ellen Dowse, $5.

New Jersey—Newark: Mena Sutphen, $4; Ocean Grove: Y. W. C. T. U., $6; Clayton: W. C. T. U., $1; West Bergin: W. C. T. U., $2; L. T. L., $5; Millville: W. C. T. U., No. 2, $25; Moorestown: W. C. T. U., $47; Y. W. C. T. U., $27.50.

New York—Auburn: Central W. C. T. U., $1; Jamestown: W. C. T. U., $40; Mt. Kisco: W. C. T. U., $50; Croton: W. C. T. U., $5; Batavia: Rose Koomer, $1.60; Steuben: Mrs. C. Merrick, $1; Hermitage: W. C. T. U., $3.30; Gelboa: Mrs. D. S. Stevens, $3.65; Wellsville: Grace Frisbie, $3.65; Prattsburg: W. C. T. U., $5; South Perinton: W. C. T. U., $32; Sherwood: Katie Heffernan, $1; Mecklenburgh: M. E. Peloubet, $5; Ransomville: Mrs. Mary G. Crosby, $12; N. Ithaca: Emerilla Buckman, $1; Tonawanda: Mrs. Hittel, $5; Sharon Springs: W. C. T. U., $25; Limestone: Adelaide Wynn, $6.50; Chittenango: E. L. Brown, $5; Scipioville and Sherwood: W. C. T. U., $4; Dundee: W. C. T. U., $4.37; Richmondville: W. C. T. U., $3.65.

Ohio—Twenty-fourth District: W. C. T. U., $5; Hillsboro: Baby Band, $1.50; Garrettsville: W. C. T. U., $10; Hopewell: C. C. George, $3.65; Oberlin: W. C. T. U., $10; Medina county: W. C. T. U., $10; Feesburgh: W. C. T. U., $5; Marboro: per Sarah Brooke, $2; Martinsville: W. C. T. U., $3.11; Medina: C. A. Hawley, $50; Sardis: L. T. L., $1.50; Ashtabula: Hattie Crooker, $35; Marietta: Y. W. C. T. U., $15; Akron: Mrs. C. H. Knott, $10; Mentor: W. C. T. U., $1.24; Portsmouth: Junior L. T. L., $2.25; Leonardsburg; per Helen E. Potter, for "Midget Fund," $3; Athens: Bayard Ullom, $1.

Oklahoma—Britton: Nannie Layle, $1.20.

Oregon—Gardiner: W. C. T. U., $13.

Pennsylvania—Nashua: Ella Porter, $2; Centre Co.: W. C. T. U., $100; Hunter's Cave: Mrs. Mahala Patterson, $100; Bellefonte: Harold Harris, $1; Philadelphia: Mrs. Sam'l Clements, $50; Blossburg: W. C. T. U., $5; Lahaska: Mrs. M. H. Rice, Miss Martha Smith, Sam'l Smith, $1 each; Doylestown: Mrs. M. H. Atkinson, Mrs. L. R. Atkinson, D. Smith, $1 each; miscellaneous, 30 cts; Parker Ford: Lilian Wilson, $3.50.

Rhode Island.—Middletown: L. T. L., $8; Providence: W. C. T. U., $10.

Tennessee—Lebanon: Laura Kennard, $2.

Texas—Tyler: W. C. T. U., $2.50; McKinney: W. C. T. U. $2; Dennison: W. C. T. U., $5; Mexia: W. C. T. U., $5.

Virginia—Norfolk: W. C. T. U., $25; Onancock: Baby Band, $3.10.

Vermont.—Rochester: W. C. T. U. $10.

Washington.—W. Ferndale: Juvenile Temple, $1.

Wisconsin—Ashland: W. C. T. U., $20; Oshkosh: W. C. T. U., $67.47; Westby; W. C. T. U. $3.66; Richland Centre: W. C. T. U., $17; Sales: Models, $142,57; mite-boxes and pictures, $5.20.

Nova Scotia—Dartmouth: W. C. T. U., 50 cts.

ESTHER PUGH,
Treasurer Gift Fund.

[From March 1 to May 1, 1892.]

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

UNCLE SAM'S BIRTHDAY.

BY E. IDA FRIZZELL.

HURRAH for the Fourth,
The glorious Fourth!
'Tis Uncle Sam's birthday, you know.
One hundred, sixteen,
Such birthdays he's seen,
Nor yet is he too old to grow.

A kind, noble soul,
Although somewhat droll,
His neighbors are quite apt to say;
His servants well paid,
Whether man, boy, or maid,
Know each must be sure to obey.

A few years ago—
Some thirty, or so—
He made a grand, grand jubilee,
And freed all his slaves,
Since when his flag waves,
In truth o'er the land of the free.

But one fault he has,
Which just as sure as
Not conquered, will spoil his good name;
For poor Uncle Sam
Likes too well his dram,
And will not prohibit the same.

If he'd be as bold
As he was of old,
When giving the ocean that tea,
And repudiate laws
Against a good cause,
We'd soon have one more jubilee.

Then the slaves of vile Rum,
To pleadings so dumb,
Would be from their shackles set free.
Oh! Uncle Sam, rise,
Your power exercise.
And drink nothing stronger than tea.

Prohibit the make
And sale of this lake
Of fire, that brain and nerves sear;
Then we'll celebrate
Your birthday with great
Pomp and joy, but no wine nor beer.

Hurrah for the Fourth,
The glorious Fourth,
The birthday of our Uncle Sam!
When he's put away
All strong drink for aye,
And no one can purchase a dram.

Eau Claire, Wis.

A FIGHT FOR THE FLAG.

BY ADA M. MELVILLE.

MARTIN SHEPARD was very proud that morning. He had reason to be. Hadn't his father given him five whole dollars to spend on fire-crackers, and wasn't his father's store going to be decorated just the jolliest of any in the town, and wasn't his father just the best, the very best father in town, anyhow? These were some of the things that made Martin thrust his chubby fists down deep into his pockets, hold his chin in the air and whistle "Yankee Doodle" just as loud as he could.

"Hello there!"

"Good-morning, Martin."

The answer to Martin's vigorous greeting was a very quiet one. The boy who made it was as old as Martin, but he could not get over the ground as fast as his friend could. He was a pale, slight boy, and crippled.

Martin stopped whistling. Some sudden thought filled his busy brain. He was looking hard at the new-comer.

"Say—Jeff!"

"Yes?"

"Say—got any fire-crackers?"

"No, couldn't afford them. I don't care much, though."

"Yes, you do. I say—come on over town. We'll get a whole lot."

It wasn't just easy for Martin to walk as slowly as Jeff's crutches had to go, but he was not a selfish boy, and the five dollar bill down in his pocket helped him to feel kind and generous that morning.

They stopped at a store, and Martin "laid in" a large supply of crackers, big and little.

"Now, we'll go into our back yard and whiz!"

Into the back yard they went, and for an hour the air was blue with smoke and filled with the echo of explosions. It was warm work and they were glad to rest before long. Martin sat on a small keg and rolled one over for Tom, but that young man shook his head and sat down on the ground.

"Whew! Isn't it hot! Aren't you thirsty? What do you like best?" asked Martin.

"Just cold water."

"Cider is better."

"No, sir!" Jeff's voice was almost as vigorous just then as Martin's. But Martin didn't want to have a debate on the Fourth of July, for he knew very well how Jeff could talk if he wanted to, and that bluster as hard as he might, he would at last have to own himself beaten. So like a discreet young man he marched into the house and brought back simple cold water to allay their thirst. Just as Jeff threw back his head to catch the bit of ice in the bottom of the glass, he saw something that must have startled him, for he dropped the ice, and then gave a queer, choking exclamation.

"What's up, Jeff, ice down your throat?"

"No—but—see—there!"

He was pointing to a large flag over Mr. Shepard's "store."

"Isn't she a beauty?" said Martin. "Just wait till you see the front of the store. We'll go round when we get cooled off a bit. There isn't a man in town can beat my father on 'Fourth' decorations."

Jeff had risen to his feet now, and as Martin finished speaking he pointed one of his crutches excitedly to the stars and stripes, as they waved in the breeze, and said in ringing tones, "That's treason! It's got to come down!"

Martin was speechless for a full minute. Then he stammered out, "What do you mean? You—you—"

"I mean just what I say. It is treason to put our flag over a saloon—over the enemy!"

Martin turned red and then turned white. His blue shirt rose and fell over a very angry, much disturbed little breast. He doubled up his fists. He panted. He glared. But not one word could he find to say. Meanwhile, Jeff had regained his own calmness, and a smile broke over his face. "Sit down, Mart. That took you most too sudden. It's mean to hit a fellow in his own yard. Let's sit down. I'll tell you how it struck me."

So saying he swung himself from his crutches to the ground, and poor, insulted Martin dropped on to his keg.

"You see," he began, "my father was in the war, and you'd just ought to hear him tell how they fought for the colors. Father—"

"I guess my father was a soldier too!" sputtered Martin, who was recovering from the attack.

"I know it, and I guess he loves the old flag, but, Mart,"—Jeff hesitated—"don't get mad, old fellow, but hasn't your father gone over to the enemy? Mine has."

The last two words were said very sadly.

"Wh—what do you mean? The enemy? There isn't any? There's only one flag and one country. Are you crazy, Jeff?"

"I mean the saloon. It's a bigger enemy than our fathers ever fought."

Martin wanted to bristle up but something made him keep quiet. Neither of the boys spoke for a little. Then a bright smile lit up Jeff's pale face.

"Say, Martin, come on over to our house and let's have father tell us a big old Fourth of July story. Maybe it will keep him from—"

He was going to say "getting drunk," but he could not, even to his friend Martin. Though Jeff's father was a drunkard and Jeff was poor and a cripple, and though it was in Mr. Shepard's saloon that Jeff's father spent his money and forgot how to be a good man, the two boys were fast friends. They stood rank for rank at school, and were agreed on all the questions that came up between them, but one. That was the saloon question. Martin thought it would be disloyalty to his father to say anything against it, and Jeff was too true to his mother, who had taught him to hate everything connected with drinking, to give up for one instant his avowed enmity to saloons. So once in awhile there would be an outbreak.

They went over, as Jeff had suggested, to Mr. Owen's, and found that gentleman just finishing his late breakfast. He was in a pretty good humor, and invited the boys in.

"We came to hear a good Fourth of July story; one about the flag," said Jeff. "Thought it would be a good way to celebrate."

Martin's face flushed, but before he could resent the selection of a subject, Mr. Owen answered:

"It is the Fourth, isn't it? I tell you, boys, there were bigger guns fired in those days than all the big crackers you throw about now. I remember—"

Then followed story after story, and the boys' eyes grew bigger and brighter, and the old soldier, who had almost forgotten how to carry himself as a man, straightened up and gave military salutes and shouted commands till his audience could hardly keep still enough to listen.

"Aye, aye," he said at last drawing a deep breath, "'twas a great cause, and the old flag beat—God bless her! May she never wave over anything less noble than our true American liberties!"

Martin gave a quick, uneasy glance at Jeff and saw at once that his friend was getting ready for conflict.

"Father, would you fight for her again if she were in danger?"

"Fight? Why, boy, I'd fight till these arms dropped at my side. Fight? Ah!"

"But she is in danger, father!"

It was a brave little sentence, though the speaker trembled even while he stood his ground.

"What do you mean, lad?"

"Martin's father was a soldier, and he is—hush! Mart,—giving the old flag over to an enemy. Wasn't he one of your comrades, father?"

"Yes, child, yes. He fought well. What are you getting at, anyhow?"

"Your old comrade has gone over to the whisky king, and he has the stars and stripes floating over the saloon. Doesn't the saloon hurt our country? Oh, father! aren't you in chains? You couldn't fight now, if our country was in danger. Whisky chains have bound you. The old flag you fought for is in danger, and you can't help her!"

There were tears in the boy's eyes.

"Can't I?"

The boys fairly jumped, as Mr. Owen sprang to his feet, as if answering a sudden call to arms. "Can't I? I can, and God helping me, I will."

He strode out at the door, and the boys followed in fear and anxiety. What was going to happen? They reached the saloon. Very gay it looked with waving flags and streaming bunting. Mr. Shepard sat outside. Mr. Owen marched up, and standing before the man whose whisky had threatened to put him in a drunkard's grave, said in steady tones:

"Comrade, do you remember when we fought for her?' pointing to the flag that waved above their heads.

"Why, yes, old fellow, I remember. What of it?"

"Do you love her, comrade?"

"Every star and stripe of her!"

"Would you fight for her, comrade?"

"To the death I would."

"Comrade,"—his voice was very earnest now, and it trembled, "she is in danger, these lads tell me, and you and I are to blame."

The boys were standing side by side, silent and startled.

The two men went into the saloon, and a long talk followed. The boys waited outside, saying little to each other. It was all too strange and unexpected. By and by they heard a rousing cheer. Some one was making a speech. Another cheer. They rushed inside. On the counter stood Jeff's father. Around him were a dozen more men.

"What say you, comrades, shall we haul her down or besiege the enemy?"

"Death to the traitor!" cried some one. "Cheer the flag!" cried another. They cheered—oh, how they cheered! Then some one turned over a barrel of whisky, rolled it out to the street and sent the contents hurrying down the gutter. Barrel after barrel followed. The boys helped. Every one was in a hurry to finish the attack. A crowd gathered. Some one called for a speech. Jeff's father jumped on a beer-keg. Some one wrapped bunting all about him, and then he stood and told the whole story. People laughed and cried. And then some good woman ran home and came back with a pledge book. How the names went down! Jeff and Martin signed, though they were so excited they hardly knew what they wrote. Then some one started "My Country, 'tis of Thee," and the saloon doors were closed, and Jeff's father nailed a flag across them.

"My!" said Martin to Jeff, as the crowd began at last to disperse. "Wasn't that great? Jeff, you're a brick. Come on, let's fire off a big one!" and the crutches and the nimble feet went side by side to salute the old flag with the biggest cracker in the town!

Chicago.

AN AWFUL STORY.

There was once an awful little girl who had an "awful" to everything. She had an awful house in an awful village, which was an awful distance from every other awful place. She went to an awful school, where she had an awful teacher; who gave her awful lessons out of awful books. Every day she was so awful hungry that she ate an awful amount of food so that she looked awful healthy. Her hat was awful small and her feet were awful large. When she took an awful walk she climbed awful hills, and when she got awful tired she sat down under an awful tree to rest herself. In summer she was awful hot, and in winter awful cold. When it did not rain there was an awfnl drouth, and when the awful drouth was over there was an awful rain. If this little girl does not get rid of this vulgar way of saying "awful" about everything, I am afraid she will come to an awful end.—Selected.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—A class of little folks was asked not long ago, "What is the Fourth of July for?" A bright little fellow quickly raised his hand and answered, "For fire-crackers." Which is quite true, isn't it? You who have read or been told the history of our land will connect the Fourth of July with an important document called "The Declaration of Independence," and which set free a whole nation. Yes, many of you know about it and why we celebrate the Fourth of July. The signers were men who cared for others more than self and boldly took the step which made our country free. Nearly a century later, a man, whose great heart was full of love for his fellowmen signed another great paper—"The Emancipation Proclamation"—which freed millions of slaves and removed a great wrong from our land. January 1, 1863, is the colored man's "Fourth of July." This great man, Abraham Lincoln, then president of the United States, made a prophecy that our country would be made free from the slavery of liquor. The "document" for this, our Temperance Pledge, has long been afloat and is being signed "for others' sake" by thousands of people all over our land. The prophecy must and will come true. The children are helping it along and our eyes will see the day when our country will be freed from the wrong of liquor-selling. That day will be the temperance Fourth of July and one we will all be glad to celebrate. Yours for true liberty,

AUNT JANE.

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

Enclosed please find answers to puzzles. I have been sick to-day, and so asked my mamma to copy them for me and send them to you. I enjoy the puzzle column very much. FRED C. DEPUY.

Brighton.

I am glad you like our "soft-shelled nuts," Fred, and hope they help to brighten the dreary days when you are sick.

I thought I would write and tell you I am a little temperance girl, too. My grandma, mamma, my brother, and myself belong to the Loyal Temperance Legion. I must close with best wishes to all the little boys and girls who read THE UNION SIGNAL. HAZEL E. WOOD.

Middleburgh, N. Y.

Out with your handkerchiefs, children, and greet the little temperance girl over in New York!

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

60.

PATRIOTIC TEMPERANCE PUZZLE.

```
1  *  *  *  *  *  *  13
2  *  *  *  *  *  *
3  *  *  *  *  *  *
   4  *  *  *  *
         *  *
         *  *
         *  *
         *  *
         *  *
         *  *
         *  *
12 *  *  *  *  24
```

Down from 1 to 12 is for what our nation fought and what strong drink will destroy; from 13 to 24 is the noisiest day in the year. Across, 1.—to bury in a whirlpool; 2.—number; 3.—six-sevenths of direful; 4.—always; 12.—not hard.

61.

CHARADE.

My first we gaily wave
From staff and mast and peak,
Borne by the soldier brave
All its protection seek.

My second, a small word—
Heed it, we'll not go back,
Wherever it is heard
All take the forward track.

But he will backward slip
Who drinks from out my whole,
Raised often to his lip—
Gone is his self-control.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JUNE 9.

51. 1, Carnation; 2, Tulip; 3, Daisy; 4, Lilac; 5, Crocus; 6, Pansy; 7, Pink.

52. June 9, the birthday of Jennie Casseday, is celebrated as flower mission day.

53. Mace, ace; sage, age; bass, ass; skate, Kate; pinch, inch.

Correct answers: Bertha Lawrence; Ray Wall; Lula Smith; Carrie Seager; Florence Wickham; Mary A. Fish; Fannie Kettlewell; Katie R. Hobson; Royal J. Davis; R. H. Bishop; Thompson Bishop; Susie C. Lewis; Florence Nelson.

(Continued from page 6.)

with one or two others were there, and these two brave women went out alone upon the streets giving personal invitations to the loungers about the doors of saloons, and so gathered their audience. Now every evening in the week from fifty to one hundred men assemble, and every night there are conversions.

I attended the meetings two nights. Rough, ragged, staggering men filled the room, and decorously listened or joined vigorously in the singing. Sometimes tears rolled down the sodden faces, and in the prayer-meeting that followed the regular service, there were evidences of deep conviction and earnest desire for a better life; the men not only knelt, but they proved their sincerity by praying for themselves.

Testimonies were given by men who had been for years slaves of strong drink, and who had reformed through these meetings. One man had been but two days out of the penitentiary, and fortunately before falling in with his old companions in sin, had been led here and had given his heart to God. Men who three months ago were ragged, blear-eyed and wholly disreputable in appearance, stood up in good clothing, with clear eyes and the appearance of gentlemen, and testified to the happiness they found in the Christian life, and their appeals were telling because they could say, "Boys, we know all about your life and its temptations, and we can tell you there is no happiness like that we find in serving God."

This is at present the chief work of the Salt Lake union, but it is not their only work. A year ago their coffee room, by mismanagement, had brought upon them a debt of $1,500. Many were discouraged and ready to advise giving up, when Mrs. Mary A. Parsons, a little woman, but brimful of energy, stepped to the front with brave words: "If we give up now," she said, "we shall never be able to rally. We will not give up." Mrs. Parsons has proven herself a general of finance, and through her efforts the debt has been nearly wiped out, and she expects within a short time to see it wholly cancelled. Mrs. Parsons is the wife of the U. S. marshal, and is doing a grand work among the prisoners in the penitentiary in addition to her labors for the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Reed, the superintendent of county and city jail work, and assistant in the gospel work, has been active for six years in all lines of rescue endeavor. Her house is a shelter for the downcast or outcast. She stretches out helpful hands to men who coming from the prisons are ready to sink back into lives of sin, because no good man calls them brother. The erring woman is never afraid that she will be scorned if she appeals to this strong, true woman for aid.

"The work for the world is done by invalids," it is said, and among those Salt Lake white-ribboners I found proof of the truth of this saying. It is not the work of the world, but the work for the world. Women with feeble frames but stout hearts are everywhere using their little strength "In His name," and the aggregate of result is astonishing.

Mrs. Bowdle, superintendent of literature, and secretary of the Woman's Exchange, is one of these who are working for the world with a shattered constitution. Her sister workers say "she is a grand woman."

In the short space of a single article I cannot tell you all that these earnest women are doing. As the result of their gospel meetings I will mention that in the last two and a half months there have been twenty-five conversions. Last month over 1,200 men came into the meetings; ninety have signed the pledge.

A fund has been raised in the various churches for food and lodging for men who are trying to reform, and a temperance man furnishes beds at ten cents a night. Business men are beginning to patronize the restaurant, and custom is increasing.

The last afternoon that I was in Salt Lake I spent with some of the white ribbon women discussing the subject of social purity. Our sisters in Utah need our sympathy. They have problems to face of which we know nothing. The distances of travel cut them off from communication with other workers, so they do not obtain the inspiration that comes from interchange of thought. They feel that they need instruction. They would welcome most gladly some efficient worker who would come among them and act as counselor, friend and instructor. Pecuniarily they could offer little inducement, except maintenance and traveling expenses, and yet it is possible that collections might more than cover these.

Should any one be moved by the missionary spirit to go to Utah as organizer, instructor and helper, I can assure her of a most cordial welcome and hearty co-operation, for from the hearts of these earnest Christian women comes to us the heartfelt appeal, "Come over and help us." If you cannot go, dear sister, you can send written words of sympathy and aid to any one of those whom I have mentioned. The letters W. C. T. U. added to the address, Salt Lake City, will insure the delivery of your missives. Trusting that much comfort and aid may come to the brave workers in Salt Lake and other parts of Utah from this simple statement of a part of their work and their needs, I remain their most sincere sympathizer and admirer. MARY WOOD ALLEN, M. D.

Ithaca, N. Y.

LETTER FROM A FARMER'S WIFE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—When, as a minister's daughter, I was a worker in the W. C. T. U., the wonder to me was that the leaders could think of so many useful lines of effort; when, as a public school teacher, I was a W. C. T. U. worker, my gratitude knew no bounds for the scientific instructions provided for by our society in the public schools, but when, as the wife of a farmer, it pleased God to make of me a W. C. T. U. thinker my heart sank within me as I found that I was isolated by my new surroundings from the great organization I had learned so much to love. I could not attend the local union several miles away, I had not the money to subscribe for its papers, the members did not visit me, nor did they send me literature on which my mind could feed during this trying period. It matters not how much of personal neglect I feel, but suffice it that at last I became aware that I was only one of a great class of women that the W. C. T. U. has not yet practically reached, and my heart cried out daily, "Oh, why does not this great society, with its warm motherly heart, create a department that will send out its workers to just such women as I am, and into just such homes as mine? I tell you, my sisters, it would pay. Later on, when I read an account of the failure of the St. Louis convention to stand by the homes of this country, I said in my heart, "Had our leader come through an organized department to the wives of the men represented in that conference, she would never have had the pain of seeing them vote down prohibition and the ballot for women." And so, I am writing this to say to our beloved society, "Oh, National W. C. T. U., do cause a department that will reach the wives of the men that make up the People's party, for unlike them a thousand of these wives are more sorely pressed on the financial side. Yet, the heart behind the hand that rocks the cradle and lifts the standard for the husband can never forget that no matter how much wealth is placed at her disposal her children are not safe so long as sin is legalized in this nation; and that it will be legalized until this same mother has a right to act in a legal way to help the best men of the nation wipe the curse from our loved land." I know that our time and strength are very much taken up, but it seems to me that the claims I have tried to set forth are worth your attention. C. H. C.

[We are glad to have received this letter, and believe that every word in it is worthy of the thoughtful attention of those who pray and plan for the success of that great home movement whose emblem is the white ribbon. We believe there are hundreds of women in this country who would gladly go about among the farmers, if they could thereby simply make an honorable support, holding meetings in schoolhouses, organizing children's societies, introducing our literature, and building up our cause in the hearts of those people who alone can carry it to a successful issue. We wish some woman felt the inspiration in her soul to stand at the head of a department which should make its specialty the visitation and the indoctrination of farmer's wives in our methods and principles. But inspiration is something that can not be bought at the store, and the woman who takes a department in a perfunctory spirit makes but little out of it. We are looking for the woman who would like to take up the holy work indicated by our correspondent; but we know that many who would like to take it would not do it well, and so it is difficult to feel sure just how to answer this earnest and careful writer. We turn over the whole subject to our constituents, asking them to pray that the right leader may rise up to carry the war into the farms of the nation.

A plea from another farmer's home comes in these pathetic words: "It happens that this summer I shall be thrown very much in the company of young men employed on the ranch. There is an army of unemployed men tramping the railway which runs just at the foot of my dooryard. Few days pass without bringing some of these to my door-steps asking for something to eat—young men most of them, with pleasing manners, evidently well brought up, 'out of work, out oftmoney.' I often wish for some wholesome food for their minds, to hand with the lunch I give them, and herein send some verses, hoping they may be remunerative enough to purchase some literature. I am sure this is one chance I have to work 'In His Name.'"

Ever since this letter came there has been an omnipresent vision of this great-hearted woman standing in her lonely ranch doorway, with full hands for the hungry waif of the plains—the discouraged brother, a brave fellow, too, in most cases—whom the hard life of the great West is "downing" surely, pitilessly, day by day. Here is a place for literature of all good sorts, leaflets, magazines, UNION SIGNALS, and all that which is "too good to destroy," but for which you have no room; and for that choice bit that is "so good" you must "pass it on" with a prayer in your deepest soul. Address Mrs. H. L. Ricards, Box 181, Strong City, Kan.—EDS.]

FOR SUMMER WEAR

Send for circular.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists

are now made in

VENTILATING CLOTH,

also in FINE

Single Ply CLOTH.

SINGLE PLY for Children, Misses & Ladies.

GOOD SENSE Waists are superior to all others.

—Tape-fastened Buttons, Cord-edge Button Holes—Clamp Buckle at Hip securely holds Hose Supporter. Shape permits full expansion of lungs.

Gives Satisfaction. Be sure your waist is stamped "GOOD SENSE."

FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers and Patentees, 341 Broadway, New York.

For Sale by ALL LEADING RETAILERS.

MARSHALL FIELD & CO., Chicago, Ill., Wholesale Western Agents.

AGEM FOR ALL WHO WANT TO BUILD

Our new book of 172 pages, 8½ x 11 inches The "Cottage Souvenir," containing a great variety of Designs & Plans of costing from $500 to $10,000.

Artistic Dwellings

The Beauty and Completeness of these Designs, combining so many new features, has given this book a wonderful sale, and hundreds of Beautiful Homes are being built in all parts of our land from its designs. Price $2. Send for prospectus and sample pages, FREE.

GEO. F. BARBER & CO., Architects, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.

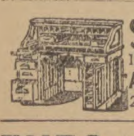
Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.

SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

DULUTH 7% & 8% First Mortgages

REAL ESTATE AND MINING STOCKS. References Furnished. Correspondence Solicited.

Tvedt, Eckstein & Co., 327 W. Superior Street. DULUTH, MINN.



$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order.

American Desk & Seating Co. 270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

EYES tested free by mail. New method. Send stamp for test card. KEENE OPT. CO., 1301 Washington-st. Boston, Mass

RABBIT & POULTRY FENCING.

Freight Paid. McMULLEN WOVEN WIRE FENCE CO., CHICAGO

BEATTY Pianos, $175. Organs, $49. Want ag'ts Cat'lg free. Dan'l Beatty, Wash'ton, N.J.

Publisher's Dep't.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

What do you think about it?

Well, this is what we think. It will be the grandest event of its character ever recorded. No exposition was ever held which was planned on so grand a scale. The area occupied is the largest, the buildings the most extensive and costly, and the exhibits will be the most extensive. It will be the first World's Exposition which provides a place for woman's work and woman's interest. It will be unique, also, in that it is the first exposition which has a moral side, and its reform, educational, philanthropic and religious conferences, planned and carried forward by the leading thinkers of the nation will be a decided innovation. Of course

You Want to be There.

Then you should learn something about it now. We have just the thing to inform you

If you go or if you do not go.

It is the

Columbus Memorial,

a large folio volume, 12x15 inches in size, printed on super-calendered paper, neatly and attractively bound in heavy enameled paper. It contains 44 pages and shows the progress and achievement this country has made in four hundred years. It contains:

Letter press and full page map of discovery, 1492 to 1606, 116 years.

Letter press and full page map of settlement, 1607 to 1673, 66 years.

Letter press and full page map of wars, 1673 to 1773, 100 years.

Letter press and full page map of independence, 1773 to 1789, 16 years.

Letter press and full page map of constitution, 1789 to 1845, 56 years.

Letter press and full page map of dissension, 1845 to 1860, 15 years.

Letter press and full page map of secession, 1860 to 1865, 5 years.

Letter press and full page map of peace, 1865 to 1892, 27 years.

Map of the city of Genoa, Italy, supposed birthplace of Columbus, with biographical sketch of Christopher Columbus.

Three pages, general descriptive matter "World's Columbian Exposition," from its inception to the present time, with a carefully prepared and authentic table of the World's Fairs that have been held at different times throughout the world, from "Crystal Palace," 1851, to the "World's Fair" of 1893.

In all their magnificence are portrayed Machinery Hall, which alone cost $1,200,000; the Manufacturers' Building, the Art Palace, the Administration Building, the Government Building, the Electrical Building, the Horticultural Building, the Agricultural Building, the Transportation Building, the Fish and Fisheries Building, the Woman's Building, designed by a woman; the Mines and Mining Building, the Forestry Building; beautiful illustration of the wonderful lagoon scene; grand bird's eye view scene of the Exposition Buildings; double page map or diagram, showing the relative position of the main buildings, including state buildings, and size of each, etc., etc.

We will send this and THE UNION SIGNAL one year, postpaid, for only $1.30, or we will send it to any address postpaid, in return for five new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL at $1 each.

Tell the children to ask their friends to subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL. If they send five new names and $5 we will send one of the beautiful "Columbus Memorials" postpaid, to any address they may indicate.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

FLOWER MISSION CARDS.

As announced already, we are now prepared to furnish you with Scripture text cards for flower mission work at very reasonable prices. The cards are of bristol board, punctured ready to affix to the bouquet. There are ninety-nine different texts selected for this purpose. The cards are put up in packages of thirty-three each, with different verse, and are for sale at the following rates: Per package of 23 cards, 10 cts.; three packages for 25 cts.

A large supply is now on hand and orders can be promptly filled by the

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE

JACKSON CORSET CO.,

The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.

RETAIL PRICE $1.00.

The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.

Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.

Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.

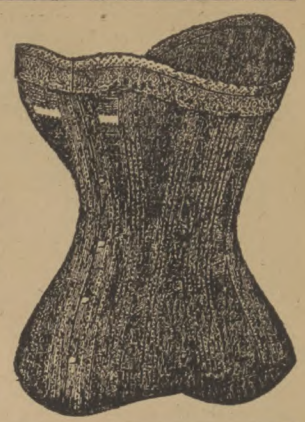
The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.



IMPROVED HALL TYPEWRITER.

The best and most simple machine made. Interchangeable Type into all languages. Durable, easiest running, rapid as any. Endorsed by the Clergy and literary people. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Agents wanted. Address N. Typewriter Co., 611 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

'DELSARTE'

Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.

Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York. Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION.

A SAMPLE BOX of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S Tissue Builder for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romans was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N.J.

RAMBLER BICYCLES

PNEUMATIC or CUSHION TIRES

A LADY'S WHEEL SHOULD HAVE a SPRING FRAME

One of the "Signal's" Editors Rides a Rambler.

Catalogue "F" free.

GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO. 85 Madison St., Chicago.

174 Columbus Av. BOSTON. 1325 14th-st., N.W. WASHINGTON. Broadway & 57th. NEW YORK.

DON'T YOU THINK

Your baby would look pretty in a carriage like that?

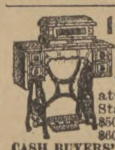
We have prettier ones.

Also cheaper ones.

All shown in our catalogue, which we will mail FREE if you write for it.

FREIGHT PAID BY

WALTER HILL CO., 218 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.



10 DAYS FREE TRIAL in your own home. First class Sewing Machines shipped anywhere to anyone at wholesale prices. All latest improvements. Warranted five years. Complete set of attachments FREE. Send for catalogue. Standard Singer Machines, $9.50 to $15.50 $50 Arlington Sewing Machine for $19.50 $60 Kenwood Sewing Machine for $23.50

CASH BUYERS' UNION, 160 W. Van Buren St. B 26 Chicago.

SAFEST OF ALL INVESTMENTS

CITY AND COUNTY BONDS Secured by tax lien on all property within their limits.

Descriptive Bond Lists furnished on application.

N. W. HARRIS & CO., BANKERS,

163-165 DEARBORN ST. • CHICAGO, ILL.

New York. Boston.

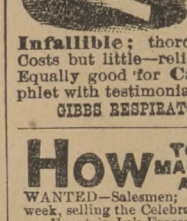
BAKER'S COCOA.

ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS

EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

Ladies and Children's dress-cutting learned at home by most perfect TAILOR SYSTEM. Big money to live agts Circulars free. Miss ANNA GRAVES, Box 665, Chicago, Ill



HAY-FEVER

A GIBBS' ORONASAL RESPIRATOR used at home, will afford absolute relief throughout the season. A wonderful invention. Convenient, Scientific Infallible; thoroughly tested for many years Costs but little—relief obtained is beyond estimate Equally good for Catarrh. Sent postpaid. Pamphlet with testimonials free.

GIBBS RESPIRATOR CO., 36M La Salle St., Chicago, Ill

How TO MAKE A Fortune

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser; patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen to whom we give EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new, will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO., 184 Hermon Street, Worcester, Mass.

GIRLS!

Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings! If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. I. M. Association, 269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE COBLENTZ CURE

Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR

Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one FREE sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.

St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS SANATORIUM.

For the cure of Cancer in all its forms, without the use of the knife. Book with complete information mailed free. Dr. W. E. Brown & Son No. Adams, Mass

SYLPH CYCLES RUN EASY

Hollow Tires.

Perfection of cycle manufacture; no need now to ride springless cycles or depend on tires alone for comfort. SYLPH SPRING FRAME destroys vibrat'n. Light, simple, strong. Cata. free

Rouse-Duryea Cy. Co. 77 G St., Peoria, Ill. Agts. Wanted

READERS can have PAPERS and MAGAZINES sent them from Publishers all over the country, by sending 25 cts. to the CENTRAL SUPPLY CO Chicago. Mention this paper.

AGENTS WANTED ON SALARY or COMMISSION, to handle the New Patent Chemical Ink Erasing Pencil. Agents making $50 per week. Monroe Eraser Mf'g Co. x 213 LaCrosse, Wis.

Cuts a Circle.

No Good Kitchen complete without a Chicago Rotary Biscuit and Cake Cutter, they sell at sight. AGENTS WANTED. Sample mailed for 15c. Columbia Specialty Mfg. Co., 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take Crochet work to do at home. Steady work. Write for particulars. L. WHITE & CO., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.

HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES. Agents Wanted. Catalogue free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

AGENT made $11 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

Free-fishing & Bicycle Goods if you tack up circular for Rudolph Mfg. Co., Chicago.

Kernels.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Henry, whose clothes are all made of his papa's old ones, "papa's had his mustache shaved off, an' I suppose I've got to wear it now."

You must love your work, and not be always looking over the edge of it, wanting your play to begin.

We make too little of what we say of others, and a great deal too much of what they say of us.

There are but few horses that will stand without tying—and there are fewer men.

An Irishman who had on a very ragged coat was asked of what stuff it was made. "Bedad, I don't know," said he, "but I think the most of it is made of fresh air."

Music has been defined as the endeavor of the soul to speak.

Greatness sometimes overtakes a man and makes him an intellectual cripple.

The end of learning is to know God, and out of that knowledge to love Him and imitate Him.

Assistant (to employer): "Please, sir, what shall I mark this new lot of new silks at?" Employer: "Twelve shillings a yard." Assistant: "But the cost price is four shillings a yard." Employer: "I don't care what it cost. We are selling off regardless of cost."

When we are least worthy, most tempted, hardest, unkindest, let us yet commend our spirits into His hands. Whither else dare we send them?

There are some folks in this world who spend their whole lives hunting after righteousness and can't find any time to practice it.

A tiny girl came to her mother the other day and said: "Mamma, I wented to pick you a bouquet and I toodent, 'cause all the pansies laughed right at me, mamma."

Fred's father had been away for a number of weeks, and the little boy was very anxious to see him. When told at last that his father had come, Fred's cheeks grew very red, and he cried, "Oh, auntie, it makes my heart wriggle, I am so glad."

We cannot skip the seasons of our education. We cannot hasten the ripeness and the sweetness by a single day, nor dispense with one night's nipping frost nor one week's blighting east wind.

"As ships meet at sea a moment together, when words of greeting must be spoken, and then away into the deep, so men meet in this world; and I think we should cross no man's path without hailing him, and if he needs, giving him supplies."

A little boy who was to pass the afternoon with the doctor's little daughter, was given two pieces of candy. When he returned his mother inquired if he gave the larger piece to the little girl. "No, mother, I didn't. You told me to give the biggest piece to the company, and I was the company over there."

An unhappy marriage is like an electric machine—it makes one dance, but you can't let go.

There is more pleasure in giving than in receiving. This applies to medicine, kicks, and advice.

An operatic critic writes: "The opera went off well, and the prima donna's serenade to the moon struck us as having derived much point from that orb. It ran as follows:

"When ther moo-hoon is mi hild-ly beheaming
O'er the ca-halm and si-hi lent see-e-e e,
Its ray-dyunce so so-hoftly stree-heam-ing,
Oh! the-hen, oh! the-hen
I thee hink
Hof thee-hee,
I thee-hink
I thee-hink,
I thee-hink,
thee-he-he-hehehehe-hink hof theeeeeeee!"

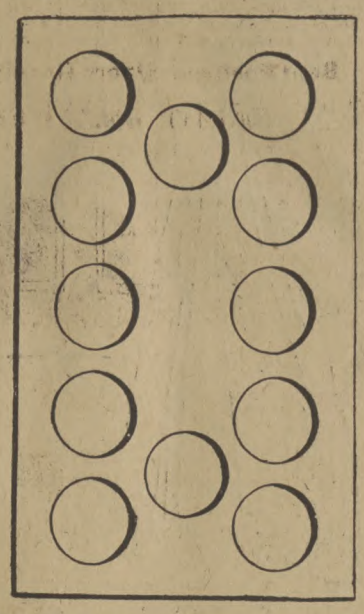
In the familiar song, "Pull for the Shore" there is a line, "Cling to self no more," which, as sung by the colored children in one of the schools, sounded strangely, and on having it said slowly, it was discovered that they were singing, "Clean yourself no more."

A Yorkshire vicar once received the following notice regarding a marriage from a parish house: "This is to give you notis that I and Mis Jemima Arabella Brearly is comin' to your church on Saturday afternoon nex', to undergo the operation of matrimony at your hands. Please be promp, as the cab is hired by the hour." The "operation" was performed in due course.

Publisher's Notes.

A NEW WAY.

Did you ever try to send silver money in a letter? Here is a way that will prove successful. We have had cards made with openings for twelve dimes, like this:



Now thinking, reading people, who desire to know for themselves the all-aroundness of everything, but who do not want to subscribe for a paper of which they have no knowledge, for a whole year, will pay a dime in order to read it for one month, just to see what it is. Then, when they find that it has for editors Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mary Allen West, Miss M. A. Sudduth and Mrs. H. B. Kells; for contributors, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Kate Sanborn, Mary Lowe Dickinson, Emily Huntington Miller, Abby Morton Diaz and many others equally gifted; that it can be secured for only $1 per year; they will want you to call again so that they may become regular subscribers—or if not able to send $1 for a year, will take it for one or for three months again. Now we have this proposition to make:

Any person who will secure twelve names and twelve dimes—we will send these cards to all who desire them—and forward the same to this office with the request that The Union Signal be sent to the persons whose names are given for one month, may select one of the cabinet photographs of our leaders (see catalogue) and it will be sent without charge. This offer is to apply to any person, young or old. Address,

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
The Temple,
Chicago, Ill.

THE LATEST OUT.

The freshest thing we have to offer to our readers is a dainty booklet entitled "A Defense of the Jericho Robbers," by W. W. Satterlee. The endeavor is to secure the acquittal of the robbers, on trial before the Sanhedrim on the plea that "they were engaged in a lawful pursuit, a Judean industry, legally sanctioned, regulated and restrained according to the highest idea of modern civilization." The claim is that "the man who went down that way was wholly to blame for the catastrophe." He knew the danger and might have gone another way. The whole agreement in favor of licensed evil is so transparent that it must benefit all who read. Send for a copy. Price 20c.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
The Temple,
Chicago, Ill.

We are under constant obligations to our friends, the state superintendents of juvenile and Sunday-school work, as well as to the state W. C. T. U. papers, for their efforts in behalf of The Young Crusader. We want to suggest to those competing for the banner to be presented at the coming National Convention for the greatest pro rata increase in subscribers between May and October, that they especially urge The Young Crusader as a paper for Sunday-schools. Surely once a month is the least that any school should do in the way of giving distinctive temperance reading to its scholars. Yet there are many that do not even furnish this much. Where schools are not educated up to the point of requiring it, unions can do excellent work by supplying the paper for a year. A few Sunday-school lists of one hundred or so of each, swell the subscription from a given state very rapidly.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
The Temple,
Chicago, Ill.

There is NO SURE CURE FOR EVERY CASE OF ASTHMA or EVERY CASE OF HAY FEVER, but the worst cases, if uncomplicated by organic disease, can be CURED TO STAY CURED by constitutional treatment, and this at the patient's home.

ASTHMA AND HAY-FEVER

We treat no one without a thorough knowledge of the case.

Incurable Cases Declined.

Examination free by mail.

We want name and address of every sufferer from Asthma or Hay Fever.

P. HAROLD HAYES, M. D., BUFFALO, N. Y.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR COLD BLAST CO. CHICAGO STAND ON DUST

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE

Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents. F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co. 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH

Taken internally and used locally with Insufator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.

Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed.) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists. McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

FAT PEOPLE You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by DR. CLARKE'S Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials, Free. F. B. CLARKE, M. D., Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill

We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Wall Paper Retailed. Good Paper 8c. Gold Paper 5c. Send 10c for postage on samples, and his guide "How to Paper" will be sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms. St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them. YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

HOTEL FREDONIA. Washington, D. C. H St., between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET. HOMELIKE & STRICTLY TEMPERANCE G. H. La Fetra, Prop.

THE BABY will be given a beautiful birthday card if the mother will send baby's name and age to Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. This is done to advertise LACTATED FOOD, The food that SAVES BABIES' LIVES

New W. C. T. U. and Prohibition Song Book. By the Silver Lake Quartette and W. A. Williams. Larger than their former books. 35c. Ready June 15. Advance orders, 30c. Also music chart 40x90 in. $1; Parliamentary Chart, $1. Address W. A. WILLIAMS, Warnock, Ohio.

HOME STUDY BOOK-KEEPING SHORTHAND

Each person sending us before July 1st $1 for HENDRYX'S COMPENDIUM OF BOOK-KEEPING and BUSINESS FORMS for SELF INSTRUCTION, will receive instructions by mail free. Special inducements also given during the summer to SHORTHAND students. F. H. HENDRYX, 178, Bath, N. Y.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT

or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

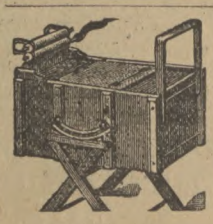
A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 81st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All, Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

A MODERN BATH. The Latest and Best.

Quick Self-Heating, or Toilet Cabinet in place of Heater. No bath-room required. Ornamental, Inexpensive, Complete, Practical. Desirable for either city or town. Send for Catalogue.

THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB Co.
180 So. Canal Street, Chicago.



WHEREVER THE ROCKER WASHER is used the Washboard becomes a Relic of Barbarism. It is warranted to do the washing of an ordinary family in one hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for full description and prices. Rocker Washer Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Agents wanted.

Signal Notes.

MILWAUKEE has 1,400 licensed saloons which are kept open on Sunday.

THERE were 363,935 public school teachers and 204,913 liquor dealers in the United States last year.

THERE are now upwards of 500 churches in Scotland that celebrate the communion with the unfermented fruit of the vine.

GREAT BRITAIN has 523 war vessels; the United States has seventy-one. When will the nations be at peace, and such equipments unnecessary?

THE National Library of Paris, with its 2,000.000 printed books and 160,000 manuscripts, is said to be the largest storehouse of learning in the world.

WHAT a saving Sunday closing will be to the British laborer's family! It is computed that no less a sum than £15,000,000 is annually spent on Sunday drinking alone, in the United Kingdom.

MISS GURNEY, who has been appointed superintendent of police work for the W. W. C. T. U., reports that the Police Temperance Union has now 6,000 members enrolled.

PURE spring water in ten gallon cans sells in Chicago for one dollar. One of the companies has contracted to supply water by pipes for the Columbian Exposition to be served at 300 different places on the Exposition grounds. Pure water, when it has to be paid for, will have a double attraction for the thirsty visitor to the great show.

THE plan of teaching the effects of alcohol to the children in the public schools is already being adopted in other countries than our own. An association of teachers has been formed at Stockholm, called a Temperance Union of Northern Teachers, and a similar one has been formed in Finland for the purpose of introducing temperance teaching into the public schools.

THE Grand Lodge of the order of Masons in the state of Mississippi four years ago refused membership to saloon-keepers; those already in the order remaining on condition that their business should be given up. Repeated efforts have been made to repeal this act but the Masons are practically a unit in sustaining it. Missouri's Masonic Order passed a like statute, and now the Knights of Pythias have revoked the charter of the Aldine Lodge, one of the oldest, largest and most influential of its order because of its persistency in selling liquors at its entertainments. There is a widespread revolt in the secret orders against manipulation by the liquor-men, and a deepening conviction that what is morally wrong cannot be legally right.

THE coat of arms of Kentucky is two men standing with clasped hands under the motto, "United we stand, divided we fall." One of those men on the coat of arms should be given his walking papers and a woman put in his place. The world is growing older and wiser, and the decree has gone forth that women are one-half the people. The decree has not reached Kentucky yet, but it is on the way, and when it arrives the Kentucky legislature will order a new coat of arms for the state, a man and a woman clasping hands under the motto, "United we stand, divided we fall." People grow in the world whether they want to or not, and the day is coming when Kentucky men will stand shoulder to shoulder with the men of Wyoming on the question of equal rights. It is only a matter of education.—Mrs. Josephine K. Henry, in the Southern Journal.

IN Detroit a series of entertainments have been given for two years for the benefit of the working people. The first thought was to divest it of every semblance of charity, but to give the entertainment to the people at actual cost. The price of season tickets was fifty cents for twelve entertainments, or a fraction over four cents for each one. The program consisted of a half hour of first-class music, furnished by local musical organizations. The second half hour was devoted to a lecture by the best talent to be had upon some country, and the third part of the program was devoted to the illustrations by a stereopticon of the country on which the lecture was delivered. At first, many of the people in the factories hesitated about patronizing, because they could not believe that any such work would be done for them without there being some scheme attached to make money out of them, but when they saw through it they became its enthusiastic patrons.—Boston Traveller.

Good Cooking

Is one of the chief blessings of every home. To always insure good custards, puddings, sauces, etc., use Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk. Directions on the label. Sold by your grocer and druggist.

WHEN THE "WASH" CAME UP.

"Just see, father, how this stocking is ruined, and I've only worn it once. I thought it was because Jane had rubbed it too hard, but Mother says it's all the fault of the soap that Jane used. And she wants you to be sure and order a box of Ivory Soap to-day."

COPYRIGHT 1890, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

BICYCLES ON EASY PAYMENTS
No extra charge. All makes new or 2d hd. Lowest price guaranteed. Largest stock & oldest dealers in U. S. Cata. free. Agts. wanted. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St., Peoria, Ill

WANTED—Male and female agents in every city, town and village in New Jersey for those Wonderful Christy Knives. Quick sellers, large commissions. Write New Jersey Agency Christy Knife Co., Room 514, Prudential Building, Newark, N. J.

MANAGERS WANTED Everywhere to take charge of our business. Advertise, distribute circulars & employ help to sell goods. WAGES $50 to $125 PER MONTH. Expenses advanced. State experience. Wages expected, also your preference for home work or traveling. SLOAN & CO., Mfrs., 294 George St., Cincinnati, O

TAPE-WORM Expelled alive in 60 minutes, with head, or no charge. Send 2c stamp for circular. Dr. M. NEY SMITH, Specialist, 721 Olive-st, St. Louis, Mo

LOW RATES FOR JULY FOURTH.

The Wabash Railroad will sell tickets July 2, 3 and 4 from Chicago to all points on the system at one fare for the round trip. Tickets good returning until July 5, inclusive. Ticket Office, 201 Clark Street.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad.

Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE

Second Series of Bonds is Going Fast.

DO NOT DELAY, as they may ALL be TAKEN BEFORE AUG. 1st

In April we contracted for about 2,000 lots in SOUTH WAUKEGAN, at a fixed price, which was about $100,000 below the retail price at that time. We have one year in which to complete the payment, and if we fail to make any part of it the property not paid for reverts to the original owners without loss to us. So we have no liabilities whatever, and there is no possibility of a loss.

On these lots we issue our Profit-Sharing Investment Bonds, which are now offered for sale, and as fast as the money is received for them it is applied toward paying for the lots. After the lots advance in value sufficiently we will begin selling them, and the Bonds will be redeemed, and also one-half of all profits will be paid over to the Bond owners.

OUR LOTS are now worth $162,500 more than they cost us, and on account of the location of the great Nichols Chemical Co. in the midst of our lots and other developments, it has been decided to advance prices Aug. 1st. This advance will add $75,000 more to the price of our lots; ½ of this sum, less expenses, and one-half of all profits in the future, will be divided among all purchasers of our Bonds.

An Invitation

EVERY MEMBER OF THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Is Invited to

South Waukegan, Saturday, July 16,

At 2 O'Clock, P. M.,

To witness the Reception and Dedication of Lots Donated for the Uses of the Local Union. These Lots will be Transferred to a Board of Trustees, composed of Prominent Temperance Workers, to be in turn Deeded by them to the SOUTH WAUKEGAN UNION, when Organized.

On the occasion, Addresses will be made, Songs sung, etc.

OUR LOTS are all within ten minutes' walk of all the factories, so that just as soon as the works open up, our property will be in great demand, and the increase in value, which means profit for our Bondholders, will be rapid and great.

BONDS ARE $10 EACH, and are SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

The deed to our property and all moneys are held by the Commercial Loan and Trust Company, of Chicago, as Trustees for the purchasers of these Bonds, thus affording ABSOLUTE SAFETY.

GENERAL SINGLETON, President Total Abstinence Life Association, 902 Royal Insurance Building, says: "I have investigated the WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE, and have advised my wife to invest in their Bonds, believing it will be very profitable."

All Who Investigate Our Plans Buy Bonds.

We refer you by permission to Commercial Loan and Trust Co. Bank, 115 La Salle St., Chicago; Morris, Ganse & Co., 1300 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Chicago; John E. Rastall, Editor South Waukegan News, 1320 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Chicago.

If you want a share of this $75,000 profits, you must SECURE THE BONDS BEFORE AUGUST 1st. You should not delay, however, as they may all be sold before that time. THEY ARE SELLING FAST.

You can send a deposit, NO MATTER HOW SMALL, say how many you want, and we will consider it a sale. You may pay for them later. SEND FOR PAMPHLET; IT TELLS IT ALL.

MAKE CHECKS, DRAFTS AND MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE 161 La Salle Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Mrs. R. A. EMMONS, Manager.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, July 7, 1892. Number 27.

Mrs. Ursula D. Hettick 2419 19th st.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

A bill for the free coinage of silver passed the Senate, July 1.

Prof. John K. Lord has been elected acting president of Dartmouth College.

The Nominating Convention of the People's party opened in Omaha Saturday, July 2.

A royal commission to arrange for Great Britain's display at the World's Fair has been organized.

A scarcity of farm hands is the report from Kansas, where the crops will greatly exceed former yields.

Ex-Secretary Wm. C. Whitney positively refuses the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee.

The first of the English elections were held July 1. Lord Randolph Churchill was returned to Parliament.

Austria and Germany have adopted sanitary measures against cholera, which is already invading Italy and Russia.

General Bidwell, of California, was nominated for President by the Prohibition Convention in Cincinnati, Thursday night.

Commencement day exercises have been held at the leading colleges in the country. Harvard College conferred 534 diplomas, Amherst, 80, and the University of Michigan, 389.

As the result of a dense fog, the ocean steamer, City of Chicago, is ashore on the Irish coast. The 400 passengers and 200 bags of mail were safely transferred to shore by boats, without panic.

The Iowa Republican convention which met in Des Moines last week, gave no expression to its prohibition principles as in former years, tabling the resolutions by an overwhelming vote.

The complaint that the Hyde Park prohibition ordinances are being violated at the World's Fair grounds is made. Liquors are sold within the park, but officials assert with meals only.

The progress of construction at the Columbian Exposition grounds has been greatly delayed by the rainy weather. The foundations of the structures have been flooded, but with no serious results.

Reports issued by the commercial agencies this week show that the present year is without a parallel in the history of the United States for the volume of trade and the amount of production of every kind.

The Charities and Corrections Conference closed its interesting sessions in Denver last Thursday. An address on "The Kindergarten as Related to the Public Schools" was made by Miss Elizabeth Harrison, of Chicago.

Hon. John W. Foster, of Indiana, whose life for more than a quarter of a century has been devoted to the diplomatic service of this country, has been appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate as Secretary of State.

Thousands of skilled workmen are idle on account of the shut-out at the Homestead (Carnegie) Steel Mills near Pittsburg, Pa. The fires are out in the rolling mills of the Mahoning Valley in Ohio, and ten thousand workmen are out of employment because manufacturers refused to sign the scale of prices made by the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers.

The Senate Committee on the World's Fair agrees to the House Committee's report making an aggregate appropriation of $5,541,495, including an issue of ten million silver half dollar souvenir pieces, on condition that the Exposition be closed on Sunday. The chairman of the committee has given notice that the Sunday closing question will come up with the Sundry Civil Bill providing for the current expenses of the Exposition. There will probably be a close fight.

THAT Mr. Cleveland is rightly named "the man of luck" is illustrated by the fact that he is the only man in American history who has been thrice nominated and once elected President of the United States.

IN nominating General Bidwell for President on the Prohibition ticket, several speakers referred to the lovely and accomplished little woman who has for twenty years shared his great life, and who would bring beautiful gifts and graces to the White House.

A CABLEGRAM from Miss Helen Hood, dated Manchester, England, June 26, says: "Lady Henry Somerset spoke here to six thousand people to-night; magnificent address." Our white ribbon leader in Great Britain is out in the thick of the fight and will be until the elections are over.

MISS ANTHONY told us that in leaving the room of the committee on resolutions at Minneapolis she met a beery German delegate who said, "We want no woman suffrage and no prohibition in ours, and we will not have them either." Naturally enough these two causes rise or fall together, for they are but the "parts of one tremendous whole."

WE are gratified to learn that a large number of Sunday-schools throughout the country observed Sunday, July 3, as a patriotic day, combining the regular lesson with instruction in patriotic sentiments and principles. It is encouraging to note such forward movements in the religious instruction of our youth, who are so soon to become the law-makers and supporters of our country.

THE Cincinnati press treated us handsomely. In their headlines often recurred the words, "White Rose Knights and Ladies." That is a good phrase. Might we not thus attractively re-christen our "Prohibition Clubs"? Nearly every man we met wore the white rose. Wise is the movement that makes sweet-smelling flowers pay tribute, and presses all that it can of poetry, history, chivalry and noble symbolism into its service.

MRS. MARY LOWE DICKINSON is now in the field for the King's Daughters; and as she goes from point to point, speaking for that association, she could ofttimes arrange to speak also for the local W. C. T. U. Mrs. Dickinson has a large repertoire of lectures in various forms, and we are confident that, by advertising beforehand and selling tickets, our societies could often put money into their purses. She may be addressed, care of Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, secretary of the Woman's Lecture Bureau, the Temple, Chicago, Ill.

THE Sunday meeting in Music Hall was a success; J. H. Martin, of Cincinnati, presided. Rev. Dr. Boole, of New York, was at his best, and the same may be justly said of Rev. Dr. Leonard, of Ohio, and Samuel Dickie, of Michigan. Professor Fillmore conducted the chorus singing. Professor Hudson sang one of his own songs based on the National W. C. T. U. motto. Mrs. O. G. Peters, of Cincinnati, read Joel 2; Rev. Dr. D. H. Moore, the redoubtable champion of women in the General Conference, offered prayer, and Rev. Mr. Aultman pronounced the benediction.

THE W. C. T. U. at Point Island, Minn., recently entertained a rousing county convention, and among other resolutions adopted the following. Would that our women generally would go and do likewise: "Resolved, That inasmuch as the wearing of trained dresses is compulsory at the courts of kings, it is a fashion that may well be set at naught by the women of a republic; and, since a style of dress which keeps a woman continually clutching at her garments detracts from her dignity and moral influence as well as from her freedom and comfort, and whereas, by the wearing of trains our sisters are made weak, we will wear no trains while the world stands."

THE lady managers of the Columbian Exposition have undertaken to furnish lodging and rooms for women of moderate means who shall visit the Exposition. An association has been formed for this purpose and certificates of stock will be issued for ten dollars per share, which will pay for twenty-five days' lodging at forty cents per day. But in order to make this provision for the women of the country, all who desire to receive the benefit of these low rates, and the protection offered by the lady managers, must purchase their shares soon. Further information will be given by application to Mrs. Helen M. Barker, 409 Rand-McNally Building, Chicago.

OUR brother, H. W. Adams, who established The Morning, and other good papers in the early days of the Crusade, has gone into an enterprise which seems to have an excellent idea at its root. He gets up the outside of a paper attractive in appearance, with interesting pictures and good type. He advertises this to temperance and other good objects. Printing by machinery and on a large scale, he can afford to send it quite cheaply to churches, Y. M. C. A.'s and W. C. T. U.'s for them to print on the inside whatever they like. He calls this the "patent outsides" and any one wishing to learn more about the plan can write to H. W. Adams, E. Elkhart, Indiana.

WOMEN are coming on and on in politics. Mrs. J. Ellen Foster is chairman of the Women's National Republican committee, and spoke before the Convention. Mrs. Lease and Mrs. Diggs, of the People's party, do the same. Mrs. Helen Gougar and other women spoke before the National Prohibition Convention, and the former is a member of its executive committee. Now comes an Associated Press dispatch showing that at last our Democratic brethren are taking in the situation:

"NEW YORK, June 29.—'The women did it in 1890,' said ex-Speaker Reed, 'the women will do it again in 1892.' With these words the first women's Democratic campaign club was born this afternoon. The speaker was Mrs. Mary Frost Ormsby, president of Frances Cleveland Club No. 1."

THE municipal authorities in Omaha, Nebraska, have recently proceeded to license gambling houses, and those whirlpools of destruction are now drawing in their victims from among our young men and boys. Doubtless there was gambling in Omaha before the license system prevailed, for a wickeder city the continent does not contain, but no orderly mind will fail to see that to have the law on the side of the gambler is a distinct lowering of the moral thermometer in Omaha. Such action helps to confuse the ideas of right and wrong in the mind of every person who knows that the city authorities have put the law so that it favors a great iniquity, for law is the mightiest educator that we know, and what we wish is that the women of Omaha had power to say what everybody knows they would say, "This shall not be."

"IF you are going South then go South,"—this was the slogan that nominated Rev. J. G. Cranfill, the chief Baptist preacher and leading temperance speaker and worker of Texas, who had the unanimous backing of his delegation for the Vice-Presidency. And this key-note was a true one. We of the North have long "hovered on the brink," declaring our love and trust toward our Southern brethren and sisters, but for this once we have proved it. Never before have we taken a candidate from any except border states; this time we have undoubtedly gone South—a thing no other party has dared to do. But if we are one country; if our faces are set toward the future rather than the past; if we mean the great words of the Civil War's great leader, then "Let us have peace," and what is more, let us henceforth work side by side in harness for the subsoiling of new fields, and the planting of new harvests whose golden fruitage shall be sobriety, equality and plenty for every human being that treads the soil of the Republic.

THE DISHONORED FLAG.

BY HENRY A. DELANO.

Patriots, blush! bow your heads in the dust;
  Go find ye a covert where freemen may hide;
Lower from capitol, state house, and staff
  That flag, that ye raised in the day of your pride.
Go furl it, and lower, and hide it away—
  For polluted, disgraced, defamed and abused,
At last it is twined at the portals of hell,
  Where gambler and cut throat are nightly amused;
Where virtue is ruined and honor is lost,
  Where happiness dies, and agony's born,
Where the gateway is lighted by torches that gleam
  In the Stygian gloom that never knows morn.
But the nation gives license, and revenue piles
  From your system of murder, poverty, rags—
When a nation has bartered its homes for saloons,
  Strikes hands with assassins, what matter your flags?

. . . . . .

Have ye forgotten your symbol and sign—
  Emblem of hope by our fathers unfurled?
Banner of peace that was flung on the morn
  That dawned on the sorrow and night of the world?
Prophets foresaw it and sages foretold,
  Tyrants resisted—their minions made ruth,
But bright o'er the ramparts of battle it waved,
  Fast-colored, deep-dyed, with freedom and truth.
Bullet-pierced, blackened, bayonet-rent,
  Baptized in blood that cost ye your son,
Ensign of sacrifice God only knew—
  Is this all that's treasured? this all that's won?
Symbol of purity, liberty, law,
  Honored and hailed over land, over sea,
God pity the nation forgetting its homes,
  And marking its byways to ruin—with thee!

Evanston, Ill.

[The saloons of Chicago were first and chief to drape their doors with the national flag during the recent National Democratic Convention.]

THROWING DICE ON A BIBLE.

BY MRS. F. G. DE FONTAINE.

Within sound of the chimes of Old Trinity there stands a well-known liquor saloon, whose grimy walls are so covered with cobwebs as to give them the appearance of being festooned with black drapery. Here gather night after night the sons of toil, to spend their hard earnings in riotous living. A few evenings since the place was crowded, the usual number of rounders being supplemented by a large outside contingent drawn thither by the rather anomalous announcement of a "Bible Raffle."

The book was a handsome one, and had been placed there by a person who said he had no use for it, and would rather have the money. As each of the blear-eyed, dissipated denizens went forward to shake the dice box, there was a roar of laughter, followed by any amount of chaff and blasphemous jesting. As the contest waxed hotter, a man, a little better dressed than the rest of them, was awakened from his slumbers and told to take a hand as he was always lucky. He staggered up to the counter, took the dice-box and threw the highest number. A shout went up from the boisterous crowd that gathered around him, each with a jest and a query as to what he was going to do with it. Where would he keep it? How much would he take for it? Would he stand treat, etc.?

The man seemed to become sober in a minute, and without noticing their jibes, took the holy book in his hands as tenderly as he would have lifted an infant, and said to the bar-tender, "Please wrap this in the cleanest piece of paper you have, Jim, but don't let it have the smell of whisky about it." Then turning to the amazed group, who watched with open-mouthed astonishment, he said: "Good-evening, gentlemen. It's the last time we'll meet here. I'm going home to make one of the best wives in the world the happiest woman in New York to-night;" and placing the Bible under his arm he passed out of the crowd, jeered by some but lustily cheered by others.

He walked rapidly in the direction of his squalid quarters, where from the flicker of a dim light he knew that his faithful wife awaited him, mounted the rickety stairs, and entering the room, walked straight up to where she sat sewing by a few expiring coals, and laid the heavy parcel on her lap. She started, and looking up with a faint semblance of the old and almost forgotten smile, said, "Why, you are early to-night, John." She saw that a change had come over him, and quietly opened the package, while he stood watching her. As the blessed book was revealed to her she burst into tears, and taking him by the hand said, "John, I've been thinking about you all day, and wondering if you would ever be your own, old self again, when I could feel proud of you as I used to—and while I was thinking little Agnes came up and putting her arms about my neck said, 'Mamma, why don't my papa have prayers and read his Bible as grandpapa does when we go to see him?' I could not answer her, John, but now you can."

"Yes, I'll answer her, wife; get me a pen and some ink."

The wife rose as in a trance, for it was the first time in weeks that he had come home sober; then he opened the fly-leaf and wrote upon it—"To my faithful wife whom I shall never again voluntarily cause a sorrow or a blush of shame.—John."

As she read it their tears mingled, and the bright lights of her far-away home seemed to glimmer in the distance. The present was forgotten, and they were once more respected citizens where his name had been a synonym for all that was honorable and loyal. It was almost morning when they retired, but new resolves had been taken, vows replighted, hopes revived and ambition stimulated. "I firmly believe, Nellie," said he, "that it was my father's hand that guided mine when I shook that dice box. He who had made the Bible his guide book knew the chord in my heart to touch, and that chord shall make the melody of my future life, and I shall never cease to bless the man who raffled that Bible."

New York City.

THE NEW DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

An oarsman fixes his eye upon the shore only to pull away.

He has his back to the bow only because he can pull more than he can push.

So let us look to-day at Independence Hall and keep it dead astern.

The sea of life is wide and wild and strange; we cannot know what lies beyond the rise of a day's journey, but we do know that nothing, for us, lies behind, except points to steer by.

Lot's wife was typical of nations, churches, parties, men that live "behind;" they become monuments of salt on which no history or prophecy or even any epitaph remains, whose deliquescent virtue scales in every rain and pours in brackish waste about their feet to sterilize the spot of earth they cumber.

Life to-day is far too serious and practical for men to bank on good they or their fathers did.

This, at least, is no time for looking backward, for winging all about the sky are auguries, and in all the air are odors of a San Salvador hard by—a fragment of the continent of the Forever.

There never is a time to stop, save when the Past seeks to invade the Future, and the Present has to change front to rear to defend its own offspring—history calls that "war."

Independence day looked wholly to the future—the past meant nothing to it, it meant everything to the past, and itself was nothing to the future, except the chrysalis of a new era.

So ever, when the great booby world has learned a lesson, it recites, then grumbling, turns to roll up its untidy "dog-ears" in a new volume; the future is all.

Calvary fronted future; Golgotha looked toward Europe, the new city of Jerusalem is west of Golgotha. And it was Jesus Christ of Golgotha who said: "He that would come after me let him take up his cross and follow me. His disciples were His chosen men to carry His emblem ahead of the people—not behind them—from Calvary to Calvary westward. Your cross is rubbish unless you have it with you.

Life's ledger goes by daily balances. The Independence of 1876 is an "old tale" unless we have it balanced forward, with its increment, to this morning. When Jacob bade adieu to Laban and dependence, he built a pile of rocks for a witness that he was never going back. And he said, "Mizpah, God shall guard the rear, I go to Canaan." "And he went his way and the angels of God met him." They always meet a man that goes devoutly.

Let hang the flag of thirteen stars limp in the stagnant century that is gone. Run up the banner of the forty-five into the living current of the present age, and let its free end kiss the hand of To-day to Yesterday in brave adieus.

To-day is the greatest event since time began, and to-morrow the day we celebrate, for faith in to-morrow is omnipotence and victory, and to-day is a dead waste unless we live it.

Some things are settled; let them be stricken from the trial calendar; pleas of mighty moment stand for hearing, among them all one paramount, namely: the status of the Christian citizen as such in politics.

This is a Christian country; its foundations were laid in the gospel; the compact of the Mayflower was signed "for the advancement of the Christian faith, and for the glory of God"; our fathers braved the seas, the snow, the savages, seeking not freedom merely, but freedom to worship God, and from that beginning to this hour our history has been a lyric, epic, romance of liberty through Jesus Christ.

But if you come to analyze the fighting strength of the republic you will be shocked to find, as you will be to hear me say, that the Christian man as such, cannot be counted on.

In the world's broad field of battle,
  In the bivouac of life,
You will find the Christian soldier
  Represented by his wife.

The Christian citizen is in the fight, but not in that character, except as a contract chaplain at military posts, an honorary supernumerary in legislatures, a nurse or a sister of charity; the fighting Christian is in all camps indifferently, under all flags, faced both ways, the express type of political felo-de-se, but he is incognito, and after battles he appears in the record as "unknown dead" or simply "missing."

As to much of political action it is natural and right for Christian men to be divided, but as to some, division means stupidity or apathy or treachery; such is the problem of the drink traffic, which is indeed not a problem at all, but a fight or a flight. How do I explain the recent proposal for church saloons? I do not. I would as lief try to explain the Dismal Swamp; at such a thing one can only shudder; but on its premises, namely, the "final perseverance" of the saloon, and the "apostolic succession" of dram-sellers, I concede the logic of an "established church" of the immaculate doggery. I must not be counted among carpers at the church; on the contrary, I hope nothing for our cause except at her hands; the world has unlimited capacity of adjustment to the saloon, and will never abolish it; but we shall be more ready for to-morrow by taking a clear look at to-day, and if I seem to criticise the church it is because I love her much and suffer much at her reproach, and it would be disingenuous to deny that there is reproach upon her.

The liquor traffic is a political and commercial system, colossal, sagacious, rich, powerful, far beyond any personal entreaty or rebuke or social ostracism, and straight through the various phases of temperance reform has risen like a spring tide, and we have simply tried to disparage and discourage it by "taking a collection," and it has with cheerful alacrity dropped into the federal and municipal plate, yearly, some hundreds millions dollars, each dollar marked "In God we trust." What delicious sarcasm! And the church has prayed over the wolfish, bloody, damnable offertory, and a government agent waits on every worm of the still and every brewer's spiggot and stamps the packages "U. S."—US.

Beyond any question, the present effrontery and power of the saloon are due to license laws. At my old home a vine of bitter-sweet came up at the root of a fine young elm tree; it was a pretty, delicate, twining thing and I turned it so it might climb the tree; it did climb, in graceful, spiral rings to the very top, and the tree was beautiful, the long tendrils of the vine hung down on every side; I pinched off the tender shoots as they multiplied so as to obstruct the path, and the more I did so, the stronger grew the trunk coils. I planted vines by all my young trees, it made them look so brave and lively; I thought how strange that nature had not planted vines and trees in pairs. I have seen "why" recently; my beautiful elm is a dead stalk with the vine embedded in its body, itself spiral now, conformed to the constricting cord of the beautiful Thug . . . so the Christian republic, guileless, devoted trellis of the liquor traffic for so many years, stands all deformed and corkscrew-shaped to-day in the deadly spiral of commercial and political whisky rings; but alive, thank God! and still powerful, for her good right hand is free; the church is its palm, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor, the Salvation Army and the Society for the Prevention of Crime are the fingers, and the Prohibition party the thumb; I see it reaching out for "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon."

It is not union of the church and state I advocate, but union of the church to save the state. It seems to me that from a slavish old ecclesiasticism we have swung over to a childish and impractical spiritism that sighs and prays, "Oh, Lord, make us right or about right," "Thy kingdom come," gradually. We need to rig ratchets on our Sunday Christians to hold them up to the crank during the week.

The reproach and weakness of the church is can't—"can't elect," "can't enforce," "can't prevent"; the saloonkeeper is a man who can, and he does, and he will until Christian voters leave off their "t." In Minnesota it takes a brave bird to stand the winter; at my window one evening, when the mercury was falling rapidly and the fine snow flew like powdered glass, a blue-jay swung on the tree top and shouted, "Hit-him-a-lick, hit-him-a-lick," and away down on the icy trunk a sap sucker piped back, "Can't." Next morning the sap-sucker lay dead on the drift, but the jay swung in the dizzy top and shouted, "Hit-him-a lick!" but of course the sap-sucker couldn't.

The church is overstocked with sap-suckers. Many of our Christian men are brave enough, but are waiting for light, as to methods, not reflecting that power and light are so correlated that when you get one you have the other, as in the case of an electric motor, when the trolley is on the wire overhead, it goes and has light. You say you can't see? You are disconnected; reach up, and touch God and you will see because you go.

But the simple fact is that the average Christian voter, as such, has no defined status in politics; the convention does not regard him for he does not regard himself; he is willing public conscience shall be shot provided the bullet be gold; he is agreed that public virtue be hanged if the rope be silken.

But the greatest movement of history is just commencing, the W. C. T. U., the Salvation Army, the Y. P. S. C. E., the S. P. V. are part of it. They are distinctly born of the church, which, criticise it as you may, is the sole hope, and not a forlorn hope either, of this government and this world.

Our fathers rebelled against non-representation in a foreign court; comes now the greater rebellion against misrepresentation in our own. They fought for independence, we fight for inclusion and the right of line in honest government. It is high time.

The will of God is "House File number one" in every civilized Congress. Who stands for that at Washington? What business has Jesus Christ at Albany? None, whatever, save what He has equally at Sing Sing.

Federal, state and municipal legislation ignores the Christian man, or worse still, makes him seem to say in ordinance and statute, there is no God but policy, and party is His prophet. For instance, the Chinese exclusion bill, in violation alike of contract and conscience, could not have become a law without the consent of a Christian President; but it has gone, a slimy, cringing, dastard thing, into the literature of bad faith and is the law—the price of votes to be got for it ferœ naturœ—"on the hoof," as cattlemen say. And henceforth our missionaries to China ought to preach Janus instead of Jesus, "for the sake of euphony." My church will celebrate to-day by spurning that and any candidate that stands for that.

Again, the trend of population is to cities; the trend of cities is to the political enthronement of the vicious, and the trend of the vicious is to lower drifts of baseness. It is not easy to say whether Republican government in American cities is simply lunacy or grand larceny. The gambler and "Madame" bawd confer with mayors elect as to the policy of each new administration, and the police confess their inability to more than "hold their own" with criminals, and to be an alderman is, ipso facto, to be a "suspect."

The cause is alcoholic in the main. The cardiac artery of the municipal body politic is the liquor traffic pulsing with the rhythm and resistless might of law, pumping torpor into the industries, poverty into the home, paralysis into the spine, and insanity, vice and crime into the brain of citizenship, and never resting, any more than the heart of a man rests this side the grave, and all this hellish enginery has piety for its balance-wheel, for I need scarcely remind you that every recognized saloon in the states, except the two in the capitol at Washington, are steadied and regulated by being belted on to the church by license laws. The figure is no stretch of truth, for the principle of license is an alloy of piety with cowardice, hypocricy and greed.

A municipal corporation has no soul or body, it is true, but it has a moral character, and the greatest municipal question to-day is whether moral character is a thing to contend for, when by treating it as a commodity we can sell it in our own streets and alleys for a fair equivalent for such stuff, cash in hand: The matter bristles with economic questions which I do not touch, because they are not worth the breath of a busy man; but although the commercial theory of piety went down at Aceldama, yet, it seems to-day that, in politics, the purse of the disciples is carried by Judas Iscariot redivivus, for the saloon-keeper, fitly representing the whole spawn of crime, is not afraid to say to the Christian citizenry, "You have virtue, what will you take for it for a year?" and we have hawked our principles so long, that now we put a tag upon the public conscience every year and expose it in the city hall for sale, before we are asked to sell; and the orthodox excuse for the baseness is, that to decline to sell would tempt the potential ravisher to use force; to prevent that, we are advised to yield and compound the felony, in advance, for money; we do. And the Christian state becomes the mistress of the Christian church's deadliest enemy.

Again, four-fifths of the Christian power of the commonwealth is ungeared from the political main-shaft, because it belongs to women, who could not if they would give it to men, and the church weakly adjourns from year to year without a quorum, and the world wags its head, saying, "She would save others, herself she cannot save." And Christian men, "blown" like bird's eggs, so they will not spoil, are kept by political collectors in cabinets as curios. I propose we stop that, and before we grind another grist, belt on the power of women.

Martin Luther's Reformation was a toy compared to this, if we could celebrate to-day an end of that; for if it could run through the land to-morrow morning that Christian men had united to-day in a new declaration of independence, the liquor dealer and his cousin germane, the "practical politician," would "fold their tents like the Arabs and as silently steal" something and leave the country for the country's good. For the liquor traffic has been tried and convicted, but by bribery of the judges, has been reprieved from year to year; let it be called now for sentence. It is nonchalant but nervous; it has millions of slaves and patrons, but few friends, and every friend it has is a traitor to something else. Are the judges purchasable this year? Yes, and worse than that, men in high places—leaders, statesmen, who are called Christians—sneer at the prosecutor and call him fool, and knave; but let them have a care at whom they sneer!

"Hear the word of the Lord God; thus saith the Lord God, because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it was profaned, and against the land of Israel when it was desolate, and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity. Behold, therefore, I will deliver thee to the men of the East for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, and shall make their dwellings in thee. They shall eat thy fruit and they shall drink thy milk; and I will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching place for flocks; and ye shall know that I am the Lord."

The temple of God on the earth is the family; the real sanctuary of godliness and patriotism in this country is the American home. Drink is the great profaner of that sanctuary, the arch-insulter of virtue, the scourge of motherhood and desolater of the land, yet the men who make war upon the drink traffic are more jeered at than sneaks and hypocrites. There are Ammonites amongst us in Christian America; let a man offer himself in wager of battle, champion of the home against that traffic, and forthwith the whole pack, "little dogs and all, Blanche, Tray, Sweetheart, see, they bark at him."

And the mother's cry goes on, up to the powers and high places of state and nation and refuses to be silent because of the slaughter of her children, and the crowd says, "Aha!" Women organize and ask for champions or suffrage to defend against the saloon, and religious newspapers, which claim to represent the better sentiment of the community, say, "Aha!" Great churches sit in convention, consider the saloon and say, "It cannot be legalized without sin," but the Christian voter goes his way, treating the matter as a ghastly joke, and says, "Aha!" and the saloon-keeper answers him back, "Aha!" and the two deposit in the ballot-box duplicate expressions of opinion on public affairs, and the devil says, "Aha!" The people petition the legislature for a hearing on the subject of the saloon, and the legislators, servants of theirs, say, "Aha!" An office of great trust and power is to be filled, the people say, "Let us have no man who is friendly to our enemy," and the caucus says, "Aha!" and name a man who offers wine to every guest and scorns the God who says, "Look not upon the wine." Christian people ask their leaders to stand for the outlawry of the liquor traffic, and the man from California says, "We make better wine than Jesus made at Cana"; his party catches the jest, and says, "Aha!" A town adopts prohibition, the saloon across the way says, "Aha!" for while the imaginary line that bounds the town will stop the officer, it does not stop the boy who is baited by the drink. The city makes a patrol limit, the saloon within the line says, "Aha!" and puts a placard on the bar, "Remember the patrol limit, take home a bottle." And the bottle goes home, and from some cranny in the wretched place peers out upon the sorrowful wife and children and says, "Aha!" The state declares for prohibition and the federal government says, "Aha!"

I am not here to teach you history, but I wish to recall the fact that in the confederation of the states they gave the government control of commerce with foreign countries and between states, and that was wise, but the states would not have given up that power if they could have foreseen that in the future it would be used to hurt their people and make local self government a lie, but strange to say, that time has come and that event has happened, happens now.

There is a tradition in this country that the people rule, and that public officers are public servants. A citizen of Kansas who believed this, applied to the collector of internal revenue for the names of men in that state who had paid to the federal government the retail liquor dealer's special tax for that year. The collector answered him, "I cannot give you the names." "Then," said the fanatic, "let me see the books, I have a right to." "So you have," said the collector, "but it would do you no good. I am instructed by the department to keep the books so that they will not convey to you any information. It would not be right for the government to issue licenses to those men and then furnish evidence to detect them in the crime of using them. Do you see? Aha!"

Again, Iowa has a prohibitory law, and under it has made good progress against the saloons in that state. Marshalltown, one of her finest cities, was free from the drink. Barnum's circus came there to exhibit, and a great crowd attended; many men were drunk. Investigation showed that the Chicago dealer had shipped to Marshalltown a carload of whisky and a carload of beer. The beer was in bottles packed in straw in a car, and the whisky was in bottles nailed up in little wooden boxes. The whisky seller denied the authority of Iowa to prevent shipping whisky into the state in that way, and on a trial in the Supreme Court of the United States it was held that these were original packages within the meaning of the revenue law, that it was legal to ship them into Iowa, and by a necessary inference to sell them there, and Iowa stood dismayed at her helplessness, until Congress said to the states, in substance, "I am the liquor dealer's friend, and shall give him safe conduct within your boundaries with his wares, so that as between you two there shall be a fair field and no favor. Catch him if you can; Aha!"

Again, in the capital of Iowa to-day, there sat, or may have sat, an officer of yours and mine, the collector of internal revenue for that district, when a man entered or may have entered and asked for the collector, who, greeting him, said: "What is your name?" "My name is Aaronsdorf." "Where do you live?" "I live in Sioux City." "What is your business?" "I have no business, now. I have been for the last few years engaged in defending myself from the charge of killing a preacher, without license, for meddling with my business; I have been acquitted by a jury of my beers. Now I desire to return to Sioux City and retail whisky there, and I would like authority from the United States government to do so." And what does this officer of ours do? Kicks this insulter of the government out of the office? Oh, no, he doesn't; he says, "Certainly, have a seat while I make out the paper; it will cost you $25." And John Aaronsdorf goes back to Sioux City to be a criminal by the laws of his state, but he will carry with him the certificate, the letter of credit, the diploma of the federal government, and as he steps across the bloody place where Haddock fell, will chuckle to himself, "Aha!"

Again, Maine has a prohibitory law. A shipload of gin anchored, or might have anchored to-day, in the harbor of Portland, and is ordered off by the state. The master applies to the federal government for instructions. What instructions does he get? "Land your merchandise in Maine and ship it in original packages into every hamlet in the state, and I will stand by you!" and the government, which threatened to hang her own citizens in South Carolina for the nullification of federal law, in Jackson's time, deliberately protects a foreign insulter, nullifier of the law of Maine.

The flag of the sovereign Commonwealth of Maine floats over the harbor of Portland; this Dutch gin seller sees it; he cannot land his cargo in the face of that emblem of sovereignty, and so he lays hands upon the halyards to lower it. Let us imagine the governor of Maine telegraphs to Washington, "A Dutch gin seller from Holland proposes to land a cargo of gin at this port despite the sovereignty of this state, and is now lowering the flag of Maine, and a Dutch fleet is in the offing. What shall we do?" and the telegraph clicks back the answer: "Aha!" A little later another message comes to the authorities at Washington, "He has our flag on the ground, stamps it, is tearing it to shreds." And the answer comes back, "Aha!"

And this is the government that was formed by the states to insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the public safety, and secure the blessings of liberty; and to-day the saloon stands with its foot upon the neck of American citizenship and says to the government: "Wait. Don't disturb me; he has twelve hundred millions of dollars in his pocket; wait till I get it and I will give you ten per cent of the swag."

"The men of the east" were the lawless men, they are coming, the criminals of every nation, and their gin palaces have the right of way against our boys, and do they not eat our fruit? There is many a sick woman in this country to night with lips parched with fever to whom the taste of fruit would be delicious, healing medicine, but she can't have it because the money that should be hers has gone to the saloon; but no saloon-keeper's wife or child needs to go without fruit.

There is many a pitiful little voice in this country to-night, crying for milk that it cannot have because its father is a drunkard, and a pauper in consequence, but no saloon-keeper's child need be without milk.

Down on your knees, you men who love your country, you Christian men, and pray God to avert the prophecy and save us from ourselves.

No, rather up, up from your knees, catch step with the Son of God, plait a scourge of Christian ballots and lash from the temple of our liberty the last money-changer; and let us stand or fall for righteousness, and let the priests lead or leave.

Celebrate that!

[Fourth of July address delivered at Prohibition Park, Stater Island, 1892.]

DARKEST ENGLAND'S DUSTBIN.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

A SALVATION ARMY SALE.

Cross Battersea Bridge, turn down the first muddy street on your left hand, and ring a crippled bell which hangs from a rickety postern. The door will be opened by some poor waif with lean shanks, haggard face, and patched garments, and you will find yourself in the great yard which General Booth wishes to convert into a national dustbin for the benefit of Darkest England. Two great dust heaps strike your eye at once—two mysterious monsters, which would have made old Mr. Boffin jump for joy. Mysterious mounds which may contain anything, from a diamond to a will, but as a rule are composed of old hats, bits of glass, old brass, old rags, old boots, old trousers, ashes, old boxes—the sweepings of the house. Darkest England's "strays" are turning over the rubbish, and sort, sort, sort. Grimy, dusty strays, dragged in from the gutters—waifs and wanderers whose past life no one ever penetrates. However, here they are, earning their food and a pittance, with bed, society and a roof overhead.

These dust-heaps form but one section of the work at the Salvation Wharf. In a great shed more waifs are sawing wood which goes to the dosser's chopper. In a room upstairs you see old tins being stamped out into penny toys, penny lamps, and so on. But the room below is the greatest curiosity. Here are stocked a most extraordinary collection of articles. The floor is strewn with battered old baths, broken chairs and beds, boxes of old locks, clocks that won't go, boxes of keys and nails, fenders, fireirons, bird-cages, sewing-machines, gasogenes, coffee-mills, teapots, surgical instruments, crockery, chandeliers, hall-lamps, milk-cans, toilet fittings, scales, saucepans, concertinas, card-tables, portmanteaus, tennis-bats, bicycles, Indian clubs, meat-safes and, positively, even a policeman's rattle. Suspended from nails in the pillars which support the roof hang a variety of cast-off clothes, from a pair of baby's socks to the soiled dress of a fashionable lady. In odd corners are piles of old boots, shoes and slippers, most of them the worse for wear. On the walls hang pictures which range from Shakespeare to Mrs. Booth. Piled up in other corners are hundreds of sticks and umbrellas. Ranged round the room on benches are many curious odds and ends, such as microscopic slides, dissecting knives, gravy ladles, kettle-drums, and a complete Punch and Judy show. Nor must we forget the hundreds of old hats and caps which are contained in yonder apoplectic bags.

For months past this collection has been accumulating. The method is simple. London is cut up into districts, each of which is canvassed by the Salvation Army soldiers—a door-to door canvass—very searching and very complete. "Have you anything for us?" says the canvasser, if he can get his foot inside the door. Having once effected an entry, which is not always easy, his business is to talk the householder, his wife, or his children into a promise of household wreckage. "None at present." "May I call again another day?" Like all canvassing the work is arduous, and requires a seraphic temper, for General Booth has many enemies, who will not even give their rags and bones to such a beggar.

In spite of many rebuffs, then, the collection has grown daily, and to-day and to-morrow the Darkest England goods will be sold by auction at one o'clock each day. The address is Salvage Wharf, Wellington Road, Battersea.

A penny boat will take you nearly all the way. Although the collection is the worse for wear, there are many bargains to be picked up out of the six hundred lots. If you are curious to know more of the working of this novel branch of the Social Wing Scheme, Captain Body, who is in charge of the wharf, will give any information. The paper-sorting and rag-picking are extremely interesting sections which are in full swing. And if you have any odds and ends to give away, send a postal card and ask the Darkest England van to call.

London, England.

PUBLIC COMFORT AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

Who ever before heard of comfort of any kind at a fair of any kind? No one, of course, but then what fair ever before had a board of lady managers? That makes the difference. There is no doubt that women know how to condition comfort if they choose to exercise themselves in that direction. There was a private concession of the sort at the Philadelphia Centennial, but never has it been a department of any exposition. The idea originated with the ladies, who planned rooms adjoining the model hospital, furnished with couches, where old people, invalids, sufferers from sudden faintness, children temporarily ill, and the weak and aweary of all ages might lie down to recuperate.

Major Marsh Kasson, who obtained the concession in Philadelphia, has been consulted, and expresses the opinion that eight buildings will be needed at different points upon the grounds for "comfort" purposes, and advised that the directorate provide them. He estimates that fully eighty per cent of the visitors will in some way avail themselves of the privileges to be found there, and will remain longer on that account. If the twenty million guests expected arrive, it may prove one of the best paying arrangements the directorate can make. Major Kasson will be the chief of the department. He plans for buildings opposite the two main entrances, which will be headquarters for the people, and give them resting places free of charge. He thinks if stands are there, furnished with refreshments and toilet articles for those who wish to purchase, that the service may be made to yield some income.

The ladies have one scheme, however, in which "male" men will have no dominating hand, namely, a "check your baby, ma'am?" building, known as the Children's Palace. Most of these fair managers have had babies, some of them have taken the baby to the fair, and can think just what a relief it would have been to have his princeship safely cared for while mamma examined a crazy quilt, for instance, without him to clamor for the bright pieces.

The lady managers announce that "Mothers whose children cannot otherwise be cared for, can leave them in the children's building, where crèche and other associations will assume the care of the young visitors, furnishing suitable refreshments and ministering to their wants with tenderest care. Older children will be under the wise direction of kindergartners, who hope by showing their influence over children untrained in kindergarten methods to prove the value of their system, and of their study of children's needs and nature, which can thus be done more fully than by maintaining a kindergarten in the building.

What method of receipting, or identifying the babies will be used is not yet made public, but an enterprising reporter of one of the great dailies has anticipated the plan and states that, "Each child will be checked, and the mother can carry in her pocket the brass tag that will entitle her to her babe when she has tired of sight-seeing." He seems not to have thought of the contingency if she should have a hole in her pocket, or encounter a pick-pocket, or any of the many vicissitudes by which a woman and her "check" part company.

There will be a play-room where all can have suitable toys and games under direction of those in charge of the room. That the Children's Home will rival in interest even the Woman's Building, there can be no doubt. It will have all the attractions of an orphan asylum, with subjects of sad reflection eliminated. What a sight to see the sturdy son of a beef-eating British sire cooing to the cruelly dainty-slippered infanta of a Mandarin, or to behold the white fingers of a chubby Norwegian buried in the black wool of some babe from the dark continent!

South Dakota was the first state to contribute to the building fund. It is believed that the enterprise will appeal strongly to the girls of every state, and that they will undertake to raise funds by colonial teas, apron sales and other of the numerous devices for money-making which they are continually springing upon unwary mankind.

The Illinois women are trying to get space to erect a model dwelling house, the cost of which is not to exceed $5,000. The idea is to get all modern conveniences for a medium sized family into a house of moderate cost. The Sunday question and the liquor question are still at every feast of the directorate. A petition of several yards' length favoring Sunday closing, covered with double signatures in Chinese hieroglyphics, has been received from the National W. C. T. U. of China.

A number of prominent divines are concerned with plans, somewhat in line with Mrs. Henry's, for making the Columbian-Exposition-Sabbath subservient to man, rather than for absolute closing of the gates. Dr. Talmage recommends an appeal for the Saturday half-holiday during the session of the Fair, and then that the great preachers of the world who will be here, hold services in all places on the ground which will admit of such use. That the United States government exhibit will be closed on Sunday, is an assured fact, and Chief Director Davis says it has never been proposed to have the machinery in motion on that day. The sale of liquors will also be forbidden in the government exhibit.

The committee on religious congresses, of which Rev. John H. Barrows, D. D., is chairman, is arranging a series of conferences in order to bring together the mightiest leaders of religious thought in the world. Not only Protestant and Roman, but Jew and Greek, Buddhist and Brahman, Confucian, Parsee and Mohammedan, will be invited to "sit together in frank and friendly conference over the great things of our common spiritual and moral life." To many this feature of the Exposition will be more attractive than all that the brain of man has conceived to be executed by his hand. All our own great thinkers approve—what nation has greater?—and Cardinal Gibbons, Mr. Gladstone and other mighty men of the east have written letters indorsing the project. It is interesting to note that Cardinal Gibbons says: "If conducted with moderation and good-will, such a congress may result in benefits more far-reaching than the most sanguine could dare hope for"; while Mr. Gladstone says: "I look more to improved views and conceptions of individuals than to the adoption o. formulated plans for the promotion of religious unity." Nevertheless he thinks the comprehensiveness of the plan may serve to educate and widen the individual so he gives it his cordial good wishes. The grand, clear-headed old man knows that the unit, the kingdom of heaven, is the individual. The one way of promoting it among men is to labor for improved views and broader conceptions by the individual.

The Woman's Branch of religious congresses will holda mass-meeting in one of the large churches of Chicago, where addresses will be made by prominent women in the religious world. The Salvation Army has applied for a congress under that department of the congress auxiliary known as the department of moral and social reform, desiring to show the success of General Booth's great scheme of moral and social reform in England and other countries.

The autograph fiend has already preferred his request, asking space for a mammoth album, with capacity for a million names, to be thrice duplicated, one album to be kept in the mayor's office of Chicago, one in the gubernatorial archives of Illinois, and one in the White House.

President Harrison has received his invitation to the Fair, bound in an exquisitely-worked cover of brown seal, with corners of filagree silver and the legend, "1492–1892" richly inlaid upon the outside. Inside, the frontispiece bears the name, beautifully illuminated, "Benjamin Harrison." It is believed the honored gentleman will accept this handsome substitute for a "gate ticket."

There is every reason to believe that the handiwork of women will be no mean feature of the great Exposition. Letters are coming daily from women in every quarter of the globe, testifying their interest. The Queen of the Belgians has become the patroness of the women's committee in that country; Russian authorities are collecting fine specimens of women's work in all their provinces, which will be brought to this city at the expense of the Russian government. A special consignment of exquisite rugs has been received at headquarters here from the women of Syria. Turkish women have applied for a sherbet booth in the Woman's Building. The German Woman's Commission is making special efforts to exhibit the industries of the poor. The enthusiasm aroused last year is everywhere bringing forth fruit.

Chicago, Ill.

SHALL SHE PREACH?

BY L. E. DODGE.

In a report from a Young People's meeting, in a recent number of a religious paper, we read the following words:

"The committee recommend the accumulation of a sum of money as a fund for educating and assisting young men for the ministry. . . . . The need of encouraging more of our young men to enter the ministry is so manifest . . . . that they call for speedy action, etc."

The query presents itself: Why educate only the young men for the ministry? Why call the young men only to preach the Gospel? Why not recommend a fund of money to assist young women to prepare themselves to preach the Word? Why not say there is need of encouraging more young women to enter the ministry?

Woman has succeeded as a gospel worker in those fields commonly considered "suitable" for woman to work in, and "the brethren" have welcomed her as an efficient co-laborer so long as she kept her place. But grown bolder, woman has begun to question the time-honored limits to "her place," and hearing the voice Divine saying, "I have set before you an open door and no man can shut it," has claimed her right to enter every God-opened door, even when it led into the gospel ministry.

Ecumenical councils and general conferences, alarmed at the thought that woman might "belittle her dignity" and "degrade her womanhood" by "forgetting her place," in solemn deliberation decide that woman must not preach; but they come out from their council hall to find she is preaching and will not stop even to ask their decision upon the momentous question.

Two things have been proved by the woman movement—that woman can preach, and that God blesses her work in the ordained ministry. This being the fact, why not set this open door very wide, and encourage the young women to become preachers of the everlasting Word?

There are those who acknowledge the success of woman in the ministry in exceptional instances, who are not ready to give voice to this call. Said a pastor with whose church a woman was working as evangelist, "I admit that God has called some women to preach, but they are exceptions to the rule." It is quite probable there will be few women called to preach as compared with the many who find their life-work in some other field; but is it not also true that few men are in the ministry, compared with the many engaged in business pursuits? If this man meant to say that God wanted just enough women preachers to add to the interest and draw a crowd for their brothers in the work, all women will not agree with him. The door is not only open to them, but there is a great call for more woman's work in the gospel ministry.

A few years ago a young woman went to one of the leading Home Mission Boards and asked to be sent out as a worker in the needy fields of our own land. The reply was, "Marry a minister and we can then send you to a mission field as the wife of a home missionary; we cannot send you otherwise." One obstacle stood in the way of carrying out this admirable plan—the minister needing a wife did not present himself, and the board did not agree to supply the need! That young woman, now pastor of a church in a western state to which she went soon after her interview with the board, sends this message to other young women: "If God has set before you an open door, no man, or even a mission board can shut it."

But some one says in alarm, "We dare not encourage young women to study for the ministry. If they are to preach, let God call them."

True, the call to the ministry must be from God. A young woman attempting to preach the gospel without this divine call, will find she has gone up to battle without the Lord, and must certainly meet failure. But the same is true of the young man. Why should they not stand upon the same footing, and be treated impartially?

The mother, holding in her arms the little son, consecrates him to God and prays he may be a herald of the Redeemer. The other mother, holding in her arms the daughter of her love, would gladly give this darling burden to God and to humanity, but—"it is only a girl!"

The young man hears the moan of this sin-cursed earth, and gives his life to leading sinners to the Cross. The young woman, hearing the same moan, is thrilled to her soul's core with the same wish to help, and is encouraged to take a class in a mission Sunday-school or marry a home missionary!

It is time to be done with such foolish distinctions. If the young woman hears the word, "Go, preach"; if the warm hand of God touches and sanctifies and endues her lips, let her answer, "Here I am, Master, send me!"

Salem, Neb.

CARBONATE OF AMMONIA.

BY ELLEN B. BRADLEY.

Probably comparatively few of your readers have heard of carbonate of ammonia, and fewer yet know its value as a substitute for alcohol as a stimulant. In every family cases of faintness or collapse are liable to occur from illness or accident, when we must act without the advice of a physician. Alcohol is the time-honored remedy, still approved by many medical authorities, and however we dislike to use it, the life of another is at stake. Our consciences and the demands of friends drive us to action; not knowing anything else to do we give alcohol, trembling lest it be a blunder medically, as we know it to be socially. High medical authorities differ as to whether it raises or lowers the heart's action. Anti-temperance people are sure to triumph over our using it, even in a life and death emergency.

A vial of solution of carbonate of ammonia kept in the medicine closet saves the dilemma. Socially, it is unexceptionable; medically, it is better than alcohol in any form as a stimulus to the circulation. It is one of the best agents known for strengthening the flagging heart and restoring consciousness by increasing the blood supply of the brain.

Says the United States Dispensatory: "In appropriate doses it has the advantage over alcohol that it leaves no depression behind it. Its efficacy in the treatment of bites of venomous serpents and insects and in alcoholic intoxication is, in a great degree, due to its stimulant action, but the extraordinary rapidity with which, when applied locally, it arrests the pain and inflammation of insect bites, and, when taken internally, suspends even a high degree of drunkenness, seems to show that it exerts also a more direct antidotal power. Its stimulant quality renders it useful in faintness, syncope, nervous spasms, etc., and when mixed with sal ammoniac and scented with an aromatic oil, it forms the usual smelling salts employed to relieve the symptoms just referred to."

It is easily soluble in water and the acrid taste may be lessened by adding mucilage, sugar or licorice. Five grains to a teaspoonful of water is an ordinary stimulant dose for an adult, though half of that amount is often sufficient. In large quantities, twenty to thirty grains, the drug acts as an emetic.

The vial should be kept in a safe place and used only in an emergency or by the order of a physician. Doubtless one might come to depend on it as upon other stimulants if habitually used. It may even be a fatal poison, for taken in sufficient quantities it will produce convulsions and death. It has its dangers but they are far less than those of alcohol, and we may joyfully welcome it as a substitute to be used and not abused.

Castleton Corners, N. Y.

"PATIENCE is a most necessary qualification for business. Many a man would rather you heard his story than granted his request. One must seem to hear the senseless demands of the petulant unmoved, and the tedious details of the dull untired. That is the least price that a man must pay for a high station."

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.
AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., The Temple, La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, 57 Gordon Square, N. W.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.

President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 57 Gordon Square, N. W. London, Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Assistant Secretary—ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

Whoever is in a hurry shows that the thing he is about is too big for him. Haste and hurry are two very different things.

FARMER JOHN'S SOLILOQUY.

I mout as well acknowledge, 'taint no use o' beatin' 'round,
I've done a heap o' thinkin' plowin' up this faller ground,
An' suthin's been a painin' an' achin' me like sin—
I reckoned 'twas dyspepsy or malary creepin' in.

At last I got my dander up, an' to myself sez I,
The biggest fool in natur's him that tells hisself a lie;
I've been lettin' on 'tis malary, an' my stummick, when I know
It's my conscience that's a-hurtin' an' worryin' me so.

I've been a shirkin' this here thing for thirty year or more,
An' I orto had this shakin' up an' settin' down afore.
I've been honest fur as payin' goes, not a penny do I owe,
But the kind o' cheatin' that I done was the kind that didn't show.

My mind goes back to Hanner, when I fetched her here a bride;
No apple bloom was sweeter, an' she nussled to my side
Like she thought she had a right to, an' could trust me without fear,
For the love I never hinted at for more'n thirty year.

There was churnin', bakin', bilin', there was nussin', an' the rest,
From long afore the sun riz till he slumbered in the west;
An' when the rest of us was done, an lollin' round on cheers,
Hanner was recuperatin' with her needle and her shears.

But when the life was ebbin' from that faithful, patient heart,
I had to face the music—I hadn't done my part;
And I couldn't help a-thinkin', watchin' out that weary life,
That there's other ways of killin', 'xcept a pistol or a knife.

It sounds like sacreligion, but I know jist what she meant
As I whispered, "Fly to meet me when my airthly life is spent"—
"I'm tired, John, so tired; but I've allus done my best,
An' I may feel more like flyin' when I've had a spell o' rest."

—Selected.

***

During the session of the Federation of Woman's Clubs Professor David Swing discriminated after this far-reaching and generous fashion:

The convention of woman's clubs awakens thoughts of that day, not far off, when here and there a woman dared publish some words in favor of a wider liberty and arena for her race. When a woman spoke in the name of her cause her audience was small and otherwise insignificant. A few persons of some standing tiptoed their way into a back seat, and then took pains to explain that they were present in the name of a passing curiosity. With a great scholarly snicker they would explain next day to the village parson that they went last night to hear that woman speak; went just for fun; but heard some things that were not so bad after all. To which confessions the parson would say kindly: "She is an eccentric character, very fond of notoriety, wants to see her name in the newspaper." And having uttered such profound words, the preacher would hurry on to the village printing office to hand in his theme of discourse for the next Sunday.

The scene in this city last week differs greatly from that little affair of forty years ago. Next year when the nations shall compare notes on this lake shore, the Woman's Building, with its contents and with its history and associations, will bring the blush of shame to those souls who stood in woman's way when her cause was new and her sorrows great.

Fifty years ago she came as a babbler. We can look back and can say: She was a babbler, but only because we did not know eloquence when we heard it. In those days the majority of us thought that eloquence was the voice of a white man who was running for Congress. We had no idea that it could be contained in the dialect of a negro or in the soft tones of a woman. All these old follies are dying. We are on the margin of a period when the terms man and woman will be displaced by the word "humanity." Woman's Building was once a slave pen. It afterwards became a tinseled parlor. It will be seen next year in greater proportions. A hundred years hence it will not be designated as Woman's Building; it will be called the Temple of Humanity. It will contain the human race.

Frances E. Willard

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?—Mark 4: 39, 40.

Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, the famous Unitarian minister, told his church that "in summing up the gains of Chicago in all goodness during the year past he considered the Woman's Temperance Temple as standing at the head of Chicago's moral, financial and æsthetic successes." Yet the gem of all the building, Willard Hall, is not yet completed, and we are sorry to say it looks now as though it will not be before the first of October. The room is full of scaffolding, and men are at work decorating the ceiling and putting in the electric lights. The whole ceiling is studded with them, and they will flash out with the soft luster of stars in the sky, some arranged in groups, others singly. There are one hundred and fifty of these lights set in the ceiling, thus giving the effect of a bit of sky studded with stars. The decoration of the ceiling and frieze will be completed in a few weeks, but the marble tablets which are to line the hall, and which had to be fitted with great exactness, are now being prepared in Italy, also the marble for the pillars. The noble corridor, 120 feet long by 14 feet wide, leading to Willard Hall, is about finished. To say that it is beautiful is but faint praise. Its vaulted ceiling is of white Italian marble, and its gleaming walls of exquisitely tinted French marbles framed in pure white; pilasters at regular distances of French; agate then, again a large section of it is carried out in white marble framed in a delicate shade of warm, drab Barbon marble, the wainscoting throughout of the same lovely material. The floor is paved in most beautiful designs of Florentine mosaic. It is not asserting too much to say no more beautiful corridor is to be found on this side of the Atlantic.

***

A brief biographical sketch of Jane E. Weeden has been sent us for publication. We are filled with profound respect and gratitude for this noble and unselfish woman, who, when she had not one cent in her pocket, went out in faith to raise $1,000 for the Temple. She secured almost double this amount. We feel, therefore, that those who remember her work of love will be glad to know more of her. The sketch is sent by Debbie W. Parker, Charlottsville, Ind.; she enclosed with it $1 for the Jane E. Weeden tablet. "Jane E. Weeden was born in the beautiful little island of Conannicutt, in Narragansett Bay. She was a teacher for several years, and in that capacity she came to Indiana. After the emancipation act, she volunteered and went South and taught the freedmen, having credentials from the Friends church and the Freedmen's Aid Commission, signed on behalf of the state by Governor Morton. She also collected funds to establish freedmen's schools, and was an active member of the American Peace Society before the Alabama claims were settled. When the temperance Crusade came, she was in the midst of that mighty upheaval, and has probaby taken as many steps for the cause as any other advocate. She has been active in all kinds of philanthropic work. She will be remembered not alone on a marble tablet, but in the imperishable heart-memory of the many to whom her ministrations of kindly affection have proved a blessing. A cosmopolitan, she has crossed and recrossed the continent in her benevolent enterprises, and is at home by the side of either ocean or in any state between. 'Many have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.'"

***

Miss Leah Goshert, Warsaw, Ind., sends $5.91 collected by three children. Miss Goshert says, "Five dollars of this amount was sent by little Artie Lynn, who is only three and a half years old, and cannot talk plain yet. He worked faithfully. When anybody called whether he knew them or not, he would get his box and pass it around, saying, 'Me wants some money to put in me's box for me's Temple. When me's gets to be a big man me'll go to see me's Temple.'" Little Ollie Cunningham, Dundinville, Mo., writes, "Please accept contents of mite-box ($4) from Ollie Cunningham and grandma. Ollie is eleven years old and grandma is sixty-two. We are so glad God will accept the little mite if given in love to Him and humanity. Grandma was in the Crusade in Ohio and loves the temperance cause so much. I expect to see the Temple if I live to be a man." Little Annie Wilbur, Central Village, Mass., writes: "I am a little girl nine years old. I belong to the L. T. L. and when I am big enough I shall join the W. C. T. U. I shall want to see our Temple then, so I send my quarter to help pay for it." A little brother and sister, Louise and Andrew Scully, Round Brook, N. J., send $5 that they gathered in their mite-box in a year.

Little Jessie Schick, Scott City, Kan., sent for a mite box a short time ago. Jessie is evidently anxious to get the photograph of the group, which has been promised to all who fill a box this year. She sends $3.65, and says: "My mite-box is filled already, so please send the picture right away. I will keep the box and try to fill it again." If all the little children in the white-ribbon army would go to work for the Temple as these little folks have done, what a mighty sum their littles would soon make.

***

Our good friend, Henry H. Faxon, Quincy, Mass., has again sent for another block of Temple Trust Bonds Wm. W. Smith, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who purchased some time ago $5,000 worth of the bonds, has just sent for another block of $5,000. Both of these are far-sighted business men who know these are the best paying bonds in the market, beside their security is the very best. They are for sale by our financial agent, H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle street, Chicago.

FACTS ABOUT TEMPERANCE.

[Taken from the Bible.]

BY S. JENNIE SMITH.

The drunkard who first in the Scripture appears
Is Noah, so foolish for one of his years.
Genesis 9: 20, 21.

The first temperance pledge by a woman was taken—
The mother of Samson, whose pledge was ne'er shaken.
Judges 13: 13, 14.

The first temperance club of which we have learned
Was started by Jonadab, he who wine spurned.
Jeremiah 35, 6–8.

His descendants, the Rechabites, firmness possessed,
And in keeping their pledge were by the Lord blessed.
Jeremiah 35: 18, 19.

Of his own accord, Daniel, when going to dine,
Decides that he will not partake of the wine.
Daniel 1: 8.

As a consequence he was so healthy and wise,
That Melzar the wine to the others denies.
Daniel 1: 15–17.

In Proverbs King Lemuel stoutly declares
That wine is not fitting for kings anywheres;
For when they have drunken, the law they despise,
And, indeed, comprehend not the thing that is wise.
Proverbs 31: 4.

And to ministers also commands we have found,
In Leviticus, chapter the tenth, they abound;
The Lord unto Aaron spake, "Wine thou forego
When into the great tabernacle thou go.
And a statute forever this mandate shall be
To all generations who come after thee;
That a difference always shall clearly be seen
'Twixt that which is clean, and its foe, the unclean."
Leviticus 10: 9.

Companions of drunkards we never should make,
Nor aught of their sins or their follies partake.
I Corinthians 5: 11.

For to such is denied the kingdom of heaven;
Sorrows unspeakable to them are given.
I Corinthians 6: 9, 10.

Woe unto them who by wine are inflamed;
The dangers for these folks Isaiah hath named.
Isaiah 5: 11–22

They know not the right nor the wrong, it is said,
In vision they err, and their judgment is dead.
Isaiah 28: 7, 8.

Solomon says in his Proverbs of old,
The man loving wine shall not possess gold.
Proverbs 21: 17.

Contentions, and sorrows, and "wounds without cause,"
Will follow the men who at the wine pause.
Proverbs 23: 29, 30.

He who'd avoid these results full of dread
Is told not to look upon wine when 'tis red.
Proverbs 23: 31.

For surely at last it biteth and stings,
And forever around us it steadfastly clings.
Proverbs 23: 32.

The men, who will tamper with strong drink and wine,
Are deceived and to foolishness ere long incline.
Proverbs 20: 1.

Paul mentions the vices which we should eschew,
And among them he mentions intemperance too.
Galatians 5: 21.

But with virtues, the fruit of the spirit, we see,
That temperance also is blessed and free.
Galatians 5: 23.

The foes of to-day are many and strong,
Tobacco and opium with these belong.
The Bible has not mentioned them, it is true,
But during those early days nobody knew
Of the enemies vile that had yet to appear
And fill many victims with trembling and fear.
However, Paul sent to the Romans, we find,
Advice touching foes of every kind.
Romans 14: 21.

East Norwich, N. Y.

THE TEMPERANCE SHOW.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.

Chapter IV.

HOW JANE WAS GOT READY.

She got herself ready, so far as learning the words necessary for her part was concerned, and so far as mastering the expression, gestures and tones. All the Pansies knew in their hearts that even Maggie Meade could do no better, and Miss Robie took pains to whisper to one girl, and then another, and to the girls in a group, how proud the Pansies would be of their success and of their Jane, until they began to look upon themselves as five young guardians, entrusted with the progress and success of a remarkable but dependent girl.

Her clothes were entrusted to the five mothers of the Pansies, who were in the secret, of course. The best secret in the world must not be kept away from a mother, unless it is a secret for her own pleasure or comfort to be revealed at the proper moment at last.

It had to be white—the dress—though winter was coming on, but the ladies selected goods that would be suitable for the next summer, and allowed for growing so far as could be without spoiling the present looks. They made her a muslin sash too, rather than to lend her a silk one offered her. It was considered more suitable for Jane and nice enough for anybody.

The Pansies became so excited getting their protégée ready that they even wanted to lavish sundry trinkets on her for the great occasion, but older judgment soon convinced them that Jane would be much more natural and attractive without. Not only were trinkets a little out of place for Jane, but they were decidedly out of place for a play representing the simple virtues and graces of temperance.

Jane's shoes perhaps gave her most pleasure. What child does not glory in a new pair, even when they are easily had? How much more Jane, who often felt ashamed of her feet? And such a pair! Not too delicate for use, yet strong and shapely and looking like those of a more fortunate child. If Jane had been a boy she might have been tempted to stand on her head to show them better.

But Jane was not supposed to be got ready until her mother and three brothers were in condition to go to the "temperance show" themselves. (It had been named a "temperance show" by the Joneses, and we must submit to it, since the Pansies and even Miss Robie fell to calling it so.) To get those four relatives of the leading lady in presentable shape was no small matter. But it was done by twisting, turning and making demands on half-worn wardrobes here and there. Mrs. Jones was too proud to ask a favor like this, yet so hard had been the struggle, that she was heartily glad of aid that came so freely.

Through all the bustle and busy-ness of the preparation Jane knew nothing of the secret at the bottom of it. She never dreamed when she took twenty tickets home for the boys to sell, that the money was to be used for her benefit. She only knew that Miss Robie had planned the entertainment for her class, because it was a temperance band and could teach some pretty and serious truths by the presentation. She was so ignorant of the details of such affairs that she did not know but the money was needed for the expenses of the evening.

When all was done that could be done, the last rehearsal given, the barn handsomely decorated, the seats set in place in the enormous building and the platform in apple-pie order, when the scheming six (including Miss Robie,—Jane, you know, was in a sense an outsider), had all but one thing done as they had hoped to do it, they were not entirely happy because of that one.

They had wanted to get Jane's father to come and it was certain they had failed. He thanked Miss Robie, who had invited him cordially, he begged the Pansies' pardon when they ventured one day to waylay him, five strong; he did not lose his temper when met with entreaties from the children at home. But he would not go.

I have often wondered if he would have gone had Mrs. Jones urged him. No one will ever know as she did not. She managed to say one day:

"So you ain't a-going, eh?"

And when he answered in the negative she added not another word but slapped her iron down as vigorously as ever, maybe more so.

"If he'd only come!" said Maggie Meade, "it would, perhaps, influence him to sign the pledge. I'm half discouraged with the whole thing if he won't."

"Oh, no!" said Miss Robie; "not so bad as that. His coming at all was a late hope and a faint one. When you have done all you can in a good effort you must leave the rest. You can hardly blame a man not used to the company of sober men and refined women for not liking to come among them; and he may some day be reached in a way we do not think of.

"Well, but after all," said Maggie, "in spite of all the splendidness of how it is getting ready to come off, I feel as if there ought to be just one more preparation, and that is Mr. Jones, prepared to hear his daughter talk temperance in public."

Miss Robie smiled, but said no more. Had she expressed her mind it might have put into words something too favorable, as an opinion about Maggie, to be exactly beneficial for that little girl to hear.

(To be continued.)

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I often wish, as I read with such pleasure the letters you send, that I might answer each one personally, or at least that each one might be published in the Cozy Corner just as soon as received. This is impossible in our crowded quarters, however, but they are all filed away in Aunt Jane's drawer, and will be published in time, either wholly or in part; and so you will be patient, will you not?

In reply to your frequent inquiries, you must know that it is a "really," "truly" Aunt Jane, who has a baby nephew in heaven and a little live golden-haired niece, and who, with a heart full of love for children, signs herself each week, Your affectionate,

AUNT JANE.

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

Grandma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and I read in it too. I am ten years old. Miss Mahon came here to organize a Loyal Temperance Legion and I am going to join it. I am a temperance boy, and I do all I can for the cause. I would not vote for the saloons for a hundred dollars.

Sunbeam, Ill. VIRGIL R. STEPHENS.

Such letters as yours, Virgil, mean that there'll be no saloons at all when you get old enough to vote. And even a hundred dollars wouldn't tempt you then!

I enclose an anagram which I hope you may use. My mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL and I like our page the best. MARION P. FAIRCHILD.

Elgin, Ill.

I wish every little girl had a mamma who read THE UNION SIGNAL, don't you? Did you forget to enclose the answer to your anagram, little niece?

I am very much interested in our Cozy Corner, and I like it very much. I am temperance through and through I send some puzzles. VIRGIE RIDER.

Kingwood, W. Va.

I thank you very much for the puzzles, little friend, and it is good to know that you are so thoroughly temperance No danger that it will evaporate then, is there?

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

62.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

I am composed of 21 letters.
My 1, 4, 17 is a character used in printing.
My 14, 15, 3, 2 is an invitation.
My 5, 6, 7, 8 is repose.
My 9, 10 is a personal pronoun.
My 19, 18, 16, 11 is to dispatch.
My 13, 12, 21, 20 is what none of us wish to be.
My whole is a great benefit to the young people of our country. ERNEST J. COLBY.

63.

WORD SQUARE.

1, A valuable metal; 2, Perfume; 3, To hold dear; 4, Did pull. GEORGIA CHRISTIAN.

64.

CROSSWORD ENIGMA.

In dainty, but not in sweet,
In limbs, but not in feet,
In pansy, but not in rose,
In bone, but not in nose,
In certain, also in sure,
In lily, but not in pure,
In sky, but not in cloud,
In loyal, also in proud,
In mountains, but not in vale,
In fence, but not in rail,
In glory, also in morning,
In sunset, but not in dawning,
In meat, but not in drink,
In tulip, but not in pink.

My whole is a member of the W. W. C. T. U. whom we all love. GRACE M. RUSSELL.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Il

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JUNE 16.

54.

```
      D
    T I S
  T R A C E
D I A M O N D
  S C O L D
    E N D
      D
```

55. THE UNION SIGNAL.

56. The war-cry sounds,
King Alcohol must fall;
And the Cozy Corner folks
Have rallied at the call.

Correct answers: Ernest Edwards; Katie R. Hobson Fannie Kettlewell; Royal J. Davis; May Spencer; Louis Spalding; Angelia Hodgens; Mary Maule; Lena Drayer Lula Smith; Ora Palmer; Robert Richardson; Mary Gate Ruth Abbott; Fanny E. Cobb; Charlie Fulton; Vinnie B Statler.

FLITTING WINGS.

BY JOSEPH COOK.

Bird that seeks a sunnier sky,
On thy heart thy wings rely;
Over land and over sea,
God His promise keeps with thee;
Never faithless, nature brings
Fitting climes to flitting wings.

Soul that fears God's judgment bar,
Truth thy instincts see afar.
So has feared each balanced soul,
Since the orb began to roll.
Souls are God's work. We shall see
Judgment in Eternity.

Doom looks through the door of death.
Evermore thy conscience saith:
I am, God is, and in this
Double truth is woe or bliss.
Thou from God canst never flee,
Friend or foe of His must be.

Breath of God enkindles man,
Instincts match their Maker's plan;
Wing to air He mates aright,
Inborn faith to fadeless light.
While we live, or when we die,
God in man can speak no lie.

Southward speed, through storm and calm
Out of snows to groves of balm:
Wing, my soul, thy certain flight,
Through the noontide and the night;
Over land and over sea,
God His promise keeps with thee.

Boston, Mass.

INDEPENDENCE, OR SLAVERY?

BY MRS. HARRIET A. CHEEVER.

Mr. Horace Hargrave, a veteran of the war, a successful lawyer, and a valued, public-spirited citizen, was unmistakably annoyed by the sermon of his pastor, the Rev. Dr. Tufts, on a Sunday, which happened also to be the Fourth of July.

It was not a usual circumstance for Mr. Hargrave to feel annoyed at the simple utterances of a fellow man. He was used to arguing himself, perfectly accustomed to hearing others argue also. And whatever else Mr. Hargrave might be, he was undeniably a fearless, independent, and distinctively self-reliant man.

Yet Dr. Tufts had asserted in very positive language on Independence Day, that nearly every man living was at some time or other in his life a willing slave to a still more willing tyrant. Whether it was known or not, some pet failing held most men in chains, which, though invisible, were yet forged link within link, delicate, seemingly brittle as thread, but yet so intertwined and linked together that once try to burst them asunder, it would be found that the strong man must bend himself with all a Samson's strength and will, in order to free himself from the encircling bands.

Mrs. Hargrave sat still as a mouse all through the somewhat lengthy, but eloquent discourse. Sat so still her husband wished she would make some little reassuring movement. It wasn't quite natural for Irene to remain so perfectly motionless, and she never did except when deeply moved.

But then, it wasn't going to be necessary, her husband mentally argued, to let her know he had noticed it. The thing for him to do was to profess having enjoyed the sermon, as he really had a few parts of it, and to keep any disquieting passages locked closely within his own breast. Furthermore, he had better forget the portions he could not help taking exceptions to.

As to his being a slave in any direction or in any sense whatever, if Dr. Tufts wanted to believe a man well acquainted with himself was going either consciously or unconsciously to let chains be forged about him, from which he could only extricate himself by the greatest force and will power, why he might think so, that was all. He would find it hard work, however, convincing an old soldier that any such stealthy approaches could be made by a known foe. Ordinary perceptions would be proof against danger from such surprises, let alone men who had tested something of the craftiness of an acknowledged enemy.

And yet that sermon ruffled him. Do his best to cast off its remembrance, he could not quite succeed. And come to bring matters down to a more definite way of regarding them, the feeling of irritation produced was increased, from the fact that during the week just past, his wife, Irene, had said to him, in an impressive, solicitous way:

"I am really afraid, Horace, you are becoming more a slave to the habit which troubles me so much, than you are aware of."

To this, Mr. Hargrave had replied with a more perceptible touch of asperity than was at all usual with him in addressing his wife: "My dear, have you ever discovered it to be among my failings that I appear unacquainted with my personal obligations, habits, or moral condition?"

"We are all more frail and more easily overcome than is generally realized," she answered, gently.

"That may be," he said; "but until I evince at least some slight show of loss of self-control or proper self-respect, I think myself deserving of the same unquestioning, loyal esteem I invariably extend to you, and that also induces trust."

The underlying truth of all this was, Mr. Hargrave now and then refreshed himself with a glass of wine. And he told himself, and told his wife, there was no earthly reason why he shouldn't do so if he wished. There were no sons in the family to be possibly influenced in coming time by their father's example; if there had been he would not have risked even a sample bottle of the stuff in the house. He belonged to no club, and if he had, would not have been seen taking a glass of wine on any account. At the annual dinner of "The Attorney's League," he was set down as one of the most abstemious of men. As an upright citizen and a church member he felt his duty, and meant scrupulously to adhere to it.

Yet in the face of all this, occasionally on either a very cold or a very hot day, Mr. Hargrave liked a glass of wine. That was the simple fact, he liked it; and there being no one to be injured by what they knew nothing about, and never would know anything about, and there being no question as to his being his own master, and able to control his own deeds, it was a mere absurdity to give the matter further thought. His wife generally saw him whenever he took a drink, it was no "sneaking secret" to be kept from her, neither was it anything to be either ashamed or afraid of.

But it irritated him to hear an intelligent, progressive man like Dr. Tufts stand up before a church full of rational, responsible men and women and declare them all slaves to some pet known or unknown foe, generally a well known one.

When would ministers recognize the exclusive sanctity of the pulpit, and learn the rare sagacity of adapting their subjects to significant occasions. Sunday being the Fourth of July Dr. Tufts might before that crowded house have made it a capital opportunity for sending home a lesson of conscientious patriotism the young would never have forgotten. A discourse on pure loyalty and independence was what Dr. Tufts should have enforced that day, and Mr. Hargrave said so to his wife.

"Exactly what I thought he did do," she replied.

"How so?"

"He dwelt quite at length, I thought, on what a faithful Christian owed his God, and showed that true independence consisted in overcoming sin. He said admirably that in times of national peace and security it behooved men to scent out and exterminate personal and private foes. I must say the sermon touched me deeply."

Meeting Dr. Tufts on Monday morning, amid the bang of mimic explosives, Mr. Hargrave said in a jocose way:

"Well, doctor, and what is my pet sin, pray? I've been trying my best to make it out." But the earnest preacher, burdened with a sense of the weightiness of the subject in its general application, replied unsmilingly,

"That, my dear sir, is best known to you; I assume nothing as a judge, you know."

"Humph! acted exactly as though he'd seen me weighed and found wanting," said the lawyer to himself, as the minister passed on.

A week later what was known as "The Cross Roads Case" came on, in which Mr. Hargrave was solicitor for a wealthy corporation in a lawsuit involving the settlement of nearly half a million dollars. For three months he had been collecting evidence, examining claims, and carefully preparing dates and arranging minutes, until now he felt ready to convince the court of his clients' legitimate claims to the contested property.

It was a case of unusual interest, and Mrs. Irene Hargrave was proud and pleased at the confidence and coolness with which her shrewd husband went to work grappling the various points and intricacies of the difficult question.

But the heat was intense. More than one effort had been made to defer the hearing to more tolerable weather, but a speedy verdict was imperative, and must be obtained at the earliest possible day. Early in the fall the company wanted to enlarge their vast covers and increase the rolling stock, but everything was at a standstill while the decision was in abeyance.

One day when the mercury was reveling in the exhausting and nearly paralyzing height of the nineties, Mr. Hargrave went three times to the refrigerator, then to a closet in his room, and pouring out a glass of claret, drank it eagerly. A fourth time being unexpectedly obliged to go home for a paper locked in his library book-case, he procured ice, went to his room, poured over it the crimson liquid and was about to drink.

"Stop!" he said to himself. "This will make your fourth glass of wine in one day, a thing you have never been guilty of before." He went to the basin, deliberately poured out the contents of the glass, leaving the ice to melt. Half-way down the stairs he paused, turned around, went up two or three stairs, then turned about and went resolutely to the end of the flight. With his hand on the knob of the outer door, he stopped again, turned slowly about, went back to his room, rinsed the bit of ice still in the basin, put it in the glass, poured the rich wine over it, then held it up level with his eyes.

"I can drink you or leave you, just as I please," he said with a cool, masterful smile. The next moment he had drained the glass dry.

Back in his office he was tormented with a burning thirst. Never in all his life could he remember having felt such a maddening desire for something to drink. And—could it be! He had returned without that paper. An angry suspicion darted into his mind. Rising slowly he said to himself,

"The way to master this unfortunate little circumstance is to go with all possible caution directly home again, get that document, write out the statement which must be sworn to to night, and by the way!" he added, hastening a little, "Pritchard, whose signature I must have, leaves the city to-day at half-past four; it is nearly four o'clock already, and to-morrow he starts for a week's cruise on his yacht."

He set out for home, a distance of several blocks, his hat in his hand, and an umbrella over his head. Once in doors, an almost irresistible impulse seemed drawing him in the direction of the ice chest and the chamber closet again.

"No, I won't!" he said with decision.

"Afraid at last!" scoffed some demon well out of sight.

"Yes; man enough to be warned when I find the thirst unquenchable," he retorted, with redeeming promptness as he went to the dining-room for a glass of water. It appeared, however, as if his feet almost refused the stern dictates of his will, as he turned, feeling strangely depressed, and retraced his steps to the office.

"Now," he said wearily, seating himself at his desk again, "only a few written words, then Pritchard's name, and everything will be in good shape for to-morrow's hurried proceedings. By—!" he exclaimed, betrayed into using an impetuous oath at some sharp discovery.

He had forgotten the paper again!

An anxious glance at the clock showed it was twenty minutes past four. No possibility of getting anything signed and sworn to that day; and his man well out of the way for a week on the morrow! "What shall I do?" he murmured, feeling suddenly sick at heart.

"Let me alone next time," sneered an imaginary serpent, and Mr. Hargrave felt a fierce desire to throttle some persecuting yet invisible tormentor. For he realized keenly on the instant that this apparently slight slip must delay the opening of the case at least a week later. Unavoidable hindrances had already excited trying impatience, but things had worked as rapidly as possible up to this moment, and he had been in no wise to blame for the tardy proceedings.

To make matters worse, he had assured the superintendent of the road only that morning nothing should retard the opening on the day after the morrow.

"I could invent a lie easily enough," he soliloquized, "but that sort of practice is not in my line."

That night the lawyer could not sleep. The unfortunate forgetfulness and stupidity of the afternoon and a troublous, perplexing day in anticipation joined with an impotent inclination to wreak vengeance on an elusive foe, engrossed his thoughts all the earlier part of the night. The small hours of morning brought other considerations.

How now about being his own master and suffering no inconvenience from habits easily controlled? And how about the secret sin Dr. Tufts had unsmilingly remarked was best known to himself? Here was the very first instance in which he had allowed himself unusual license with a known and recognized enemy of mankind.

"Let me see," he said, facing the unpleasant affair with characteristic manliness, "to begin with, I yielded in an unaccountable manner in taking that fourth glass, after defying its power to make me use it. Then the cursed draft tampered with usually clear memory. That sent me a second time, like an idiot, back to my desk, after two fruitless errands in the scorching heat, and wrung from me a profane use of the sacred name of God. Now, I must face the humiliating postponement caused by indulgence in—what? Only a bit of voluntary slavery; but enough to last me a lifetime!"

Mr. Hargrave experienced more expiatory blame and inconvenience than often follows a first willing contact with an evil a slightly multiplied number of times. But the successful issue of the important case, brought about largely by his perseverance and skill, sent the vexing delay far into the shades of forgetfulness.

Yet he was not satisfied. One evening in the fall, at a crowded conference meeting in the vestry, he arose and said that as a man and a Christian he felt it his duty to substantiate some of the utterances of the pastor in his sermon on the Fourth of July, on which at the time he had commented disparagingly.

Recalling with professional precision the minister's grave assertion that nearly every man had some pet sin, some tempter to which he now and then yielded himself a willing slave, he confessed the expression had raised a question in his mind, and he had not believed what the pastor said. Then he added with a seriousness which impelled fixed attention:

"I arise to-night to say that in a case where few would have suspected it possible, every word of that sermon has been proven true as the gospel itself. And I warn every one within the sound of my voice to avoid the hazardous mistake of thinking himself exempt from the treachery and power of an acknowledged foe."

One of the deacons said afterwards it seemed as if the lawyer was pleading a desperate case before the tribunal of every individual conscience in the room. Some thought Mr. Hargrave had perhaps been bribed to defend an iniquitous deceit or fraud. Others wondered if he had acquired a portion of his money and legal fame by underhanded methods, best known to men who knew, yet dared to defy the law. And there conjecture ceased.

But at a great temperance meeting held not long afterwards, Lawyer Hargrave made a stirring address, setting forth the almost idiocy of supposing one could foster a serpent in his bosom ever so guardedly, and not be stung. He declared it would be quite as sensible for a soldier to pretend that laying aside all defensive weapons, he could trust himself with a traitorous foe, who was only watching his chance to bring into servile captivity the weak, misguided man who had trusted him once too often. And he urged the ministers present to impress their hearers with the true interpretation of the hackneyed word, "independence"; showing that only the man who put his heel on the neck of so plain and acknowledged an enemy as strong drink in every form, could hope to escape being brought into ultimate bondage.

Dr. Tufts who presided at the temperance rally said to his wife that night, that were it not that he knew to the contrary, he should certainly suppose Mr. Hargrave had at some time in his life been a drinking man, and experienced to a degree what he had so graphically pictured.

And when Mrs. Tufts laughingly repeated the complimentary, appreciative remark to the lawyer's wife, she sat just as still as a mouse. But Mrs. Tufts took her half-embarrassed smile for one of quiet amusement and satisfaction.

Stanley, N. J.

The Union Signal AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—MISS ESTHER PUGH, Office, The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

O give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name; make known his deeds among the people.—Ps. 105:1.

OUR BILL OF FARE.

A touch of temperance patriotism, "The Dishonored Flag," by Rev. Henry A. Delano, fittingly introduces this issue of July 7. "Throwing Dice on a Bible," is an incident from true life. "The New Declaration of Independence," one of John G. Woolley's masterpieces, is none too long for the thoughtful reader. Lady Henry Somerset's description of the Salvation Army "Dustbin," graphically presents to us England's latest reform. Dr. B. V. Cushman's monthly installment of World's Fair notes is even brighter than usual. "Shall She Preach?" argues that she should, provided she is "called." The value of carbonate of ammonia as a substitute for alcohol is tersely told by a professional nurse. The President's Column, capped with "Old Faithful," Miss Willard's constant traveling companion, from which comes much of the material for this column, and the Temperance Temple Items, with their beautiful new heading, lead the reader to the Children's page, which is breezy and temperance throughout. The Household page contains two well-known writers, Joseph Cook and Harriet Cheever. Five state reports, and a shower of newsy "Nuts" comprise the News from the Field. The editorial pages are appropriately filled with accounts of the National Prohibition Convention.

THE RALLY OF THE CLANS.

A cool, bright, bracing morning was that of June the twenty-ninth, 1892. Down the stony streets of Cincinnati marched a thousand men "with badge and banner gay," while bands of music played "Home, Sweet Home," that hallowed song, fit slogan of the home protectionists. Well nigh seventy women delegates were included in the procession and nobody seemed to grieve because "each one of them took some man's place." The only regret of all that prohibition army, so far as the women were concerned, was that they were not duly "armed and equipped," as the law will some day direct, with the ballot-bullet that alone can kill the Sisera of the saloon.

Music Hall is one of the most beautiful and famous auditoriums in Christendom. Here James G. Blaine was put in nomination by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll in 1876. Here Rutherford B. Hayes was nominated for the presidency. Here Gen. Hancock was named by Daniel Dougherty in 1888. But its rich, dark wainscoting has seldom been the background of so much sweetness and light as was revealed on this June morning. In a great group over the stage, surrounded by the word "Welcome," were revolutionary and reform leaders side by side in pictured presence, set in festoons of national flags, whose graceful folds swung like wings of hope around the whole great auditorium, enclosing mottoes that illustrated the Prohibition party's creed:

"Faith without votes is dead," was one of these, and another, "For woman, equal pay in the shops, equal say at the polls." "Every man who votes for license makes himself of necessity a partner to the liquor traffic, and to all its consequences. 1874. Gov. W. McKinley."

Brilliant banks of flowering plants contrasted with the dark, green leaves of palm and pine, emblems of a North and South more lovingly united in this great gathering than ever at any other time and place since they met in Philadelphia's old "Liberty Hall" in 1876 and signed the "Declaration."

When the great audience was seated the manly face and form of Samuel Dickie, of Michigan, chairman of the National Prohibition party, appeared from behind the brilliant parterre of flowers and flags. After a rousing "three times three" in honor of this trusted leader, the Convention was called to order, a brass band played the long meter doxology, and the famous Silver Lake Quartette led in singing, "My country, 'tis of thee." As the great anthem rolled out rich and strong, a noble judge from Illinois turned to a white ribbon leader in his delegation and said, "Isn't this glorious?" She vainly tried to answer as she had vainly tried to sing. Then Rev. Dr. Evans, of Illinois, breathed into the ear of Heaven the consecration, faith and gratitude of Prohibitionists.

The address of welcome was made by Rev. Dr. M. C. Lockwood, probably the most popular pulpit speaker in the city. He is a remarkably large, fine looking man, with a rich, ringing voice. His speech aroused great enthusiasm which culminated when the following anecdote was told: "A belated train stood panting impatiently at a southern railway station. The express agent was hurrying his work; one of his men came with a puppy in his arms. 'Hurry up,' said the agent, 'where is that dog going?' The man drawled out in answer, 'I dunno, he dunno, nobody dunno. He's eat his tag!' Think for a moment what would be the political destiny of the average Democrat or Republican if he should 'eat his tag.'" Referring to this anecdote, Chairman Dickie, in responding for the delegates, said: "Prohibitionists all know where they are going and are in no danger of losing their tags."

The party's greatest leader was then made temporary chairman of the Convention, and as ex-Governor John P. St. John came forward the Convention rose and gave him a greeting that excelled in degree the aggregated expressions of admiration, love and confidence enjoyed by many a noble man in a whole life. He stood there quietly, his erect, military figure and bearing, his fine head, square brow and dauntless pose befitting a leader staunch and true. On no subject have we ever differed, except that of an outreach toward the other group of reformers that centers in the People's party. For his loyalty to the cause of woman's financial and political independence he merits and will always have, the gratitude of every white-ribboner. After a brief address, outlining his view of the true policy for Prohibitionists, the ex-governor asked the pleasure of the Convention, and the usual committees were appointed.

A pleasant episode followed in the presentation to the Convention of several leaders, men and women, among them Hon. James Black, of Pennsylvania, the party's first candidate for president—a man of gigantic stature, who nobly carries the largest and perhaps the fullest head in the Convention.

A recess was had till two o'clock, at which time there was a reunion of veterans Blue and Gray, conducted by General Hudson, of Ohio, followed by an able speech on "Educating our Young Men and Women in Politics," by Walter Thomas Mills. Various prohibition quartettes enlivened the audience—the Silver Lake, the Pennsylvania, the Demorest, the Oberlin, and besides these we had the Beverages, of Kansas, husband and wife, who personated "Samantha" and "Josiah," in most amusing fashion.

At 4 p. m. the Convention re assembled, and prayer was offered by Rev. Martin Mahony, a Catholic priest from Minnesota, who was present as a delegate. This earnest ally of our cause is well known to Prohibitionists throughout the nation.

Rev. John Russell, "Father of the Prohibition Party," was received with a storm of cheers, richly deserved by one who has so long borne and labored and had patience in the great cause. Cheers rained on John A. Brooks, the running mate of that beloved leader lost, Gen. Clinton B. Fisk and Rev. H. A. Thompson, another vice presidential candidate.

In the evening the permanent chairman, Col. Eli Ritter, of Indiana, took his seat. He is the lawyer whose setting forth of the saloon as a nuisance has won him national fame. He is a fine, vigorous, intellectual man, in middle life, whose opening speech would have placed him second on the ticket if he had been willing to run. Mrs. Helen Gougar spoke in her usual telling manner, after which the Convention adjourned, "and the evening and the morning were the first day."

June 30th was rainy, but cool and comfortable. The platform committee not being ready to report, short speeches were made, and in half an hour a $20,000 fund was raised for the campaign, women subscribing with fully as much liberality, according to their means, as men. Dr. Evans, president of Hedding College, Illinois, shook the tree, and Prof. Dickie, ever alert, led off in gathering the fruit.

The chief secretaries of the Convention were Hon. A G. Wolfenbarger, of Nebraska, and Rev. Sam Small, of Georgia.

What struck us most forcibly of all was that the men of this Convention were, as a rule, remarkably clear-cut cleanly and capable. When invited to the platform we could not forbear saying that "no tobacco smoke discol, ored the atmosphere of the hotels, no bar was gaining patronage, no gambling house or haunt of sin was a single penny richer because a thousand politicians, most of them men, had been turned loose upon the Queen City of Ohio. This is an object lesson of Christianity in earnest, and a foretaste of the millennium such as no city has ever seen save when you, the Prohibitionists, have come to town."

The second afternoon was devoted to a consideration of the platform and its fifteen planks, covering all the living issues of the day, and even more explicit on all economic questions than it has ever been before. Mr. E. J. Wheeler, the brilliant young editor of the New York Voice, read the report which has been so fully set forth by the press, that we will omit all except the planks of special interest to THE UNION SIGNAL readers:

The Prohibition party in National Convention assembled acknowledging Almighty God as the source of all true government, and His law as the standard to which all human enactments must conform to secure the blessings of peace and prosperity; presents the following declaration of principles:

PROHIBITION OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

First. The liquor traffic is a foe to civilization, the arch enemy of popular government and a public nuisance. It is the citadel of the forces that corrupt politics, promote poverty and crime, degrade the nation's home life, thwart the will of the people, and deliver our country into the hands of rapacious class interests. All laws that under the guise of regulation legalize and protect this traffic, or make the government share in its ill-gotten gains, are "vicious in principle and powerless as a remedy."

We declare anew for the entire suppression of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of alcoholic liquors as a beverage by Federal and State legislation, and the full powers of the government should be exerted to secure this result. Any party that fails to recognize the dominant nature of this issue in American politics is undeserving of the support of the people.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

Second. No citizen should be denied the right to vote on account of sex, and equal labor should receive equal wages without regard to sex.

ONE DAY OF REST.

Ninth. All men should be protected by law, in their right to one day's rest in seven.

FAVORING ARBITRATION.

Tenth. Arbitration is the wisest and most economical and humane method of settling national differences.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

Thirteenth. We stand unequivocally for the American public school and opposed to any appropriation of public moneys for sectarian schools. We declare that only by united support of such common schools, taught in the English language, can we hope to become and remain an homogeneous and harmonious people.

The progress of the woman question in these four years was evinced by the fact that there was no debate whatever over the suffrage plank, and so far as our ears bore witness, only one voted against it, and he a little boy who voted on every question, and was not old enough to be a delegate! There was hot discussion over the tariff and other economic planks, and more hubbub and confusion than we have seen in any previous Prohibition Convention.

Weary and worn the delegates adjourned to dinner, reassembling at 8:30 p. m. It took them about six hours to nominate their candidates, the leading speeches being by ex-Governor St. John presenting the name of Gen John Bidwell, of California, in an eloquent eulogy of fifteen minutes, Col. George W. Bain, of Kentucky, seconding that honored name in one of his happiest addresses. Our generous friend, W. Jennings Demorest, sure to be remembered longer than any presidential candidate, except the greatest, by reason of the magnificent educational work he has set going, was nominated in remarkably good speeches by John Lloyd Thomas, of New York, and Rev. Sam Small, of Georgia. That noble Roman, Hon. Gideon T. Stewart, of Ohio, was named in a vigorous address by Mr. L. B. Logan, and the (men) orators of the Convention "did themselves proud" in as good convention pyrotechnics as have anywhere corruscated in the sky political. The result was a vote of 590 for General Bidwell; 139 for W. Jennings Demorest; 179 for Hon. Gideon T. Stewart.

For ten minutes the demonstrations of delight over the nomination of California's great Prohibition leader proved that Prohibitionists are as "chipper" a variety of the human species as can anywhere be found. A bass drum led the orchestra, and a tin whistle furnished the diminuendo. "Hail to the Chief" was played, and women's waving handkerchiefs kept time to the tune of "Hail Columbia, Happy Land!" The good-natured jollity of the scene cannot be prisoned in types. Best of all, when it was over, the friends of the defeated candidates heartily moved that the nomination be made unanimous, and pledged themselves to a solid summer's work for Genera Bidwell.

The vice-presidential candidates were Messrs. Levering, of Maryland, Satterlee, of Georgia, Cranfill, of Texas, and Carskadon, of West Virginia. Colonel Bain, the orator par excellence of the Prohibition party, was nominated but emphatically declined. As in the case of General Bidwell, the nomination was made on the first ballot, Rev. Mr. Cranfill, of Waco, Texas, having a majority. This nomination, which was unexpected, resulted from several causes. First, Texas presented the candidate in an able speech from James B. Dunn, of Wisconsin; then the inimitable Rev. Sam Small withdrew his own name but urged that of his brother minister, who, by the way is a Southern Baptist, saying, "You tell us you love us and wish to forget, but you've never come down for a candidate yet; you've hovered around in the border states twice, and now if you mean it, go South in a trice." (Ideas Mr. Small's, jingle, our own.) The delegates dared and went "Way down in Dixie's Land" farther than any party has ever done before. Mr. Levering was the expected candidate and is a most estimable man. The "landslide" was a tribute to fraternity, not a criticism upon the worthy Marylander.

And now, just as the Convention was about to disperse in the small hours of the morning, occurred two scenes not down on any program. Mr. John Lloyd Thomas was summoned to the stage and in a strong speech by ex-Governor St. John, was presented with a purse in recognition of his faithful services. Next, General Singleton, a Southern gentleman, now resident in "our classic town" (Evanston), arose and stating that Rev. Dr. Grandison and other Afro-Americans had been rudely treated at the hotels, read a resolution of disapproval that was seconded by a delegate from Virginia and another from Georgia, was supported in impassioned speeches by an educated colored man and woman, and adopted without dissent. Dr. Grandison made a fine impression when he seconded the nomination of Mr. Demorest and told the Convention that "seven million negroes in the South were waiting to see whether they were wanted in this party."

All day we had watched our opportunity to present a resolution, but it had never been possible, so great was the pressure and stress of the regular order of business. As is well known to all of our "attentive readers" we have always advocated not only the broadening of the platform—always broad in these late years—but the sincere endeavor to unite the two groups of reformers now endeavoring to recruit soldiers from each other's camps, instead of facing the common foe and fighting for poor old Humanity side by side. Various plans and possibilities have been suggested by us in our capacity of editor, none of them claiming to be other than tentative and expressive of our personal desire and hope. But some of our good friends have taken the alarm and raised the cry of "Fusion" and the like. However this may be, we are not fusionists as the resolution that we wished to offer proves. It grew out of the Conference of National Reformers held in the Palace Hotel the day before the great Convention. We are all fast making history in these days. Our records will be reviewed later on, and we hereby take an appeal from the present to the future, "with malice toward none, and charity to all," on the principle,

"That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

Here followeth the resolution that died at 2:30 p. m., June 30, 1892, in the Cincinnati Music Hall:

Resolved, That we believe that no two political parties can fuse or make any trades or deals without great damage to both. We are therefore totally opposed to any movement of that kind, but we hereby authorize the National Committee, after the campaign of 1892 shall be ended, to confer with the National Committee of the People's party with reference to such a union of the reform forces of this country as shall result in a political movement committed to the people's good by the total suppression of the liquor traffic, by needed economic reforms relative to the questions of land, money and transportation, and by the enfranchisement of women.

We got no opportunity to bring this forward—the stress and confusion were too great. But all the same we believe in our resolution, and hereby frankly offer it for the consideration of Prohibitionists.

CONVENTION CRUMBS.

Among Col. Ritter's telling utterances were these:

"We have the only party convention into which no liquor seller nor license voter can come as delegate."

"There will be no peace in politics, none in commercial affairs, none in the church of God, until this question of the liquor traffic is settled, and settled right. And if we can't have peace let us have war." [Great applause.]

"We have come to a point where I want to shake hands with the men of the South. [Great applause.] I want my children to shake hands with yours—what is the past to us or them that we should not love each other?" [Convention rose and cheered to the echo.]

"I'd rather vote for what I want and fail than vote for what I don't want and succeed."

"No purer water flows than that of Jordan, but it empties into the Dead Sea. So is it with the Christian votes of this land on the license question."

"The Prohibition party is better organized in Indiana than the Republican or Democratic."

"There is only one way to right a wrong, and that is to abolish it."

"I call on you to witness that the platform of the Prohibition party could be written in a church creed. It is the very essence of Christianity applied."

In the interest of harmony the following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that speakers who are accorded the honor of addressing the convention be requested to refrain from unnecessary references or illustrations that could be construed as a reflection on any of the participants in the late struggle."

The Parkins boys (four brothers) sang "Save the Boy," more tenderly than we ever heard it rendered even by women.

Chairman Dickie said, "We understand what we are here for. We know where we are going and nothing can divert us from our irresistible purpose."

Volney B. Cushing, of Maine, and Rev. Mrs. Eugenia St. John, of Kansas, are two of the best speakers on the floor.

It was facetiously declared by the Cincinnati papers that fifty-seven different quartettes were heading for the convention. Certain it is that the supply was abundant, and of excellent quality. The Indiana quartette, the Liberator band, composed of seventeen prohibition voters of Dayton, O., were among those who helped to harmonize the heads and hearts of the great company.

A telegram from Mrs. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, from Seabright, N. J., wife of our beloved and promoted leader, was received with tokens of deep sympathy and tender remembrance.

The Diamond Demorest medal contest was held in Music Hall on the evening of June 29, ex-Governor St. John presiding. Three young ladies and one boy participated, the prize being taken by Miss Minnie Warren, of Albion, Mich., who had ingeniously combined extracts from speeches of Talmage, Bain, Lathrap and Willard. Miss Warren is remarkably gifted, and will be heard from right along.

Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, Miss Esther Pugh, Mrs. F. H. Rastall and scores of our white ribboners were present throughout the convention.

Dr. Brooks, vice-presidential candidate in 1888, with Mrs. Clara Hoffman—both stalwarts—led the Missouri delegation.

The Massachusetts delegation to the Cincinnati Convention enlivened the exercises with the Bidwell campaign slogan,

"We yell, we yell
For John Bidwell,
We must, we shall,
Have John Bidwell,"

which invariably brought down the house.

With hundreds of men, young and old, passing in and out of Music Hall, we saw not a single delegate puffing at a cigar, and not once did a beer or whisky breath insult and assault our nostrils, and never an oath greeted the ear.

Every arrangement made by the local committee was complete to the utmost detail. We never heard less grumbling. Chairman Ritter's manner was cool, deliberate and dignified, three most excellent things in a presiding officer.

Brother Chafin, of Wisconsin, was made sergeant-at-arms, and in his characteristically quiet manner helped to keep things in order.

Many eloquent speeches were made by different delegates at Cincinnati. This fight for humanity has brought out scores of true orators. Sympathy of heart and conscience, awake to duty, are wonderful teachers of the art of persuasion.

Chairman Dickie easily led the Convention when he gained the floor. His voice rang out so clear and penetrating it reached every ear in the auditorium. Many gentlemen could not be heard at all.

WOMEN IN POLITICS.

One thing is certain—women are in. Primrose dames and Liberal Leagues across the water speak, sing, canvass, persuade and pray for the success of their candidates. Lady Henry Somerset has been addressing audiences of from five to ten thousand for Home Rule and Direct Veto all these June days. Women's Republican Clubs and Frances Cleveland Clubs are becoming the order of the day, while in the Prohibition and the People's party, women are delegates, officers and leaders. Having arrived upon the scene, what shall we do? Just what we have so long done in home, church and school—be an influence for gentle strength, intelligent patience and wise, heroic counsel. Woman must not become a storm-center in committee or convention if she is to lead us to the country of the larger hope. She must possess her soul in quietness; she must avoid personalities and push principles to the front. We have been asked, since the Convention, to give our opinion of certain contradictions and controversies that came up at Cincinnati; also to reply to personal articles that have appeared in the prohibition press. But we have laid down one rule and never once deviated from it in all our public life, viz.: Not to attack or criticise women who are engaged in public work, nor to reply, save in general terms, to any criticism or attack from them. If there is one spectacle more distasteful than another, it is for one woman to act as surgeon in the dissection of another. It is bad enough in men, but we have become inured to their pugilistic methods; it is totally unworthy of us. Men have been the fighters of the world and it is no wonder that their ways are transferred to what ought to be and some day will be the peaceful plains of politics. Be it ours to come to them in this widest and most decisive arena of human action, to bless and not to blight; to bring in a motherly and sisterly influence, not one of contention and ill-will. More than ever let us ponder our well-worn motto: "Womanliness first—afterward, what you will."

CONVENTION AFTER-THOUGHTS.

A political convention is "humanity writ large." Nay, more, it is "the human nature that is in folks," laid on al fresco with the biggest kind of brush. The scene is so vast that there is room for every variety of color, of character and culture. The whole diapason is sounded. One hears all voices and there is none without signification. Here old scores are settled, and jealousies open and concealed come to the surface as the huge pot political foams, froths and "boils over." "Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed that he hath grown so great?" is the unuttered thought of those who carry in the folds of their togas a knife for his ambition. Robert G. Ingersoll has truly said that but for the thousand distractions invented to occupy the attention of men of growing fame, and the determination of their rivals to pull them down, they would attain to prominence undreamed of now. The world seems to be in a conspiracy that he who has done some one great thing should never get time to do another, and the autograph fiend is a chieftain in the plot!

A political convention so far exceeds any drama on the mimic stage that when men and women are fairly and equally deployed upon the scene, the theater will be a tame and spiritless affair. For here is the real game of giants; here tread the actual heroes and heroines; the plotters and connivers, the accessories before the act and after, and here the marplots flourish. No feudal chief ever had vassals half so loyal (or dependent!) as those that surround political chieftains in these days. To retain leadership, to build up reputation, to hold what offices there are in a party organization itself, even though none have been won from the outside, to keep great party organs in place and power; all these are tremendous incentives, the most persuasive that the world knows now that the fascination of hereditary prestige and military prowess pale their no longer effectual fires in the whiter light of an industrial age. The members of one party touch elbows with an electric thrill of sympathy and power; they are one family; not unfrequently they realize a rapport beyond the tie that binds them to their own kindred, if on the vital questions embodied in that party they disagree. There is no other esprit de corps so strong, binding and complete over an equal number of human beings anywhere. The church itself cannot compete, because it is divided into scores of denominations, but Christianity applied or misapplied to the welfare of men through parties, has usually but two great camps inside a mighty nation with its illimitable masses of men.

Then there is the humorous side of it all. Why, in the Democratic convention we saw a man weighing not less than three hundred pounds, his hair all gone except a narrow frill, his big, bald pate shining even as his good-natured face shone with delight, as, standing up in his chair, waving his white hat in one hand and his Cleveland palm leaf fan in the other, he led his delegation in singing right out in the midst of Convention proceedings and to the uproarious laughter of twenty thousand persons,

"Grover, Grover,
Four more years of Grover;
They'll go out and we'll go in
And then we'll live in clover."

The lady with the white umbrella and the "twenty-seven minutes' hurrah," that marked Blaine's exit from politics, have become historic in connection with the Minneapolis convention.

We heard a Prohibitionist say in Music Hall as the great rejoicing came upon General Bidwell's nomination, "When I see a clerical looking man with a white neck-tie and sixty years at least beaming upon his face, wave a woman's parasol over his head, with his hat perched thereon, and when he sends the shriek of a tin whistle into my ears until they ache, I think that women are indeed getting into politics."

For ourselves we entered with heartiness into the demonstrations of joy, and kept time with waving handkerchief, to the band as it played "Hail Columbia," but while a smile was on the lip, a tear was in the eye, for all the while we thought of that home in California; of that great brother-hearted man, loved alike by the Labor party and by Prohibitionists, who, if he were in power would have no wine at state dinners; who would use his utmost influence to down the liquor traffic and exalt the fireside. Above all else a political convention has pathos. For one can but think of the great, listening humanity, with its throbbing hopes, and that what is best for those who love thire leaders, believe in and have trusted them, sho uld be the supreme motive-with those who hew the platform and select the standard-bearers.

How great it would be in the People's party to put General Bidwell on its ticket, even as the People's party did in his own state! That did not mean fusion, but a demonstration to the old parties of the strength of the reform movement, for with the average mind nothing succeeds like success, and only the momentum of numbers will carry it out of old and into new and better political environments.

Great is the political convention—full of every creature's best—and worst. Greatest of all, with all its faults, was that of the Prohibitionists in Cincinnati, June 29 and 30, 1892.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

NEW YORK NEWS.

Judging from the amount of matter which has come to me for this letter, I fear I shall not be able to crowd it into the allotted space, but when 21,000 women are keeping "everlastingly at it," what can a body do?

Chautauqua county reports interesting meetings, every local union having been visited by the president and corresponding secretary, they asking nothing but their expenses for such work. They have helped and strengthened the unions wonderfully. The town elections have manifested the power of their persistent, prayerful labor.

A report of Yates county convention held during the winter came to me very recently, and while it is a little old it must not be omitted. It is full of cheer and encouragement; none of the things which go to make up a good convention were lacking. Miss Yates, of Maine, delivered a telling address at the evening meeting which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Miss Hutton, who is president of this county, has a warm place in the hearts of her loyal followers, and presided over the convention with grace and dignity. The women of Yates county are justly proud of the banner which was awarded them last fall at the state meeting.

Oswego county, in its recent convention, had the largest attendance of delegates ever recorded. Less than four years ago this county had but three unions; it now numbers eleven—the increase being due to the unwearying efforts of Mrs. G. M. Gardenier, our state recording secretary, who is also county organizer. They are hoping for three more unions before the year closes.

Miss Blanche Haezlitt, of Chicago, gave the evening address, which was forcible and convincing. Department work was presented by the different superintendents, and the department of soldiers and sailors was taken up. It is the intention to furnish a ship library during the year.

A chain of red, white and blue autograph cards, gathered from the Loyal Temperance Legions and destined for the World's Fair, formed a novel and striking feature of the platform decorations. A school of methods conducted by Miss Hewitt, of New Haven, occupied one session very profitably; special interest has been aroused in juvenile work. Miss Hewitt has visited every Legion, and has organized seven new ones during the past five months.

Wyoming county met at Gainesville early in May, holding a two days' meeting. In spite of heavy rain, nearly every union in the county was represented. The pastors of the different churches were present and all in hearty sympathy with the work. In this, as in our white ribbon meetings, the devotional hours were especially helpful. Several papers were read and an interesting program was rendered by the L. T. L. Memorial services were peculiarly tender, as the ranks on the other side are filling up rapidly,—ten or twelve having passed on from this county. Mrs. Rice, of Batavia, our state superintendent of mothers' meetings, was present and addressed a fine audience in the evening, while a "convention choir" was on hand, always ready to assist.

Suffolk county reports a splendid gathering at Greenport. This county embraces more than half of Long Island, including its two eastern points,—Orient and Montauk. Greenport is situated between Long Island Sound and Peconic Bay, beautifully environed and in the words of the secretary, "a gem of God's own setting, yet blighted by the curse of drink." A splendid orchestra, a gold medal contest, and an address by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, National superintendent of Y work, were notable features of the two evening meetings.

Mrs. Hallock, the president, and Mrs. Horton, editor of the county paper, awakened new interest in work for the Temple. Greenport union is working for the "one hundred dollars." Special mention was made of the fidelity of our loved state president, Mrs. Mary T. Burt, in her legislative work during the past winter, and an earnest hope expressed that the weariness which has come upon her from overwork may be lifted, and that "the Hand which has led her on may sustain and give her the rest which follows toil."

I want here to say a word for Union Echoes, the official organ of this county. It is always a welcome visitor in my home, and is one of the brightest county papers in our state. This month it is more than filled with good things. It has a brief article on physical culture, and one on dress reform, another on kindergarten, besides a good report of the convention. The response to the address of welcome is printed in full, and is one of the best, about half of it being in rhyme.

A brief report of Schoharie county convention, held May 19, 20, is next on my list. The meeting was held at Cobleskill, and was full of interest. Thirteen departments of work, in the hands of able superintendents, keep up the interest along the various lines. A good delegation was present. A Demorest contest occupied the evening of the 19. The district Prohibition convention also met in Cobleskill on the 20, and most of the W. C. T. U. delegates remained to the evening meeting, at which time Mrs. Helen M. Gougar delivered a stirring address. Our white-ribboners were invited to occupy seats on the platform.

A cheery note comes from the secretary of Dutchess county who says, "I scarcely know how to be brief in reporting to you our bright and profitable gathering." How hard it is to "boil down" when there is so much that we would like to say. The report goes on to say that the most prominent feature of the convention was its spirituality—the uplift which followed the devotional hours. The delegates were made to feel at home at once, by the hearty greetings of the clergy of Wappinger's Falls, where the meeting was held, and their constant presence during all the time was an inspiration. The L. T. L. gave an excellent program one afternoon, and the lecture in the evening by Rev. Scott W. Cook proved very timely. "The Guild," a band of young men, forty strong, entertained the convention with some rousing music. Twenty-two departments are taken up, and all in good running order, while the president, Mrs. H. A. Nelson, of Poughkeepsie, is untiring in her efforts, and as a natural consequence the record of this county stands high.

Orange county met recently at Cornwall, the convention being pronounced "a decided success." Mrs. Nelson, of Dutchess county, was present, and her cordial helpfulness was greatly appreciated. Miss Elizabeth Greenwood gave the evening address, which was all that could be desired. Three new departments have been taken up since the last convention. The county president is planning to visit the villages, where no unions exist, in the hope of organizing. The ladies of Port Jervis union have been doing excellent work in insisting upon having the law carried out in regard to the selling of liquor, and in exposing some of the gambling places of that village. Active work is being done at Newburg, a boys' free reading-room and two L. T. L's are in a flourishing condition. John G. Woolley has just closed a two weeks' series of meetings there, and preparations are already going forward for the state convention which is to meet in October upon invitation of the Newburg Y's.

Schuyler county held its semi-annual gathering at Townsend. The union which entertained the convention is only a little over a year old, but is full of enthusiasm and is growing finely. The church was well filled with an earnest and attentive audience. Reports were given and papers read, followed by profitable discussion on scientific temperance instruction, a subject on which the county is fully awake. At a meeting of the county teachers' association a paper on the department work was read at the request of the school commissioner which awakened much interest among the teachers. Mrs. L. A. Baker, of Elmira, addressed the convention at the evening meeting. Havana union has just held an "experience meeting" which netted a goodly sum for their treasury.

Niagara county held a splendid convention at Lewiston, one of the oldest and loveliest villages in the county. The white ribbon band there numbers only twelve, yet they were equal to entertaining one of the largest gatherings of the kind we have ever had. Over one hundred people were cared for during the two days—ninety-two of whom were delegates. The convention was held in Moss Hall, which is well fitted for such a gathering.

The program was carried out almost without a change, and was one of the best ever prepared in this county. A workers' conference was held in which several excellent papers were read and discussed. This proved to be a very helpful exercise in every way. A parliamentary drill was a special feature, as it should be in every convention. Miss Lillian Phelps, of St. Catherines, Ontario, was with us during the meeting and delivered a most able and telling address, which left a deep impression on the minds of her hearers, who, like Oliver Twist, wanted "more." The question drawer was placed in Miss Phelps' charge, and many and varied were the questions, which received prompt and pointed replies—in fact the hour which was devoted to this part of the work was considered by all to be one of the most profitable hours of the entire two days. We heartily commend Miss Phelps to other counties. The music was furnished by a choir, which was always on hand, giving us a treat in the high order of music, as well as by their willingness to respond when called upon.

NOTES.

Mrs. Lide Meriwether, president of Tennessee W. C. T. U., visited Lockport not long ago and delivered a fine lecture in Music Hall, under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage League.

Lockport City union has just rented ground floor rooms, to be used as headquarters, and look forward to many days of usefulness in the new home. They also bear their share of expense in the establishment of a day nursery which is soon to be opened.

Miss Vandelia Varnum has been at work in Steuben county for five weeks past, and several new unions are among the results of her labors, while those already existing have received a new lease of life. Miss Varnum solicits pledges in her meetings, and a splendid work has been accomplished among the drinking men, very many having signed the pledge.

Mrs. Weaver, of Batavia, has recently organized a new union at East Worcester, which is active and growing, having taken up several departments of work at its first regular meeting.

Mrs. Boole, our state vice-president, has lately organized three new unions in Richmond county, and expects to add others before the year closes.

Several "veteran workers" from other states have recently come among us, and our state is to be congratulated upon the valuable acquisition.

Mrs. E. F. Nicholson, a member of the prison association of the United States and of the police matron association of Philadelphia, has taken up her residence in New York City.

Mrs. S. A. McClees, National superintendent of work among soldiers and sailors, has just moved from East Orange, New Jersey, to Brooklyn.

Mrs. Newton, wife of the pastor of Rochester Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, comes from Boston, where she was state superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, and we cordially welcome them all.

Local option contests have been carried on in various parts of Western New York and have resulted successfully in certain sections of Niagara, Orleans and Monroe counties, so that along the line of the Central railroad, for a distance of fifty-six miles, there is scarcely a place where licenses are granted.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM,
State Reporter, Lockport.

OKLAHOMA.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS.

The white-ribboners of this territory make their prettiest bow to the Temple, as the superscription of this letter bears the address for the first time of that wonderful structure, wrought by prayer and faith in usefulness and beauty.

The Frisco union has held gospel temperance meetings every month save one, during the past year; the public are interested in them, and a change for the better has taken place in the hearts of many persons through their instrumentality. A saloon-keeper has been indicted for selling whisky to minors, and by the persistent efforts of faithful women, public sentiment has an upward tendency.

Mrs. A. L. Smith, territorial corresponding secretary, lives upon a claim three miles from Frisco, and walks that distance to lead her local union. Mrs. E. J. Roberts, territorial president, has been appointed field matron by General Morgan, commissioner of Indian affairs. Soon after the opening of the Arapahoe and Cheyenne country, she was at Tacola, the county seat of county "H." There were eight applications to sell intoxicants in four days. An M. E. Church was organized on the first Sabbath after the opening, by Rev. Mr. Roberts, and money raised with which to purchase a tent to hold services and Sunday-school. The W. C. T. U. of Elreno remembered Mr. and Mrs. Roberts on the anniversary of their silver wedding, with many useful and beautiful presents in silver ware.

The Guthrie union met with a sad bereavement in the tragic death of their president, Mrs. Emma Bradley, who was caught in a moving train of cars, and her whole body shockingly mangled and crushed. A wreath of white roses, tied with loops of white ribbon, was hung upon the door of her home. She was gifted as an evangelist. At an entertainment a short time before her death she rendered a temperance recitation that still lingers in the memory of her audience. She always wore the little knot that is the insignia of our society. She was president last year of the north W. C. T. U. district, but the highest praise that can be said of her is that she was a "home Christian."

Mrs. Celia Titus is the newly-elected president of the Guthrie union; her husband is superintendent of the public schools of Logan county, and is proving himself a veritable brother-in-law to the W. C. T. U. The reporter wrote to this ever-progressive union for news for this letter; they decided at once to make some news, by planning to take part in the memorial exercises, and secured places in the procession for the union and the L. T. L. The latter was placed in charge of Miss Alma Carson and Miss Axyah Lafferty. The children marched next to the old soldiers, and kept time to the martial music, with banners, bearing the inscriptions, "Tremble, King Alcohol, we shall grow up," "The Future Defenders of our Country." The Willard L.T.L. deposited wreaths upon the graves of promoted soldiers. A carriage filled with ladies and flowers followed the children. The carriage bore upon one side the cabalistic letters, W. C. T. U., the other side, "For God, and home and native land." The carriage and matched horses also were decorated with flags and streamers of white ribbons. The flowers were strewn upon the newly-made grave of Mrs. Bradley, their beloved president. On Arbor day, the L. T. L. girls of Guthrie planted two trees, naming them Frances E. Willard and Anna A. Gordon. Mrs. Copland, president of the north district, is giving talks to women upon the work of the W. C. T. U. The Stillwater union sustains two columns of temperance matter in one of the weeklies.

The Oklahoma City union keeps up jail work every Sabbath in conjunction with the Y. M. C. A.; they observed flower mission day by distributing flowers and UNION SIGNALS to the sick and prisoners. They also have sent girls wearing white ribbons with leaflets bearing upon the question of license and taxation to every business house in the city. Far out in the Black Jacks, away from all other Christian organizations, a Sabbath-school is sustained regularly. The temperance lesson for this quarter was taught from leaflets prepared by the W. T. P. A., and the truths brought out interested and instructed old and young alike.

MRS. SUE UHL BROWN,
Territorial Reporter, Oklahoma City.

TENNESSEE.

UP AND DOING.

It is ninety in the shade! Scarcely a breeze is stirring, while the hot rays of the sun are pouring down as if they would scorch and shrivel all vegetation! Hoping that the unions all over the state are enjoying a like degree of warmth in their enthusiasm for the work, and that its effect on the liquor traffic and kindred evils is equally disastrous, I proceed to report the work of those unions that have not found it too hot weather to write me of the many good things they have done and are doing.

Jonesboro shall head the list with reports of work done in many departments. Their L. T. L. is increasing in interest and doing good work, having forty pledged members, and an attendance of seventy-five. They have a class that will soon be ready for diplomas, and a birthday box in which the children are expected to put as many pennies as they have had birthdays, and most of them respond. In the press department they report having kept up a column in a local paper since September last. Their Sunday-school department reports temperance lessons every quarter. Several hundreds of the leaflets containing the lessons for May 22 were given out in the schools in the town and the country round about, and where this was done, the responsive readings were also used. Their mothers' meetings are well attended, interesting many women who are not members of the union. They are also doing good work among the colored people, and are hoping to do even better in the future. Their Sabbath observance department has distributed leaflets from Mrs. Bateham to the four white and two colored congregations, and secured more than two thousand signers to the petitions for closing the gates of the Columbian Exposition.

The East Nashville union reports much good work done. (The paper containing full report having been misplaced I only write from memory.) That union claims to be the banner union in the state. It has more members and works in more departments than any other. Their superintendents of departments are faithful, efficient workers, well chosen for their work, and untiring in their zeal. Their night school among poor children has done much good, while their mothers' meetings have always been well attended and full of interest.

Morristown reports two lectures, one from Mrs. Meriwether, and one from Mrs. Lathrap, by both of which they were largely benefited. They have had one Demorest gold medal contest which was well attended. The

W. C. T. U. offered a gold medal in the graded school to pupils over sixteen years of age, "for greatest physical development, together with abstinence from intoxicating drink, tobacco and profanity." Two physicians gave medals under the same conditions to children of a different age. They had an "experience" meeting recently, placing the fee at fifty cents, and thereby raised six dollars. Good work is done in the narcotic department, securing petitions and distributing literature. The teachers in the colored school are all white-ribboners, and have done a good work among the students the past winter, securing more than thirty names to the triple pledge. Flower mission day was appropriately observed by a visit to the county home and the sick. Morristown is such a healthy place, physically and morally, that few sick people could be found. They are now taking up physical culture, hoping in that way to interest the young people, and ask that some one interested give them some hints as to the best methods of work along this line.

Knoxville observed flower mission day June 15th, the time being delayed on account of the sickness of their superintendent. Almost all the members of their union visited the jail and hospital, bearing to the inmates and persons in charge, bouquets with the white ribbon bow, cards with Scripture texts and copies of THE UNION SIGNAL of June 2. They carried out the program of Miss Jennie Casseday at the jail, singing, prayer, Scripture lesson, distribution of flowers and an address by Mrs. Kate Calloway. Two beautiful solos were rendered in an impressive manner by one of their number, and they feel that it was a time of great blessing to all present. The prisoners begged them to come again and said they could not come too often.

Harriman, as was to have been expected, sends in, as usual, a good report. During April the East Tennessee Land Company held its second annual auction sale of lots in the city, and their temple was dedicated on this occasion, as has already been reported in THE UNION SIGNAL. They have held four medal contests, all the medals being taken by the girls, though both sexes participated. There are now enough silver medals held by persons resident in Harriman to enable them to hold a gold medal contest, which they hope to do soon. Their L. T. L. has a membership of ninety, and are doing much effective work under the able leadership of their superintendent. They have given three public entertainments which have netted handsome results, in aid of the fund for liquidating the temple debt. In appreciation of their financial help, the W. C. T. U. gave the L. T. L. a supper, which was a source of unbounded delight to the participants. The Y's are "booming right along," observing flower mission day, and giving a reception in the evening, at which a brief program was rendered and light refreshments served, which resulted in bringing in several honorary members. Their other departments of work are moving steadily on and doing much good.

In the jail and prison department, work is done by holding meetings every Lord's Day in the jail. The superintendent of the health department is doing good work among the poor. She has held mothers' meetings among them which they hope will be productive of much good. The superintendent of literature has distributed hundreds of papers and leaflets in the manufacturing districts, depots and barber shops, being ably assisted by the Prohibition club, which scatters good literature broadcast. The superintendent of Sabbath observance circulated a petition for Sunday closing of the Columbian Exposition, and against the sale of liquors at the great Fair, securing eight hundred signatures. They hold union gospel temperance meetings from time to time in the temple. They are doing much good work in every way, being always alive and wide-awake. And if some one doesn't look out, Harriman will yet be the banner union of the state.

Chattanooga union is wide awake and doing good work. They have had with them Mrs. Meriwether, the proceeds of whose lecture ("The Silent Seven") were applied towards their working girls' home. Mrs. Snell, of Mississippi, also gave an address at the Christian church, and spoke at one of the firemen's halls to an attentive audience. The union holds meetings for the firemen every Sunday afternoon and finds that the "laddies" appreciate the efforts in their behalf very much, as they have very little opportunity for attending the regular services. A concert given by friends of the working girls' homes netted them thirty-five dollars, while a lecture given by Major Connor brought them in eighty dollars. A series of readings by Mrs. Oton, of Kentucky, with music furnished by members of the union, also enriched their treasury. They have been endeavoring to secure a police matron in the city. A saloon-keeper recently opened a music and beer hall, securing the services of several girls from Cincinnati for bar-maids. The W. C. T. U. made an earnest protest against his course, but to no purpose.

A trade carnival was given by the union for the benefit of the building fund of the working girls' home which was three times repeated and attracted large audiences. It resulted in adding $350 to their treasury. This entertainment was successful from every point of view, and was highly eulogized in the daily papers.

The young ladies represented the various trades and business firms of the city, and were dressed in appropriate costumes. For instance: the young lady representing a shoe company was dressed in yellow and black silk trimmed with baby shoes, shoe-strings, buttons and buttoners; a grocery company was designated by the wearer of a white silk elaborately trimmed with a variety of staple groceries. The East Tennessee manufacturing company's representative wore a costume of white crêpe de chine, trimmed with shavings of poplar and walnut; the cap was made of shavings, with banner of hard wood beautifully lettered. A costume of bed-ticking trimmed with corn husks was typical of a mattress factory. Eight little girls represented the eight pages of The Times. Banking companies were represented by costumes elaborately trimmed with greenbacks and gold and silver coins. But the most electrical costume was that of the Chattanooga Electric Light Company; the lady had attached to her costume twenty incandescent lamps of sixteen candle power each. They formed epaulets on her shoulders, a girdle for her waist and literally covered her bodice and skirt. She was electricity personified. This entertainment was so successful from every point of view that other unions suffering with impoverished purses may profit accordingly. I know of nothing so calculated to arouse the interest of everybody, great and small, and especially the married men and business men of a town or city as such an entertainment. The program consisted of music and recitations and drills of the costumed young ladies, each carrying an appropriate banner.

The Prohibition party met in convention at Nashville, June 2. Among other good works, they nominated Judge Edward H. East, of Nashville, as our candidate for governor. No better nomination could have been made. He had to make a great sacrifice to accept the nomination. But so unanimous was the call for him that he could not refuse. Of such stuff are heroes made. And while the Prohibition party is not poor in men willing to sacrifice for the cause they love, few make so great a sacrifice as he in accepting the Prohibition nomination for governor. Indeed, Tennessee is to be congratulated for having so many such men in her ranks. As witness the campaign of Dr. Kelly two years since as our nominee for governor which brought on him the indignation of his superiors (?) in the church and his suspension from the ministry for six months. The wife of Judge East, Mrs. Ida T. East, is state corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U., and president of the Central Nashville union, and one of the most active and efficient W. C. T. U. workers in our state. Judge East has always been a warm friend to the W. C. T. U., and that W. C. T. U. women all over the state will work for a big vote for him goes without saying.

MRS. T. P. HOLMAN,
State Reporter, Fayetteville.

GEORGIA.

THE RECENT STATE CONVENTION.

The tenth annual session of the Georgia W. C. T. U. was held in the Methodist church at Milledgeville. The church itself is beautifully situated on the north side of the Old Capitol Square, and through the clear glass windows we caught refreshing glimpses of the green grass and waving elms.

Within was a goodly sight. Upon the tastefully tinted gray walls were artistically wrought mottoes, such as "Temperance bringeth peace"; "We will drink no wine forever"; "For God and home and every land." In front of the platform, and just beneath the chandelier, hung an evergreen globe encircled with white ribbon; suspended with it, and reaching from the sides of the gallery, was the appropriate motto in evergreen letters, "The world for Christ." Within the dome-like pulpit recess blooming plants were clustered—royal geraniums, pure white lilies, and starry marguerites. The state banner with its emblems of cotton plant and Cherokee rose, and its motto, "Suaviter in modo, fortiter in re," lent its charm to the scene; as did also the lovely banners of the Milledgeville L. T. L., and the Atlanta South side union.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. C. H. Smith, of Ellaville. A brief, but earnest and suitable address of welcome was given by Mrs. S. D. Woothen, of the Milledgeville union, who reviewed the struggle for prohibition and the efforts of Christian women in its behalf.

Mrs. W. C. Sibley, the president, then called the convention to order. Miss Lily Reynolds, of Lithia Springs, was requested to act as recording secretary, in place of Miss Emmie Stewart, whose illness prevented her attendance. Miss Mamie Bays acted as assistant to Miss Reynolds. Many regrets were expressed at the unavoidable absence of Mrs. W. B. Hill, the vice-president, and messages of sympathy were sent. After the roll-call of officers and unions the convention proceeded to business. The first day was spent in hearing reports of local unions represented by delegates in attendance. Fraternal delegates were present with greetings from the local missionary society of Meriweather; the parsonage and home missionary society of Barnesville, the Sons of Temperance, and the temperance club of Eatonton. There were also a number of visiting delegates and visitors who were warmly welcomed.

The second day of the convention was mainly given to reports of department work. The following superintendents were present and gave excellent reports: Miss Lily Reynolds, juvenile work; Mrs. B. H. Tarbutton, Sunday-school work; Mrs. Richard Webb, prison and jail work; Mrs. E. C. Witter, unfermented wine; Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Demorest medal contests; Mrs. M. C. Rowe, work among sailors; Mrs. E. T. Miller, work among railroad men; Mrs. Margaret Chandler, Sabbath observance; Mrs. W. H. Felton, petition work. The department reports of Mrs. H. A. Scomp, scientific temperance instruction; Mrs. Dr. Blanchard, health and heredity, and of Mrs. W. J. Stead, work among lumbermen, were read by the corresponding secretary. These reports were all comprehensive but concise, and did great credit to the zeal and energy of the respective superintendents. All show progress; but true to the mother heart of woman, there was much rejoicing over the increasing interest manifested in the work for children as brought out in the reports from the various L. T. L's, the growing zeal in the quarterly temperance Sunday-school lesson, and the large number of Demorest medal contests.

While we have no superintendent of colored work, inasmuch as they now have a state organization of their own, yet our local unions are lending a helping hand wherever practicable, for the temperance education of the colored people. One of the liveliest discussions of the convention was elicited by this subject. Special prayer was made for the success of the prohibition campaign going on in Newton county, and in Augusta. A letter was received from Col. C. R. Pringle, of Sandersville, president of the state Prohibition association, expressing his regret at not being able to attend the convention to which he had been cordially invited. A beautiful feature of this day was the introduction of the youngest visitor to the convention, Joseph Key Timmons, the infant son of Rev. and Mrs. Timmons, of Augusta, who was thereupon decorated with the white ribbon.

So cordially had the convention been invited to visit the colleges of Milledgeville, that the delegates went in a body to the Girls' Normal and Industrial School and to the Middle Georgia military and agricultural college. The former is a substantial brick building with extensive grounds; the latter occupies the classic halls of the old capitol building.

The reports of the president, corresponding secretary and treasurer were all characterized by brevity and conciseness. The report of Mrs. C. H. Smith, the treasurer, was a model in every respect. She is herself a living illustration of consecrated common sense and unusual business talent.

So satisfactory to the delegates were the resolutions that only two or three of them were discussed. On these there was a decided difference of opinion, and I was pardonably proud of the reasoning power, intellectual breadth, and sweet Christian courtesy manifested throughout. The general officers and district presidents were re-elected, and only one or two changes made among the department superintendents. Macon was chosen for the next place of meeting.

Like every other arrangement of the hospitable citizens, the noonday lunches were sources of delight, the social enjoyment heightening their intrinsic worth. Can we ever forget how happily and swiftly passed those noontide seasons in the classic gymnasium hall, served at table by Milledgeville ladies and gentlemen, and all chatting merrily together. The old time Southern hospitality and chivalry was revived, as we were welcomed by Major J. Cotton Lines and toasted by the gallant Judge Crawford.

The first evening was devoted to addresses of welcome. These were preceded by a stirring song from the L. T. L. Rev. A. C. Thomas, pastor of the Methodist church, assured us of a hearty welcome, and his address was a brave, logical and impressive defense of woman's temperance work. President J. H. Chappell, of the girls' normal and industrial school paid a glowing tribute to woman's intellectual abilities. The address of welcome in behalf of the local W. C. T. U. was given by Mrs. S. A. Cook, who spoke with much earnestness and pathos. To complete the fullness of welcome, we were then addressed by little Miss Lizzie Lumpkin, whose manner and voice were sweet and beautiful. In behalf of the convention, a fitting response was made by Miss Mamie Bays, of Rome, a sweet-spirited Christian girl. And then came Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, of South Carolina, and, late as was the hour, she held her audience to the close.

Saturday afternoon was devoted to a children's and young people's meeting, which was addressed by Mrs. Chapin. Quite a large number of the audience were college boys and girls, and to them were spoken wholesome truths and warnings, which will doubtless be long remembered. Inimitable was the life-like illustration of how too many girls encourage young men in cigar smoking, by their failure to condemn it, and often by condoning it. That night Mrs. W. H. Felton addressed a large and enthusiastic audience at the chapel of the girls' normal and industrial school, taking for her theme temperance and the education of woman, and showing the relation between the two.

Sunday was a rare day. At 9 a. m. an experience meeting was held at the church, led by Mrs. Timmons, and participated in by the delegates and some of the citizens. At 11 a. m. the church services began. A grand anthem of praise to God was sung by the choir, to the music of Mozart's Twelfth Mass, every word of which could be distinctly heard. The pastor, Rev. A. C. Thomas, took for his text, "Is the Young Man Absalom Safe?" He gave a brief review of the life and character of Absalom, and the influences upon him of heredity and environment, and applied the lesson of his life to the young men of to-day. Fervent "amens" attested the sympathy and approval of his hearers. Would that this sermon could be repeated in every community, and thousands might be rescued from the sins of which he spoke!

On Sabbath afternoon a children's mass meeting was addressed by Mrs. S. H. Sibley, of Union Point, Mrs. A. E. Sexton, of Atlanta, and Miss Lily Reynolds, of Lithia Springs, all well known for their zeal and success in the temperance training of children. Three little girls from the Union Point L. T. L. gave a touching rendition of "The Children of Poverty Row."

On Sunday night, by special request, Mrs. Felton spoke on "Motherhood and the License System," to a large and appreciative audience. No synopsis can do justice to Mrs. Felton's addresses. On Monday morning Mrs. Chapin addressed the girls at the normal and industrial school with great effect. In the afternoon, by request of the president, she addressed the boys of the college, talking on physiological and White Cross lines. The captain donned the White Cross badge and pledged his influence among his fellow students. In the evening Mrs. Chapin spoke on "God and Government," to a fine audience. Her address was followed by the recitation of "Poorhouse Nan," rendered with thrilling effect by Miss Julia B. Reed, of Eatonton. It was on this occasion that Mrs. Chapin was presented with a deed to a lot of land in Union Point, by Mrs. S. H. Sibley, of that town.

The closing exercises occurred on Tuesday evening. Mrs. W. C. Sibley, of Augusta, gave a comprehensive review of the ten years' progress of the Georgia state union, and a glance at the temperance status of the world. It was a fine address, and was well received. The corresponding secretary referred to the hopeful progress of the last twelve months, and gave incidents connected with the temperance legislation of sixty years ago as enacted in the halls of the old capitol near by. Both these addresses, taken together, occupied but twenty two minutes. Then followed impromptu speeches from a number of the delegates, and many thanks to the citizens of Milledgeville. After this the delegates joined hands and knelt in prayer, led by Mrs. Chapin; "God be with you till we meet again" was sung; the benediction was pronounced, and thus closed this delightful and profitable convention, of which this sketch is not even a good outline, for "the half has not been told."

MISSOURI STOKES,
State Reporter, Decatur.

ONE of our Georgia correspondents writes: "I have been too busy fighting the world, the flesh and the devil to write up our recent state convention. It was the best we have yet held. We are growing all the time. The Milledgeville folks where we held our convention are going in for a local option campaign. They once had prohibition. Mrs. Chapin was with us and as bright and interesting as ever."

COLORADO'S GROWTH.

The Montrose convention of the southwestern district has come and gone, and its results have added to our numbers and interest in the temperance cause.

The convention was called to order on May 13 by Mrs. S. B. Pickett, the appointed president of the newly arranged district, and the formal organization effected, the following officers being elected: President, Mrs. S. B. Picketts, Whitewater; vice-president, Mrs. V. F. Axtel, Crested Butte; recording secretary, Mrs. Ella S. Thomas, Delta; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. N. Cox, Grand Junction; treasurer, Mrs. H. Frees, Montrose.

The papers presented were carefully prepared, and enthusiastic discussion was aroused. The subjects were as follows: "Our W. C. T. U.," by Mrs. Pickett; "What to Teach Our Little Ones"; "Foundation Work"; "Of What Use are Parliamentary Rules?" "Importance of Social Purity Work"; "Our Cottage Home"; "What reason have we for believing that woman suffrage would aid in the more rapid advancement of temperance?" "What can we do to aid in enforcing the laws we have been instrumental in securing?" "What relation does the local union bear to the state, National and World's W. C. T. U.?" "What are some of the advantages of a W. C. T. U. to a country neighborhood?" "Our government and the liquor traffic in heathen lands"; "Work among railroad men and miners"; "The importance of the press in W. C. T. U. work"; "What is the secret of the saloon's enormous power"? and "Mothers' Work." This is certainly an array of subjects to incite earnest thought and lively argument, and no doubt gave practical illustration of parliamentary usage. The report in the Montrose Industrial Union gives the following comment: "The convention throughout was parliamentary, harmonious, and carried on in a truly Christian, temperate style, proving beyond all doubt that the women of the country are capable of conducting affairs of this kind with equal perfection to men."

The above mentioned paper freely offers its columns for the use of all women's organizations in the state, when by this means it will further the interests of their work. The Delta Independent also gave an interesting report of the convention.

The following resolution was adopted: "As an organization, the W. C. T. U. of this district withdraws its support from the Columbian Exposition, should the gates not be closed on Sunday during the World's Fair."

Dr. Mary Allen, National lecturer on hygiene, heredity, and social purity, occupied the time set apart for Mrs. Reynolds, our state superintendent of mothers' meetings. Dr. Allen's work was fully appreciated. Especially her address on Sunday evening on the subject, "Blessed are the pure in heart." The next annual meeting of the southwestern district of Colorado W. C. T. U. will be held at Delta.

Mrs. Nellie DeSalle Barber, of Delta, favored the convention with a beautifully rendered solo. Mrs. Higgins was present with her usual helpfulness and accomplished much in advancing the work while in the district, resulting in the organization of three new W's and one Y, thus increasing the number from eight W's to eleven, and one Y to two.

The woman's exchange of Denver served lunch during April to 14,252 guests. The receipts during the same month were $3,154, and more than $1,300 were paid to consignors.

Rev. E. F. Leonard, now in the railroad mission, made 152 calls in seventy-six families, and held sixteen religious services. The new Y union of Highlands has taken the name of "Lady Somerset."

The Y's of Montrose expect Henrietta Moore to lecture for them the latter part of June. The Salida Y's have given the entertainment of the "Cradle Songs of Many Nations." The Grand Junction Y's have held their first medal contest, Luma Adams winning the prize. Rocky Ford has held its second contest and netted over twenty dollars as one result. Berthoud has also held its second contest, the medal being awarded to Mrs. Ella Newall. At the close of the contest eight voters signed the million voters' agreement.

Loveland held her fifth medal contest and now has one hundred names on the million voters' pledge. During the month of April the Cottage Home had fifteen girls under its care at one time. All along the lines of work there is a call for reapers in the harvest, or rather for the workers first to prepare the way for the reapers. The young people are coming into the work and are most heartily welcome. We need them. The Master is calling for the consecrated lives of our young men and women. It is a strength and comfort to the older workers to know that the ranks will not only be filled, but increased as one by one the older ones step aside to rest awhile.

ELSIE W. CHAMBERS,
State Reporter, Colorado Springs.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS writes: "One of our brightest white-ribboners was elected a member of the Decatur, Ill., school board last week by a majority of 1,425 after a warmly contested election."

CONVENTIONS have been held in Knox and Waldo counties, Me., in this month of roses. At the latter the Chautauqua salute was given the beautiful new picture of our World's and National President.

THE white-ribboners of Texas are to be congratulated that the fires are lighted once more in their capital city. A fine new union has just been organized there by the state president, Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard.

MRS. JOSEPHINE C. BATEHAM, National superintendent of Sabbath observance, addressed a teachers' association at Waynesville, N. C., on the subject of "Scientific Temperance," by the urgent request of the teachers.

MRS. E. S. JACKSON, of Tamworth, N. H., passed away June 13. A valiant temperance worker, she was a promoter of good morals, and at the close of a long and useful life of eighty-seven years she had not to grieve over one user of alcohol or tobacco among her numerous descendants.

A JUNE day was delightfully passed by the W. C. T. U. of Rensselaer county, N. Y.; able and interesting papers were read, a worker's conference held, solos sung and short addresses given by the ministers present.

MRS. CLARA S. WARD, of Reno, Nev., was elected state president at the annual meeting held in Carson, June 17. Mrs. Anna C. Singer, of Spokane, Wash., and Mrs. Vie H. Campbell, of Evansville, Wis., are also newly-elected state presidents.

MISS ELIZABETH U. YATES, who delivered forty lectures in Vermont last year, is giving the month of June to work in that state. Her personal graces and rare talents render her one of the most able and popular of lecturers.

THE State W. C. T. U. of Western Washington convened in Fairhaven, June 21–24. It is to be regretted that a valuable letter from the state reporter, Mrs. J. W. Lee, of Tacoma, containing much "News from the Field," has been lost in the mails.

THE state of Kentucky has had to build two penitentiaries, and is now enlarging both to accommodate the criminals who have broken both human and divine laws, many of them while under the influence of the world famous Kentucky whisky.

MRS. LUCY A. SWITZER, founder, and since 1883 president of Washington State W. C. T. U. having resigned on account of ill health, has been given the position of honorary president of that state and manager of Dean Wright's Course of Bible Study.

MRS. CAROLINE M. WOODWARD was in Dallas, Texas, during the state convention and was very helpful in many ways. She remained in the state a month, looking after work along her special lines. Everywhere she has exhibited that faithfulness and earnestness that bring the best results.

MRS. ANDREWS, of Indiana, who is much interested in the National Temperance Hospital, reports that in her journeys in the interest of the hospital, she frequently finds that physicians are watching the progress of non-alcoholic treatment, and many of them have given up the use of stimulants in their practice as a result of the success of the hospital.

MRS. ALICE J. HARRIS, president of the Lady Henry Somerset union (which is the Boston young women's branch of the W. C. T. U. in that city) has brought out a Temperance Vesper Service most interesting and helpful, which is commended to all our workers for these warm summer evenings of the Sabbath day. Address Mrs. Alice J. Harris, care of W. C. T. U., 171 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

THE Louisiana W. C. T. U. has had its best year, and is enlarging its borders in all directions. Miss Belle Kearney has been engaged to work there, and she is a power. They have even reached the point of having district conventions in the Pelican state. Mrs. Pharr, the wife of Louisiana's millionaire sugar planter, is very active in the work. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodale are at the fore and will spare no pains to advance white-ribbon interests in the ever strategic position occupied by New Orleans and the state generally.

MRS. JAS. E. CLEMENTS, the first corresponding secretary of the Yarmouth W. C. T. U. and superintendent of prison reform work for the Maritime provinces, passed peacefully away to rest on June 1. The work of the W. C. T. U. lay very near her heart, and often when feeble in health she presided at public meetings, where her addresses from the chair delighted and encouraged her fellow workers. She died, softly repeating the word of the psalmist, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil."

ON June 16th, at Chatham, N. Y., Mrs. Ann Pyne Chandler, of Newport News, Va., fell peacefully and trustfully asleep. In health she had earnestly labored as president, both of the Y. M. C. A. and of the W. C. T. U. in her own town, both of which societies she was instrumental in starting, and of which she was the inspiration and the life. It is a cause for rejoicing that her life, so rich in blessing to the world, should have been counted worthy to be translated to that land "where there is no more pain."

THE South Dakota W. C. T. U. school of methods conducted by Caroline Woodward, of Nebraska, will be held at Madison Chautauqua, commencing July 11, and continuing one week. Unions perish from lack of knowledge, and white-ribboners should certainly avail themselves of this splendid opportunity of becoming better informed concerning "our work." July 19 is W. C. T. U. Day, and the names of Joseph Cook, Mrs. H. M. Barker, and Miss Elizabeth Yates, which appear upon the program are surely a sufficient guarantee for an enjoyable and profitable occasion.

A BRIEF report of the hearing before the judiciary committee of the House contains the speech of Mrs. Stanton on the "Solitude of Self," and the addresses of Lucy Stone, Miss Anthony and Isabella Beecher Hooker. The congressional committee ordered more of these documents and they are now ready for distribution, as are also the report of the speeches delivered before the Senate committee. Any one wishing a copy of either or both of these can be supplied by sending name and address to the National headquarters of the N. A. W. S. A. in the Wimodaughsis building, 1328 I St., N. W. Washington, D. C.

THE Flower Mission Day service at the penitentiary in Frankfort, Ky., was simple and impressive. The chapel is a very large one, and it was beautifully decorated in evergreens and flowers. Appropriate mottoes were on the walls, and the mission flowers were banked around the pulpit. The touching services were conducted by Mrs. Monell, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Beauchamp, and Miss Graham. The address of welcome to the ladies was delivered by one of the unfortunate men in uniform—a talented, fine looking man, belonging to one of the finest families of the state, a victim to drink, and under its influence he killed a man. His address was beautiful and pathetic, and touched every heart in the audience, many of the prisoners weeping bitterly then and during the whole service.

Our Library Table.

MISS MATILDA ARCHAMBEAU VANDORN is the title of a story by Elizabeth Cummings, whose heroine has the honor of the above high-sounding name. Miss Matilda is a sturdy, bright, affectionate lassie, who feels aggrieved one day because it is not right for her to fight and thrash offending boys, and the next goes behind the "scarlet beans when they were big enough to hide her," praying "that the good Father in Heaven would help her to keep her clothes clean, and not get grass stains on her nice pantalets." The story is a delightful one for children, save for one thing that is seriously detrimental—the author allows the use of cider by her characters, a mistake that would be severely criticised by the hosts of temperance boys and girls. Otherwise the book is worthy of commendation. D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Mass.

ITALIAN CHILD LIFE; OR MARIETTA'S GOOD TIMES, by Marietta Ambrosi. 12mo, 75 cents. D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

There is a fascination to children about the way in which children live in other countries, and this true story of the child-life of an Italian girl will prove pleasing and instructive. The writer, who has made her home in America for many years, is well known in different art circles, and has many friends in her adopted country. But that her heart clings to the land of her birth where she had so many "good times," is plainly to be read between the lines. Her style of description is unstudied and colloquial, and one can almost fancy her sitting in the midst of a group of young people, and with sparkling eyes and animated gestures, describing her early life under the blue Italian skies. The interest of the book is maintained throughout, and children, who are, after all, the best critics, will read it with relish.

Daintily bound in white and gold, as befits the record of a "white life," is a loving memorial of Isabel Hart, by Mrs. J. T. Gracey, Rochester, N. Y. Mrs. Hart's name is especially familiar and fragrant with tender memories to the missionary women of the Methodist church, as she was one of the founders of its Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. As secretary of the Baltimore branch, she gave to the work years of valuable service of brain, hand and pen. Entering, at last, into "the fellowship of His suffering," she "fell on sleep" after months of patient trial. "God keeps heaven" for souls like hers.

HENDRYX'S COMPENDIUM OF BOOK-KEEPING AND BUSINESS FORMS is designed as a practical aid to students wishing to instruct themselves in this all-needful branch of education. The details are very clearly set forth, and the complications simplified. The author has made arrangements by which those using this Compendium may at a slight expense per lesson receive special instruction by mail, for as few or as many lessons as desired.

Address F. H. Hendryx, Bath, N. Y.

THE FOURTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE WESTERN SOCIETY FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE comes to the Library Table, bringing with it some statistics that bear testimony to the steady working of the leaven of purity, owing to the faithfulness of the few. Why may not each pure-minded man and woman constitute him or herself a look-out committee of one to aid in this vital work?

R. W. McAfee, drawer D 6, St. Louis, is the agent of the Western society.

The Christian church is more and more recognizing the power that good music has over the human heart, and this recognition is calling forth the best efforts of hymn-writers and musical composers. The contrast between the hymn-books used twenty, or even ten years ago, and those of recent issue, indicates a noticeable change in the methods of conducting public worship and in the thought of the worshipers. Many of the old hymns of solemn measure and somber melody are being superseded by the more hopeful strains of the Heavenly Home, the halleluiahs of saved souls and earnest invitations to sinners to accept salvation. Fresh from the press comes a new hymn-book, appropriately named, HONEY OUT OF THE ROCK, compiled and edited by W. S. Nickle, F. A. Hardin and John B. Shaw, all of Chicago. The book is not only attractive in appearance, well made, clearly and cleanly printed, but is rich in new and excellent material. It is designed for use in all church work—prayer and praise meetings, Sabbath-schools and revival meetings. Nearly one-half of the volume is composed of the latest productions of the best hymn-writers in the country, and the balance is made up of selections which have already won their way to people's hearts. "Each piece is as though the bees of heaven had come all the way over the river to make honey in the author's heart."

Meyer & Brother, Publishers, 108 Washington St., Chicago. Price 25 cts.; per dozen, $3.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL

Subscription Rates for 1892.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " not in advance	1.50
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15
Per 100 copies	1.00

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

A CARPENTER

requires tools in order to do his work properly. So, to build the

House Wonderful

which we call the W. C. T. U., each worker must have her tools in good condition, and be familiar with their use. Our plane, saw, hammer, etc., are

Questions Answered,

All the possible questions concerning juvenile temperance work, 25 cents.

Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U.

Price, 25 cents.

The Helping Hand

or the A. B. C. of W. C. T. U. work, 10 cents.

Manual of the School of Methods.

Price, 25 cents.

These four books are our course of study "boiled down." The National President says of them: "They do not cost much, and every worker ought to have them. Our women perish for lack of knowledge. They do not even know where to get the results from the expert workers who have put in nearly twenty years in learning them. The power of the mind to resist knowledge is illimitable, and the 'forgettery' of every woman, even though she be a white-ribboner, is as large as the Heidelberg tun."

Summer Resort Rhymes.

List to the rhyme of St. Paul, Papa,
Chippewa, Chickasaw, Minnehaha;
Mani-to-ba—which used to be Manito-bah;
Chaska, Anoka, Decorah, Dakota,
Delavan, Elkhart, Monango, Mendota.
Placid Luana and tragic Mankato.
Lakes by the hundred, so trippingly they go,
Michigan big, and flat Winnebago—
Itasca, Kegonsa, Monona, Nashotah,
Nagowicka, the reedy, and tiny Leota;
Pewaukee, Waubesa, Okoboji, the finny,
And Pepin, the peerless, Nemahbin, the twinny.
"Minne's" galore over shallow and rock,
River or lake like Oconomowoc,
Menomonee, sinuous; Minnesota, the clouded;
Minneiska, the clear; Minnetonka, the crowded;
"Waus" by the dozen, and "Kaus" by the score,
Waucouta, Waubena, Waukon and Waukau;
Wausau, Wauwatosa, Waucoma, Waupun,
Oshkosh and Okauchee, and wide Koshkonong;
Winneconne, Wausaukee, Mazomanie, Pakwana,
Maquoketa, Mosinee, Omaha, Tomah,
Ontonagon, Okoboji, Owatonna, Viroqua:
And latest of all, the old chieftain, Minocqua.
Wahpe-ton, Sisse-ton, Wyocena, Waubay.
(Muscoda, we find, is pronounced Musco-day;)
Sabula, Savanna, Shakopee and Sioux,
Tama, Taopi and Tomahawk too.
We've made the grand tour and have tackled 'em all,
Via Creamy Milwaukee to busy St. Paul.
We puzzle at Wa-ba-sha—Ke-no-sha no more,
And at Wauk-esh-a—walk ashore.—All on the lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and Milwaukee & Northern Railroads.
Chicago City ticket office, 207 Clark St.

CHICAGO TO DETROIT AND RETURN, $7.15.

On account of the great B. Y. P. U. A. Convention, the Wabash R. R. will sell tickets Chicago to Detroit and return at one fare ($7.15) for the round trip July 13 and 14. Tickets good returning until July 24, inclusive. Write F. A. Palmer, A. G. P. A., 201 Clark Street, or call at Wabash Ticket Office for particulars.

"WHAT YOU CAN DO

And what we can do"—is the name of a very prettily gotten up primer on "tasteful wall decorations and paper hanging," issued by A. L. Diament & Co., 1206 Market Street, Philadelphia. They send it for the asking to all our readers who are interested in the subject, and to such we would say that Messrs. Diament & Co. are old advertisers, and are, we believe, in every way trustworthy and reliable.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

BEATTY Pianos, $175. Organs, $49. Want ag'ts Cat'lg free. Dan'l Beatty, Wash'ton, N.J

Publisher's Notes.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

A new Series!

V-aluable,
O-pportune,
T-elling,
E-arnest,
R-inging,
S-ound.

Two Numbers Now Ready.

1. THY BATTLE. By John G. Woolley. An appeal to Christian voters to consult conscience before party.
2. THE NEW DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE. By John G. Woolley.

The full text of the address of Mr. Woolley at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, July 4, 1892. Printed from advance sheets revised by the author.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR DAY

for July contains a fine portrait of the veteran temperance leader, Neal Dow. It is followed by thoughtful articles on "New Aspects of the Negro Question," "Race Legislation for Railways," "Is Ours a Christian Nation?" "Perils of Moderate Drinking," etc. The "Monday Prelude" is on "Fast and Loose Theories of Evolution." A fuller notice will be given hereafter.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Testimonials of appreciation reach this office with nearly every mail, and occasionally we feel compelled to show our appreciation by quoting here and there from the many kind expressions penned by friends, that they may realize how highly these words of commendation are prized, and that others may feel they are not alone in their good opinion of the publications issued from this office. Here are a few of the many received recently:

A leading white-ribboner in California writes:

"Our splendid UNION SIGNAL is pouring out double and concentrated doses of wisdom. We are rejoicing over every line and daily saying, 'Blessedly and bravely the Lord leads on His hosts!'"

Henry W. Adams, who started the first paper that was an exponent of the Crusade, (we refer to the Morning, where our National President did her first journalistic work as a white-ribboner, and which was the great temperance paper of its time) says:

"THE UNION SIGNAL is surely, under its present management, the highwater mark of temperance journalism."

From an Ohio teacher: "The weekly visits of THE UNION SIGNAL are more and more welcome, showing its uninterrupted growth by the increased ability and dignity of its pages."

Mrs. Joseph Cook: "I congratulate you on the splendid success of the SIGNAL."

A well-known literary woman writes:

"THE UNION SIGNAL is stronger and brighter these days than ever before."

Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, corresponding secretary of Massachusetts: "All Massachusetts is delighted with the present status of THE UNION SIGNAL."

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

CAUTION!

INVESTORS IN HARVEY!

The wonderful growth of Harvey, and the peculiar advantages enjoyed by its residents, have led to the wholesale advertisement by outside parties of what purports to be Harvey property, but which is not in Harvey at all.

Our pamphlets explain all this. They cost nothing, and they may save investors great disappointment and considerable money. You surely can make no mistake in corresponding direct with the town's originators and wonderfully successful builders, THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, The Rookery, 217 La Salle Street, Chicago.

TWO HARVEST EXCURSIONS—HALF RATES TO THE WEST.

August 30th and September 27th.

On these dates the BURLINGTON ROUTE will sell tickets from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis to the farming districts of Nebraska, Colorado and Northern Kansas. Half rates will apply, and tickets will be good for twenty days. Nebraska in one year produced three hundred million bushels of corn, besides other grain, fruit and live stock. Write for free pamphlets, maps, etc., to P. S. Eustis, G. P. A., Burlington Route, Chicago, Ill.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad.

Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

TODD SEMINARY, a delightful home school for boys. 44th year. Send for circular to NOBLE HILL, Woodstock, Ill.

Wouldn't You

rather have beautiful paper on your walls than ugly? It costs no more. You may choose by mail. Let us send you 100 samples for 8c. Prices, 5 to 50c. a roll.

A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Phila.

RAMBLER BICYCLES

SPRING FRAME.

G. & J. PNEUMATIC or CUSHION TIRES.

"Bicycling for Girls From a Medical Standpoint," and Catalogue "F" free.

GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO
85 Madison St., Chicago.

174 Columbus Av. BOSTON. 1325 14th-st., N. W. WASHINGTON. Broadway & 57th. NEW YORK.

Reasons Why Manitou Table Water is deemed superior to all others:

1st.—It is a pure water and, unlike most of the table waters, is unadulterated by salt or any other ingredient.

2d.—It is a fresh water from a mountain spring, and has the pleasant taste and refreshing quality which can only be found in mountain spring water.

3d.—A chemical analysis shows it contains the best properties to act on stomach, liver and kidney. Prepared in nature's laboratory, it produces an effect on the system that cannot be duplicated by any combination man can create.

4th.—It is the most sparkling and effervescent of all waters, being charged with its own gas taken out of the same spring.

5th.—Recommended by all physicians who have tried it as the best remedy known for indigestion and stomach troubles.

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use

Packed in cases of	50	24	100	48
	Quarts.	Quarts.	Pints.	Pints.

Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer.
Address
Manitou Mineral Water Co., Manitou Springs, Colo.
Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

$2.75 SOLID GOLD

Solid gold watches cannot be bought anywhere for $2.75. This is not a solid gold watch but is warranted 14 karat gold plated; it is equal in appearance and cannot be told from solid gold except by experts. Cut this out and send it with your order and we will forward the watch to you by express C. O. D. You examine it at the express office and if you do not find it equal in appearance and as good a timekeeper as many high priced, solid gold watches, and far superior to hundreds of watches advertised at $5 and upwards, leave it, and you are nothing out but your time in looking at it; on the other hand, if you are satisfied that it is a bargain, pay the agent $2.75 and the express charges and it is yours. Address

GUARANTEED

THE NATIONAL MFG. & IMPORTING CO., 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Washburn Springs ASWESEEIT

WE INVITE Your reading of the adjoining clippings from some of Chicago's newspapers, including the leading financial paper, one of the best religious, and two of the best daily papers. If space permitted we could indefinitely extend these extracts. They show the judgment of experts upon the situation at Waukegan and South Waukegan.

THINK OF IT! The WASHBURN-MOEN CO. to double their already enormous plant. The Clinton Wire Cloth Co. to locate here. The Nichols Chemical Co. also to occupy a plant of 40 acres. Several other large factories to follow these.

THE PRICE OF LOTS Remains unchanged, although these great commercial developments would warrant a very large increase in price at once, and there is every prospect that our prices MUST GO UP soon. Present price $300 and upwards for 50x150 ft. lots.

$5.00 DEPOSITS Are received, and lots reserved until parties can come and see the property, or otherwise investigate, and if not satisfied, the deposit will be returned. This secures you the best unsold lot, of price desired, and enables you to look the matter up thoroughly before actually investing—a great advantage when lots are going as fast as ours are. You will not lose anything if you TELEGRAPH US, and send the $5 by mail.

ASWESEEIT Is our little book about WASHBURN SPRINGS, etc., and is sent FREE to all who apply for it. WRITE FOR IT TO-DAY.

FRANK I. BENNETT & CO., 170 Washington Street, Chicago.
or
DUNLAP SMITH & CO., 170 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

NEWSPAPER OPINIONS.

The Chicago Economist says, June 15: It is now positively asserted that the Clinton Wire Cloth Company, of Massachusetts, has decided to establish works at Waukegan. This concern will employ 500 men. The Washburn-Moen Company has decided to double its enormous works at Waukegan. From the statements of thoroughly trustworthy persons, something like five important corporations will soon be added to the business interests of Waukegan. The demand for houses for the accommodation of the laborers already there is something enormous.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says, June 19: South Waukegan has secured another great industry. The Nichols Chemical Company, of New York, on forty acres of ground acquired for the purpose, will erect a plant for the manufacture of chemicals, at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, this to be increased by additional expenditures as occasion demands.

The Chicago Interior says, June 16: There is another corporation about to locate at Waukegan which is said to be larger than any other which has recently moved West, with the exception of the Washburn-Moen Company and the Grant Locomotive Works.

The Chicago Herald says: Pullman and the town of South Manchester, Conn., which the Cheney Brothers have made famous, may be cited as examples of what will be attempted at Waukegan. It is expected, however, that some mistakes that were committed in both places will be avoided by the Washburn-Moen management.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

There seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance than by placing Drinking Fountains on the streets of our cities and towns.
Special prices given to W. C. T. Unions.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue and full particulars.
J. W. FISKE,
21 and 23 Barclay Street, NEW YORK.

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP
For the Skin, Scalp and Complexion.

The result of 20 years' experience in treating skin diseases. For sale by druggists, or sent by mail for 50c. A Sample Cake and 145 page book on Dermatology and Beauty sent sealed for 10 cents. Illustrated on Skin, Scalp, Nervous and Blood Diseases. Also Disfigurements like Birthmarks, Moles, Warts, India Ink and Powder Marks; Scars, Pittings, Redness of Nose, Superfluous Hair, Pimples, Facial Development, etc. Consultation free at office or by letter.
JOHN H. WOODBURY,
Dermatological Institute, 125 W. 42d St., New York City.

Send to 319 W. 45th St., N.Y., for Samples of GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR
DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT
or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE
A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction
By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.
A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 81st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. ☞ Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

A MODERN BATH.
The Latest and Best.

Quick Self-Heating, or Toilet Cabinet in place of Heater. No bath-room required. Ornamental, Inexpensive, Complete, Practical. Desirable for either city or town. Send for Catalogue.
THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB CO.
180 So. Canal Street, Chicago.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF
Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.
We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.
GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.
For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

HAY-FEVER
A GIBBS' CRONASAL RESPIRATOR
used at home, will afford absolute relief throughout the season. A wonderful invention, Convenient, Scientific, Infallible: thoroughly tested for many years. Costs but little—relief obtained is beyond estimate. Equally good for Catarrh. Sent postpaid. Pamphlet with testimonials free.
GIBBS RESPIRATOR CO., 36M La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

SAFEST OF ALL INVESTMENTS
CITY AND COUNTY BONDS Secured by tax lien on all property within their limits.
Descriptive Bond Lists furnished on application.
N. W. HARRIS & CO., BANKERS,
163-165 DEARBORN ST. - CHICAGO, ILL.
New York. Boston.

BAKER'S COCOA.
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

Ladies and Children's dress-cutting learned at home by most perfect TAILOR SYSTEM. Big money to live agts Circulars free. Miss ANNA GRAVES, Box 665, Chicago, Ill

Publisher's Notes.

SEPT. 22.—WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DAY.

The special number of THE UNION SIGNAL now being prepared for this memorial day, will excel all previous "special numbers."

Order early!

Order it to show outsiders what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is doing in all nations!

Order it because strength at home will be increased by the knowledge of respect and admiration abroad!

"WATCH"

"the Official Columns next week for details of the plan," was said in Publisher's Column last week in reference to The Advance Guard, the new publication now in press; but as those columns are crowded, you will find here what was promised. Read carefully and you will be interested. This new publication is called and is for and recognizing what must be done by them, the following has been chosen as the rallying cry:

THE ADVANCE GUARD,

"Christ, the royal Master,
Leads against the foe,
Forward into battle
See, His banners go!"

What is its purpose? The subjoined circular will answer:

To the "Temperance Alumni," the Junior Y's, and all who are interested in temperance study and reading,

GREETING!

With this new number of the Library Series, changed in form and size, we welcome you as The Advance Guard of the host of young people who are rapidly fitting themselves to be the temperance men and women of the future. Learning in the public schools the truths of science concerning alcoholics, searching the Scriptures in the Sunday-schools for the thoughts of God, grasping in the Loyal Temperance Legion, even with childish touch, the levers that move the world to-day, you are the nation—nay, the nations—of to-morrow.

Already the graduates of the Loyal Temperance Legion are numbered by the hundreds, and reinforcements are constantly coming. Wisconsin holds its second Loyal Temperance Legion state convention this summer; Pennsylvania wheels into line and awards many diplomas at a Loyal Temperance Legion state convention in August; Michigan welcomes the mothers to their annual conclave by rallying its forces of young people and conferring diplomas upon sixty one graduates, each of whom has passed successfully four written examinations in temperance studies. Other states are doing grandly in the work, but in this, as in other lines, graduation is only "commencement." To be "masters of the situation," to "keep in step" with the temperance army now on the "double quick," there must be steady, persistent drill. To help in this, The Advance Guard is prepared. Following the successful Chautauqua plan, it will contain the "required readings" for the graduates of the Loyal Temperance Legion, and seals will be given for the completion of the several courses.

Examination of the first number of The Advance Guard will give an idea of the plan proposed. Through the Cheeryvale Law Club, the history of the temperance movement—strung on the thread of a bright, interesting story—is brought to our readers. Questions and suggestions at the end of each chapter will open possibilities of research and debate, of which our young people will not be slow to take advantage. In a different line, "Lewis Elmore, Crusader," teaches truth through Faye Huntington's fascinating pen. Addresses by leading temperance speakers will serve for declamations in contests or entertainments, while special help will be given the young people who are asking, as they stand on the threshold, "Why should I belong to this party—or to that?" There will also be a series of articles on "Chicago, the World's Hostess," including sketches of the great Exposition.

In a word, The Advance Guard aims to supply a pressing demand, and expects that temperance young people will find it a necessity, and so rally to its support. Will you do it? Price per annum, 12 Nos., 50 cts.; single copy, 5 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Give the Girls a Chance!
To be GOOD NATURED.
GOLD DUST Washing Powder

MEANS:
The washing all done early in the forenoon.
No scrubbing; no backaches; no tattered tempers.
Monday a quiet, orderly and proper day, instead of the horror of the whole week.
4 Pounds for 25 Cents.
Sold by ALL GROCERS.
Gold Dust is The Best.
N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

Metal Tipped. EVER READY DRESS STAY Will Not Cut Through.
See Name "EVER READY" on Back of Each Stay.
Acknowledged the BEST DRESS STAY On the Market
Made with Gutta Percha on both sides of steel and warranted water-proof. All other stays are made differently and will rust. Beware of Imitations. Take none but the "Ever Ready."
Manufactured by the YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.
FOR SALE BY ALL JOBBERS AND RETAILERS.
SPECIAL DEPOTS. { MODEL DRESS STEEL CO., 74 Grand St., New York. BROWN & METZNER, 535 Market Street, San Francisco.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address
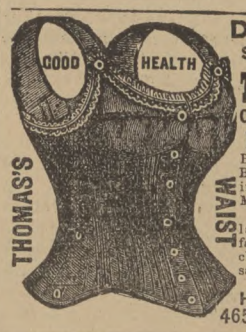
THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.
Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50 Misses 1.25 Children. 60
Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.
Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.
Agents wanted everywhere.
H. A. Thomas & Co., Manf's 465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION.
A SAMPLE BOX of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S
Tissue Builder

for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romans was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N.J.

MISS BEACH'S
Curling Fluid.

Keeps the hair in curl for days Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.
30,000 Ladies Have Endorsed It
At druggists, or prepaid, 50c.
LADY AGENTS wanted.
DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.
Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

HOME STUDY BOOK-KEEPING SHORTHAND
Each person sending us before July 1st $1 for HENDRYX'S COMPENDIUM OF BOOK-KEEPING and BUSINESS FORMS for SELF INSTRUCTION, will receive instructions by mail free. Special inducements also given during the summer to SHORTHAND students. F. H. HENDRYX, 178, Bath, N. Y.

TAPE-WORM Expelled alive in 60 minutes, with head, or no charge. Send 2c stamp for circular. Dr M. NEY SMITH, Specialist, 721 Olive-st, St. Louis, Mo.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. HISCOX, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

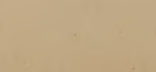
ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Wall Paper Retailed. Good Paper 3c Gold Paper 5c. Send 10c for postage on samples, and his guide "How to Paper" will be sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take Crochet work to do at home. Steady work. Write for particulars. L WHITE & CO., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.



HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES. Agents Wanted. Catalogue free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

BABY'S FIRST TWO YEARS.

BY HER MOTHER.

My baby is now two and one-half years old, and a brighter, sweeter child is seldom seen.

The first few months of her life, this little one suffered tortures from eczema. Our most eminent physician, Dr. J. F. Croston, treated her, lancing several large abscesses. It is no wonder that we were completely discouraged. Yet when our hearts were saddest there came relief, and in a wonderful way. We had tried nearly all the foods sold by our druggist, but utterly in vain. Our physician recommended something else. We tried it, and noticed an improvement after the first three meals. There was no further need of medicine, for this food made our little girl so strong and healthy that the dread eruption was soon cured.

Her teeth all came with little trouble, she has had no difficulty from indigestion, and her sleep has been sound and unbroken. This food is called Lactated, and I want every mother to know of it.

* * * * * * *

The history given above was written by Mrs. Morris A. Smith, 32 Race St., Haverhill, Mass. The picture of her baby proves all that Mrs. Smith has written about its present good health. She is but one of the thousands of mothers, who, when all earthly help seemed in vain, have seen their little ones come back to health solely through the use of this pure food. Yet Lactated Food is not a medicine—it is simply a pure food that keeps the well baby strong, and in a natural way makes the sick baby well.

* * * * * * *

Lactated Food is sold by the best druggists, or mailed on receipt of price, 25 cents, 50 cents, $1 00. Interesting book of prize babies and beautiful birthday card free to any mother sending her baby's name.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

DON'T CHEW TOBACCO.

Beeman's Pepsin Gum

Helps to overcome the Habit.

CAUTION—See that the name Beeman is on each wrapper. Each tablet contains one grain pure pepsin, sufficient to digest 1,000 grains of food. If it cannot be obtained from dealers, send five cents in stamps for sample package to

BEEMAN CHEMICAL CO., 64 Lake St., Cleveland, O.
ORIGINATORS OF PEPSIN CHEWING GUM.

HELPS FOR SUMMER MEETINGS.

The Testing Apparatus for the Detection of Alcohol, consists of Ring Stand, Lamp, 2 flasks, 9 pieces (with directions), packed in box and delivered to express for..... $2.00

Handbook for Temperance Workers, with 30 Scripture Temperance Lessons and 10 Scientific Lectures with experiments. Paper, 50c, cloth $1.00

Also all kinds of Temperance Literature.
Address
JULIA COLMAN,
47 Bible House, New York.

SILVER TONES! JUST OUT!
NEW PROHIBITION SONG BOOK

By the Silver Lake Quartette and W. A. Williams, 35c.; $3.60 per doz. For W. C. T. U. and Prohibition Party work. Best out. Music Chart, 40x90 in., $1; Parliamentary chart, $1. W. A. Williams, Warnock, O

ROCKLAND COLLEGE,

Nyack, N. Y. Both sexes. Thorough work; splendid results. An endowment takes Ladies at $200. Catalogues. W. H. BANNISTER, President.

THE CLAVERACK COLLEGE

And HUDSON RIVER INSTITUTE
For Young Men and Women, will open its 39th year Sept. 19th. For catalogues, address
REV. A. H. FLACK, A. M., Prest., Claverack, N. Y.

Lake Erie Seminary
FOR WOMEN.
PAINESVILLE, OHIO.

Early application necessary for September, 1892.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE WAISTS

Are made in A VARIETY OF SHAPES—to fit SHORT, MEDIUM, and LONG Waists.

TOKOLOGY TREATMENT SAVED A LIFE.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Mrs. G. W. C., of Detroit, Mich., writes: "Tokology treatment, under God, saved my life in childbirth, and gave me a strong, healthy baby girl. I would like to place a copy of your book in the hands of every woman in the land." Price prepaid $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago.

Publisher's Dep't.

CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

Stirring,
Entertaining,
Convincing.
See

TIMELY TALKS:

1. Shall We License the Dram Shops? Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
2. How the Dram Shops Pay the Taxes. Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
3. How the Dram Shop Helps Business, Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
4. The Delusions of High License. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
5. License, High or Low, Wrong in Principle. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
7. Our Drink Bill and the People Who Pay It. Rev. J. C. Fernald.
8. The High License Craze. Rev. H. H. French.
12. Fallacies of High License. Frances E. Willard.
13. High License a Backward Step. Pres. John Bascom.
14. Symposium on High License. Mary Allen West.
17. On Which Side Are You? Frances E. Willard and Mary T. Lathrap.
24. Prohibition not an Invasion of Personal Liberty. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
29. High License—Is it a Step Toward Prohibition? Clara Hoffman.
30. Restriction or Prohibition? Neal Dow.
32. Why William Dustin Became a Prohibitionist. Mrs. A. E. Sigsbee.
33. The Greatest Party. Frances E. Willard.
36. Down with the Traffic. John P. St. John.
37. Echoes from History. Charles Sumner on the Third Party.
41, 42. License vs. Moral Law. Rev. F. L. Goodspeed.

SONG LEAFLETS.

1. Saloons Must Go;
2. Samantha and Josiah, and The Battle Cry.
3. Clear the Way and The Cause.
4. Rallying, and "Keep Pegging Away."
5. Prohibition is the Watchword and The Crank.
6. Home Protection Song.
7. Down with Rum.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

1. Thy Bottle. ..... John G. Woolley.
2. The New Declaration of Independence. John G. Woolley.

SIGNAL LIGHTS.

1. Individuality of Conscience in the Voter. Frances E. Willard.
3. Why the Old Parties Have not Met the Saloon Issue. Prof. W. G. Frost.
5. The Crime of Nations—What Can We Do? Geo. C. Hall.
8—13. Words for Wage Workers. Augusta C. Bristol.
18. Temperance and the Labor Question. Frances E. Willard.
21. Declaration of Independence (new version.) Rev. F. O. Blair.
27. Facts for Organized Labor. Augusta C. Bristol.
28. Needed—Only Pieces of Paper. Geo. C. Hall.

Price: Timely Talks, 30 cts. per 100. Song Leaflets, 50 cts. per 100; Voters' Leaflets, 90 cts. per 100; Signal Lights, 15 cts. per 100. Also by W. W. Satterlee. One of the strongest documents published. Price, 20 cts.

A Defense of the Jericho Robbers,

For campaign purposes we will furnish this package at 20 per cent off from retail price as quoted.

For these supplies send to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER.

There is wonderful beauty in perfect proportion, and the Crusader is just long enough, just wide enough and just thick enough to be a most attractive monthly visitor to the girls and boys. Then its reading is full of practical suggestions. I want my L. T. L. members to be "lifting others as they climb," and as I read the sweet story, "Such a Beautiful Thing to Do," I thought at once, We will try that very same thing—search out sunless homes, and carry to them the sunshine of song and loving words and deeds.

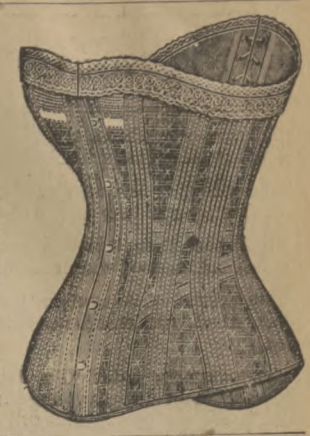
MRS. A. J. BRADBURY,
State Supt. L. T. L. for Wisconsin.

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE

JACKSON CORSET CO.,

The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.

RETAIL PRICE $1.00.



The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.

Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.

Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.

The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.

There is NO SURE CURE FOR EVERY CASE OF ASTHMA or EVERY CASE OF HAY FEVER, but the worst cases, if uncomplicated by organic disease, can be CURED TO STAY CURED by constitutional treatment, and this at the patient's home.

ASTHMA AND HAY-FEVER

We treat no one without a thorough knowledge of the case.

Incurable Cases Declined.

Examination free by mail.

We want name and address of every sufferer from Asthma or Hay Fever.
P. HAROLD HAYES, M. D., BUFFALO, N. Y.

"The Crime of not Insuring."

It may be pleaded in defense that old line companies charge so much and are so extravagant, and that assessment companies are so insecure, that it is no crime to refuse to trade with them. However that may be, here is a company which is NEITHER EXTRAVAGANT NOR INSECURE.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

Has its plans and rates adjusted to INSURE AT COST. Having only total abstainers as members, "COST" is reduced AT LEAST 30 PER CENT UNDER the charges of old line companies. Its EXPENSE ACCOUNT IS $3.00 PER $1,000—and it cannot be more—instead of $9.32 per $1,000, the average of old companies. It has a GUARANTEE FUND OF $67,649.69 securely invested. It stands almost, if not quite alone in paying one hundred cents on the dollar of every honest claim since its incorporation, July 24, 1889. It has achieved, in three years, a success which old companies took about three times as long to reach. The company stands among business enterprises as an object lesson on total abstinence, which EVERY GOOD CITIZEN SHOULD RECOGNIZE.

WM. F. SINGLETON, President,
902-905 Royal Insurance Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

DON'T YOU THINK

Your baby would look pretty in a carriage like that?

We have prettier ones.
Also cheaper ones.

All shown in our catalogue, which we will mail FREE if you write for it.

FREIGHT PAID BY
WALTER HILL CO., 218 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.

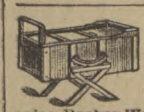
TAKE A COURSE IN THE SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW. (Incorporated.)

Send ten cents (stamps) for particulars to

J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y,
DETROIT, MICH.
525 WHITNEY BLOCK.

IMPROVED HALL TYPEWRITER.

The best and most simple machine made. Interchangeable Type into all languages. Durable, easiest running, rapid as any. Endorsed by the Clergy and literary people. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Agents wanted. Address N. Typewriter Co., 611 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.



Wherever the Rocker Washer is used the washboard becomes a relic of barbarism. It is warranted to do an ordinary family washing of 100 pieces in an hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for description and price. Rocker Washer Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind. Agts. wanted

SEND for our list of 19 Catalogs of Music and Musical Instruments.
W. STORY. 26 Central St., Boston, Mass

GIRLS!

Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings? If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. I. M. Association,
269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE COBLENTZ CURE

Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR

Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one FREE sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

AGENTS

Coin Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Every woman buys. Best and cheapest cooker sold. Big Profits to good workers, male or female. Sample's weight 12 oz. Adv'g matter furnished
For circulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, Baltimore, Md.

EYES tested free by mail. New method. Send stamp for test card. KEENE OPT. CO., 1301 Washington-st. Boston, Mass

Signal Notes.

TWENTY-TWO states and territories in the United States have school suffrage.

ALCOHOLISM in one generation is often followed by epilepsy in the second.

IN France there are thirty-six factory inspectors, fifteen of whom are women.

HEREAFTER the women teachers in St. Paul, Minn., will receive equal pay with the men.

DEMOSTHENES said: "To drink well is a property meet for a sponge but not for a man."

THE art of cooking is essentially feminine. Why, then, are all the masters of the art men?

THE Nova Scotia Baptists have not one church where fermented wine is used at communion.

Two hundred women are employed by Edison in working on the delicate details of his inventions.

THERE are sixty women's societies in Paris, constituting what is called the Solidairite des Femmes.

WHEN drunkenness is hereditary, a family will die out, sometimes in four, and at the outside in five generations.

A BEER canteen, which has been in operation at West Point, has received eighteen hundred dollars in one month.

THE British Medical Temperance Association has 415 members and 81 associate students who are total abstainers.

AN abstinence society in St. Petersburg has six hundred members. They have established eight tea houses in the most thickly populated part of the city.

THE Post Office Total Abstinence Society in London has twenty-five branches in metropolitan and provincial offices, with sixteen hundred members. Delegates meet quarterly with the officers.

IT is said that the oldest inebriate asylum in the world is at Dusseldorf, Germany. It was founded in 1851 for the protection of released prisoners. There are five or six more such asylums in Germany.

THE figures of the license vote of 1891 in Boston reveal many interesting facts. Sixty precincts voted no-license, and in seventy-two others the majority for license was less than ten per cent of the registration.

A SAMPLE of one of the chief factors in American politics might be exhibited at the World's Fair in the shape of the largest grog-shop in the world, which was run in Minneapolis during the Republican convention.

THE Baroness Grippenberg, of Finland, a temperance woman and a suffragist, who has organized a women's council in her native country, writes: "Look out or you will be left behind by the council of women who are Fins."

Two young ladies head the procession among the post-graduate students at Yale to take prizes this year, and in England two other girls stand in the front rank of prize-takers in the Cambridge University examinations.

MANY New York police officials live in a style far beyond their visible income. The department of taxes shows that some own large estates in the city. The police have a regular blackmailing system, a prominent saloon-keeper being compelled to pay twenty-five dollars every three months to the captain of the precinct for protection. He is also assessed one hundred dollars per year for Tammany fund, although he is a Republican. This affords another proof that our government is an oligarchy of rum-sellers.

A LOCAL option campaign is soon to take place at Augusta, Georgia. The registry books closed on the twentieth of June. Rev. Sam Jones will be present on election day, July 1. The temperance people are brimming with enthusiasm, but it is a tremendous contest. Liquor men are buying up the negroes and causing them to swear falsely as to their ages. They bring them in and register them by wagon loads. The Prohibition men are coming in gradually. They wear the blue ribbon and only saloon men and their hangers-on wear the red. The "antis" have the white newspapers with them, the three negro papers and nearly all their preachers and the better class, but the liquor men have plenty of money and buy up the lowest.

False Economy

Is practiced by many people who buy inferior articles of food because cheaper than standard goods. Surely infants are entitled to the best food obtainable. It is a fact that the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant food. Your grocer and druggist keep it.

"You see, Madam, Ivory Soap is really the most economical. The cake is so large that it easily divides into two cakes of the ordinary size. It is twenty cents' worth of soap for ten cents. Then it is very economical in use, for although it lathers quickly, it is always firm and hard, even in hot water. As it floats, you can not lose it or leave it to waste in the bowl. We sell it to all of our best trade for general use."

COPYRIGHT 1891, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

$7.00 Job Lot BICYCLES 20 to 50% off. Lowest prices on all '92 makes & 2d hd Easy payments. We sell everywhere. '91 Cush'n $85 Juno, balls $65/40 in. $37 Victor Jr. balls $17 '90 Crescent ('91 make) " $50 '91 $135 Rambler " $90 '91 $145 Cush'n High Grade $90 And 20 other styles as cheap. Largest stock & oldest dealers in U. S. Agts. wanted. Cata. free. House, Hazard & Co. 77 S. St., Peoria, Ill.

$5 to $15 per day, at home, selling LIGHTNING PLATER and plating jewelry, watches tableware, &c. Plates the finest of jewelry good as new, on all kinds of metal with gold, silver or nickel. No experience. No capital. Every house has goods needing plating. Wholesale to agents $5. Write for circulars. H. E. DELNO & Co., Columbus, O.

ACME CORSET & DRESS PROTECTOR

A complete garment, worn under the corset or flannels, protecting the clothing from perspiration. Cheaper than dress shields, 1 pair doing the work of 3. Misses' bust measure, 28-33, 80c; Ladies' bust measure, 34-39, $1; Ladies,' bust measure, 40-46, $1 25

AGENTS WANTED

M. DEWEY, Man'fr,
1397 West Monroe Street, Chicago.
Send money by Post Office Order Catalogue Free

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores.

1,000 Other Articles at Half Price.
A $45.00 Sewing Machine $10.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale .. 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 50.00
A 3 1-4 Ton Wagon Scale .. 40.00
A $25.00 Road Cart 9.00
A $15.00 Single Harness .. 4.95
A 240-lb. Platform Scale .. 3.00
Farmers, do your own Blacksmithing. Any tools less than Wholesale Prices. Send for Lists Free. Chicago Scale Co., Chicago.

BABY CARRIAGES

Shipped anywhere to any one at WHOLESALE PRICES.
Latest Styles. A $5.50 carriage for $2.95
A $12.50 " " $6.95
A $18.50 " " $9.75
Send for 40-page illustrated catalogue free.
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 362 Dearborn St., B 27 Chicago, Ill.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY.

$12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEP'T 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

$7.50 FOR A DAYS' WORK.
GOOD PAY! STEADY WORK IF DESIRED, Address
JAMES LEE & CO., 215 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE

Purchased about 2,000 lots last April scattered all over SOUTH WAUKEGAN, for $500,000—$250 per lot.

Business lots in South Chicago in 1880 sold for $350. Same are now worth in some instances $20,000. Residence lots averaged about $200 per lot. Same are now worth on an average $1,500.

Business lots in Worcester, Mass., sold a few years ago at $350 per lot! Same are now worth in some instances $25,000. Residence lots sold at $150 per lot. Same are now worth on an averge $1,500.

Business lots in Birmingham, Ala., sold a few years ago at $400 per lot. Same are now worth in some instances $15,000. Residence lots sold for $250, and are now worth on an average $1,250. Each of the above are manufacturing towns, and have a population of about $50,000.

When SOUTH WAUKEGAN has a population of 50,000, our lots will be worth (based on what the above-named cities have attained) $4,375,000.

50,000 POPULATION IS A CERTAINTY—WHY?

In manufacturing towns each factory employee represents a population of five persons on an average, that is, women and children, and those engaged in mercantile lines and professions.

The factories now located at South Waukegan are the Starch Works, Sugar Refinery, Washburn & Moen Co., Clinton Wire Cloth Co., Morrow Bros. Manufacturing Co., and the Nichols Chemical Co.

It is estimated that these factories alone will employ 10,000 people, and which alone means a population of 50,000.

Fully a dozen other large factories are trying to secure locations here, and it is stated, on good authority, that the Clinton Wire Cloth Co. and C. Sidney Shepaerd & Co. (both enormous concerns) have succeeded in arranging for their sites.

The following is what the public think about it:

Chicago Economist: "Persons familiar with the subject estimate that when the factories now located at South Waukegan are in operation, the total number of hands employed in the new mills will not be far from 10,000, which would mean a new population of pretty close to 50,000.

Inter-Ocean: "Considering the concerns to follow in the wake of the larger corporation as employing an equal number of hands, and the effect to concentrate 50,000 persons at the place selected. With this nucleus growth should be rapid."

Lake County Post: "It is now estimated, however, by those who know the most of the matter, that the increase of population for the next twelve months alone will be from 25,000 to 30,000."

Chicago Globe: "It is stated that when in full operation the Washburn-Moen Factory will carry with it a population of at least 15,000 people."

Chicago Tribune: "The establishment of the Washburn & Moen Works at South Waukegan means the employment of 3,000 men, and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Besides this, a number of kindred manufacturing interests will probably follow the barbed-wire works. The Clinton Wire Cloth Company is said to be considering the advisability of locating its plant south of Waukegan. The other important manufacturing interest to be located is the Nichols Chemical Company, of New York. This company has secured forty acres of land at South Waukegan, between the Outer Belt Line and the Northwestern Railroad, on the spur track which has been built between these roads by Morris & Ganse. The new company will at once begin work on the plant, representing an expenditure of $300,000. About ten acres of land will be placed under roof at once."

Inter Ocean: "South Waukegan has secured another great industry. The Nichols Chemical Company of New York on forty acres of ground acquired for the purpose, will erect a plant for the manufacture of chemicals, at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, this is to be increased by additional expenditures as occasion demands."

Chicago Herald: "There are those who steadfastly believe that the population of South Waukegan within ten years will be increased to 60,000.

Chicago Evening Post: "It is quite safe to say that in this new town, which lies south of and adjoins the city limits of the Waukegan of the past, there will be 50,000 people in the next five years. The Washburn-Moen Company begin operations this fall with 1,500 men; in a year 2,000 will be at work, in two years 3,000, and at the end of three years there will be 3,500 men engaged in making wire."

Chicago Graphic: "The Washburn & Moen Company are building immense works at South Waukegan, and the population, it is confidently predicted, will reach 50,000 in the near future."

On these 2,000 lots we issue our Profit-Sharing Investment Bonds, which are now nearly all sold and as fast as the money is received for them it is applied toward paying for the lots. After the lots advance in value sufficiently we will begin selling them, and the Bonds will be redeemed, and also one-half of all profits will be paid over to the Bond owners.

BONDS ARE $10 EACH, and are SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

JAS. B. HOBBS, Pres. Commercial Loan and Trust Co., 117 La Salle St., Chicago, says:—"I am personally acquainted with Mrs. R. A. Emmons, Manager of the Woman's Land Syndicate. I also know of her general reputation, and believe she is an honorable woman, possessing many qualities which fit her for management of the business she has undertaken. The land is particularly well located, and is among the most desirable property around Chicago, and being located near the South Waukegan manufactories ought to make it sell well."

GEN. SINGLETON, President Total Abstinence Life Association, 902 Royal Insurance Building, Chicago, says: "I have investigated the Woman's Land Syndicate, and have advised my wife to invest in the'r bonds, believing it will be very profitable."

MORRIS, GANSE & Co., say: "We can see nothing in the management and methods of the Woman's Land Syndicate but what promises the greatest safety in the form of the investment, and a handsome profit to the bondholders."

JOHN E. RASTALL, Editor South Waukegan News says "Aside from every other consideration, Mrs Emmons deserves to be ranked among the foremost women of her time. She has fearlessly carried the banner of womanhood into advanced territory, and shown that successful financial engineering is not peculiarly the province of men. The success of the Syndicate is assured. It only remains to determine the measure of its success."

Our Profit-Sharing Investment Bonds

Will be a source of great income. The investment is ABSOLUTELY SAFE, and there is no liability.

This advertisement appears this week in FIFTY-SEVEN LEADING PUBLICATIONS, and we think will sell the entire issue of Bonds. THEY ARE GOING FAST.

You can send a deposit, NO MATTER HOW SMALL, say how many you want, and we will consider it a sale. You may pay for them later. SEND FOR CIRCULAR; IT TELLS IT ALL.

MAKE CHECKS, DRAFTS AND MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE 161 La Salle Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, Manager.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

Mrs. Ursula D. Herrick
2419 19th St
Denver

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, July 14, 1892. Number 28.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The ministers of the country preached last Sunday chiefly on the Homestead riots.

Mt. Ætna is in violent eruption, a double stream of lava threatening the Sicilian villages.

An outbreak of cholera is reported from Persia, and it is said to have reached France and England.

An explosion of giant powder works near Oakland, Cal., on Sunday, killed one hundred and four men.

Governor Pattison mustered out the state militia, numbering eight thousand men, on Monday, to suppress the riots at Homestead.

A fierce conflagration in St. Johns, New Brunswick, July 8, destroyed five hundred houses and rendered fifteen thousand people homeless.

The summer educational work of Chautauqua, N. Y., opened formally on July 6. The principal address was delivered by Dr. William R. Harper, of Chicago University.

The University of Chicago last week completed its building fund of one million dollars, that amount and twelve thousand dollars extra having been raised within three months.

The National Society of Christian Endeavor assembled in annual convention at Madison Square Garden, New York City, July 7, with 25,000 delegates in attendance, representing a membership of 1,100,000.

A telegram from John G. Woolley states that the World's W. C. T. U. petition was enthusiastically indorsed by the twenty-five thousand delegates of the Christian Endeavor convention, as was also the petition for Sunday closing of the World's Fair gates.

A fierce battle between the employés of Carnegie's steel foundries at Homestead, Pa., and armed Pinkerton men, July 7, resulted in a riot, which destroyed the lives of twenty men, and seriously injured more than a hundred others. It is hoped that an end has been put to the Pinkerton dynasty, and an impetus given to the cause of labor reform.

THE English elections are thus far favorable to the Liberals though not to the degree that was expected. Morley and McCarthy were defeated. Gladstone will doubtless be called upon to form a new government.

WE do not often agree with Dr. Leonard Bacon, hence it is all the more a pleasure to indorse, with heartiness, the following: "If a respectable citizen would influence his party let him get out of it. A body of independents can hold under bond for good behavior, not one great party, but two."

THE Loyal Temperance Legion of Wisconsin held its second annual convention at Delavan last week, with well nigh a hundred delegates. Anna A. Gordon, World's superintendent of L. T. L. work, was present and says it was the most inspiring scene she had yet witnessed in white ribbon work. We will have a full report next week.

A MOST interesting and comprehensive series of articles, three in number, begins in this issue of THE UNION SIGNAL on the Congress Auxiliary of the Columbian Exposition. These articles embody the paper read by Mrs. Chas. Henrotin, Vice-President of Women's Congresses, at the Federation of Women's Clubs, and are of widespread value to the public.

IT is to be understood that the World's W. C. T. U. day, September 22, is for the purpose of making that society better known throughout the world and taking up a collection to help defray its expenses. The president has always been unsalaried, but the secretary and office secretary are salaried officers, and there are large bills for postage and stationery besides the money needed to send out workers.

SHERIFF CRAM, of Portland, Me., who, with his deputies, Messrs. Sterling and Plummer, has secured the best enforcement of prohibitory law ever known in that city, is a candidate for re-election. He has been nominated by the Republicans, and the part- Prohibitionists have placed his name upon their ticket. So far as we have heard no one considers that by so doing the party Prohibitionists have entered into a "fusion" with the Republicans.

OHIO is more than ever the "Mother of Presidents"; two of those nominated are natives—Harrison and Weaver—and our Bidwell spent his boyhood and youth in the hospitable old Buckeye state. The wives of two of the candidates are active white-ribboners—Mesdames Bidwell and Weaver. Mrs. Cleveland is a pronounced total abstainer, and Mrs. Harrison is also, but neither can prevent wine at state dinners—probably both approve it under the view fast becoming old-fashioned, that such a dinner, in the nature of the case, involves wine. Of the four ladies, all but Mrs. Weaver are members of the Presbyterian church—she is a Methodist.

THE New York Chautauqua has given eight days, in the midst of the time allotted to the Women's Clubs—conducted by Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller—to temperance. Bishop Vincent has again invited Mrs. Caroline B. Buell to take charge of these exercises August 12 to 20. A topic on the broader lines of temperance reform is to alternate daily with a question box. Kellogg Memorial Hall will present a brilliant display of mental and moral pyrotechnics during these temperance days that will illuminate far as the great Chautauqua sets its bounds. Mrs. Buell conducts the school of methods at Mountain Lake Park, Md., beginning July 13. Rev. Joseph Cook, Anna Shaw and Mrs. J. K. Barney are to assist her. Mrs. Buell will also lead the Bay View, Mich., Assembly, July 20 to 30.

MRS. MARY READ GOODALE, of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, is the new president of the W. C. T. U. of that state, and is well known to white-ribboners throughout the land as one of the leaders among our National organizers. Since 1882, when we first visited Baton Rouge and were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Goodale, this winsome and indefatigable little woman has been a white-ribboner of the white-ribboners. First, president of the W. C. T. U. in her own city, then corresponding secretary for years of the state union, and now for some years promoted to the widest parish that the country affords, she has been selected by her comrades as the fit leader to follow Mrs. Judge Merrick in the state presidency. Few women have the hopeful companionship and influence that come to Mrs. Goodale through her husband, Prof. Wilmot H. Goodale, of the University of Louisiana, a graduate of Yale College, a well-known lawyer in the state and leading layman of the M. E. Church South.

"TWO SALOONS have already been established inside of Jackson Park where the great white palaces rise so grandly, and here intoxicants are openly sold to the thousands of working men employed on the grounds. Just outside the entrance on 63d street, within the sacred limits of the Hyde Park prohibition district, still other places have been opened, and all kinds of anti-prohibitory beverages are retailed over public bars. Between five and six hundred of the men employed on the great Manufacturers' Building are paid off on Saturday night, and a trip through the 63d street groggeries showed how easy it is to accumulate an alcoholic exhilaration and get rid of hard-earned wages at the same time. Ground has been broken for a Moorish palace two hundred feet square. It is a reproduction of the Alhambra. It will have a capacity for one thousand guests, and the right to sell beer." These manifestations are reported to us by the Chicago press, and show that the trail of the serpent is already over the Eden of the Fair.

THE following is current in the London press: "Lady Henry Somerset has just completed arrangements for starting a new woman's paper, to be called the White Ribbon. She herself will act as editor-in-chief, but will have the assistance of an experienced journalist. The aim of the new periodical will be to deal with women's work in every form, at home and abroad, and with such outside topics as temperance, the hours of labor, and thrift, in their relation to the weaker sex. The capital of the new venture is to be £10,000, says the London correspondent of the Birmingham Post, and there are already ample signs that it will be raised with ease. The Duchess of Bedford, Lady Carlisle, Miss Frances Willard, Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, and other well-known workers in this cause are actively interested in the movement."

THAT was an unprecedented sight in the United States Senate last week when Senator Quay sent a copy of the Bible to the clerk and said he wished a certain passage read as his speech on the motion he had just made conditioning the World's Fair appropriation on Sunday closing: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day, wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it."

The press report says:

"During the reading of this great commandment in the presence of the modern lawgivers, there was profound stillness throughout the chamber. They were familiar words and were reverently heard, but no sooner had the clerk stopped reading than Senators Morgan and Harris, the Democratic side, asked why the whole decalogue should not be read. Senator Quay was satisfied with his presentation of the case. The octavo copy of his family Bible was at once returned to him, and locked up in his desk. The Quay amendment was passed."

THE world has never witnessed a phenomenon so full of hope as that gathering up of twenty-five thousand youth and maidens in Madison Square Garden last week. They rallied to the tune of "Onward, Christian soldier, Marching on to war."

But theirs, like ours, is a "peaceful war"; its weapons "not carnal but spiritual, and mighty for the pulling down of strongholds." The world never had a more significant contrast between the kingdom of Christ and the kingdom of money than when its keen, observant eyes flashed from the slaughter at the Carnegie works in Pennsylvania to the great rose garden of young faces in New York, bright with their holy purpose of good will. Theorists may set forth their arguments against Christianity, but such practice as that of these sunny-hearted young disciples refutes them every time. The gospel that can call together six thousand young delegates for a prayer-meeting at six o'clock has not lost its grip on the rising generation. "Peace on earth, good will to men," is as much their watchword as it was that of the angels that sang two thousand years ago in Bethlehem. Every reform movement in this land feels the touch of enthusiasm of those who rally round good "Father Endeavor Clark," and the undenominational character of their creed and work predicts that church of the future where

"Names and creeds and altars fall,
Thou, oh Christ, art all in all!"

Here young men and women participate equally in all that pertains to the society, and Christian democracy comes to full flower within the house of God. Long live the Christian Endeavorers!

ARE YOU READY FOR THE QUESTION?

BY REV. J. P. HUTCHINSON.

Are you ready for the question? We have argued pro and con.
We've turned it up, we've turned it down, we've turned it off and on;
We've looked at it in earnest faith, sometimes with darkest doubt;
We've turned it outside in, and then we've turned it inside out.

We have laid it on the table, we have had it on the floor;
And as for the amendments we've had them by the score;
To leave it to the state, or to the church, or to the city,
Or to the tender mercies of a compromise committee.

Are you ready for the question? A radiant youth that stands
Before the fairest form on earth, and held with gentle hands,
Peering into her soulful eyes and seeing them aglow,
Never asks her such a question—she was ready long ago.

And we're ready for the question; we are waiting to reply—
The obstructives grumble "no"; but all true souls thunder, "AY.",
The day of speech is over, the hour for work has come,
The heroes win the victory and the coward crowd is dumb.

Clinton, Ia.

"A SURE CURE."—A TRUE STORY.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

CHAPTER I.

It was a sultry morning, and though it was but nine o'clock, Morris street twinkled with heat. Benevolent property owners had planted trees at various times in Morris street, but they had slowly withered and at last died. Some people said it was the gas and smoke from the shifting yards of the Rush Valley railroad and from the great rolling mills. Others said the cinders with which it was filled went down too deep. Certainly if it was warm anywhere in Castile, it was warm in Morris street.

The houses were low and small and grimy. The scrap of land about each one was overlaid with cinders. Few of the windows shone. A good many contained broken panes that had been mended with old hats. It was perhaps fortunate the street was only six squares long. The nail works shut it up at one end, the switches of the Rush Valley railroad cut it off at the other. But in spite of its shortness and poverty, Morris street kept two saloons in comfort. One was Samuel Conover's health office, and the other was Michael Stein's hall, Cobweb Hall it was called, from the huge web painted across the front. The web held a big spider. Michael was German, and slow. He thought that sign suggested the age of his wares, and saw in the huge, black blood-sucker insect no odd suggestion of his own bulky frame. The health office had a plate glass front, behind which rose a mahogany screen, set with mirrors. Whatever went on in the office was thus shut from public view. Cobweb Hall had an equally effective screen of plain Venetian blinds. Mr. Stein spent his money upon expensive ornaments for his bar and upon iridescent and cut glass, while in the handsome mosaic floor he had set silver dollars. Perhaps the frequenters felt rich when they gazed at these coins. It was they who had put them there. Hard earned dollars they were, too, wrung from the great nail machines, whose thunder made the ears ache and the nerves quiver. Perhaps the iridescent glass gave them the same feeling. It is certain they had spent so much in fitting up the office and the hall there was nothing left to buy even comfort for their homes.

Morris street slept late on Sunday mornings. No one went to church. No child went to Sunday-school. The men who had spent half their earnings at one or other of the "places" I have described were too sodden to rise. Most of the women worked at charring, during the week, and were glad to find a brief forgetfulness of work and worry in sleep. But by nine o'clock there were unwashed, uncombed children playing in the dusty, cinder road, and here and there a frouzy woman was visible. Michael Stein's vast figure was seated in a stout Windsor chair by his doorway. His family lived over the hall. A total abstainer was Michael. He dealt in whisky as he might have dealt in tigers. If other people wanted it, he would sell it. It brought in a great deal of money. If it was dangerous, that was not his affair. His bulk was due solely to the fact that he ate too much, and exercised too little. His blue broadcloth was of the finest. His glossy shirt was all of fine linen, and in the band of it ready for the collar he never wore, was a costly gold button. But the doctor had told him many times that he would be less stout if he would drink less water. But he could not deny himself. Miss Johns and her slim young niece of course did not know this, so they circled far out to the edge of the pavement to avoid him.

Despite her forty years, Miss Johns was a pretty woman. Her delicate gray gown and gray bonnet were in the latest fashion, and she carried a bunch of fragrant violets in her right hand. Her niece Phebe wore a white mull hat, and a mull frock, the perfection of expensive simplicity. No one would ever have guessed that Miss Johns was a woman who believed in "causes," and who was trying to reform anything or any one. Michael Stein did not understand that movement toward the edge of the pavement. That he was a person to be avoided as pestiferous or dangerous did not occur to him. He watched the two a moment, then trotted heavily upstairs:

"Louisa! oh, Louisa!" he cried to his wife; "are the children most ready? Two of the Sunday-school people just went by. I tell you the children must be ready. I say it will be a good thing for them, that Sunday-school on Swan street."

"Yes, they are dressed already, but Winnie is fretting that her bracelets are not wider than Nora Conover's, and Hans has been saying as how pastor Michaelis said the Lutheran children were not to go, and I am sure Frau Appman told me the same thing."

"Frau Appman is an old gossiper, and pastor Michaelis may mind his own affairs. If there is anything good for the children, handy, I want them to have it, and as for bracelets, I saw a real lady go by just now with a young girl, and there wasn't a bit of gold upon them. I say hurry. I am the father and will be obeyed."

Meanwhile, as Miss Johns and her niece went down the street, they asked every child they saw to come to the new Sunday-school. Some promised glibly. Others, after rubbing bare brown toes in the dust, suddenly ran off like frightened rabbits. As they neared the shifting yards a fresh young voice rose from beyond a high board fence. The song was the old doggerel known as "The Three Jolly Welshmen." The singer came into view as she closed the last verse.

"One said it was a woman,
The other said, 'nay';
One said it was an angel
With the wings blowed away—
Look-a-there now!"

It was the shabbiest house on the street. A lilac near the door was feebly blossoming. Over one window were drawn some ladders of twine for morning-glories to climb. A young girl very near the size and age of Phebe Johns sat on the steps tending a baby. It was she who had been singing in that delicious voice. Her eyes were large and brown. Her closely cropped dark hair curled crisply about her face.

"My dear," began Miss Johns, "we are starting a Sunday-school in the next street. We want you to come."

"You sing so beautifully," said the shy Phebe, her blonde cheeks flushing.

"Thank you!" There was the frankest pleasure in the dark, young eyes. "I love to have people like my singing. But I have to mind the baby and the twins always on Sunday mornings. Perhaps Timmy can go. Mother says Timmy is growing up to be a wild Injun."

"But you can bring the baby and the twins," interposed Miss Johns. She had noted that this girl was clean, and that the baby's coarse slip was spotless.

"It isn't the baby and the children entirely," said the girl hesitatingly. "Father is—well, he isn't right on Sunday mornings, and I can't leave mother alone with him."

A far-away train whistled, and the hum of its approach filled the air. Suddenly a sharp, imperative voice rose above it:

"You, Tim," it commanded, "you travel up to Stein's for some rum."

"I don't want to, father," replied a boy's shrill treble. "Ma ha'n't no money. We haven't had any meat the awfulest spell."

The next instant a lad of perhaps eight summers sprang hastily from the door which opened at the side of the house, not at the front. A little woman ran out after him, crying, "Oh, Timmy, dear! Oh, wait, sonny, and let me bathe your head!"

"It don't hurt," said Tim who had seen the strangers at the gate, and had a fine feeling of reserve about family troubles. The blood was trickling down his forehead. The hurt was concealed by his curls.

"You see how it is," said the girl pressing the baby close, "Pa's a-carryin' on awful this morning."

Terre Haute, Ind.

(To be continued.)

BE the headlight on the locomotive, and not the danger signal at the rear of the train.—F. E. W.

THE CONGRESS AUXILIARY OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

BY MRS. CHAS. HENROTIN, VICE-PRES.

The Congress Auxiliary was formed to conduct a series of World's Congresses during 1893 in Chicago. The Auxiliary is constituted as follows: A central organization, supported by the local directory and recognized by the United States government, and a local managing committee for each Congress. The formation of the local committees is dual—a committee of men and one of women—to coöperate and insure a complete representation of both the man and woman side of every subject discussed in the Congresses. The dual committee may elect to act as one, as in the case of the committee on moral and social reform, committee on science and philosophy, committee on medicine with all its sub-committees, public health, dentistry, pharmacy, medical jurisprudence and a special committee on trained nurses. When the two committees on any subject work separately, they yet meet together in joint conference as occasion may require. In every department treated by the Congresses the woman's committees will endeavor to present a full and exhaustive report of the "woman side" of the subject under consideration.

The great French nation was the first to realize that while the material exhibits of the Universal Expositions are potent factors in the progress of modern civilization along lines of invention, manufactory, education, art and science, still every exposition would be incomplete were not the spiritual, economic, and intellectual progress of thought exemplified by means of congresses and conferences. During the last Exposition in Paris, in 1889, twenty-six congresses were held, some of which were productive of immediate good. A Woman's Congress was held, presided over by M. Jules Simon, the vice-president of the Congress being Madame de Morsier, the same lady who is chairman of the committee of women having in charge the interests of French women at the Columbian Exposition. The reports made to the Congress by the presidents of the various associations represented, were chiefly on educational, charitable, and philanthropic work. The religious and humanitarian work of the Roman Catholic women was presented by Madame de Vernieul and her daughter, so that no denomination, and no class of women were unheard in the French Congress.

The Congresses are not to represent the needs and the work accomplished by American women, but must consider the position of the women of all lands. Advisory councils have been formed throughout America and in Europe, to aid the local committees by advice and suggestions. As a guarantee of the varied interests thus far represented are these names of a few women in this country and in Europe who have become members of the Advisory Councils, or honorary and corresponding members:

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown, Miss Clare de Graffenried, Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, Mrs. Mary E. Hemingway, Mrs. Elizabeth Stoddard, Miss Agnes Repplier, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Mrs. Lucy Stone, Mrs. May Wright Sewall, Miss Grace Dodge, Mrs. Ellen G. Foster, Mrs. Margaret Deland, Mrs. Candace Wheeler, Miss Octave Thanet, Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote, Miss Sarah Orne Jewett.

FOREIGN WOMEN.

The Countess of Aberdeen, the Countess of Dufferin, Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, Mrs. L. Ormiston Chant, Mrs. Bramwell Booth, Miss Clementina Black, Madame de Morsier, Madame Isabelle Bogelot, Madame Hergomard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Fawcett, Phillipa Fawcett, Mrs. Barnett of Toynbee Hall, Mrs. Ballington Booth, Miss R. Davenport Hill, Mlle. Anne de Bovet, Madame Henri Greville, Fraulein Helène Lange.

The following general classification for the congresses has been adopted: Art, Agriculture, Education, Engineering, Government, Literature, Labor, Medicine, Moral and Social Reform, Municipal Order, Music, Public Press, Reception, Religion, Science and Philosophy, Temperance.

There are committees of women appointed in each of these classifications except in engineering.

These congresses will be held in the new Art Palace on the Lake Front, from May 1 to November 1, in the following order:

May: Music and the Drama; the Public Press; Medicine and Surgery.

June: Temperance; Moral and Social Reform; Commerce and Finance.

July: Literature; Science and Philosophy; Education.

August: Engineering; Art, Architecture, etc.; Government, Law Reform and Political Science, etc.

September: Religion, Missions, etc.; Sunday Rest.

October: Labor, Trades and Occupations; Agriculture.

The Educational Committee, Mrs. Mary H. Wilmarth, chairman, has subdivisions on Higher Education, Mrs. Harriet C. Brainerd, chairman; Manual and Art Education, Miss Josephine C. Locke, chairman; Kindergarten Education, Mrs. E. W. Blatchford, chairman, and Physical Culture, Mrs. Frank W. Parker, chairman. While all progress is an educational process, the specialized function of this committee is to deal with scholastic instruction. It has for its aim, in the forthcoming congress, to present such summary of the results of experience as shall make a new vantage ground for future effort. It seeks to discover and present the most operative means for training the individual in the development, use, and control of his powers; to secure wise counsel as to stimulating effort without recourse to rivalry; inducing original investigation; logical thinking; the application of abstract conclusions to concrete results; the training of the æsthetic sense to discriminate; the awakening of interests in studies which offer other compensation than an equipment for material struggle; the special training best adapted to the specially defective, as the blind, deaf and insane; what basis of education is universally essential and should be compulsory; when and how differentiation should begin; the function of the state in education. In all its procedure this committee proposes to coöperate with the National Educational Association, which is to hold its conference in Chicago in July, 1893.

United States Commissioner Harris most cordially places his corps of assistants at the disposal of this committee, a most valuable aid. While acting with this national body the work of this committee is by no means submerged in that, but the programs will be so arranged as to correlate. Whoever has strong convictions on the problems of education is asked to confer with the committee. The speakers before the congress must be few, but the committee is glad to constitute itself a receiver and conduit of general and special intelligence upon the important theme assigned to it for consideration.

More women than men sympathize with the new education, and are endeavoring to introduce art and utility into the fossil of public instruction. It is therefore particularly appropriate that the kindergarten and manual and artistic training should be placed in their hands. Women feel education as a whole, embracing religion, morality, use and beauty, and desire to develop the child into an artistic as well as an intelligent and moral being, so that man can enter into the beautiful possibilities of life. This should be the aim of all education, and it is only as it fulfils these requirements that it is worthy of the name; and this the new education claims to do. The love of beauty and utility is like the love of religion and morality, it must be a personal experience. The mission of women in the educational congresses will be largely to emphasise the paramount importance of kindergarten and primary education, above all for the children of the toiling masses.

The temperance congress has as its chairman Archbishop Ireland for the men's committee, and Frances Willard for the women's committee. Miss Willard has issued her preliminary address and report, as follows: The World's W. C. T. U. will meet during the first week in June, in the hall of the new Art Palace. There will be delegates present from all the Women's Christian Temperance organizations in the world, and organizers will return with reports of work in Australia, South Africa, India, China and Japan, Europe and Canada. Women will participate equally with men in the World's Congress of Temperance, to be presided over by Archbishop Ireland, and held during the second week in June. The Woman's Temperance Temple is now completed, the finest building of its kind in the world, and will be dedicated at the time of this Congress. The address of dedication will be given by Lady Henry Somerset, president of the British Women's Temperance Association.

The Congress on Moral and Social Reform is in charge of a Committee with Rev. F. H. Wines as chairman, appointed by the Charities Conference; and Mrs. J. M. Flower and Mr. J. G. Shortall of Chicago, chairmen of the local committees. Under the auspices of the Moral and Social Reform Committee, an International Conference of Charities and Philanthropies will be held, which will last for two weeks. At this, the great charitable and philanthropical movements of the age will be discussed. The most prominent men and women in the world in such work will be present. The program will be arranged by Rev. F. H. Wines, Mr. W. P. Lechworth, Mr. Sanborn, of Massachusetts, Mr. Wright, of Wisconsin, Gen. Brinkerhoff, of Ohio, Mr. J. G. Shortall and Mrs. J. M. Flower. The Salvation Army will hold a session in which it will present General Booth's work in England, and the scheme will be open for discussion. Other conferences will be in session, but these are the only ones definitely settled as yet.

The Religious Congresses will be held during September, and from present indications the largest body of people ever assembled on one occasion will take part in the Union Congress of Religions. Every phase of belief will be represented: Greek Church, Mohammedan, Buddhism, Roman Catholic, Anglican, all Protestant denominations, Judaism and Salvation Army.

The Woman's Committee on Religious Congresses will endeavor to present the exact position filled by women in the religious world. It is a singular phase of modern Christianity that no voice has been raised against allowing women and children to work in the iron manufactories of the country, but that nearly all the Christian denominations refuse to allow her to be a spiritual leader. One of the reasons of the marvelous success of the Salvation Army is the fact that this great religious movement realized the tremendous power of woman's work in an official capacity in church government.

The Religious Committee, Rev. Augusta J. Chapin, chairman, is thoroughly organized; fourteen sub committees have been formed of women of as many Christian denominations. These committees are ready for work, many of them have already made substantial progress.

The general committee will promote in all possible ways the success of the great Parliament of Religions, and also the holding of special Sunday services under the auspices of the religious committee during the period of the Columbian Exposition. This committee will be active in securing the adequate treatment of such topics as the following:

The Relation of Religion to Woman and its Influence upon her Development Historically Considered; The Present Position, Influence, Privileges and Powers of Women in the Religious World; Women as Preachers and Pastors; Past, Present and Future of the Movement; Women as Deaconesses; The Bible and Woman; The Departments of Religious Work in which the Activities of Women Are, or Should Be, most Effective. An Advisory Council of not less than a thousand women, prominent in religious thought in all lands, is in process of formation.

The woman's committee on Christian Missions, Mrs. Franklin W. Fisk, chairman, has arranged for holding a Congress of Christian Missions in September, 1893, to which delegates from every woman's missionary society in the world are to be invited. Addresses are to be given, and papers read by persons prominent in mission work. A History of Woman's Work in Missions will be prepared confined to the women of America; another, giving an outline of the work done by the women of Europe from its inception to the present time. A large correspondence is now being carried on, and many letters have already been received from members of the Advisory Council expressing great interest in our plans, and pledging faithful co operation and support.

Several distinguished persons have promised papers, or to lead discussions; among others, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Ballington Booth, Bishop Whipple, and Edna Dean Proctor has promised a poem. All this is but the beginning, however, of what the committee hopes to accomplish, and suggestions, information and assistance is solicited from every possible source, and by every person interested.

Chicago.

(To be continued.)

LADY HENRY SOMERSET AND THE ENGLISH PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

BY WILLIAM JONES.

Some of the temperance candidates for the new parliament are privileged to have the support of the advocacy of Lady Henry Somerset in urging the vital importance of temperance reform upon the constituencies.

In the northern division of Houghton-le-Spring, near Sunderland, we have had the rare privilege of a three days' mission from her ladyship, accompanied by her friend, Miss Helen Hood, of the American W. C. T. U.

The first meeting was held in Sunderland, with the members of the British Women's Temperance Association, which is affiliated with the World's W. C. T. U. Lady Henry Somerset spoke with her usual force and persuasiveness, and all present felt that they had received a fresh impetus to greater zeal and assiduity in aggressive temperance work.

In the evening of the 18th of June, a meeting of a wholly different character was held in the Miners' Hall at Hetton, a pit village, about eight miles from Sunderland. The hall was densely packed by a working-class audience, chiefly miners and their friends.

As Lady Henry Somerset ascended the platform accompanied by the temperance candidate, Mr. Jonathan Hargrove, they were greeted with enthusiastic cheers from an audience who were evidently alive with excitement and expectation. After the first sentence or two, her ladyship found her way to their hearts, and when she proceeded to relate how, overcoming her timidity, she had ventured down a deep coal mine in South Wales, for the purpose of addressing the men during their dinner hour—a "touch of nature" which these rough but earnest-hearted fellows knew well how to appreciate—their hearts were stirred to their very depths, and it was plain to see after this, how she held the vast meeting in the hollow of her hand. Wonderful was the calming effect of her ladyship's address upon the excited audience. The way was smoothed for the candidate to follow, who to his own astonishment, received an attentive and respectful hearing, in the same hall in which only two or three weeks before he had been persistently howled and hooted down, chiefly by young lads who had been primed by the publicans with free whisky for the occasion!

On Sunday evening, June 19, the Victoria Hall, the largest public room in Sunderland, was crowded to the ceiling, fully 3,000 persons having assembled to hear a gospel temperance address from Lady Henry Somerset. With consummate tact and judgment the speaker touched upon various social questions of the day, and largely upon the great temperance movement both in this country and in America.

"What," she asked, "did they need in the present day! It was the Christ that came down into the affairs of everyday life; it was the Christ that was going to hallow our politics; He would sit by the ballot-box and would register every vote that was cast in His name, as surely as He looked on the gifts which were cast into the treasury of old." As the clear, bell-like voice rang distinctly to the remotest corners of the hall, a hush of deep religious feeling seemed to fall upon the immense audience and the remark of one who was deeply touched, sums up the general effect of the address, "It was a masterpiece of Christian eloquence."

The fourth and last, though the shortest of the addresses, was in some respects felt to be the most impressive of any. A prayer-meeting, open to men and women, was held in the lecture room of the Young Men's Christian Association at noon, on Monday, the 20th, over which Lady Henry Somerset presided. Many present were touched to tears, as she, in some slight degree, lifted the veil from her own life experiences and gave a graphic account of her conversion.

In a brief, imperfect sketch like the present it is impossible to convey the marvelous charm and perfect sway which this gifted lady exerts over large concourses of men and women. Only those can realize it who understand what it is to see a whole congregation bowed and hushed under the mighty power of the spirit of Christ, speaking through one of His own qualified and anointed servants. But those who have labored long in this great work of humanity are profoundly thankful that a leader so talented and so consecrated has been raised up, in answer, as they reverently believe, to many prayers, to lead them on to victory.

Under the leadership of Lady Henry Somerset the work of temperance reform in this country is assuredly taking a new departure, and her own devotion, earnestness and loyalty to her Divine Master, is inspiring the workers on their part continually to give fresh proofs of enthusiasn and assiduity in the work.

St. Bede's Terrace, Sunderland, England.

SHALL MORE INDIANS BE REMOVED?

BY MARY F. LOVELL.

Member of Woman's Indian Ass'n and Nat'l Supt. Dept. Mercy.

There is a bill before the present Congress entitled "The Southern Ute Removal Bill." It has for its object the removal of the Utes from their reservation in Southwest Colorado to the southeast corner of Utah, and has already been favorably reported by the House committee on Indian affairs.

Those who support the bill assert that the Indians themselves desire a removal and that in 1888 three-fourths of them signed a treaty to this effect. The Indian Rights Association report says that it is probably true that one-half of them, the Weeminuches, among whom there are no farmers, desire the removal, but it is also true that the consent of three-fourths of all the tribes who signed the treaty was not obtained until after years of agitation and until three United States commissioners had spent four months among the Indians urging upon them the supposed benefits that would accrue to them from the change. The impression was made on them that in Utah they would have better opportunities for hunting and for the continuance of their old Indian life. In this way appeals were made to their wild instincts, but not by those having their true welfare at heart—this, instead of effort toward instilling the principles of self-support and desire for citizenship.

If it were true that all the Southern Utes unanimously desired to change their reservation, the government, as their guardian, would not be justified in granting a wish so prejudicial to their interests and so likely to retard their progress in civilization. It would mean simply their continued pauperization. There are many who are loud in proclaiming the impossibility of civilizing Indians; they pay no attention to the thousands who are already self supporting, either as farmers or in other occupations. Whenever this trial has been fairly made, it has proved that the Indian may become a self-supporting and industrious citizen. The custom of removing Indians whenever white men coveted their possessions has been a disgrace to us as a nation, and has been a terrible evil for these unfortunate people.

The Indian Rights Association has made a thorough investigation of the matter, and published a report at the beginning of this year which shows that it would be a serious wrong to remove the Indians and add one more to the many injustices committed by our government against these people. The report shows that the present reservation is well suited to the work of civilizing the Indians and that if they are removed to the proposed reservation, the conditions will be very unfavorable. There is plenty of irrigable land on the present reservation and hardly any on that proposed. The present one contains about two hundred and fifty thousand acres of available land and the proposed reservation in Southeast Utah, though about three times as large, contains probably less than one thousand acres fairly susceptible of cultivation. The report says truly that the shortest and best way of civilizing these Indians is to make them farmers as has been done in the case of other Indians, this being the most direct and satisfactory way toward self-support and land in severalty. The proposed reservation is not only a piece of territory in which springs or drinking holes are exceedingly rare, but a large proportion of it is so broken and irregular as to make it a fearful district for Indian fighting.

It is feared that this bill may be passed during the hot weather, when no one outside is thinking much about it, and that is why it seems to be necessary to do something at once in addition to what has been already done. Congressmen will not carefully consider this matter if the public does not. The thing to do, therefore, seems to be for every one who will to write to the congressmen from their respective districts, also to the members of the Senate Committee, urging their opposition to the bill, and showing that they are not asleep on the question of justice to this injured race. Our country should be saved from dishonoring itself by another Indian removal. It is thought that it would be well in communicating with members of Congress to urge them to be on their guard to prevent a sudden passage of the bill during the time when many congressmen are apt to be away from Washington, viz.: during the hot weather. The name of each one's own congressman can easily be ascertained. The names of the Senate Committee on Indian affairs are as follows: Hons. H. L. Dawes (chairman), Orville H. Platt, Francis B. Stockbridge, Charles F. Manderson, Richard F. Pettigrew, George L. Shoup, John T. Morgan, James K. Jones, John W. Daniel and William F. Vilas.

Bryn Mawr, Pa.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

HEALTHY AGITATION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—San Francisco is in a ferment. Never since its sand-hills were transformed into building lots has there been such a stirring up of the people in behalf of morality. The ultimate cause of this is the deepening conviction in the minds of thinking men and women that unless something is done quickly the good constituency will be throttled by the bad element which has the city by the throat; the proximate cause of the uprising is the stand taken by The Morning Call against the low dives which it designates "crime-hatcheries."

Most notorious of these is the Cremorne, which flaunts its vileness right on Market street, the Broadway of San Francisco. Here the vilest of drinks are sold, "lady" waitresses, most immodestly dressed, serving and smoking cigarettes with their customers; stage performances, so obscene as to shock even the New York Bowery rounders, go on nightly, and most fearful orgies fill both night and day. "Boys are there," says the Call, "gamblers, cutthroats, blacklegs, thieves, but mostly the human jackals who live on the earnings of the 'lady' workers and waitresses." And all this under sanction of law, which, for the paltry sum of $21.50 a quarter, licenses this den of iniquity!

For weeks indignation against these dives has been increasing and last Sunday it culminated in a grand mass-meeting. Three thousand men and women crowded Metropolitan Hall, while as many more sought entrance in vain. The audience represented the very best element of the city; its presiding officer was Rev. J. Q. A. Henry, whose wife originated the first Temple Baby Band. Leading Protestant and Catholic divines, representatives of the Y. M. C. A. and of the W. C. T. U. were among the speakers, and each voice rang out strong and clear against the debauchery of the city's sons and daughters by these "crime-hatcheries." Strong resolutions, embodying these points were unanimously adopted and a committee of fifty appointed to carry them into effect.

Arrangements are made to continue these meetings every Sunday afternoon. A significant fact brought out by investigation is that a notorious millionaire is one of the twelve signers to the citizens' petition which secured the license of the Cremorne.

Meanwhile the San Francisco W. C. T. U. is petitioning supervisors and city council for amended ordinances, visiting police courts and working for the conviction of the keepers of these vile dens. But though it is easy to secure evidence enough to hang a man, were his aim other than it is, it is impossible to secure conviction. In spite of the most indisputable proof that boys under sixteen, till which age the law would protect them, are systematically lured into these dens, that numerous murders are there committed and more numerous criminals are graduated therefrom, no jury has yet been found in San Francisco to convict their keepers. The great object of the W. C. T. U. and of the citizens' committee, having in charge the Sunday mass-meetings, is to so stiffen public backbone that juries can be found who will convict. Beautiful Berkley, just across the bay, the seat of the state university, is carrying on its own particular fight against the saloon. A state law forbidding saloons within two miles of the university did keep the town free, but now in the face of that law, a saloon has been opened at the very gate of the university grounds, and thus far the most heroic efforts of law-abiding citizens have been powerless to dislodge it.

All these things are working together for good by arousing public sentiment to realize the danger threatened by this law-defying liquor power. Men who have no conscientious scruples against taking their wine, who can walk past a "respectable saloon" without a shudder, cannot help being shocked at the horrible orgies of the dives, as laid bare by this investigation, and are aroused to take action against them. Once enlisted in the fight they will discover that the dives are but the last links in the chain which has its beginning in the tony saloon, and that the same power is behind the throne of each.

There are two other evils, closely allied one to the other and to the one San Francisco is now fighting, to whose enormity the city seems not to be awake; these are gambling and the lottery. We doubt even New Orleans is no more thoroughly permeated with the lottery virus than is the City of the Golden Gate. Mexican lotteries seem to be in the ascendant here, though the Louisiana lottery struggles hard to hold its own. Bulletin boards of leading daily papers announce the lucky numbers, and whole column advertisements of lotteries stain their pages. When asking how this could be done in face of United States law forbidding the transmission of such matter through the mails, we learned that this law is evaded by publishing two editions of the paper, one without these advertisements sent to mail subscribers; the other edition containing them, sold by newsboys and newsdealers in the city and sent by express to newsdealers throughout the country.

Peddlers of lottery tickets are omnipresent; they visit the establishments of many of the leading firms of the city, wheedling employés out of their quarters, or halves, or dollars, according to the amount of their salary, and employers stand by and see the nefarious work go on. One very influential firm which has long permitted this robbery and debauching of its men and boys on the plea that it could not be helped, has lately lost heavily by a defaulting cashier, the legitimate result of its own training.

MARY ALLEN WEST.

San Francisco, Cal.

FRANCE AND THE WOMAN.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Paris has been experiencing a flutter of half-amused, half wondering interest the past month. It has been occasioned by the first annual convention of what is called, to use the full official title, "The Federation of Feminist Societies Combined with the Universal Union of Women." It is not the title which creates the flutter, for that if labored, has the virtue of being self-explanatory and can be criticised unfavorably only for its use of a word unknown to the French dictionary makers, feminist. It is the fact of the convention which bewilders the Parisians.

Paris is not yet habituated to women's rights congresses. In fact, the present is only the third in its history. The first was held in 1878, the second in 1889. Both being features of the great expositions, attracted less attention than the present, which comes in the routine of ordinary life without other excuse than its own object.

The present gathering was called to life by an imposing list of representative women from all the civilized countries of the globe. When it met for its first session on May 14, it showed an assemblage of such dignity, thoughtfulness and purpose that it called forth the general indorsement and respect of the often scoffing Parisian press. In fact, the make-up of the body was both interesting and attractive. There were many women of evident force and experience. The president, for example, Mme. Maria Deraimes has been known in Paris since the empire as an ardent and eloquent woman's suffragist. Mme. Louise Koppe, the editor of the Revue du Progres Social, was a prominent and active member. The foreign delegation, representing nearly all of the countries of Europe, was an interesting feature of the congress. Another noteworthy as well as suggestive characteristic of the make-up was the number of young women who took part—many of them foreign law and medical students in the university of Paris.

But the congress was not exclusively feminist, though held by and for women. There were several men in the list of organizers, all of them of high official connection. They included a former minister of the French government, an ex-senator, several deputies, and three municipal councilors. There were men at all the sessions, and they took an active, and several times an irritating part in the business of the day. One of the most interested and interesting of the masculine portion of the assembly was Riza Bey, former minister of public instruction in Turkey. He is now in Paris studying. His special interest is the elevation of the women of his country, and he is to be seen at every gathering in the city which considers any phase of the question of the advancement of women. Riza Bey has adopted Positivism because of its idealization of womankind, and he hopes to arouse chivalric principles in his countrymen by the doctrines of Comte.

The discussions of the congress were mainly on the rights of women, and the sense of what was said is all summed up in the following resolution which was adopted to be presented to the Chamber:

> Believing that woman should be the equal of man in society and before the law, we ask the full and entire possession of those rights which to-day have been the peculiar property of man; and we pray you to add the following paragraph to the code:
> French men and French women are equal before the law.

I was particularly curious to find just what feature of reform work the congress would espouse. As you may imagine, the liquor question was not touched. In fact, temperance is not yet a question among the rank and file of the French reformers. Two questions of reform most important to France were, however, fully discussed. The first was that of prostitution. Mme. de Mosier handled it, giving a valuable résumé of the attitude of different European countries towards the subject. She closed her paper by an expression of opinion which was adopted by the congress; namely, that police control of prostitution was a violation of common right; was a negation of the unity of law, a hygienic error, and a menace to the public health.

The second reform in which the members especially interested themselves was that of illegitimacy. It is one of the most painful and difficult subjects with which the philanthropic of Paris have to deal. A third of the children born here are illegitimate. A large percentage of them die. Some because the mothers must work to the day of their confinement or lose their positions and starve; others because the mothers willfully neglect them; many because, sent to the country to be nursed, they receive insufficient food and no care.

With the population of France decreasing as the last census shows it to be, the checking of this awful waste of life has become a vital public question. Not only moralists and philanthropists study it; the statesmen consider it. One of the most famous of the French senators, M. Jules Simon, is working actively to solve the problem. Homes which will care for friendless women before and after the birth of the little ones are building. Crèches are becoming the most popular charities of the city. The state institutions for deserted infants are being enlarged. French philanthropy is actively engaged to save the fatherless children.

The present congress spent considerable time on the subject and ended its deliberations by asking a severer law against parents who deserted their children; state protection for those whose parents are unknown and free education for young girls. One peculiar decision of the congress related to paternity. It argued that every child had a right to its father as well as its mother, and that in case of an illegitimate birth the father should be discovered if possible, and held as responsible as the mother, and that if the infant was recognized by him it should have the same claim upon him and enjoy the same right as a legitimate child.

I was interested in comparing the methods of the assembly with our American conventions of women. It was altogether to the advantage of the latter, and I think I was not at all biased in my judgment. The order was not nearly equal to that which rules in our home bodies. In fact, the last day of the convention there was an uproar which threatened to break up the meeting.

The papers read seemed to me very thoroughly prepared. As a rule they were more carefully studied, more scientific and less sentimental than those I have been accustomed to hearing in the United States. Not all the discussions were written, many were improvised, and excellently improvised, too.

What the congress lacked in parliamentary etiquette was due, no doubt, to the inexperience of the majority of the members in such work. Thanks, largely to the W. C. T. U., American women have learned how to conduct a convention, to maintain order, to control their feelings, to be brief and clear. If we are to judge from the energy, the purpose, and the plans of the present congress, French women are going to have soon, if not an equal an excellent opportunity to learn the same.

IDA M. TARBELL.

Paris, 5, Rue Sommerard.

HOT WORK IN MISSISSIPPI.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Last spring when the Mississippi legislature was in session, passing the high license laws that we are now living under, three saloon men at Flora tried to secure licenses for the ensuing year, before the new laws went into effect. As soon as their petitions were printed in the county papers, the W. C. T. U. called a meeting and deputized me to go to Canton, the county seat, and employ a lawyer in order to defeat the petitions before the board of supervisors which was soon to meet. When I called on the first lawyers of Canton with the view of asking them to take our case, I found that they were already employed by the liquor men. I finally had to resort to a northern man who was a Republican and an anti-Prohibitionist, but a fine attorney, who took the case for fifty dollars.

When the board of supervisors met he attempted to defeat the three petitions on the ground of a technical flaw, but failed, as the board was composed of liquor men. Nothing daunted, he carried the case to the circuit court and fought it through and gained the victory. The saloon men were enraged. One, whose saloon was just outside the corporate limits of Flora, and who had made a great deal from it, took an appeal to the supreme court which meets at Jackson in September. Besides this, he has brought suit for $10,000 against six of the leading members of the W. C. T. U. and three gentlemen on the ground of "trespass" and "conspiracy." This last case will come up in the circuit court in November. I was among the members who were summoned from the W. C. T. U. The saloon-keeper got his idea of "conspiracy" from the fact that two of the gentlemen named in the indictment promised financial backing to the W. C. T. U. The W. C. T. U. was not chartered and the saloon men urge that no person, or number of persons, has a right to interfere with the business of a citizen or number of citizens.

This is the first time in the history of the women of the South, to my knowledge, that the members of the W. C. T. U. have had a lawsuit with saloon-keepers or anybody else. Of course, the case will create excitement and be watched with interest. Already the liquor papers of Vicksburg are saying that "Hutson, the saloonist, is gaining the sympathy of the people"; and Hutson, the saloonist, it is well known, is backed by the Liquor Dealers' Association of Mississippi for any amount of money needed. It is easy to imagine how those timid, shrinking women feel, who have never, in all their lives, had any connection with public work. Some of them have set their faces like rocks and have felt no intimidation, but others are agonizing over it; they say if we lose the case that they will have to forfeit their homes and other property, and their children will be reduced to want; others of them have no sympathy from their husbands and are in deep trouble, but continue to work. They have retained the same lawyer to represent them in the supreme court; he charges an additional fee of fifty dollars. This one hundred dollars, with other expenses of the court, they are raising by hard work among themselves.

I have been implored to write to you for them, and to beg for sympathy in this hour of deep trouble; they would feel strengthened and encouraged if they knew that they had the backing of the National W. C. T. U. Men scoff at them and say a liquor league will support its own, but a handful of struggling women receive no support from the organization to which they belong.

Mrs. Anna Goodloe is the brave president of this union, and needs every encouragement that generous natures can suggest. This is an era not only in the history of this little local W. C. T. U. but in that of the state of Mississippi and of the South. BELLE KEARNEY.

Flora, Miss.

WHERE GOES THY PARTY VOTE?

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The saloon will always vote for itself. Put this down as a self evident, absolutely demonstrated proposition. The saloon, let alone, will increase itself. Take this for another, demonstrated likewise, for it has grown even while badgered, taxed, cursed, and remonstrated with by all the moral and religious elements of society.

Now, take the worth of that something else which votes for itself and in so doing does not molest, hinder or even intimidate the saloon. That something else is party. Between these two parallel conditions, a whisky party and another party voting, each for itself, from sixty-five to eighty thousand drunkards are going into hopeless, helpless, temporal and eternal ruin every year. The saloon, let alone, has power to increase itself against all the prayers, moral efforts, "Keeley motors," and philanthropies of the day. The saloon votes for no man—if it knows itself—who doesn't vote in some way for it. It votes for itself first, last and all the time.

Herein is political wisdom; but what does the merely political party? Votes indeed for itself—the last great, overshadowing issue in this country was one that divided parties. One was voting for the extension of slavery and the other to abridge it. A sort of third party was voting to kill it. Party was then a means to an end. But for the last twenty-five years both the old political parties have been voting for themselves.

The saloon has solved a great problem, namely, the possibility of "perpetual motion." It swings in its blood-dripping hammock between the two powerful helpers. It has usually hitched the one end to the stationary post called democracy and laying the lash upon the other "aggressive party" has made it do the swinging. If one becomes tired or gives out, the other is willing to let it be the post and volunteers to swing the saloon faster and higher than the other. This is the situation simply and truthfully told.

The party that will vote for itself, plus the saloon, can get there. The great breweries of this nation, opulent almost beyond estimate, have decreed that. It is as good as law; and not until a great party rises to the plane of voting for other than itself, yea, daring to vote for an idea, an event, an issue—and that issue the abolition of the saloon, will this accursed relic of hell and death be outlawed and overthrown. H. A. DELANO.

Evanston, Ill.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.
AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., The Temple, La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, 57 Gordon Square, N. W.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.
President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 57 Gordon Square, N. W. London, Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Assistant Secretary—ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

Extract from the new catechism:—"What is the penalty of meanness?" Answer:—"More meanness."

LETTER FROM WILLIAM T. STEAD.

I have just received the following, which will interest us all:

LONDON, June 13, 1892.

MISS WILLARD:

My Dear Friend:—I am hoping to come to your country in September, for a hurried visit with my wife and son. It seems to me the only chance I shall have of getting across to see you for years to come, if, indeed, I ever should have another opportunity; at the same time, I do not think there is any chance of my carrying out the idea to which I referred when I spoke to Lady Henry Somerset. Negotiations seem to be springing up on this side of the Atlantic which will tie me tightly to London during the whole of next year, at least.

I am glad to have an opportunity of explaining one or two things which seem to cause you uneasiness. I do not think that you will differ in the least from me on the question of temperance. What I say is this: That if it be a sin to take any alcoholic liquor, the attitude of the church toward the public house can only be one of war to the death, as it is with the house of ill-fame. But what I say also is, that if Christian people are not prepared to assert that it is a sin to drink a glass of beer, or a glass of wine, they ought to recognize that the supply of such articles is so very dangerous to the public morals and the general welfare, that they cannot entrust it to the hands of any excepting those of the best people in the community; i. e., if the public house is allowed to exist, it can only be safely left in the hands of the Christian church. Surely, you will agree with this, and admit that there is no method by which there can be brought into clearer and stronger relief the dangers of the public house, than by insisting that, if Christian people must drink, they dare not refuse to undertake the supply of the drink.

I have not yet come upon my UNION SIGNAL with Dr. Parkhurst's sketch. I shall look for it eagerly. I was immensely pleased with what he did, and in this month's Review of Reviews I devote a page to an account of his heroic exploits.

Lady Henry Somerset has just written for me a short paper on the temperance question for my "Electors' Handbook." She is very good, and we are not surprised that you have all fallen in love with her; we did that on this side long ago. I am, yours sincerely,

W. T. STEAD.

***

A pretty friend of mine recently met the famous Dr. Briggs, and asked him whether he would not write his autograph for her with a sentiment attached.

"A sentiment?" curiously asked the great theologian.

"Yes, doctor," bravely said the girl, "write me your definition of heresy."

Dr. Briggs hesitated only for a moment and then he wrote:

"Heresy is anything in doctrine or practice that departs from the mind of the church as officially defined.

"CHARLES A. BRIGGS."

***

The following is an extract from a recent letter from Hannah Whitall Smith:

"Miss de Broen, the president of the W. C. T. U., is engaged in a very interesting work in Paris called the Belleville Mission. She began it in the days of the Commune and has carried it on most successfully ever since. I have not time to tell about it here, but every visitor to Paris who is interested in mission work ought to go and see it. She has a reading-room and W. C. T. U. headquarters at 205 Rue St. Honore, and a temperance restaurant. On the window in large letters are the magical initials W. W. C. T. U., and, as the Rue St. Honore is one of the principal streets in Paris, this makes our association well known to all passers by. Miss de Broen also has connected with this headquarters a 'pension' where she makes travelers very comfortable, and all W. C. T. U. women ought to go there if possible. Her terms are very moderate. It seems very difficult to carry on temperance work in France, and Miss de Broen needs all the encouragement possible from every friend of temperance who may be passing through Paris. And if any Y's should be there they must be sure and look up Miss Gibson and give her a word of cheer in her Y work. She is very anxious to introduce kindergarten work among the poor little French children, and says she will give a home and French conversation free of charge to any nice American or English girl who will come over to Paris for a little while to help her in this. It must of course be a girl who understands kindergarten teaching. It would be a grand chance for some American Y to see Paris and learn French and help on a good work at the same time. Her address is Miss M. Isabel Gibson, 78 Boulevard de Versailles, St. Cloud, near Paris, France."

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Through faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.—Heb. 11: 11.

It has been decided that the beautiful fountain for the L. T. L. of America, designed by Miss Anne Whitney, Boston's great woman sculptor, and which they are to present to Miss Frances E. Willard, is to be located in the grand entrance of the Temple, which is approached from La Salle street. We are sure this will please our little friends very much. This rotunda, where thousands pass daily, seems just the place for the Willard Fountain, so at Miss Willard's request there it shall be. The fountain is now being cast in bronze, and will soon be completed. We will give a description of it later.

***

Another $20,000 has just been paid to Mr. Marshall Field in purchase of his stock. This makes $105,000 we have paid him, beside 5 per cent interest on his entire stock since the time he first invested in it. Surely this should encourage every woman to take hold and do her part in the great transaction. The time is coming and that soon, when the stones of the Temple will begin to tell the tale of who erected this magnificent rampart between the home and the saloon, which is so attracting the eyes of the world, and which is bound soon to become the great arsenal of supply (through its noble rentals) to the National and state W. C. T. U's, giving them the wherewithal to fight the enemy. Mrs. E. B. Bennett, through whose influence, largely, $100 was sent to the Temple from the Wayne, Neb., W. C. T. U., and who has been appointed Temple superintendent in her district, before she lifted the union up to the point of giving was in much distress of mind. She says: "The thought would come to me night and day, Can it be possible that the Temple will be built and our union not have its name there?" This thought should impress every loyal white-ribboner just as it did Mrs. Bennett, and they should urge the members of their unions to do their part in this great work and have their names engraved on the tablet of their state.

***

Mrs. Lizzie B. Noyes, of Pittsfield, Ill., has been appointed superintendent of Temple work in the twelfth district. She has issued an admirable little circular to the unions, from which we take the following extract: "It is my earnest desire that before June, 1893, every union in the twelfth district shall be recorded on a tablet in Willard Hall. Every union can give something, and most can give $100. If one plan fails try another, but keep at it and stick to it until you succeed. The time is past for people to be croaking about the Temple not belonging to the W. C. T. U. If every member, and every union will give, it must be ours. Let us say, "We can do it, and we will do it."

***

The Minto, North Dakota, union sends $25, which completes its pledge of $100. This is a small union, so writes Mrs. Titus, the president. She says it was something of a struggle to raise the money. Fifteen dollars comes from the Beaver Dam, Wis., W. C. T. U., the first payment on $100. The Monroe county, Mich., W. C. T. U. sends $40 as a first installment of $100, to place on a tablet the name of its beloved county president, Mrs. Jennie H. Lockwood. The Tritionte, Pa., W. C. T. U. sends $50, as a first payment on a pledge of $100. Mrs. M. C. Beeson writes: "We are anxious to help on the work of paying for the magnificent building that stands as a monument to woman's faith; we also desire to have a tablet in Willard Hall."

Our Y's are getting at work in earnest. The First Y. W. C. T. U. of Philadelphia, Pa., sends $56 on a pledge of $100. The Y's of Louisville, Ky., send $25 as a first installment on $100. The St. Louis Y's send $25 on their pledge of $100.

***

Three warm friends of Miss Jane E. Weeden, Miss Hannah Hewes, Miss Lillian Hewes and Miss Mary J. Hewes, Medina, Ohio, each send $1 toward the Jane E. Weeden tablet. Two dollars is sent for the same tablet from Miss Weeden's brother, Samuel E. Weeden, of Onarga, Ill. One dollar comes from the Y's, of Sidney, Ill., for the Jennie Casseday tablet. The following persons have sent the sums opposite their names to the Whittier memorial clock: Misses Lizzie and Mattie Shumate, Winchester, Va., $2; Miss H. Amelia Howell, Yardley, Pa., $1; Fides, Lockport, N. H., $1; Miss Mary A. Gonts, Providence, R. I., $1; T. W. Seabrook, Keyport, N. J., $2.50; Miss Lois Russell, Eau Claire, Wis., $1; Miss Annette J. Shaw, $1; Mrs. J. H. Brownell, Duaquga, N. Y., $2; Mrs. T. B. Graham, Springfield, Ohio, $1.

***

The Temple trust bonds are selling rapidly—we have less than $100,000 now for sale. Those who desire the very best kind of a paying bond should send at once for them to our financial agent, Mr. H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle street, Chicago; he will give all particulars. Let our friends who desire to give wedding and birthday presents, not forget the beautiful silver model of the Temple in the form of inkstands and velvet-lined jewel cases. Price $2.25 each.

***

A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite box ($3.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

THE DROPPED STITCH.

BY ETTA M. MURRAY.

Grandmother sat in her easy chair,
Knitting a little girl's stocking;
And she didn't know that she dropped a stitch
While she sat there knitting and rocking.

But by and by, when the stocking was worn,
There appeared a great hole in the knee of it,
Which grew, till the little girl found to her shame
The hole was all the people could see of it.

A little girl went to school one time,
But to study she didn't feel willing;
So she sat and played without thinking then
Of how much time she was killing.

But when she at last to womanhood grew,
She found too late, to her sorrow,
That the lessons unlearned were the stitches she'd dropped
And no mending time could she borrow.

So, now, little friends, you'd better take heed
And improve every hour with its niches,
For life is too short for you to make up
For any lost time or dropped stitches.

Evanston, Ill.

MY NEIGHBOR JIM.

Everything pleases my neighbor Jim;
When it rained
He never complained,
But said wet weather suited him;
"There's never too much rain for me,
And this is something like," said he.

When earth was dry as a powder mill,
He did not sigh
Because it was dry;
But said if he could have his will
It would be his chief, supreme delight
To live where the sun shone day and night.

When winter came with its snow and ice,
He did not scold
Because it was cold,
But said: "Now, this is real nice;
If ever from home I'm forced to go
I'll move up North with the Esquimau."

A cyclone whirled along its track
And did him harm—
It broke his arm,
And stripped the coat from off his back;
"And I would give another limb
To see such a blow again," said Jim.

—Selected.

THE TEMPERANCE SHOW.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.

Chapter V.

HOW IT WENT OFF.

If you had been anywhere within hearing of the applause it wouldn't be necessary for me to tell you how it went off. The barn was packed, and it was what the papers would have called a first-class audience. The Joneses had never sat in the midst of so much splendor in their lives. It was an event they never forgot, too. Many more people came than had been hoped for. You see, the children who took part in it were from families of influence, and you will learn more and more the longer you live, that there are great numbers who will help a good work when such people have charge who would not take any interest for the work's sake. For this very reason, it seems to me, Christians who have power in their community should feel especial responsibility about letting themselves be known as friends of every cause intended to help others.

There were more ladies than men, as was to be expected, though not a few fathers and brothers came, besides an actual editor, who wrote a glowing report for the paper, without saying anything that could wound the pride of the Joneses. Was he not an extraordinary editor?

The hour of the beginning was very early. Miss Robie had a notion that a temperance show could not appropriately be intemperate about late evening hours. Indeed, she would have preferred to set the time on Saturday afternoon. But so many begged that it might be evening on account of the gentlemen, that she concluded that it should be Friday evening early. Saturday evening she would not think of because that would mean tired children for Sunday morning. "Always try, girls," she said, "not to tire yourself on Saturday so that Sunday must be lost to you on account of over tired bodies or heads."

Miss Robie must have somewhere read words like these: "Temperate in all things." Can you tell where?

I will tell you some things I heartily like about the way it went off.

I like the way each little girl did her own part. Just as well as she could, without envy because it might be less showy than some other part. And I like the cordial way in which she praised the performance of the rest. It spoils the blessedness of benevolent work when those who take part in it are not sweet in heart toward each other.

I like also the way they treated Jane. Some people when they try to be charitable toward the unfortunate are so disagreeable about it that the unfortunate do not enjoy it at all. Indeed they often resent it instead.

You see even the very poor, or those who have been disgraced are often truly and decently proud. On that account they do not like the more fortunate to give to them, nor do for them as if they were saying: "Here, you poor creatures. From our high places we will hand down these gifts to you. Take them and be thankful, but by no means forget your lowly place in this world."

How would you like such favors? Not at all, I know! Neither do the humble like it. For in spite of their poor situation they are made with just such hearts as you and I, and often they have just as tender sensibilities.

But had you seen the Pansies you would have seen that five-sixths of them treated the other sixth as if the Jones family were as good as anybody. Perhaps it was this sweet fact which made the temperance girl of the play repeat her part in that clear voice, and made her eyes sparkle so, and her cheeks glow with happy excitement and the knowledge that every one was a friend.

From the first entrance to the last going out, there was not an error. All the lovely girls came in and brought their offerings of Health, Benevolence, Joy, Innocence and Hope to Jane, as a temperance girl. And the dialogue was so bright, the lessons so plain, the acting so natural, and the sight of such sweet faces so inspiring that, if it could not take down the house, it was for the simple reason that it took place in a barn.

I am sure that many a heart heretofore thoughtless, took some truth home to think about.

Jane was given a basket of beautiful flowers. It was sent up to her when she had delightfully rendered a bit of fine temperance verse introduced into the play. The verse was an exhortation to all parents to be temperate, and make their little girls and boys as "happy and free from care as I, a joyful temperance girl."

It did not seem a bit funny to any one there that Jane did not know what to do with the flowers when they were offered her, and that she had to be told they were really hers. You see she was not in the habit of shining nor of getting attention for it such as so many girls are used to.

And it was really the most amazing thing that had ever happened to her, all the shakes her childish hand got and all the pats and praise. No wonder her mother and the boys were surprised to find that they had been living with quite a remarkable little girl and never knew it until now. And no wonder her father was ashamed! Why should he be ashamed? Well, since I have gone so far, I may as well tell you that he had seen and heard the whole thing from a window at the back of the audience, which had been left a little open for air. I did intend to save that for the next chapter.

(To be continued.)

"STEER STRAIGHT FOR ME."

A fisherman, who habitually drank to excess, used to sail from a small cove on the Scotch coast to the fishing grounds, several miles out in the ocean. There was no lighthouse to guide him, not even a beacon light, and the channel was intricate. When the fisherman had taken a drop too much and night had fallen, it was dangerous work entering that cove.

His little son used to watch for his father's coming, and as soon as he saw him he would run down to the point, and cry out:

"Steer straight for me, father, and you'll get safe home!"

The boy died; and one evening the father was sitting at his lonely fireside. His conscience troubled him, for he had been thinking over the sins of his life. As the night settled down he thought he heard the voice of his boy ring out through the darkness:

"Steer straight for me, father, and you'll get safe home!"

Springing to his feet he called out:

"You're right this time, my son!"

From that moment he was a changed man; he gave his heart to the Lord Jesus Christ, and served Him until he was taken to heaven to join his little son whom he had so much loved.—Bombay Guardian.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Were you ever in a town or city where there are no saloons? Yes, many of you have been, but a far greater number will say, no. Those of you who live in Maine, Iowa, Dakota or Kansas, know what prohibition means, and what it has done to give you happy and protected homes by keeping out the wicked business of liquor selling. If you go from one of these towns to a place where no saloons flourish, you will notice the difference at once and wish that the saloon might be done away with forever. But that will happen everywhere, some day, instead of in a few places as at present. It is for that we are working, and God helping us, we can bring it to pass. What say you, children? "The saloon must go!" Then go it will.

Aunt Jane

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

We are all temperance folks at our house. Sister Helen and I joined the pledge two or three years ago. I am nine years old, now; I will soon be ten. My birthday is in July the last. I must stop my letter. NOI F. MOODY.

Springfield, Ill.

I wish you many happy returns of your birthday which is very near. I'm so glad you belong to temperance folks, dear little woman.

I have been reading the letters in THE UNION SIGNAL in the "Cozy Corner" column, and I will say that I think we will have to ask THE UNION SIGNAL for another column, for we are filling our little one very fast. I hope my answers are correct to the "Soft-Shelled Nuts."

Hornby, N. Y. NAOMI COYE.

Our "little column" does fill up very quickly, Naomi, and your letter has waited a long time. But for all that Aunt Jane would like to hear from you soon again.

I am a little boy ten years old. I read the "Cozy Corner" in mamma's UNION SIGNAL. I believe I have the correct answer to puzzle number fifty-six. I am going with mamma to the World's Fair, when I expect to see you and the beautiful Temple. One of your nephews,

Fort Pierre, So. Dak. FRANK WILBUR.

Your mother and you will be very welcome visitors, Frank. During the Fair the Temple will no doubt be a center of attraction to all the temperance children who will want to see the building of which they have heard so much.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

65.

DECAPITATION ACROSTIC.

Behead a precious metal and leave not new.
Behead a fruit and leave to wander over.
Behead a cavity and leave a measure.
Behead a leader of the Edomites and leave an animal.
Behead a sea vessel and leave a part of the body.
Behead a small singing bird and leave what once contained a pot of manna and a rod.
Behead a tree and leave not dead.
Behead a hollow sweep of ground and leave an alcoholic liquid.
Behead the first residence of man and leave a place for wild beasts.

The letters removed if taken in order will form a beautiful Scripture motto. REBECCA.

66.

ANAGRAM.

Withe Nibbor.

I'm little, but I try
To speak to every eye
That sees my tiny form,
In bands so true and bright
I circle earth's dark night
With charity so warm. H. W.

67.

PI.

Eevry dcluo ash a livers liinng. WATT.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JUNE 23.

57. Aunt Jane.

58.
C
A P CARAVAN
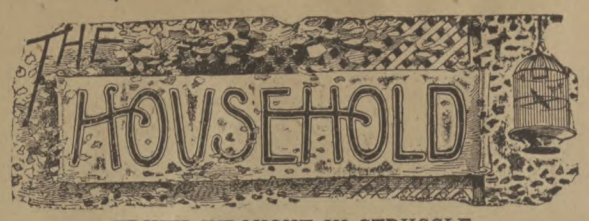
C
I
T
Y

59. White Ribbon.

Correct answers: Royal J. Davis; Earle C. Anderson; Flora Carson; Clara L. Baright; Otis Baldwin; Grace E. Smith; Edith M. Thornton; Verne Sinclair; Lula Smith; Violet; Fannie Kettlewell; Rebecca; Mary G. Hall; Laura G. Lovett; Schiller Lovett; Buttercup; Charlie Fulton.



TRUTH WROUGHT IN STRUGGLE.

"Great truths are dearly bought. The common truth,
Such as men give and take from day to day
Comes in the common walk of easy life,
Blown by the careless wind across our way.

"Great truths are greatly won, not found by chance,
Nor wafted on the breath of summer dream;
But grasped in the great struggle of the soul,
Hard buffeted with adverse wind and stream.

"Wrung from the spirit in hard hours
Of weakness, solitude, perchance of pain;
Truth springs like harvest from the well-plowed field,
And the soul feels it has not wept in vain."

—Selected.

THE FLAG OF THE FREE.

BY ERATO.

"There, Will, doesn't the room look nice? I finished that mat last night, and had just money enough left to buy those shoes for Mamie. Won't she be surprised?"

"You're a great woman, Kate, and I'll have more money for you next Saturday night."

"I hope so, dear; but we mustn't stop to talk, for I've eggs and bacon for breakfast, and they're done to a turn. I've been up this two hours. The firing woke me and I couldn't get to sleep again."

Kate Shewel was a noble woman; but she had made the mistake of marrying, expecting by loving-kindness and patience to win Will from his fondness for strong drink, but learned too late that the power of appetite controlled more than love.

Intervals of hope, when the man's better nature asserted itself and the craving for liquor was kept in abeyance, alternated with weeks of gloom, poverty and despair, at which times the husband was more like a besotted fiend than anything human; and Kate's daily life was a sorry substitute for the dream of happiness to which she had looked forward.

Both parents united in worshiping their golden-haired little Mamie, now in her fifth year. Will had obtained work some two weeks previous to this Fourth of July morning, and the money he had placed in her hands the preceding night had enabled her to make the little home more inviting than usual; but she looked forward with apprehension to this holiday, fearing some temptation might prove irresistible to easy-going Will. Breakfast over, he rose from the table, saying as he put on his hat:

"I'm going down street. I won't be gone long, Kate."

"Don't go, Will; stay at home to-day," she said wistfully.

"Don't fear, little woman," he replied, "I'm all right, but I saw something at the store last night I'm determined to have for you. I can't keep a secret worth a cent, though. There's a clock down at Beyers just like the one I gave you the first christmas after we were married. I broke that one myself, when I was—a little 'over the bay'; but thank goodness, I'm done with that sort of thing now. I won't be long; don't worry."

He stepped briskly along, happy in the thought that he was once more master of himself, and could purchase a gift for his wife, with money honestly earned. So engrossed was he with his own thoughts he took no note of the gay appearance of the surroundings. Up and down the street, as far as the eye could see, the windows and doorways and every turret were bright with flags—the stars and stripes in all sizes and qualities.

Noticeable above all else were the saloons that thickly besprinkled every block. Though scarcely an American name appeared above the doors, the owners seemed to be ultra patriotic, for bunting and flags drooped and waved in gorgeous profusion over each and all of them.

As Will hurried along, thinking what a pleasant day he should have with Kate and little Mamie, a familiar voice called:

"Hullo, Vill; vere you go? Vy you don shtop to dhrink?"

"Can't stop this morning, Al; I've other business on hand."

"So? Vat you tink of mine vlags? Dere de finest on de street!"

"Yes, they're ornamental, and no mistake. I must hurry along, though."

"No? Ven I nail up dem vlags I tink to myself, I'd pe glad to hear Vill Shewel tell vonce more of de pattle of dat—vats his name?"

"Murfreesboro. It was a grand sight, Al!"

"Yes, I'll pelieve you. And you saw it?"

"That I did. I was in the nineteenth Illinois, and it was worth while to see the artillery on both sides doing its hot work. Just before we were ordered to charge, Beatty had crossed the river, under cover of the guns on the opposite bank, and those same guns so peppered the enemy that in less than an hour Breckinridge had lost an unmerciful lot of men and many a brave fellow 'slept the sleep that knows not waking.'"

"Dat vas fine! Come in from dis sun for it'll roast us, and I vill like to hear de rest," said the saloon-keeper.

Will, with whose weak point the artful Al was familiar, stepped inside and was soon sipping a glass of brandy at one of the tables and telling over again, to his apparently interested listener, the story of Murfreesboro and his own share in that eventful day. Al Rider, whose nationality no one had been able to discover—as he spoke French, German, Spanish and Italian with equal fluency— was one of the most successful retail liquor dealers in the city; and as he came to this country from no one knew where, he kept his own counsel and pocketed the coins that were handed over the bar by men who affected to despise him, but for whom he felt a contempt that increased with their besotment. He had come into possession of the larger share of Will's earnings during the last five years, and knowing that he had worked steadily for a fortnight, was determined to secure whatever money he might still have before letting him go.

One after another the habitués of the place dropped in. One story followed another, washed down from full glasses until, hours after, placing his hand in his pocket in search of payment for the last "treat," Will discovered that not a penny remained. He sprang to his feet with a sensation of fright, trying to remember what he had intended to do. The repeated "drinks" had so muddled his brain that he tried in vain to think who he was, or where he could be; nor could he imagine how his pockets had become empty in what seemed to him an incomprehensibly short space of time. He looked about him vaguely, then cried as he reeled toward the bar behind which the saloon-keeper stood: "You've robbed me, you scoundrel! I haven't got a cent left; what've you done with it? Tell me, y' cheating thief! Where's my money?"

"Zoftly, mine frient. You'd petter go home. You'll feel goot ven you shleeps."

"You'll feel better, you sneak thief! but give me back my money, or I'll wipe the ground with you!"

"Go out apout your pizness, Vill," said Al, as he took Will by the shoulder and pushed him toward the door; "you go home now, Vill."

"Yes, I'll go after I've thrashed the life out of you," said Will, as he reached the door, where his attention veered suddenly from the liquor dealer to the flying colors festooned about the front of the building.

"Look at that flag, boys!" he cried; "see the glorious red, white and blue we fought and bled for; see it, making beautiful this doorway to perdition. Down with it! It shan't stay there while I've life or strength left!"

He began to tear the colors from the doorway and threw flag after flag to the ground, while Al Rider bustled about, not daring to lay hands upon the infuriated man.

"See, you thief! there are your flags! I fought for the stars and stripes, and I'll see 'em in the dust rather than over the door of a foreign robber!"

"You shtop! Dis is my blace, and it ain't your pizness. Vat I shall care vedder you fight or not; I come here to make money; let pe dose vlags, I say!"

"Yes, I'll let 'em be when I've ground 'em to atoms," cried Will.

"Get 'im! hold onto 'im, and call de pat-rol. I'll pe ruined! Mine cousin in Minneapolis, he make a vortune mit de Convention, and no one droubles him. I fix mine blace so fine; de oder Convention comes to Chicago and dey call me a goot fellow, instead of to pull dem down."

"What do I care about the convention? If our politicians were men who cared for the nation, would they let such fellows as you come here to make devils of us Americans with your infernal liquor selling. You've robbed me over and over, and 'twould be a blessing to the country if I throttled you!"

Will's manner was so threatening the saloon-keeper was becoming really alarmed.

"You keep shtill, I say; I bay license, and de law vill brodect me. Vill some one call de bolice? He'll do meeschief—ah, 'tis here; dat is goot."

Sure enough the patrol had arrived and hustled Will Shewel away without ceremony. He was locked up as "drunk and disorderly," while the man who grew rich on the degradation of American born—her bravest and best—stood complacently outside his door, roping in others as he had Will, remarking to those who had witnessed the scene of the afternoon:

"Americans pe queer beoples; dey drink, den dey apuse me. Vy shan't I haf vlags? I bays my license, and if de volks should like ret, vite and plue, vy not? It is so goot as any oder."

The following morning the papers gave a startling account of suicide committed by a drunken man who had been locked up for interfering with the rights of a "loyal citizen." In his hand was found a crumpled note which read:

DEAR KATE:—I'm sober now, and when you read this I shall have written "finis" to a mighty black page.

I can't tell you just what I did, but as long as such men as Al Rider and their wretched saloons exist, there's no hope for such as I. Good-bye, dear! You've done your best. Join those good women who are trying to down the saloons. If I had any faith in myself or any influence, I'd try to live to help them vote it out. But I've no hope in anything any more. When my government protects a foreign tramp in his right to destroy me and jails me, an old soldier, who fought and bled for my native 'and, because I was maddened to see our blood-dyed flag prostituted to decorate his murderous door, I don't believe the women or anybody can do any good. I thought I was done with the drink forever when I left you yesterday—our country's birthday, but I can never be a man with the saloons lining every street, and am only a curse to you and Mamie. My heart died when I realized last night that my government's against me too. While it takes the license money it will always be the same old story for me and the other fellows like me. So it's no use. Forgive me.

WILL.

Chicago, Ill.

SUNDAY CLOSING OF EXPOSITION AS RELATED TO THE CHILDREN.

BY REV. MARY T. WHITNEY.

This Sunday problem is a great problem. I have thought so many times, and I think so to-night more strongly than ever I did, for it is Sunday night.

We had a charming picture of an ideal Sunday in THE UNION SIGNAL not long ago. It rested one just to read it.

Let me give another picture. Imagine a family of eight people, four of whom are children. Their ages range from eight to fourteen.

Sunday morning comes and begins with the late breakfast. After it come the preparations for half-past ten o'clock service. Service and Sunday school take the time till one o'clock. Dinner at two. After dinner what?

"Mamma, now read to us." Mamma reads until she and the children are tired.

"Now, mamma, take a walk with us." All walk to a pine grove and sit down in the delightful shade.

"Now, mamma, tell us a story." "I can't think of any," says mamma. "Then make up one." A story is "made up." "Now tell some history." Some history is told. "Now let's say all we can think of from Longfellow." "The Bridge," "The Children's Hour," and a part of "Paul Revere" follow before the children are tired of that. Home again at six two hours more to dispose of with two restless, uneasy boys. A Sunday-school concert at a near church comes to the rescue. After lunch the eight o'clock bedtime comes, and the "day of rest" is over.

In every family where there are children, Sunday is indeed a problem. It is a day in which everything is upset. All the ordinary things are put one side, and the children are at an utter loss to know what to do with themselves. I heard a housekeeper say, "I am so thankful that Sunday comes but once a week." The reply from another housekeeper was, "Once a month would be often enough for me." Again and again, I have heard people say, "It's the hardest day in the week." Yes, it is a "hard day" for thousands who try to make it a day of rest and a day of religion. It is also a day of temptation to thousands for "Satan always finds some work for idle hands to do," as the old proverb has it, and Sunday is the day of "idle hands."

I have been a devoted W. C. T. U. woman for years and never refused to sign and circulate a petition coming from that organization until I came to the Sunday petitions. Then I had to stop.

I go into the art museum on Sunday afternoon in Boston and there I find boys—young lads, quietly walking about the rooms. Why are they there? Are they so fond of art? No, it is simply because they must be somewhere, and that place is open to them. Thank God, I say, that it is. Where would they be if not there?

The world is a big home. Who will mother all the people on Sunday? Who will "make up" stories for them and take walks with them and read to them? The church does something, but Sunday is twelve hours long, at the least, when you cut it off at both ends. It is Sunday all day and the problem is what to do with all day.

We may prohibit amusements and excursions and fairs. That doesn't help the problem at all. The question isn't what not to do half as much as what to do. Said a woman who has the care of children to me the other day, "I believe I should have nervous prostration if it wasn't for the street cars Sundays. In the afternoon I can take the boys and go to City Point, or Jamaica Plain, or Arlington, and it's the only thing that makes the day endurable."

What is my sixteen year old boy going to do with his Sundays in Chicago if the Fair grounds are closed? One hour, two hours, three hours perchance might be filled in with church services if he liked to go to church, but what of the nine or ten remaining hours? He is active, eager, restless, and will find something to fill his mind. Are the chances good that he will find anything better than that wonderful exhibition would give him? This is a problem that comes right home to every one of us mothers, and it is a problem that we have to meet every Sunday of the year, and it takes all the tact and skill and brains and patience that we possess, and all the self-sacrifice that we are capable of, to make any kind of a solution of it.

Every door that is closed to refining, uplifting, educating influences only makes the problem greater.

The true work of Christian people is to open doors into new places of healthful influence rather than to close any that are already open.

Christ said, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

The right solution, then, of the Sunday question will be to find means by which the whole day may be made useful to all classes of people.

This work is before us, not yet even begun.

If the great petition for Sunday closing is unheeded, it will not necessarily mean that we stand before the world as an unreligious people. Opposite petitions are also sent by those who feel as deeply upon the subject and who think they see more clearly the necessities of the people.

We cannot see alike about it, but if we seek earnestly and prayerfully, throw off prejudice, free ourselves of preconceived opinions and listen for the voice of God, we shall find the right way at last, and a new work and a great opportunity will open before us.

N. Cambridge, Mass.

The Union Signal
AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.
MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, Office: The Temple Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—MISS ESTHER PUGH, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

For thou art my rock and my fortress; therefore for thy name's sake lead me, and guide me.—Ps. 31:3.

OUR BILL OF FARE

is introduced with the query, "Are You Ready for The Question?" which is answered affirmatively. A former valued contributor, Elizabeth Cumings, gives us the first chapter of a true and captivating story, "A Sure Cure." The World's Fair Congress Auxiliary is discussed by its vice president, Mrs. Henrotin. Lady Henry Somerset's part in the parliamentary elections is well told by an English correspondent. "Shall More Indians be Removed?" is the subject of Mary F. Lovell's paper on the present Indian bill before Congress. The correspondence department includes an editorial contribution by Miss West, on the immoral condition of San Francisco; an account of the third "Woman's Rights Congress," in Paris, by Ida M. Tarbell; "Hot Work in Mississippi," by Belle Kearney, and "Where Goes Thy Party Vote?" by Rev. H. A. Delano. The President's Column contains interesting letters from William T. Stead and Hannah Whitall Smith. "Our Children" have a variety of interesting matter. The Household page furnishes two interesting sketches, and the Queen's Gardens are enriched by one of Amber's delightful talks.

PLATFORMS AND CANDIDATES.

In what we have said about President Harrison and other candidates of parties with which we do not affiliate, and whose failure to recognize the prohibition of the liquor traffic among the first of the issues of the time, and the ballot for woman as the only road to the successful enforcement of prohibition law we earnestly deplore, we have meant to indicate our idea of the true political method, namely, to speak as well as one possibly can of opposing candidates and platforms, rather than to take the usual course of politicians and speak as ill as we can of those to whom we are strenuously opposed. We might have dwelt upon that side of President Harrison's record which reveals the fact that he declined to put his name to the petition for scientific temperance education law in Indiana when that petition was offered him by our white-ribboners; we might have stated once more, what has been so often brought forward, that he is avowedly opposed to prohibition, because in his judgment it is not the best method of handling the liquor traffic, and that he opposes woman's ballot on good, (?) old-fashioned Presbyterian principles; we might have dwelt upon the fact that he offers wine at state dinners, and drinks wine at the tables to which he accepts invitations. All this is well known and greatly regretted by temperance people. It should also in fairness be mentioned that it is well understood by all that President Harrison is a man of the most moderate methods in the personal conduct of life. He does not care for liquor so far as we know; he does not care for tobacco; but, unfortunately he uses both, rather as an indication of good comradeship, under the false social code that prevails in his circle at the present time, than because he is personally desirous of these indulgences.

Concerning ex-President Cleveland, we have reason to believe that he has altogether changed his manner of life for the last twelve years, and that, while not a total abstainer, his conduct is about like that which we have mentioned concerning President Harrison. Hence, as we forgive men even as we would be forgiven, we have not deemed it necessary to refer to the record of his earlier life. We know that he, like his party, is opposed to woman's ballot and the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Of General Weaver, just now nominated by the People's party, we know that he is a total abstainer from all intoxicants and tobacco, that he is a firm believer in and advocate of prohibitory law, and that he is a woman suffragist.

Concerning General Bidwell, we know that he is a total abstainer from all intoxicants and tobacco, that he is a devoted Prohibitionist in principle and politics, and a devoted woman suffragist in politics and principle.

We believe that in the foregoing statements we have fairly indicated the position of each of the four men whom the American people are now studying, with a view to giving their ballots to one of them. We believe that if every newspaper in the land would, like THE UNION SIGNAL, say all the good things possible of the opposing candidates, we should have a delightful campaign, educational to the last degree, and one that would take the strain and stress out of the months that intervene between now and the great decision of November next.

Concerning the four parties, we think their platforms show a decided advance in the rising tide of our Christian civilization. The two platforms representing the two youngest parties recognize Almighty God as the source of power in government, and there is much of brotherly good-will and sincere patriotism in the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties and much more, as we believe, in those of the People's and the Prohibition parties. But it is perfectly well known that both of the old parties are acceptable to the liquor oligarchy and that the plank in the Democratic platform, declaring against sumptuary law, does not ally that party more strongly with the liquor interests of the country than they are allied with the Republican party, notwithstanding the sop it throws to the temperance people in its diplomatic utterance favorable to temperance; an utterance no stronger than has repeatedly been given by conventions of brewers.

We congratulate all friends of humanity on the fact that the woman's suffrage plank in the Prohibition platform has forced its way to the front until it ranks only second and has no qualification whatever, but is a clear-cut declaration for the political equality of women with men. We are also glad that the People's party declares for the utmost concord and good-will between the North and the South, and that "we must be in fact as we are in name, one united brotherhood of freemen." The Prohibition party took a similar position when it unanimously put itself on record as opposed to any allusions in the speeches of its orators that should open the subject of the late unpleasantness.

We are glad to find in the preamble to the People's party platform these words: "Our sympathies as a party of reform are naturally upon the side of every proposition which will tend to make men intelligent, virtuous and temperate," also, "We believe that the forces of reform this day organized will never cease to move forward until every wrong is remedied and equal rights and equal privileges securely established for all the men and women of this country." We profoundly regret that the same preamble also says: "We nevertheless regard these questions, important as they are, as second to the great issues now pressing for solution, and upon which not only our individual property but the very existence of free institutions depends."

THE UNION SIGNAL believes that the economic issues now before the people of the country are of greater importance than language can describe, but we also think that no issue can possibly outrank that which would remove from the organ of thought those poisons that are deteriorating it to such a degree that we may be said in these days to have bewildered legislation because a majority of the heads that legislate are more or less under the influence of alcoholic poisons. We think with equal earnestness that the issue of the participation in the government of one-half the people now unrepresented, cannot be exceeded in importance by any other unless it be that which seeks to restore and conserve the integrity of the brain-power in a nation where the people rule.

WOMEN IN THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

We regret beyond expression that our friends of the People's party did not frankly adopt prohibition and woman's ballot as out-and-out planks but they certainly took an advance step over their action in St. Louis last February, when they placed the following statements in their platform:

We invoke upon our action the blessing of Almighty God. The civil war is over, and every passion and resentment which grew out of it must die with it, and we must be in fact, as we are in name, one united brotherhood of freemen. Our sympathies, as a party of reform, are naturally upon the side of every proposition that will tend to make men intelligent, virtuous and temperate; nevertheless we regard these questions, important as they are, as secondary to the great issues now pressing for solution, and we ask all men to first help us to determine whether we are to have a republic to administer, before we differ as to the conditions upon which it is to be administered, believing that the forces of reform this day organized will never cease to move forward until every wrong is remedied, and equal rights and equal privileges securely established for all the men and women of this country.

Some of the scenes in that great audience of seventeen hundred delegates were as remarkable as any ever chronicled in the history of conventions. Says an eye-witness:

"It was a new crusade, and men and women were beside themselves with joy. The reading of the platform was greeted with cheers and amens, and at its conclusion the delegates shouted, prayed, sang and shed tears, while the fervent amens of devout clergymen and staid old Methodists mingled with the irreverent shouts of those who expressed themselves in language not appropriate to the sanctuary.

"The Kansas delegates were determined to have their standard above that of any other state, while every other state meant to be at the head, but Kansas deserved the preëminence, and everybody knew it, so an old man in the Kansas delegation was lifted upon the shoulders of two stalwart farmers, and by raising his arms to the utmost he carried the standard of his state above all others. Mrs. Lease, the 'Joan of Arc' of the labor movement, was a central figure. Her pale face lighted up with an almost supernatural enthusiasm as she waved her handkerchief and lent her peculiarly penetrating voice to the chorus.

"An old man, feeble with age, his long white hair and whiskers of snow marking him as a patriarch among his people, was lifted upon the desk of the chairman and the silken banner of Massachusetts was transferred to his hands. He was too feeble to hold it aloft, but strong men held him up and the banner too. At one time the whole convention marched in procession about the hall, headed by fife and drum and brightened by banners and standards. Arkansas had the place of honor behind the music. On the top of the standard was a woman's bonnet belonging to one of the delegates from that state, which has conferred upon women the ballot by signature on the question of legalizing the dram-shop.

"A man with a voice that would frighten prairie wolves, stood up on the speaker's desk and waved his hands. At first he could not command attention, but after awhile he struck the refrain of that inspiring song, 'Good-bye, old parties, good-bye.' The words were familiar to all present; they ceased to shout and all joined in the singing. Ten thousand voices swelled the chorus as they sang on and on, making the old coliseum resound with their wild music. At the close, a preacher from Indiana began a prayer of thanksgiving. A woman from Oregon added another.

"Later on, when the president was nominated, Mrs. Lease, the finest orator of the great movement, came to the front, and the one speech, which in language and power rose above all others, was hers. It was also the one speech which inspired something like the same enthusiasm that has just been described. In voice and manner she had more ease than any of the men who spoke during the convention. She was dramatic in language and swayed the convention at her will. Among other women prominent in the proceedings were Mrs. Todd and Mrs. Emery of Michigan, and Mrs. Diggs of Kansas. All are fine speakers and in the forefront of leadership. Gen. Weaver had nearly a thousand votes on the first ballot which was at once made unanimous."

One of the best reports we have seen has this statement: "It should be said in honor of American courtesy and manhood, that when woman lifts her hand to address this great convention, silence reigns at once. Mrs. Lease or little Mrs. Diggs, Mrs. Emery or the eloquent Mrs. Todd, may lift a little finger and the men subside on the instant, while Chairman Loucks may split the head of his gavel in vain to gain attention and secure quiet. Ten thousand persons were present in the audience. The whole platform was filled with women, and it was evident that at last they are included in the stereotyped expression, 'We, the people of the United States.'"

Miss Susan B. Anthony was present and probably enjoyed this new object lesson of the progress of women more than any other person could. When the clause relating to the liberties of the people, the equal rights of all, and equal suffrage for all men and women in America was read, the army of women on the platform arose and applauded with might and main. Mrs. Lease waved her handkerchief, her little daughter was lifted to the shoulders of two big men and brandished the American flag. Miss Anthony well-nigh blistered her hands with applause, and for more than twenty minutes men filled the vast auditorium with a mighty roar. It was more than an hour before order could be restored.

Thus moves "the wave of humanity boundless and free" and no mortal power can stay its onward course.

A CRITICISM.

It is a matter of surprise, when we think of our long list of publications on all manner of subjects, that there has not been more criticism of our books or leaflets. Generally, they have been cordially received by the public, and the good that has been done, the great day of accounts only can reveal. Sometimes our leaflets relate to questions in theology, and we are thankful to be able to say that our work has been well received in all the religious denominations. It is applied Christianity that the W. C. T. U. has to do with, and Christian people everywhere recognize the need of this kind of work. The W. T. P. A. publishes a leaflet entitled, "Children in the Church," which has called forth the criticism that its argument is partial to infant baptism. It is strange that this should be so, when the author has received some of the warmest praise from those who do not believe in infant baptism. The first criticism of this leaflet came from the editor of a religious paper. The article was sent to the author of the leaflet, who immediately offered to pay the expense of making the plates for a new leaflet and to destroy his, if a less sectarian and better one should be produced on the subject. That is about three years ago, and the matter was never heard from again. Lately, the same criticism has been made once more. This has led us to add the following note to the leaflet, written by its author:

"This leaflet was written with the fervent hope that it might help somewhat to a better understanding of the relations of children to the church. It is not a sectarian production in the interest of infant baptism. Its great truth lies far back of all church forms, ordinances or creeds. Many parents do not believe infant baptism to be scriptural. That has nothing to do with their responsibility to consecrate their children to Christ and to bring them up in His church. Baptists, Pedo-baptists, Friends, and all others are invited to ponder, with the sincerity and earnestness it deserves, the truth unfolded in this tract. No subject is of more importance to the welfare of any Christian family or church."

It is hoped that this statement will be satisfactory to all, and that thus guarded, the leaflet may go on in its mission of blessing to the children and the churches. A new edition, revised by the author, will be issued in a few months.

GOSPEL POLITICS.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright recently preached in the pulpit of the First Methodist church, Evanston, a sermon on politics which has in it so much solid sense that we think it germane to the present situation, and ask for it the special attention of every voter who does us the honor to read THE UNION SIGNAL:

As distinct from theology, religion is godliness or real purity in practice, consisting in the performance of all known duties to God and our fellowmen and ourselves, from love to God and His law.

Politics, in the true sense, means the science of government, or that part of ethics which consists in the regulation and government of a nation or state, for the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity, the augmentation of its strength and resources, and the protection of its citizens in their rights, with the preservation and improvement of their morals.

Religion in politics means that line of action in human affairs which preserves the rights and conserves the peace and welfare of the greatest number; which requires of us the highest duty of obedience to God, loyalty to our own conscience, love to our neighbors, in which alone is to be found that political and material prosperity so eminently essential to the happiness of society.

We Americans have been called a nation of politicians because all men have the right to seek and hold office. We are, and it enables us to hold our public men and ourselves to the strict line of action. Public men should have that element of religion which carries them through all great trials, and gives to them the courage at all times to do the right.

Weakness in office means wickedness in office. In the consideration of this subject there are three obligations to be noticed: First, the obligation of citizens to perform political duties; second, the obligation of officials to faithfully administer their duties; and, third, the obligation of nations to observe the great laws of humanity in the treatment of subjects and in their dealings with weaker powers.

Above these rises the question whether the nation has a soul or is born of God. If it is not, man has no moral obligation calling him to political duty.

I take the ground that the state is of divine growth. There is a fundamental truth in American politics that the course of life which is best calculated to fit the immortal part of us for the future and spiritual life is that course which will make us the best citizens of our town, our state, our nation. Party government is necessary in a free state. A non-partisan government is the dream of weak men. I believe it is a Christian duty to vote as well as to pray. Political work is the work of Christian people. The caucus is to my mind the very best element in the American political system. The trouble is with its abuse. It is the absolute duty of every citizen to take part in the primary meetings.

If religion in its broad sense of duty to God, to man, and to self demands anything at our hands by way of labor, sacrifice or effort, and if we demand of our government purity of administration, the caucus as surely claims our attention, our presence, and our encouragement. A man would better remain away from the polls than the primary, if he cannot attend both.

I do not believe a man should be honest in business and dishonest in politics. If he is dishonest and tricky in politics he is a dishonest and tricky man. There never was a man that could trample upon human rights and still be superior to the men upon whom he trampled. It is to men in whom fidelity to principle rules all their actions that the nation must look for its source of virtue. Such are the men who will bring us to a purer political condition.

IT is often said that we do not so much need more law, as better enforcement of law. This is a half truth; let us look at that half.

Rev. Joseph Strong, general secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, has made a move recently in his own town of Greenwich, Conn., concerning which we inquired, and learned the following facts:

A pocket pamphlet was published entitled "A Digest of the Liquor, Tobacco, Gaming and Sunday Laws of Connecticut." The preface to this pamphlet had this language:

"As a citizen of the state of Connecticut, you are interested in the enforcement of laws in popular government. If the people are indifferent the law will not be enforced, and when the law is no longer enforced, it will be no longer respected; and when popular respect for law is lost, the foundation of public government has given way. Laws should be enforced or repealed, and the surest way to secure the repeal of an obnoxious law is to enforce it. Laws ought never to be dead laws; if dead, let them be taken from the statute book and buried; as dead laws, if unburied, are like other dead and unburied things, dangerous to the public health. As long as laws are on the statute book let them be vigorously enforced. Some of the laws of the state, and especially the liquor laws, have been disregarded in our community, partly through ignorance of them, and partly because of a lax public sentiment. It is believed that a rising public sentiment will, in the future, demand their enforcement.

"You are herewith handed a 'Digest of the Liquor, Tobacco, Sabbath and Gaming Laws of Connecticut,' with the request that you will acquaint yourself with them, and as a good citizen, report all violations of the same which come under your notice, to the Committee on Reform of the Evangelical Alliance, Greenwich."

The effect of the circulation of this little pamphlet has been excellent. A lawyer who was consulted declared that he did not believe there was a liquor dealer in the town who did not violate the law twenty times a day. He said this was due partly to the ignorance of the saloon-keeper, no doubt, but much more to the ignorance and indifference of the public. Nothing will tone up the public sentiment more than acquainting the people with the law.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in the town referred to has agreed to put this pamphlet into every home within one week; and moreover, these same young people propose every month to sow the town with temperance literature.

Why should not this practice become general? Why should not the "Christian Endeavorers" and the "Epworth Leaguers" all over the land go and do likewise? Here are some two million young people who want to do something for Christ and country. Suppose they should visit ten million or fifteen million homes in the United States once a month with as many temperance leaflets? How that action would hasten the coming of the kingdom! We have the leaflets; the people's brains are spoiling for an arrest of thought; why can we not bring the two together? All that we lack is the faithful, ready hands of the young "middlemen," boys and girls, youths and maidens, who are ready to work and willing, and who only need wise and steady direction from their elders in church philanthropy and reform.

We throw out this suggestion, and shall be glad to hear from "our folks" concerning any results that they may have to report; for we human beings are very imitative, and if a method has worked well in one place, it is sure to be taken up in another. Let us have then a grand literature crusade, in itself a most eloquent sermon on the text, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon."

THE Chicago Free Kindergarten Association was organized in 1881, by white ribbon women, who associated with themselves leading men of the same way of thinking. It has gone on steadily from that day to this until it now maintains a free training class of nearly one hundred earnest young women under competent teachers and lecturers.

The old idea that anybody could be a kindergarten teacher and play, with a lot of children gathered around them for the purpose, is fast losing ground. These young women give their time in the forenoon in assisting the principals in the seventeen free kindergartens that are now located in the most populous and destitute portions of the city. Two thousand children, all under school age, are reached by these kindergartens, and in their characters the foundation for useful citizenship is being laid. The expenses of the association are about $4,500 per year, which includes salaries for two principals, lecturers, etc., and this money is raised by subscription. Only one teacher, an acceptable graduate, receives pay for her services in this kindergarten, while from five to six assist in each school, giving their services to the children in the forenoon in return for the tuition they receive from the association in the afternoon. In this way the association secures the services of eighty assistants for ten months, which is worth at least forty dollars per month apiece, making a total of $32,000 services returned for an investment of $4,500. It would be hard to find an enterprise more economically managed, or one that accomplishes so much on a small outlay, as no salary is paid to any officer, and no commission allowed on the collections. Mr. and Mrs. Asa P. Kelley, leading temperance workers of the city, have contributed of their wealth and time to this enterprise from the beginning. Mrs. Whittemore, a most accomplished woman and kindergartner, is the mainspring of the school.

A prominent Texas white-ribboner, speaking of what the W. C. T. U. had done for her, said: "It is just like my front door; when it opens, it blows all the doors in the whole house open."

***

There is much to be said about the English brewery-buying syndicates. The Germans are a thrifty race. Being here on the ground, they can estimate the danger that threatens their trade, as Britishers cannot. Besides, they have a growing sensitiveness to the criticism of good people—especially as they are beginning to appreciate the logical and scientific argument of the great reform.

***

Perhaps we are unmindful of the aggregate influence of our white ribbon army. But think how fully our work is appreciated in scores and hundreds of localities. Along this line a clergyman writes: "I thank my God always on your behalf. I travel not a little, and wherever I go, I find the white ribbon sister always there—ubiquitous, indeed. In some places I have found churches half asleep, or in very discouraged condition, but the W. C. T. U. alive and active. Of course, the best life of these unions has been inspired by the faith of the Christian churches, and it is the fact of a living issue that gives the greater vital force to many wide-awake organizations of Christian womanhood. The best white-ribboners I know are loyal to their churches, though sometimes impatient a little."

***

It is said that in China the wife is very seldom mentioned by her husband, but when he does mention her it is always in some round-about way. He has some name that he calls her in his flowery language, which takes the place of the word "wife." One man calls his wife "my hand the clothes"; another, "my dull companion"; another, "my thorn in the ribs"; another describes her as "the mean one of the inner rooms."

***

One of the surest signs of a wide-awake mind is its tendency to follow up a question. Chauncey M. Depew says that one of his favorite ways of spending an evening is "to hunt up every imaginable phase of some question in the arguing of which he had been worsted on his way up town." The cyclopedia is nearest friend to the man and woman who would know more to-day than they did yesterday. But how few make a point of knowing more! All the same they have the universe to absorb if they ever minded it and would better be about it, and that right early. Look at a return ball—it flies out but it comes back again. A thoughtful mind does the same thing; called off from the subject of its study, back it flies with graceful motion to its first works, nor misses once the track of thought until the original impulse of its beautiful curiosity is satisfied.

***

Swedish women vote in the cities for municipal councillors, and in the country for members of the county council, and as the latter body appoints the members of the upper chamber of the diet, the women may be said to exercise a direct power in Swedish affairs.

***

From a gifted woman in the Gulf states: "I am fast making up my mind to plunge, with sleeves rolled up, elbow deep, into your work. Maybe it will only be headlong, as the swine rushed into the sea. I distrust myself enormously. At all events, I am closing the school-room door forever. Twenty-nine full years have seen me pass to and from the school-room with the invariableness of the seasons themselves. Never sick, never missing an engagement, I have put the whole of my vigorous life thus far into that work, beginning a few months after I was fifteen, and continuing without interruption till the snow is drifting through my hair. Surely, that is enough of such work. Many days of that time were worn bare of grass and sunshine. Nothing but the deep love I bore my kindred who needed my services after the great war had left us desolate, would have held me so long on that gridiron, heated hotter sometimes than St. Lawrence knew,—not that teaching in itself is other than delightful; but being a woman with a man's heart, quick to resent control, ambitious to stand on the topmost round, capable of standing alone, without a guiding hand, and yet wrapped in all the restrictions that women inherit, and expected to bear it all meekly,—I who had no meekness,—that is what has caused the friction that kept this saint uncanonized. Nevertheless, the years have gone and the record is made. I stand near the threshold of the youth of old age and the old age of youth, as Victor Hugo calls fifty years; but ready to take up some other work; for the time seems very far away when the grasshopper shall be a burden."

ON DUTY.

THE BLESSED HERITAGE OF HEALTH.

BY AMBER.

Poor old "Betty Higdon" had it about right when she declined to end her days in the hospital. Rather, for her, a death on the free highway, with the faithful "Lizzie" to lift the poor old head to her breast, and "so lifting, lift it high as heaven."

The other day I took advantage of its being one of the most disagreeable days of the season to visit the county hospital. There is nothing like adaptability to circumstances. I would choose to visit a hospital or any other theater of human suffering upon an unlovely day, for the same reason that I would prefer to die in a storm—it wouldn't be so hard to go; there wouldn't be too forcible a contrast to encounter.

Nothing could be finer than the approach to and the entrance of this imposing building. Being of a retiring disposition, I could not picture myself sweeping up the royal stairway alone, and booming the great bell of select admission, so I modestly made my application at the lower entrance. An ambulance had driven up before me, and the prone body of a sick man was being borne within the doorway. I stood aside to see him pass, and by a flutter just the other side the bit of hyacinth that decorated my corsage, I became aware even thus early in my tour of investigation that I had a heart. The smitten man looked so big and so helpless lying there. His strength seemed already miles behind him, as one drops a garment overboard in a rushing sea, while the ship goes flying on. His eyes were like the eyes of an animal at bay, and the big muscles of his breast heaved under his quick gasps, with what was either pain or impotent appeal against destiny.

Passing up the inner stairway under convoy of a courteous official, I looked into the inquest room for a moment, but like Fatima, took one peep into the chamber of horrors and fled. Next we sniffed the fragrance of the drug room and mused over the wonders of the laboratory. We passed through the elegant suite of reception rooms, richly decorated, and lofty as palace walls, and finally left the splendor all behind us, as one leaves prairie lands on an overland journey to enter the region of sage brush and desolation. Not but what everything within the hospital wards was beautifully clean, and presided over by bright-faced nurses in pretty uniforms, but for all that it was a region dedicated to human suffering, sorrow, and death. Convalescents, both children and adults, were sitting all about in easy chairs, or rolling slowly through the corridors on wheels. At the door of the fever ward we tarried briefly. On snowy cots, some idly watching the blank walls, some idly picking at their bed-clothing, some regarding us with patient, unheeding eyes, lay the fever-stricken ones. None looked to be desperately sick, but all looked hopeless and shorn of ambition.

The quiet of the place, the pure air, the tender ministrations must have made it like heaven itself to those whose home-life had been cast amid sordid and noisome surroundings. And yet as I watched I thought again of Betty Higdon, and knew within my heart that I would choose to die as she did, in some free nook under the autumn skies, with plumes of golden-rod to canopy my fainting head, and starry asters to drift their purple petals all about me, than lie here on a charity bed in a county hospital with no one to heed the passing of my soul more than a little child heeds the flight of a shadow across a hill. Give me either love service or utter solitude when I lie, if you please.

Next we halted at the door of the woman's ward. The same blank faces; now and then a wasted arm flung upward in sudden impatience, soon forgotten; or the kindling of an eye that flickered quickly back to nothingness, like a flame blown out by the wind. From the woman's ward we turned to the airy quarters where the little children are cared for. Such tiny mites of sufferers, so silent and subdued. The small faces were clean and often sweet, but they lacked happiness, as empty vases lack flowers. The ward is very cheerful. Gaily colored hammocks hung from every convenient support. Bright pictures were on the walls, but it was the saddest place in the great building to me. One little baby not more than a year old sat tied within a willow rocker, and feebly sought to gain possession of a bright tinted ball that swung by an elastic cord within reach of two little hands hardly bigger than cowslip leaves. Another little child sat up in bed and feebly tried to knit, while yet another crooned a drowsy song to a battered doll. Somehow I left that ward with rebellion in my heart. Why shouldn't feeble, innocent children be counted out of the cruel law of mortal pain. Can a good God justify the torture of the helpless and the misery of the irresponsible? Before bidding my agreeable escort good-bye I said to him, "I am not sure but what I pity you almost as much as I do the poor fellows in the wards; I shouldn't like to live here myself."

"Nor do I," said he with feeling, "but I have been obliged to live in this place for seven years."

Seven years in a hospital! that is something like lodging in an undertaker's shop, and taking your meals in the entrance lodge to a cemetery.

"Ah, well, my dear," said I to myself as I hailed the car and left the hospital and its vicinity, "while you have health and strength and retain the glorious privilege of being independent, count your lot a happy one, and thank God for a blessed heritage."

CONNECTICUT.

A SCHOOL OF METHODS.

The first school of methods of Fairfield county W. C. T. U. met with Buell union in the Park St. Congregational church, East Bridgeport, in May. The day, beginning with smiling skies, did not break the record of usual convention weather, but frowned and wept to greet the cold water army. The church was tastefully decorated with the national colors; across the large organ was suspended the World's motto, and over the platform hung the new banner which is to represent the Connecticut L. T. L. at the World's Fair.

At a quarter past nine a devotional meeting was conducted by Mrs. Bassett, of Stratford. At ten a. m. the convention was called to order. Thirteen unions were represented, sixty-nine delegates being present. An address of welcome was given by Mrs. Winans, of Bridgeport. In response the convention sang, "Blest be the tie that binds." An earnest address on juvenile work was given by Mrs. C. H. Fitz Gerald. She made a strong appeal for more workers in this department. Among other things she said that ninety-five per cent of the pledges signed in childhood are kept, while ninety-five per cent of the pledges of reformed men are broken. (Moral:—Let us not do less for the inebriate but more for the children.) An animated discussion followed the address and many items of interest were brought out.

A paper on "Temperance Literature" by Miss Sadie Ogden, of South Norwalk, was read by Mrs. Waters. At 11:15 our state president, Mrs. Forbes, gave a Bible reading, subject, "Working with the King." The noontide prayer was led by Mrs. Fitz Gerald. At 1 p. m. devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Comes, of Danbury. Mrs. Andrews, state secretary, conducted a parliamentary drill, a model in every respect.

Papers on Sabbath observance, evangelistic work, jail work and Sunday-school work were read by Mrs. Barnum, of Sherman, Mrs. Dimond and Mrs. Devereaux, of Bridgeport, and Grace Curtiss, of Stepney. An interesting debate followed several of the papers. Mrs. Palmer, of Stamford, was re-elected president; Miss Grace Curtiss, secretary, and Miss Emily Hawley, treasurer.

One of the honored guests of the convention was Rev. H. L. Hastings, of Boston, editor of The Christian. His strong and helpful words will long be remembered. Several of the local pastors were present during the day, and encouraged the workers by their presence and kindly words. In the bright, wide-awake children's meeting at 4:30 p. m. all phases of the drink question, social, financial, moral and economic, were discussed.

At the mass-meeting in the evening addressed by local pastors the topics of the day were ably considered from the standpoint of the clergy. Congregational heart singing added to the interest of the evening. Buell union was a royal hostess, providing most bountifully and giving careful thought to the comfort of her guests, and taken as a whole, the meeting was a success.

The Cornelia B. Forbes Y, of Portland, held its free-will offering meeting in Temple of Honor Hall, on June 2. The program for the evening's entertainment, which consisted of singing and reading, was furnished by home talent. The collection piece, rendered by Miss Rosa Bell Alby, one of our Loyal Legion members, was very pretty. Envelopes were then opened and texts read. The "offerings" amounted to $7. After this exercise, strawberries and ice cream were served.

New Haven W. C. T. U. No. 2, sends a cheering report. They hold two prayer-meetings a week with several reformed men as regular attendants who never lose an opportunity to testify to the saving power of Christ. As many as forty-five have been present at some of the meetings. On Sunday afternoon they hold gospel temperance meetings which are fully attended and are addressed by good speakers and the audiences seem greatly interested. The president, Mrs. H. H. Thompson, is untiring in her efforts for the good of the cause. The union numbers about sixty.

Middlesex county held its semi-annual convention in Deep River, May 26. The day commencing with clouds ended with sunshine. The entire program was very fully carried out. Reports from the unions were, on the whole, encouraging. Mrs. Marvin, the new president, filled her position with grace and dignity. The very pleasant surprise —the presence of our former president—was a feature of the convention. The meeting was similar to other gatherings of the same sort and needs little particular description. Miss Elizabeth Tobey made the evening address and also spoke at the children's meeting in the afternoon. The local union gave a most hearty welcome and cordially made all visitors at home. The meeting was one of the pleasantest ever held.

Mrs. Susan Tracy Abernethy, of Woodbury, entered into rest Palm Sunday, April 10, 1892, aged seventy years and seven months. Many of the W. C. T. U. speakers well remember her home as theirs while sojourning in her town A tireless worker with pen and hands until stricken with paralysis in 1881; recovering she renewed efforts in behalf of temperance and education of children through the Demorest medal contests, and was the inspirer of the L. T. L., and of the local union. Her bright face crowned with gray hair was often seen at state conventions. She was laid away with the white ribbon on her heart, the W. C. T. U. sisters laying white flowers around and the Loyal Legioners casting their sprigs of green into the grave. "She hath done what she could," and she gave all she had, "even all her living."

The Portland Y, now called the Cornelia B. Forbes Y, gave a Japanese tea in Temple of Honor hall, which was artistically decorated for the occasion. Tea was served from eight to ten p. m., and well-patronized tables testified to the good management of the young ladies in charge. A pleasing variety of fancy articles contributed by the members, found a ready sale, tableaux in which bright Japanese costumes and the brighter faces of their wearers predominated, formed a pleasing feature of the evening's entertainment. The total receipts for the evening amounted to forty dollars. This was their first attempt at a meeting of this kind, and they were much pleased that it had proved a success socially and financially.

M. Belle Smith,
State Reporter, Rockfall.

TEXAS.

CONVENTION NOTES.

The tenth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. met at Dallas, May 18, Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard, state president, in the chair. Mrs. Becca R. Calhoun, of Fort Worth, state corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Jennie Dixon, recording secretary, were present; the meetings were held in the First Baptist church, continuing four days. This is one of the finest finished and most artistic church edifices in the state, with four handsomely furnished rooms attached, which were used for committee purposes. The platform was exquisitely decorated with cut flowers in endless variety, Miss Willard's and Mrs. Stoddart's portraits and L. T. L. banners; all this was the work of the local superintendent of flower mission, Mrs. Wall. A trained choir furnished music at the evening sessions.

Every detail for the comfort of guests and to expedite business had been thoroughly canvassed and arrangements made in such a systematic manner by the local union, that not a moment was wasted. Luncheon was provided in a hall one block from the church, where every day after "noontide hour of prayer" delegates met with the Dallas sisters and discussed both lunch and convention, thereby becoming better acquainted than would have been possible in any other way. Homes were provided for delegates among the prominent and wealthy citizens; the whole city, irrespective of creed, assisting in making it possible for the convention to be the grand success it was. Carriages were in waiting at each depot to convey delegates to these homes.

The manager of the electric car system gave free transportation to delegates over all their roads, the W. C. T. U. badge being the "open sesame" wherever seen. They also sent an invitation to the convention to take a ride over the city, having as many cars in readiness as were necessary to convey the two hundred delegates and visitors. The Dallas News sent a reporter each day for report of proceedings, and all white-ribboners were well pleased with the faithful record of events.

Addresses of welcome were made Wednesday night by Rev. A. M. Simmons—pastor of the church where the meetings were held—on behalf of the city, he, at the last moment, taking the place of the mayor who was called out of the city; Rev. Mr. Bone, on behalf of the clergy; Dr. Cranfill, editor of a Prohibition paper, on behalf of the press, and by Mrs. Canfield, local president, on behalf of the Dallas union. A response to these addresses was made by Mrs. Rebecca Henry Hayes, of Galveston, who is state superintendent of World's Fair. This address has been published and has received most favorable mention in all the prominent papers of our state.

Mrs. S. J. Sweeney, Dallas, superintendent of evangelistic work, opened the convention with a Bible reading and prayer. Mrs. Woodward, of Nebraska, National associate superintendent of work among railroad employes, was with us during the entire session. Her thorough knowledge of parliamentary law, and of all W. C. T. U. methods, made her much sought after by the committees. She was, by vote of the convention, made a member, and rendered most valuable service.

Space will not permit a full report of the address of our gifted president. Every species of conveyance has been utilized in taking Mrs. Stoddard about from "tarrying places" to fill appointments, from leaky rowboats, carts, farm wagons, backs of horses, to palace cars and luxurious carriages. She has traveled 12,406 miles and given 186 addresses. The total amount of collections for the year $534. This does not include other work, such as letters written.

It should be credited to a fair young daughter of Texas that an expression of sentiment, national in its character, has emanated from our state. The warship "Texas," soon to be launched from the United States navy-yard at Annapolis, Md., is the first to receive Christian christening. Secretary Tracy, of the navy, desired a young lady of Texas to officiate at this ceremony, and Miss Madge Williams, of Independence, granddaughter of Gen. Sam Houston, was chosen by a majority of votes of the entire state. She was to pour out the wine in imitation of the pagan custom of propitiating Neptune, god of the sea. But with true instinct of W. C. T. U. womanhood she requested that she be permitted to use a bottle of water from the San Jacinto river, which runs through the battle ground of that name (where the final battle was fought for Texas independence by General Houston) as a more fitting libation. Secretary Tracy has cheerfully acquiesced, saying: "The ship is to be run by water, and it would be better for the success of her engagements, as well as for the individuals themselves, if the crew drank nothing stronger than water."

The executive committee held four sessions. The constitution and by-laws received special attention; all work accomplished will be found in the minutes of convention, now in the hands of the publisher. Our help and influence is—for the first time—pledged to the Prohibition party.

I mentioned the Prohibition convention held at Waco in my last report. There were ninety-five delegates in attendance from thirty different counties. Mrs. Stoddard was there and made an address which was well received. She has proved herself a capable leader to whom we all look with confidence. Resolutions were offered complimentary to the W. C. T. U., and indorsing the million voters' agreement plan. Judge D. M. Pendergast, of Mexia, one of our honorary members, was nominated for governor. His wife, a cultured southern woman, president of the Mexia local union, and superintendent of the L. T. L., was a delegate at the convention. A most effective object lesson was the welcome extended by the Dallas L. T. L. composed of three hundred children, who with flowers, and banners flying, marched through the streets to the church, where appropriate speeches were made and songs sung. The address of welcome was made by Randolph Dixon, son of the editor of the White Ribbon. Miss Hetherington's report of L. T. L. work for the year shows forty-one companies with a membership of 2,153, and a pledged membership of 1,475; sixty-two honorary members; twenty-one public meetings; $297.90 received; $244.26 expended; 288 copies of The Young Crusader taken.

ELIZABETH STRONG TRACY,
State Reporter, Houston.

INDIANA.

SUMMER HAPPENINGS.

June the 18th, Miss Alice R. Palmer sailed from New York in the good ship "Anchoria," for her mission work in South Africa. An informal reception was given in her honor by her own local union, June 9. The capacious, lovely home of Dr. Homer J. Hall and wife was placed at the disposal of the union for the occasion. A noonday lunch and evening tea were served for the refreshment of the guests from a distance. The trains brought in friends from the state at large, carriages, representatives from the county unions. All day long Miss Palmer and her sister, Miss Kittie Palmer, received and entertained the numerous guests. Home people and neighbors, as well as white ribbon comrades gathered there to speak words of cheer as well as farewell, and all day long expressions of loving regard and God-speed in all her undertakings were received. Letters and telegrams were sent by comrades who could not be present.

In the evening a meeting of the W. C. T. U. and visitors who remained over was held. Mrs. J. R. Nichols, our state president, conducted the devotional exercises. Mrs. Nichols then spoke of Miss Palmer's work as state organizer, showing how she had pioneered the work in Indiana for almost six years. She spoke of the hardships endured, and of the brave, cheerful spirit with which Miss Palmer has always worked. Her record of seventy-eight local unions organized last year, and the class of women brought into our work by her efforts is certainly evidence of her ability and faithfulness, and success is assured in her new field of labor. Your correspondent brought farewell greetings. Mrs. Alexander, president of Johnson county, spoke on behalf of Miss Palmer's home county; Mrs. Dungan, president, on behalf of the home union. Letters and telegrams of greeting were read. Miss Palmer responded in loving, cheerful words. We sang "God be with you till we meet again," as a parting hymn.

During the warm summer days vigorous work is being planned. Mrs. Balch begins a Demorest medal campaign July 6, at Terre Haute, and proposes to hold one each day until November. She will be accompanied by the Happy Four Quartette of Bloomingdale, and B. R. Rockwood, president of the Indiana Prohibition Home Guards, who will introduce the junior work and organize junior clubs. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged for the contests to defray the expenses of the enterprise.

Mrs. Hoffman will be in the state the first two weeks of July. Miss Kate E. Whistler writes of active work accomplished by the Evansville Y, especially, a successful entertainment given by them in Evan's Hall. The Lady Henry Y of Greencastle gave a social recently which was held in the beautiful home of Harry Langdon, one of their honoraries. It is needless to say that this social effort was a great success. The Bloomington Y has again resolved to take up active work. Success to them. Miss Bertha Anderson won the medal in a Demorest contest of the Greensboro union. The Greensboro union writes of work done. Several articles of bedclothing have been prepared for the Hadley Industrial Home. Mishawaka union tells of active missionary work. This union meets weekly and holds a gospel temperance meeting every two weeks. They have helped twenty poor families. Since last September they have given out 150 articles of clothing, 250 pounds of flour, 123 pounds of beef, 14 bushels of potatoes, 35 loaves of bread with cakes, pies, groceries, etc. They have made 500 visits to the sick and distributed 5,000 pages of literature. They have twenty-five mite boxes and propose to raise $100 for the Temperance Temple. They also expect to fit up one bed in our Industrial Home.

Greene county union held an interesting convention recently, and expect to hold an L. T. L. convention soon. Linton union in this county expect to have Mrs. Hoffman the 11th of July. Jay and Howard counties held interesting semi-annual conventions. Mrs. Thompson was present at this convention. Mrs. Cowan had a successful trip through Henry county. Miss Dickson and Miss Farley have been quite busy in the northern part of the state. New unions organized recently are as follows: Novelsville, Crawfordsville, Boswell, Hoovers, Colfax, Dillsboro, Huntington Y, Logansport Y, Crown Point Y, Wheatfield, Auburn Y, Algiers, Warsaw Y. Mrs. Haggart, our ex-state president, is lecturing in our state.

Elkhart county convention was very successful. Mrs. Straw, state superintendent, was present, and the program rendered was a remarkable one. Our state president, Mrs. J. R. Nichols, made a fruitful tour of the state in the schools of methods, and her women love her wherever they come in contact with her. Your correspondent moves that instead of grouping our counties next year that each county organized hold a school of methods and send for our state president, and by this means bring her before more of the "rank and file."

Henry, Wayne and Noble counties have held excellent semi-annual conventions this year. Mrs. Gougar gave several thousand copies of her leaflet, "A Funeral To-day" for the work of your correspondent. This work during the month has been in Riley, Vigo county and Linton, Green county, Dugger, in Green county, Sullivan, in Sullivan county, Vincennes, Edwardsport and Bicknell, in Knox county, and then on to Evansville. Mrs. Trish's tour through Vigo and Clay county mining towns closed at Fontanet July 4th.

The Marion county unions observed Flower Mission day, visiting the woman's reformatory, orphan homes for white and colored children, the county jail, home for the friendless, the county poor farm and the reform school at Plainfield.

At the Angola school of methods, the Island Park school of methods was organized. A constitution was adopted by which any woman may become a member by paying an annual membership fee of twenty-five cents; this fee to defray the expense of the school. Let every woman send her fee at once. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Ella McConnel; secretary, Mrs. Lizzie McNab; Mrs. Hubbard, treasurer.

Miss Farley reports an L. T. L. of thirty members at Hillsdale. Gessie is growing in membership. Harlan Y placed fifteen dollars and thirty cents in its treasury after its ice cream festival. Colfax union holds its meeting next door to a saloon and sends in the gospel temperance on the wings of song. Mrs. Nichols will speak for the Eaton union July 4. Battle Ground has a new W. C. T. U. Stewartsville had a successful strawberry festival recently.

The L. T. L.'s organized since September 15, 1891, are: Waterloo, Berne, Galveston, Bloomingdale, Hartford City, Millgrove, Bluffton, South East Indianapolis, Medaryville, Pleasant Lake, Crown Point, Madison, Logansport, Oxford, Union Mill, Roaun, Hillsdale and Linton. Deer Creek union reports active work. Porter and Vigo each held excellent semi-annual conventions.

Our promoted list since last writing is as follows: Mr. L. J. Cooney, honorary member of the Zionsville union, Mrs. Sarah Beal, of La Porte union, Mrs. Mina Kelley, of Brookston union, Mrs. Mary J. Chambers, of Edwardsport union, and Mrs. Nellie O'Kane Davis, of Azalia union.

"Servants of God, well done,
Your glorious warfare past,
The battle's fought, the race is run
And you are crowned at last."

SADIE B. WHISTLER,
State Reporter, Terre Haute.

NEW HAMPSHIRE NEWS.

The Merrimac county convention met this spring in Henniker. It was the first time this union had entertained the convention, and it must be said to their credit that they proved that, although few in numbers, they are earnest, hospitable women. Their president, Mrs. Peabody, made all very welcome, and added much to the pleasure of the day. The unions were well represented, and gave good reports of the work done.

Mrs. N. H. Knox lectured to a full house in the evening upon the Mercy Home. The writer, at the close of her report, extended an invitation to the convention to meet at Hopkinton, on September 7.

Mrs. Grimes, of Hillsboro Bridge, sent out an urgent appeal before Decoration day for every union to do some good work among the soldiers on that day. In many towns there were bouquets, with temperance texts attached, distributed among the Grand Army boys.

The union at Lakeport, although very small, with but a half dozen active members, are doing what they can by holding temperance meetings the last Sabbath evening in every month, which are well attended. More might be done in this way than is accomplished. There is scarcely a town where evening prayer meetings are not held. By a little active work of the members of the W. C. T. U., one meeting each month might be turned into a temperance concert, in which the young children could prove how far a child's voice and influence can reach. In very many towns and cities this is being done, but not as thoroughly as is desirable. There can be no safer place for the young men and maidens than in one of these meetings, even though they take no active part.

A friend writes me: "We have the coöperation of our clergy, but the apathy and indifference of our women is lamentable. We need the department work of Sabbath observance and social purity very much. If my health would permit, I would do even more active work, for my heart aches for the girls and women, not only those who are going to ruin, but the sufferers of broken vows. Not only is the drunkard's wife an object of pity, but there are many who carry a double cross, only the Father in heaven knows the unutterable anguish of the wife of a drunken and unfaithful husband." Surely there is a great work to be done in the social purity department, and especially among the young children; let every mother make it her holy duty to train and guard her child in pure thought, word and action, and the next generation will be a better one than this.

At the quarterly meeting of the trustees of the Mercy Home at Manchester, Dr. Florence Robinson's resignation as physician was accepted, with thanks for past services. Mrs. Hatch reported ten inmates during the past three months, and the receipts of the laundry as about three hundred dollars. Several offers of good homes for girls have been received, which places will soon be filled.

The legacy from the estate of Miss Chadwick, of Exeter, of twenty-five dollars, was appropriated to the land fund. There is great need of an assistant matron to relieve Mrs. Hatch, but the treasury is not able to bear the added expense at present. What a noble work it would be for some wealthy friend to pay the salary for 1893 of a competent woman to help save these homeless girls. The outgo would be so small compared to the good resulting. Many have sent books for the use of the inmates in their evening school, and for these and every gift the trustees are very thankful.

An invitation was also accepted to arrange for a Demorest medal contest at Epping during the C. L. S. C. meeting in August, the general committee and Miss Ella T. Pearson to arrange for same. Miss Wendall reported a successful trip by Mrs. E. B. Greene. I am almost ashamed to record the next vote of the committee, for it does seem as though the white ribbon women of the state ought to be able to support our state paper. It is to be regretted that "voted to pay the deficit on printing the Granite State Outlook" must go upon record.

The Concord union has had its second Demorest contest, which proved very successful and the local papers are loud in their praises of the manager, Mrs. Mary A. Pratt, the very efficient president of Merrimac county. In the May number of the Outlook, Altie W. Phillips, superintendent of evangelistic work, has a long and interesting communication. All those who have not seen it would do well to send to the publishers at Exeter for a number.

A new organization of the W. C. T. U. was effected at Wilton, when Mrs. Levi Putnam was chosen president, and Mrs. J. C. Mitchell, corresponding secretary. It started with twenty-two members and eight honorary members. Each state superintendent is requested to send circulars and instructions to them relating to their work.

Newport people enjoyed and were benefited by a lecture from Mrs. E. R. Jewett, in May, subject, "Narcotics"; it was instructive, practical and religious. Rockingham county held a convention in Greenland, at which good meeting the county was well represented. At Exeter's last Demorest contest the medal was awarded to Miss Abbie Jewell.

The Franklin union held a contest for a gold medal which was won by Miss Bertha Stevens. The proceeds were given to the Mercy Home land fund. South Newmarket W. C. T. U. has been called to mourn one of their most beloved members, Annie, wife of Mr. Geo. S. Littlefield, who died May 6. Not long since Mrs. Jewett, of Hollis, went to Peterboro to meet the ladies of the W. C. T. U., and to lecture in the Baptist church, where she was heartily received and her words appreciated.

The reading room opened by the Meredith union a year ago has thus far proved successful. The ladies furnished a lunch on election day from which they realized quite a sum to help pay the expenses of the room.

The Y. W. C. T. U. at Dover has sixty members and is doing a fine work. A religious service is held at their rooms every Sunday afternoon and they sustain an L. T. L. of one hundred members. A Y. W. C. T. U. was organized at Great Falls the last of March with twenty members, which promises well.

Each year since the passage of the scientific temperance school law, the great importance of earnest endeavors in this department has been urged upon the unions by the state superintendent, Miss Wendall. Many unions have done good work and advance has been steadily made in the enforcement of the law. At the last state convention, it was voted to make this a leading line of work this year, and therefore extra efforts have been made in this direction. At the Hillsboro county convention, a school of methods on scientific temperance instruction was held, of which Miss Wendall took charge and Mrs. Mary H. Hunt explained the subject in a very interesting and practical manner. In the evening Mrs. Hunt gave a fine address on this topic. This spring, Mrs. E. B. Greene, of Hyde Park, Mass., and Miss Wendall visited three county conventions and two other places in the interest of this work, holding a school of methods and having an evening address at each place.

A meeting was held in the M. E. Church, Sunapee, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. recently. The speaker was Mrs. Emily K. Jewett, of Hollis, associate state superintendent of the department of narcotics. The audience was not large, but appreciative. Mrs. Jewett is a fine speaker and held the close attention of the audience during the lecture. Her talk on the use and abuse of narcotics and tobacco was very interesting and instructive, particularly as her statements were comfirmed by authority. The Sunapee lodge of Good Templars and Loyal Temperance Legion attended in a body.

The president of Merrimac county W. C. T. U., Mrs. C W. Pratt, sails from Boston, in the steamship Catelonia, July 9, for Europe, to be gone until November. Her many friends wish her a happy and successful voyage.

At the executive committee meeting of the union the invitation to occupy Temperance day at The Weirs during the Baptist convention, was accepted. The following program has since been announced: Saturday, July 23, the meeting opens at 9:30, with devotional exercises at 10 o'clock; an address by Katherine Lente Stevenson, Boston, Mass., at 11; the W. C. T. U. Mercy Home, Mrs. Jennie K. Hatch, matron, Manchester, 11:30; devotional half hour, conducted by Mrs. A. W. Phillips, Gilford, superintendent evangelistic work. A Demorest contest will take place at 2:30, following ex-Gov. D. H. Goodell's address. Rev. M. V. B. Knox will award the prize. Mrs. N. H. Knox will preside over the meetings. This cannot fail to be a meeting of special interest, and it is hoped that all who can will attend.

The trip taken by Mrs. Greene and Miss Wendall was a very successful one. At each of the county conventions Miss Wendall urged upon the ladies the importance of the school suffrage to aid in putting right men on the school board, and at her suggestion the following resolution was passed by each:

Resolved, That this county W. C. T. U. wishes to put itself on record as in favor of women using the school suffrage, and that as individual members, we will use our voting power to influence others in this direction.

The union at Dover observed flower mission day by holding services at the county jail, several of the Y's assisting in the singing. Each of the twenty-one prisoners was presented with flowers and cards tied with white ribbon, and many of them expressed pleasure and appreciation.

The last quarterly convention of the Strafford county W. C. T. U. was held at Dunham, June 14, at which six of the nine unions of the county were represented, also the Y. W. C. T. U. of Dover. Non-alcoholics in medicine, Sabbath observance, the "Home," and the comparative responsibility of the mother and father in the rearing of children, were some of the subjects discussed. A unanimous disapproval of long dresses for street wear was expressed. The extreme heat prevented a large attendance, but all present felt that it was a profitable meeting.

Mrs. Frances Kelly has been chosen secretary of the Salem union in place of Mrs. Fred E. White, who has moved to Dexter, Me. Mrs. Emily R. Jewett, of Hollis, lectured in Sunapee last month on her favorite topic, "Narcotics." At the Belknap county convention held at Laconia Miss Wendall occupied a part of the morning session showing the breadth of the W. C. T. U. work. She also led the devotional exercises in the afternoon. Mrs. Brown, of Lakeport, read a paper, "A Plea for the Birds;" Mrs. Greene conducted a school of methods relating to scientific temperance instruction in schools. Miss Wendall urged the ladies to attend the school meetings that they might have a voice in selecting the school board. In the evening a fine program was presented by local talent, and Mrs. Greene spoke upon the subject, "A Vital Question Answered."

Mrs. Dunlap, of Manchester, has the sympathy of a large circle of friends, at the death of her husband.

The president of the Carroll county union is about to go with her husband to California. Mr. and Mrs. Grant will be absent a year or more, when Mr. Grant hopes to regain his health.

All the unions wishing the annual state report can procure them of Miss Clara E. Rowell, Franklin, at ten cents per copy, or twelve copies for one dollar. The June number of the Granite State Outlook contains an address given by Mrs. Geo. Bowers, president Nashua W. C. T. U., at the convention in Wilton, "The Antagonism of the Saloon to the Church and its Interests," a very able paper, and one of vital importance. It was published by vote of the convention.

MRS. F. H. BAILEY,
State Reporter, Hopkinton.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL.

You have been told about the "moving" and that the National Temperance Hospital is now occupying the commodious building, 1619 Diversey avenue. The location is very desirable, being within three blocks of Lincoln Park. It is quiet; no street cars within two blocks. It is homelike, having long, cool verandas on each story, with a large yard and beautiful trees. It is comfortable, with spacious, airy parlors and patients' rooms, all furnished with steam heat and good ventilation; just the place to hasten recovery in the sick, and bring cheer to their hearts in the ministrations of our Christian matron, doctors and nurses. It is what is needed wherein the advocates of temperance can demonstrate to the public mind that the liquor traffic may be overthrown without depriving the medical fraternity of any needed remedy.

The moving and occupying a larger building have incurred great expense, and it is necessary that the friends of the hospital should rally to its support, not only to help it through this emergency, but in sustaining and building it up till it become as noted a place of healing for the United States as the London Temperance Hospital is for England. Religious denominations have their hospitals distributed in all large cities, to which the membership contribute in large or small sums, and on which the wealthy bestow their benefactions in heavy endowments. These all have what are termed "pay patients" and "free patients," according to the number of endowed beds or the ability to entertain "free patients."

The National Temperance Hospital has no one denomination to call upon but asks all friends of temperance or philanthropy to help in its work of healing without the use of alcohol. It has welcomed to its free beds the sick poor of many nationalities and religious creeds, and all have gone thence without the alcohol thirst incurred by remedies administered while sick.

In every state of our nation there may be many persons who would be glad to be identified with this important and philanthropic institution. For these the National Temperance Hospital Association has an open door. Membership therein is obtained by the payment of five dollars and an annual payment thereafter of one dollar, with privilege of voting for directors at the annual meeting. Members are expected to be total abstainers.

From the large number of W. C. T. U. members and their friends, there should be frequent applications for membership in this association. Certificates will be furnished each member. Membership fees and annual dues swell the general fund for current expenses, and if a surplus occur, will be applied on building fund.

There is also an endowment fund. The annual endowment of a free bed is secured by the payment of $350 annually. This may be paid in quarterly installments in advance. A permanent endowment secures a free bed in perpetuity and is sustained by the income accruing from a $5,000 payment. It would be blessed for every state W. C. T. U. to be enrolled for at least an annual endowment. This would be a small tax on each local union. Illinois has carried such endowment ever since the hospital was instituted, by the payment of one dollar or more from each local union. Some unions, it is true, being apathetic, did not respond, but the deficit was met from the state treasury by vote of the state convention. We hope all unions in every state will become so enthusiastic that endowments will be pledged and fully paid in some form by every state W. C. T. U. Individuals have also paid annual endowments. At present Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, Illinois, endows a bed. Are there not more persons or organizations that can respond to this appeal? The poor need this help. Some of our W. C. T. U. workers need it as a haven of rest and recuperation.

We have also a building fund, which has a nucleus of several hundred dollars. Although the hospital is now desirably located, it does not own the property. It is important that it should purchase, in order that such improvements and additions may be made thereto as will facilitate the work of healing and demonstrate its principles. Are there not friends who will welcome this opportunity for building their monument during life and do good meanwhile? Are there not others who will be glad to make liberal bequests thereto in their "last will and testament"? We welcome all donations, large or small. They will be invested till enough is accumulated to encourage the purchase of property.

Connected with the hospital is the Clara Barton Training School for Nurses, and the charter also grants a medical college, in both of which shall be taught the principle of total abstinence from alcohol in food and medicine. Who that "loves his fellowmen" will be the first to say, 'I will"?

MRS. S. B. WILKINS.
Rockford, Ill.

TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL NOTES.

A reception will be held at the hospital July 11, at which time friends of the temperance cause will be welcomed by Miss Willard and others. In this way the pleasant location and increased facilities may become better known.

Mr. Geo. M. Cook of the South End Gospel Association has presented an organ to the hospital. This will be fully appreciated by those who are interested in the Sunday services.

Those friends at a distance that send their messages of encouragement in the form of flowers to the tired and suffering ones in the hospital should bear in mind to send only the freshest of these sweet-scented messengers. The wilted flower cannot carry its word of cheer. It were better to send the money and have them purchased here, than to have the scattered rose petals and the drooping pink tell the story of remembrance.

It may be of interest to the friends to know the number of articles needed in furnishing a room and the approximate cost. The following named articles are necessary for the furnishing of each room: Iron bedstead, mattress, two pair blankets, two bedspreads, two pillows (two and a half pounds each), a rug, a combination bureau and washstand, one straight-back chair, one rocking-chair and a chamber set. The larger rooms would contain more. The cost ranges from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars. There are still a number of rooms to be furnished and those desiring to aid the hospital in this way can do so by sending the money for the furniture, or can select the same if that is preferred.

In The Independent we read the following:

Dr. N. S. Davis, an ex-president of the International Medical Congress, and for forty years and still an active practitioner in Chicago, says:

"There is no greater or more destructive error existing in the public mind than the belief that the use of fermented and distilled drinks does no harm so long as they do not intoxicate. 'It is not the temperate use, but the abuse of alcoholic drinks that does harm,' is the oft-repeated popular phrase that embodies the error that helps to rob more than one hundred thousand persons of from five to twenty years of life in the United States, through the gradual development of chronic structural diseases induced by the daily use of beer, ale, wine or distilled spirits, in quantities so moderate as at no time to produce intoxication. No more true or important remark was made in the noted discussion in the London Pathological Society than the one by Dr. George Harley, that 'for every drunkard there were fifty others who suffered from the effects of alcohol in one form or other.'"

Donations:—Unknown, six glasses jelly, four cans fruit, one pair sheets. Unknown, two comforts, five cans fruit, one bushel dried fruit, old magazines and papers. Bunker Hill, Ill., W. C. T. U., seven cans of fruit, six glasses of jelly, two bottles catsup, one pair of sheets, one pair of towels, two pair cases old cotton, papers. St. Joseph, Mich., W. C. T. U., six cans fruit, six glasses jelly. Irving Park, Ill., W. C. T. U., nine cans fruit. Unknown, barrel of old books, papers and rags. Unknown, six cans fruit, old cotton and magazines. Mr. Pieser, Chicago, box cut flowers. Unknown, three glasses jelly, old books and papers, two comforts, old cotton and linen. Unknown, one can maple syrup and papers. A friend, two bottles grape juice.

ELLEN SNYDER, Sec.

Official Communications.

THE busts of Miss Willard and Mrs. Carse, intended for Willard Hall, are in the hands of the sculptors, and it is necessary that payments be made on them. Quite a number of the pledges made at Boston for these are as yet unredeemed. Will all who pledged, or who intend to assist in payment, please remit promptly to me?

The Temple, Chicago. ESTHER PUGH.

Our Library Table.

When one has laid aside the ponderous tomes and weighty magazines that belong to the libraries of the "grown-ups," and spent a half hour with WIDE AWAKE, that most charming of children's journals, it is to be refreshed as one who emerges from the smoky city into the fields and woods. Men and women are but children of a larger growth, and have, for all their learning, the child-touch that recognizes the beauty and worth of the best child-lore. WIDE AWAKE is one of the magazines that furnishes just this. In the July issue is a delightfully varied bill of fare. Patriotic boys and girls will find themselves thrilled through and through, when they read Charlotte M. Vaile's Fourth of July story, "Benny and the Major." Sea-loving lads and lassies will revel over "In the Changing Monsoons," by Lieut. Col. Thorndike. Mystery loving readers will experience a real, ghostly shiver over "Betty Martin's Ghostly Grandfather." Everybody will be charmed by the exquisite illustrations that are so thickly bestrewn from cover to cover, and even the grandfathers and grandmothers may be coaxed into a laugh at the unexceptionally funny "Odd Business" page.

D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Mass. $2.40 per year.

The July CHAUTAUQUAN greets its readers by a fine frontispiece of Jesse L. Hurlbut, D. D., principal of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. Among other good things this magazine-friend gives a delightful article on "Historic Quebec," by Edith Sessions Tupper, with illustrations of the rock-guarded city. Athletes and ball-players will be interested in "The National Game," by John H. Mandigo. "The Great Exposition at Chicago," by Noble Canby, is a paper of universal interest. Emily Huntington Miller contributes "Before the Dawn," an exquisite pen picture in verse of the beauty of the world between the hours of midnight and daybreak.

Dr. T. L. Flood, editor, Meadville, Pa. Yearly subscription, $2.

The magazine hitherto known as GOOD FORM is now to be introduced to its many friends under the unique title of GOODFORM. The July number which announces this change brings to the notice of the public a change in management. The firm of Walter L. Gallup & Co., the former publishers, has been merged into The Goodform Company. Mr. Gallup will have charge of the advertising department, and Mr. Mather D. Kimball will fill the editor's sanctum. The number which heralds the new administration is brimful of good things—fresh, instructive and interesting, and the readers of GOODFORM cannot help prophesying a bright future for this enterprising journal.

The Goodform Company, Chicago. Twenty cents a copy, $2 a year.

OUR DAY for July is a particularly rich number, each one of its articles enlarging upon a topic of not only universal but vital interest. Special attention may be called to "New Aspects of the Negro Question," by Samuel M. Davis, and a closely allied paper on "Race Legislation for Railways" by Prof. W. S. Scarborough. The editorial notes for the month are fully up to their usual high standard, with the following themes for comment: "The Pope's Toleration of Bishop Ireland's Plan for Faribault Schools, Rev. Mr. Rainsford's Pulpit Apologies for Prostitution and Open Saloons, President Harrison on Crimes against Citizenship, Boston Protests against Unjust Anti-Chinese Legislation," etc.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, The Temple, Chicago. Yearly subscription, $2.50.

An attractive feature of THE STRAND MAGAZINE for July is a beautifully illustrated article on "How a Sculptor Works," by Alfred T. Story. "There is perhaps no art that is less understood by the general public," writes Mr. Story, "than that of the sculptor. The prevailing idea is that he takes a piece of stone or marble and goes to work with hammer and chisel till his bust, statue, group, or whatever it may be, is produced." The author takes his readers by careful and clear descriptions through the various processes, which are a delightful revealment to one not formerly posted. THE STRAND MAGAZINE has in each issue two departments a little out of the common run, that add a great deal to the pleasing table of contents it monthly presents to its subscribers. One of these is "Illustrated Interviews," the subject of the interview this month being Madame Adelina Patti. The other one of these departments is "Portraits of Celebrities at Different Times of Their Lives," giving interesting studies of development in mind and body from childhood and youth up to maturity. "The Queer Side of Things" presents the laughable portion of the contributions, adding the last bit of needed spice to a very savory and satisfying bill of fare.

George Newnes, Ltd., Southampton and Exeter Street Strand, London, England. $2.25 per year.

The ATLANTIC MONTHLY for July abates none of the strength and interest of preceding numbers. "In a Japanese Garden" is the title of a paper by Lafcadio Hearn. He gives a curious account of the methods of the Japanese landscape gardener of the old régime. The first paper in the magazine, by Eben Greenough Scott, is devoted to General McClellan, being an impartial account of the part which he played during the war. Mr. Edward G. Mason, who is to write the history of Illinois in the American Commonwealth series, contributes a very interesting paper on Chicago, giving reasons for the push and energy which is associated with that city. A paper which is of particular value on account of the writer's intimate knowledge of his subject is Theodore Roosevelt's "Political Assessments in the Coming Campaign." Thomas Bailey Aldrich's poem, "Unguarded Gates," is an eloquent warning against the opening of our land to the "wild motley throng" of men alien to the spirit of our institutions.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

"That's business" is one of those phrases with a good, original meaning, but put to a later, unworthy use. It is "business" to be prompt, accurate, methodical, and the habit that secures dispatch and skill in action calls forth involuntarily, albeit slangily, the terse commendation, "that's business!" A. E. Rice is the author of SMALL TALK ABOUT BUSINESS, A BANKER'S BUSINESS HINTS FOR MEN AND WOMEN. The "hints" are along the most practical lines, just where un-business like people fail of securing their own best interests and those of their associates. The book is readable by any and every one who is conscious of any lack of knowledge in the ways of the great work-a-day world of trade and finance.

Fremont Pub. Co., Fremont, O.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

South Waukegan Items.

Our lots are now worth $162,500 more than they cost us, and on account of the location of the great Nichols Chemical Co. in the midst of our lots, and other developments. It has been decided to advance prices August 1st. This advance will add $75,000 more to the price of our lots; one-half of this sum, less expenses, and one-half of all profits in the future, will be divided among all purchasers of our bonds.

Our lots are all within ten minutes' walk of all the factories, so that just as soon as the works open up, our property will be in great demand, and the increase in value, which means profit for our bondholders, will be rapid and great.

An invitation.—Every member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is invited to South Waukegan, Saturday, July 16, at three o'clock P. M., to witness the reception and dedication of lots donated for the uses of the local union. These lots will be transferred to a board of trustees, composed of prominent temperance workers, to be in turn deeded by them to the South Waukegan Union, when organized. On the occasion addresses will be made, songs sung, etc.

TEMPLE ENTERPRISE.

SOUTH WAUKEGAN TO HAVE A MONUMENT AND A HOME.

The enterprising firm of Morris, Ganse & Co., 1320 Chamber of Commerce Building, Chicago, have donated two lots at South Waukegan to the local W. C. T. U., and the money to put up the structure has been offered by Mr. C. E. Sayler at a low rate of interest. A board of trustees of prominent temperance workers will receive the property and manage it until the local organization is perfected. A free excursion for W. C. T. U. women will be made to South Waukegan from Chicago on Saturday, the 16th inst., on the occasion of the dedication of the proposed site for W. C. T. U. purposes. Tickets can be procured of Mrs. R. A. Emmons, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

The bonds of the Woman's Land Syndicate are going so rapidly that the entire amount will probably be closed out by August 1st. Application should be made at once to Mrs. R. A. Emmons, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

The popularity of the bonds issued by the Woman's Land Syndicate, Mrs. R. A. Emmons, of 161 La Salle Street, Manager, arises from the fact that they are based upon good security, with no possibility of loss. Again, the bondholders derive all the benefit of the appreciation of the property, which so far has exceeded $5 per share. Bonds are $10 each.

The July number of the World's Columbian Exposition contains a full exposition of South Waukegan and its interests.

The artesian water at South Waukegan gushes from the surface under a pressure of between twenty five and thirty pounds to the square inch.

The highest land upon the west shore of Lake Michigan, between Chicago and Milwaukee, is the town site of South Waukegan.

There is much excitement in real estate circles over the location of the Nichols Chemical Works at South Waukegan. The Economist says the company will spend there this season about $400,000, to be followed by further heavy investments. About ten acres will be put under roof this year.

The Starch Works at South Waukegan are consuming about 14,000 bushels of grain each working day.

The United States Sugar Refinery at South Waukegan has the most attractive group of factory buildings of any of the manufactories hereabouts.

The presence of the terminus of the Belt line, at South Waukegan, is largely responsible for the advantages which are so attractive to factory men.

The whistle of the Washburn & Moen Wire Works at South Waukegan can be heard nearly across the lake, and its black flag of smoke can be seen nearly as far.

Lanyon's Oxide of Zinc Works are progressing rapidly at South Waukegan. The new buildings are hives of industry.

Morrow Bros. harness factory at South Waukegan will employ a large proportion of women.

The new depot on the Northwestern Railway at South Waukegan will be a model of neatness and convenience.

The new hotel at South Waukegan is being pushed rapidly. It is much needed.

They have a fine article of brick and pottery clay at South Waukegan.

Publisher's Notes.

SEASONABLE.

The Woman's Temperance Publishing Association has been fortunate enough to secure the right to an edition of

Fruits and How to Use Them

By Hester M. Poole.

A book of 242 pages of exceedingly valuable suggestions and recipes for the use and care of fruits, showing the best results to be obtained from the use of the same. The opening chapter is on Fruit as Food, followed by one on the Hygienic Value of Fruit, on the Increase of the Use of Fruit, and on the Relation of Fruit and Temperance. One dollar could not be invested to better advantage, especially at this season of the year. It should be in every home in the country. From the preface we quote:

"It is frequently the case that the housekeeper who is blessed with a superabundance of apples, peaches, pears or dates finds her household cloying upon two or three modes in which they are usually served. Recipes for a dozen new dishes to be made out of the same fruit are then an acquisition, the value of which only a housekeeper can justly estimate."

The object of the compilation is to supply recipes for "a greater variety of dishes in which fruit enters as an ingredient, that are at once easily made, appetizing and wholesome."

As before stated it contains 242 pages and is bound in cloth. Price, $1. ecure a copy at once. Send to

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
The Temple,
Chicago, Ill.

Testimonies continue to reach this office to the effect that indifference and opposition are overcome when The Union Signal is read for a few months. Instead of arguing with your opponent, or mourning over opposition, send The Union Signal, and conversion will be sure.

Send for campaign package, containing 20 Timely Talks, 7 Song Leaflets, 2 Voters' Leaflets, and 13 Signal Lights, all of which will be sent for only 10 cents. Scattered broadcast, many votes could be turned against the saloon and for the protection of the home.

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
The Temple,
Chicago, Ill.

Now is the time to educate. See that our papers and leaflets are put into the hands of voters.

IT CANNOT BE QUESTIONED

that The Union Signal does more to create a right sentiment on the temperance question, and in the direction of prohibition, than all other influences combined. The evidence to prove this is constantly accumulating.

Moral.—Do not be content to read The Union Signal, but see that it is sent where sentiment needs to be created. It should be in the hands of Every minister,

Every teacher,
Every legislator,
Every politician,
Every voter,
Every mother.

You cannot do better educational work than to aid in securing this general circulation of your official paper for

It commands respect.
It disarms opposition.
It wins adherents.

Send it for a short time and it will become indispensable.

Price per year, $1.
" six months, 50c.
" three months, 25c.
" one month, 10c.

Address

Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
The Temple,
Chicago, Ill.

SEPT. 22.—WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DAY.

The special number of The Union Signal now being prepared for this memorial day, will excel all previous "special numbers."

Order early!

Order it to show outsiders what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is doing in all nations!

Order it because strength at home will be increased by the knowledge of respect and admiration abroad!

WOMAN'S COLUMBIAN LAUNDRY CO.

Incorporated under the Laws of the State of Illinois. Capital, $300,000.

A GREAT INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISE.

A WOMAN'S COMPANY, OWNED, OPERATED AND MANAGED BY WOMEN.

SHARES ARE TEN ($10.00) DOLLARS EACH, AND ARE SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

We propose to enlarge our business, and give women of large or small means an opportunity to become identified in an industrial and exceedingly profitable business enterprise, and to establish 100 or more Branch Laundries; for that purpose we have decided to offer 10,000 Shares of our Capital Stock to be Sold Only to Women. Present price, $10 per share, par value, payable, if desired, in monthly installments of $2.50 per share. Price of stock will be advanced to $12 50 per share as soon as the 10,000 shares now offered are sold.

A SAFE AND PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

With the complete operation of our laundries we will have a capacity of turning out 100,000 laundried shirts per week, and as the population of Chicago requires many times this number of shirts a week, and as the profit on each shirt is 5 cents, you can readily see that running our full capacity we would be able to make a profit of $5,000 a week, $20,000 a month, or $240,000 a year on shirts alone, to say nothing about revenues to be derived from our other work and departments, which will be large Taking this, then, as a basis, and that money is worth 8 per cent, we would be enabled to pay a dividend of 8% on every share of stock. We do not believe it will be less, and it may be more.

AN IMPORTANT FEATURE!—Our improved method of doing laundry work gives better satisfaction than any other process, as no chemicals are used, therefore the fibre of the linen is not worn or eaten away. Our business has been established four years; the Company owns it absolutely; it is in daily operation, and, better still, is paying over fifty per cent on the amount invested.

HOW MANY SHARES DO YOU WISH?

SEND FOR YOURS BEFORE YOU LAY DOWN THIS PAPER.

They are only $10 each. Better secure as many as you can now, as we have only 10,000 shares to offer at this price, and they will be taken very fast. Orders for stock will be filed as received, and all subscriptions received in excess of above amount will be returned to subscribers.

No better investment can be found than our capital stock. Invest now, while the Company is new, and reap the benefits paid in dividends, perhaps for the balance of your life.

Write to-day and send a small deposit to show us you are in earnest, state how many shares you wish, and we will reserve them for you any reasonable length of time. Full information sent free on application.

The Interior, one of the leading religious papers of Chicago, says: "The energy displayed by the officers of the Woman's Columbian Laundry Co. in pushing their undertaking to success, and broadening the foundations of their business, is truly remarkable. They have just closed a number of large contracts for Hotel, Apartment Building and Railroad Laundry work, that will be exceedingly profitable to the fortunate stockholders."

"The work of the Woman's Columbian Laundry Co. is important, and should receive the support of every housewife in the country."—Marion Harland.

OFFICERS AND BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS:

Mrs. Laura A. Chamberlain, President and Treasurer, Recording Secretary Illinois Woman's Press Association.
Mrs. Mary French Swarthout, Vice-President, Author of School Text Books on Mathematics.
Mrs. Addie R. Schuyler, 2d Vice-President, Preceptress Central State Normal School of Pennsylvania.
Miss I. F. Parsons, Secretary, Manager the Parsons Stenographic Bureau.
Mrs. Sarah Wilder Pratt, Member of the Woman's Club of Chicago.
Mrs. Sallie M. Moses, Member of the Papyrus Club of Chicago.
Mrs. Marion Harland, Author of "Common Sense in the Household," the "Dinner Year Book," etc.

Address Correspondence and make Drafts, Checks and Money Orders payable to

WOMAN'S COLUMBIAN LAUNDRY CO.,
134-142 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

$4,000,000.00

is invested in the manufactories at Harvey. SOUTH HARVEY is only one mile South, and will be a splendid residence suburb.

These lots are 27 ft. front, which makes it possible to build a much more convenient house than can be built on a 25 ft. lot. Buy now before the prices rise, and the best locations are gone.

You can have one or more of these choice lots for $250 each, corner lots for $300 each, and on payments of

ONLY $10 PER MONTH!

Send $10 at once, and the best unsold lot will be marked down to you, and a plat sent, showing location. If you are not suited, you can change it.

Title perfect. Abstract and Guarantee Certificate of Title with every Deed. Address

CHARLES G. FRENCH,
185 Dearborn St., Chicago, - or Harvey, Ill.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

18 KARAT
GOLD PLATED
ONE YEAR TRIAL FREE.

A watch that can not stand the test is dear at any price. We send with this watch a printed agreement giving you the privilege of returning the watch at any time within ONE YEAR if it does not give perfect satisfaction in every respect. We are the only firm in the world that sell goods on such liberal conditions and can show thousands upon thousands of testimonials from every state in the Union. The case is hunting style, double case and double plated, superbly engraved and decorated and fitted completely with our richly jeweled and celebrated movement, guaranteed a perfect time keeper.

$3.98

Cut this out, send it to us with your name and express office address, and we will send it there by express for your examination. If after examination you are convinced that it is a bargain pay the agent $3.98 and express charges and it is yours; write to-day this will not appear again.

THE NATIONAL MFG. AND IMPORTING CO.
334 Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

PRETTY GIRLS

are getting plenty, and it is fashionable to be HEALTHY and STRONG, BE SURE TO BUY FERRIS'

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS.

THOUSANDS NOW IN USE.

Best for Health, Economy and Beauty.

BUTTONS at front instead of CLASPS.

Clamp Buckle at hip for Hose Supporters.

Tape-fastened Buttons—won't pull off.

Cord-Edge Button Holes—won't wear out.

FIT ALL AGES—Made in

FAST BLACK, drab and white.

Mailed FREE on receipt of price, by

FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers, 341 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

MARSHALL FIELD & CO., CHICAGO, Wholesale Western Agts. For Sale by ALL LEADING RETAILERS.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

FRANK MILLER'S

FOR HOME AND STABLE USE.

HARNESS DRESSING

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.

Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.

SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

Prejudice often acts as a bar to prevent a man from sampling a good thing. Prejudice has to-day caused many people in this country to drink an inferior table water, when the best on earth can be had for asking, viz.:

Manitou

One trial will convince you of the truth of this statement, and if you take it once you will take it always.

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use.

Packed in cases of

50	24	100	48
Quarts.	Quarts.	Pints.	Pints.

Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer. Address

Manitou Mineral Water Co., Manitou Springs, Colo.

Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

DON'T YOU THINK

Your baby would look pretty in a carriage like that?

We have prettier ones. Also cheaper ones.

All shown in our catalogue, which we will mail FREE if you write for it.

FREIGHT PAID BY

WALTER HILL CO., 218 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR

DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT

or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 61st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women, $200 a month. No Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

EYES tested free by mail. New method. Send stamp for test card. KEENE OPT. CO., 1301 Washington-st. Boston, Mass

Publisher's Dep't.

CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

Stirring,
Entertaining,
Convincing.

See

TIMELY TALKS:

1. Shall We License the Dram Shops? Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
2. How the Dram Shops Pay the Taxes. Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
3. How the Dram Shop Helps Business, Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
4. The Delusions of High License. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
5. License, High or Low, Wrong in Principle. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
7. Our Drink Bill and the People Who Pay It. Rev. J. C. Fernald.
8. The High License Craze. Rev. H. H. French.
12. Fallacies of High License. Frances E. Willard.
13. High License a Backward Step. Pres. John Bascom.
14. Symposium on High License. Mary Allen West.
17. On Which Side Are You? Frances E. Willard and Mary T. Lathrap.
24. Prohibition not an Invasion of Personal Liberty. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
29. High License—Is it a Step Toward Prohibition? Clara Hoffman.
30. Restriction or Prohibition? Neal Dow.
32. Why William Dustin Became a Prohibitionist. Mrs. A. E. Sigsbee.
33. The Greatest Party. Frances E. Willard.
36. Down with the Traffic. John P. St. John.
37. Echoes from History. Charles Sumner on the Third Party.
41, 42. License vs. Moral Law. Rev. F. L. Goodspeed.

SONG LEAFLETS.

1. Saloons Must Go;
2. Samantha and Josiah, and The Battle Cry.
3. Clear the Way and The Cause.
4. Rallying, and "Keep Pegging Away."
5. Prohibition is the Watchword and The Crank.
6. Home Protection Song.
7. Down with Rum.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

1. Thy Battle. John G. Woolley.
2. Christian Patriotism. John G. Woolley.

SIGNAL LIGHTS.

1. Individuality of Conscience in the Voter. Frances E. Willard.
3. Why the Old Parties Have not Met the Saloon Issue. Prof. W. G. Frost.
5. The Crime of Nations—What Can We Do? Geo. C. Hall.
8—13. Words for Wage Workers. Augusta C. Bristol.
18. Temperance and the Labor Question. Frances E. Willard.
21. Declaration of Independence (new version.) Rev. F. O. Blair.
27. Facts for Organized Labor. Augusta C. Bristol.
28. Needed—Only Pieces of Paper. Geo. C. Hall.

Price: Timely Talks, 30 cts. per 100. Song Leaflets, 50 cts. per 100; Voters' Leaflets, 90 cts. per 100; Signal Lights, 15 cts. per 100.

We will send this sample package to any address on receipt of 10c.

For these supplies send to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

A new Series!

V-aluable,
O-pportune,
T-elling,
E-arnest,
R-inging,
S-ound.

Two Numbers Now Ready.

1. THY BATTLE. By John G. Woolley. An appeal to Christian voters to consult conscience before party.

2. CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM. By John G. The full text of the address of Mr. Woolley at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, July 4, 1892. Printed from advance sheets revised by the author.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

There is NO SURE CURE FOR EVERY CASE OF ASTHMA or EVERY CASE OF HAY FEVER, but the worst cases, if uncomplicated by organic disease, can be CURED TO STAY CURED by constitutional treatment, and this at the patient's home.

ASTHMA AND HAY-FEVER

We treat no one without a thorough knowledge of the case.

Incurable Cases Declined.

Examination free by mail.

We want name and address of every sufferer from Asthma or Hay Fever.

P. HAROLD HAYES, M. D., BUFFALO, N. Y.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR — COLD BLAST — NO DUST — CHICAGO

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.

MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE

Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents, F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co. 134 Van Buren St. Chicago, Ill.

'DELSARTE'

Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.

Agents Wanted. Also — DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York. 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

RAMBLER BICYCLES

PNEUMATIC or CUSHION TIRES

A LADY'S WHEEL SHOULD HAVE a SPRING FRAME

One of the "Signal's" Editors Rides a Rambler.

Catalogue "F" free.

GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO.

85 Madison St., Chicago.

174 Columbus Av. BOSTON. 1325 14th-st., N.W. WASHINGTON. Broadway & 57th. NEW YORK.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

A SAMPLE BOX of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S Tissue Builder for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romant was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N.J.

How TO MAKE A Fortune

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser; patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen to whom we give EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new, will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO., 184 Hermon Street, Worcester, Mass.

Wherever the Rocker Washer is used the washboard becomes a relic of barbarism. It is warranted to do an ordinary family washing of 100 pieces in an hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for description and price. Rocker Washer Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind. Agts. wanted

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order. American Desk & Seating Co. 270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them. YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

BAKER'S COCOA.

ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS

EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

Ladies and Children's dress-cutting learned at home by most perfect TAILOR SYSTEM. Big money to live agts Circulars free. Miss ANNA GRAVES, Box 665, Chicago, Ill

GIRLS!

Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings? If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. I. M. Association, 269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE COBLENTZ CURE

Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR

Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one FREE sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish. St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold FREE by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists. McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

R YOU Looking for a ROME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill

We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Wall Paper Retailed. Good Paper 8c. Gold Paper 5c. Send 10c for postage on samples, and his guide "How to Paper" will be sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take Crochet work to do at home. Steady work. Write for particulars. L. WHITE & CO., 203 State St., Chicago, Ill.

ROASTER & BAKER HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES. Agents Wanted. Catalogue free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

TAKE NOTICE.

A recent number of the World's Fair News contained an attack upon woman's enterprises in general, and THE UNION SIGNAL in particular. The publisher's attention was called to the libelous character of the article, and protest was made by him that it had appeared in his columns without his knowledge or consent, and a correction of the same was printed in a later paper. It appears, however, that some unscrupulous person is circulating the page of the World's Fair News upon which the offensive article was printed through the mails as a circular. Should one of these fall into the hands of any reader of THE UNION SIGNAL it should be regarded as a malicious attack upon woman's enterprises in the hope of building personal fortunes on their ruins.

F. H. RASTALL, Manager.

Miss Adda Burch, of Greenville, Pa., will have charge of W. T. P. A. literature at Chautauqua, N. Y. All who visit that delightful place should not fail to call on her. She will be found at Room 13, Arcade Building.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

See Here.
JUST THE THING FOR YOUR PUBLIC MEETINGS
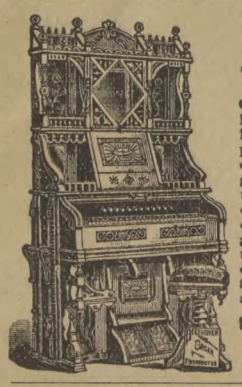
—IS—
WHITE RIBBON VIBRATIONS.
With its Stirring Music.
IT WILL HELP IMMENSELY.
Young People Like It.
The Children Enjoy It.
Old Folks are Interested.
Price, 35c. Per Copy.
Send for sample to
Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
THE TEMPLE,
(Rooms 1102-1110.) CHICAGO.



FREE.
Our large 24-page Catalogue, profusely illustrated, full of information on the proper construction of Pianos and Organs. We ship on test trial, ask no cash in advance, sell on instalments, give greater value for the money than any other manufacturer. Send for this book at once to BEETHOVEN ORGAN CO.,
WASHINGTON, N. J.
P. O. Box 701.

CHRISTIAN STATESMAN
Devoted to the whole circle of Christian Reforms. Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts & Rev. J. T. McCrary, Editors.
Half-Price to W. C. T. U. Women.
Only $1 for a year, 50 cts. 6 months, 25 cts. 3 months. STATESMAN 6 months and the new and enlarged edition of Crafts' "Sabbath for Man," 672 pp., both for price of latter, $1.50. Address REFORM BUREAU, 55 9th St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE.
(Formerly Morgan Park) removed to Auburn Park. 18th year begins September 14th. New building. All departments. Ornamental branches taught by artists. Send for catalogue to JULIA H. THAYER, Auburn Park, Chicago, or 247 State Street, Chicago.

MONTICELLO Opens September 24th. Full and superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address
MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal, Godfrey, Ill.

BEATTY Piano. Organ, $23 up. Want agents. Cat. free Dan'l F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N. J.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL.

Subscription Rates for 1892.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " not in advance	1.50
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15
Per 100 copies	1.00

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

MISS WILLARD'S OPINION.

A note from Miss Willard says:

"Will you publish a paragraph grouping Anna Gordon's 'Questions Answered,' Mrs. Barnes' beautiful book for the Y's (Y Manual), Mrs. Buell's 'Helping Hand,' for the older women, and Miss West's 'School of Methods,' for everybody? These should be in the hands of all who desire to be well equipped for their duties. Please say that if they have these four books they will have the tools that answer to a carpenter's outfit. They cannot expect to know how to build unless they have the plane, the saw, the hammer. These four books are our course of study boiled down. They do not cost much, and every worker ought to have them."

To all of which a hearty indorsement is added. Prices are as follows:

Questions Answered	$ 25
Helping Hand	10
Y Manual	25
School of Methods Manual	25

Send orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OUR DAY.

As announced last week, Our Day for July is an exceedingly valuable number, and thoughtful readers of THE UNION SIGNAL should each secure a copy. For instance, the article, "Is ours a Christian Nation?" gives a decision of the United States Supreme Court, defining the relation of Christianity to the state. It should be not only read, but studied. The one by Axel Gustafson on "The Perils of Moderate Drinking" is of great value. In the chapter on "Vital Points of Expert Opinion," Lady Henry Somerset's Views on the Temperance Reform in America, Wine on Fashionable Tables and the Result of Prohibition in Kansas are topics of especial interest to W. C. T. U. workers. It is impossible, however, to outline the many merits of this volume. Send for a copy and see for yourself. Price $2.50 per annum; 25 cts. per copy. THE UNION SIGNAL, price $1 per year, and Our Day will be sent to any address for $3 per year. Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

A CARPENTER

requires tools in order to do his work properly. So, to build the

House Wonderful

which we call the W. C. T. U., each worker must have her tools in good condition, and be familiar with their use. Our plane, saw, hammer, etc., are

Questions Answered,

All the possible questions concerning juvenile temperance work, 25 cents.

Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U.

Price, 25 cents.

The Helping Hand

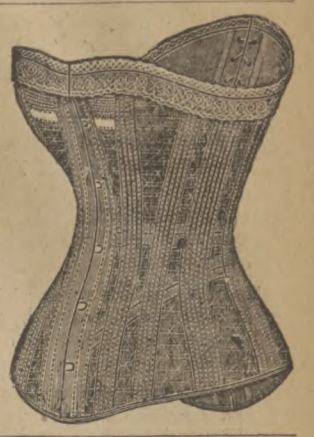
or the A. B. C. of W. C. T. U. work, 10 cents.

Manual of the School of Methods.

Price, 25 cents.

These four books are our course of study "boiled down." The National President says of them: "They do not cost much, and every worker ought to have them. Our women perish for lack of knowledge. They do not even know where to get the results from the expert workers who have put in nearly twenty years in learning them. The power of the mind to resist knowledge is illimitable, and the 'forgettery' of every woman, even though she be a white-ribboner, is as large as the Heidelberg tun."

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE
JACKSON CORSET CO.,
The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.
RETAIL PRICE $1.00.



The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.
Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.
Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.
The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.
Absolutely Safe, Thoroughly Established
OWNED AND MANAGED BY WOMEN.
IT HAS PAID ANNUAL DIVIDENDS SINCE 1885.
Capital Stock, $125,000.
Members of the W. C. T. U. who desire a safe investment do not need to try new things so long as a little of the capital stock of the
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
remains unsold. We are offering now about $20,000—all that is left. It is ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE.
PRICE, PER SHARE, $25.00.
For further particulars, address
Mrs. F. H. RASTALL, Mg'r.,
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
THE TEMPLE, - CHICAGO, ILL.

HEADQUARTERS for LOW PRICES

We save all our good cash customers from 25 to 75 per cent. on a large variety of useful articles besides 400 Kinds of SCALES which we manufacture. Send for Circulars and Prices. The following are among the Articles we sell: Bicycles, Watches, Organs, Pianos, Safes, Sewing Machines, Carriages, Wagons, Road Carts, Sleighs, Buggies, Harness, Portable Forges, Anvils, Vises, Feed Mills, Bone Mills, Cider Mills, Etc. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago.

STUDENTS IN JENNINGS SEMINARY
will have special privileges at the
WORLD'S FAIR.
For information address
REV. C. C. LOVEJOY, A. M., Pres., Aurora, Ill.

TODD SEMINARY, a delightful home school for boys. 44th year. Send for circular to NOBLE HILL, Woodstock, Ill.

DIAMOND DYES give the fastest, brightest handsomest colors, and make the old clothes look like new. They are the original and only reliable package dyes. Sample card free, WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

FARMINGTON COLLEGE, West Farmington, Ohio. 62 years. Both sexes Expenses very low. Four College Courses. Seven Departments. The Normal a specialty. Inducements to agents to secure students. Address REV. E B. WEBSTER, A. M., President.

ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE of Philadelphia offers to pay board, tuition, and all necessary expenses in above college one year to the Boy or Girl who secures the largest club this year. 1 year's tuition (not board) to any Boy or Girl sending 100 new subs'rs.

POINTS FOR WOMEN.

1st Point.—Concentration of thought evolves new ideas.

2d Point.—Concentration of ideas opens the door for a judicious example of energy.

3d Point.—Concentration of energy brings about opportunities.

4th Point.—The idea evolved suggested the establishment of a large number of laundries.

5th Point.—The energy applied put the business in actual operation, and secured a large amount of profitable contract work.

6th Point.—The opportunity now presented as the result is that WOMEN ONLY of all classes can invest large or small amounts, and reap the benefits accruing in dividends, which will be paid annually, or as often as practicable. The opportunity presented by the Woman's Columbian Laundry Co., 134 Washington St., Chicago, is excellent. Their shares are $10 each par value, non-assessable. The business owned by the Company has been in successful operation for the past four years, and is paying a handsome profit. The Company is enlarging and increasing its business, for which purpose a limited number of shares are for sale. The lady readers of THE UNION SIGNAL who desire shares should write to the Company at once.

IMPROVED HALL TYPEWRITER.
The best and most simple machine made. Interchangeable Type into all languages. Durable, easiest running, rapid as any. Endorsed by the Clergy and literary people. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Agents wanted. Address N. Typewriter Co., 611 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

Fat People You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials Free. F. B. Clarke, M. D. Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

Cuts a Circle. No Good Kitchen complete without a Chicago Rotary Biscuit and Cake Cutter, they sell at sight. AGENTS WANTED. Sample mailed for 15c. Columbia Specialty Mfg. Co., 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.

AGENT made $71 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

LADIES' BICYCLES
All makes, new or 2d hand at lowest prices; easy payments, no extra charge. Cata. Free. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St. Peoria, Ill.

Ask for Van Houten's Cocoa, take no other.

TWO HARVEST EXCURSIONS — HALF RATES TO THE WEST.

August 30th and September 27th.

On these dates the BURLINGTON ROUTE will sell tickets from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis to the farming districts of Nebraska, Colorado and Northern Kansas. Half rates will apply, and tickets will be good for twenty days. Nebraska in one year produced three hundred million bushels of corn, besides other grain, fruit and live stock. Write for free pamphlets, maps, etc., to P. S. Eustis, G. P. A., Burlington Route, Chicago, Ill.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad.

Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

Signal Notes.

SEVENTY thousand gallons of intoxicants to one missionary is the proportion in Liberia.

IT is stated that Prussia has a yearly loss of one thousand one hundred men from delirium tremens.

THE state police are to visit all tenements of Boston where work for clothing houses is being done, and license only those which are suitable.

TWO HUNDRED and twenty-seven Bombay opium drunkards have signed and sent a petition to England asking that the sale of opium be stopped.

A SHILLING a song and a pint of beer for the girls who entertain the habitues of an East End public house in London! So says a foreign exchange.

SOME one aptly says that the greatest enemy of woman suffrage is the man whose wife works to support the family while he loafs about the saloons.

IN France there are two hundred and fifty-two women students who are making education their chief business. The greatest number are interested in medicine.

CHILI, the brighest product of Spanish-American civilization, has only one child out of twenty-five in school. One person in seven can read, but only one in eight can write.

THE white men in South Africa talk unblushingly of the day when the natives will all be killed off by rum, and they can have the land. Men, women, children and babies can be seen lying along the roadsides drunk.

THE initial efforts for temperance reform in Germany seem inadequate and crude from the American standpoint, but they prove the fallacy of the argument that beer-drinking Germany is free from the evils of intemperance.

WHITELAW REID when asked for a list of best books on business said, "The best single treatise is the New Testament, next to this the book of Proverbs. The best business man I ever knew memorized the entire book of Proverbs at twenty two."

TO COUNTERACT the dangers of "cheap lodgings" for young people in Chicago, the M. E. Church, at Chicago Lawn, a prohibition suburb, has arranged to open Epworth Homes, where properly recommended persons will be received at reasonable rates.

FIVE thousand chattel mortgages on nine thousand saloons in New York City are held by twenty brewers, distillers and wholesale dealers, who thus control forty thousand votes. No other monopoly can compare with this twenty-men syndicate in respect to possibilities of evil.

IN London, it is no uncommon sight to see children four and five years old sent for intoxicating liquors. Many public houses have provided steps for them to climb up to the counters. A league has been formed for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors to children.

THE annual meeting in May of the National Temperance League was held at Exeter Hall, London. This is the leading society representing the moral suasion method. Much attention is devoted to the army and navy. The latest report from India gave a membership of 17,753 in the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association.

THE Burnham Farm Industrial School in New York state has seventy boys, with one hundred and fifty more hammering for admittance. The school was started by W. M. F. Round, a well known prison inspector, to rescue young criminals, or those in danger of becoming such, from their environments. It is an unqualified success. Among other agencies, a Y. M. C. A. is doing much to make the boys clean in thought and speech.

TORONTO is the queen city of the world in morals. On Sunday milk is sold, druggists can sell medicine only, and the central telephone office is open. One railroad train is allowed, and livery stables can let teams for church-goers and the sick. The schools are the finest in the land, and a truant school for wayward boys is a novel experiment. One effect of giving horse-car employés rest is the large number of strong churches scattered uniformly over the city. Mayor Flemming was elected as a reformer, in harmony with present laws. The W. C. T. U. and Y. M. C. A. are efficient, and the Methodists hold an immense temperance meeting every Sunday afternoon, even through the hot weather.

Sickness Among Children,

Especially infants, is prevalent at all times, but is largely avoided by giving proper nourishment and wholesome food. The most successful and reliable is the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk, Your grocer and druggist keep it.

CLEAN AND WHITE.

Not a bluish white; or a faded white; or a dirty white; but a rich, pure IVORY White. It's a pleasure to see such linen; it's a delight to wear it.

What produces this Ivory color? Can't you guess? Why, Ivory Soap, of course. Just try it once and your linen will be as white as snow.

COPYRIGHT 1890, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

TO EXCHANGE IN HARVEY

Central and well-improved lots, $450; new eight-roomed houses, $1,500; half in any good property, time on balance. An old-established mortgage banking house of Chicago will give apprisals of any property upon receipt of $3.00. Write us for plats and printed matter.

M. M. BROWN, Chamber of Commerce, Room 1111. - CHICAGO, ILL.

SYLPH CYCLES RUN EASY

Hollow Tires.

Perfection of cycle manufacture; no need now to ride springless cycles or depend on tires alone for comfort. SYLPH SPRING FRAME destroys vibrat'n. Light, simple, strong. Cata. free

Rouse-Duryea Cy. Co. 77 G St., Peoria, Ill. Agts. Wanted

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE CLAVERACK COLLEGE
And HUDSON RIVER INSTITUTE

For Boys and Girls, will open its 39th year September 19th. For catalogues, address REV. A. H. FLACK, A. M., Prest., Claverack, N. Y.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE,

Nyack, N. Y. Both sexes Thorough work; splendid results. An endowment takes Ladies at $200. Catalogues. W. H. BANNISTER, President.

AGENTS WANTED ON SALARY or COMMISSION, to handle the New Patent Chemical Ink Erasing Pencil. Agents making $50 per week. Monroe Eraser Mf'g Co. x 213 LaCrosse, Wis.

HOTEL FREDONIA WASHINGTON, D. C. H Street, between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET, HOMELIKE AND STRICTLY TEMPERANCE. G. H. LA FETRA, Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

AGENTS wanted throughout New Jersey for those wonderful Christy Knives (Bread, Cake and Paring), ready sellers; large commissions. For particulars write New Jersey Agency Christy Knife Co., Room 514, Prudential Building, Newark, N. J.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE

Purchased about 2,000 lots last April scattered all over SOUTH WAUKEGAN, for $500,000—$250 per lot.

Business lots in South Chicago in 1880 sold for $350. Same are now worth in some instances $20,000. Residence lots averaged about $200 per lot. Same are now worth on an average $1,500.

Business lots in Worcester, Mass., sold a few years ago at $350 per lot! Same are now worth in some instances $25,000. Residence lots sold at $150 per lot. Same are now worth on an average $1,500.

Business lots in Birmingham, Ala., sold a few years ago at $400 per lot. Same are now worth in some instances $15,000. Residence lots sold for $250, and are now worth on an average $1,250. Each of the above are manufacturing towns, and have a population of about $50,000.

When SOUTH WAUKEGAN has a population of 50,000, our lots will be worth (based on what the above-named cities have attained) $4,375,000.

50,000 POPULATION IS A CERTAINTY—WHY?

In manufacturing towns each factory employee represents a population of five persons on an average, that is, women and children, and those engaged in mercantile lines and professions.

The factories now located at South Waukegan are the Starch Works, Sugar Refinery, Washburn & Moen Co., Lanyon Zinc Oxide Co., Morrow Bros. Manufacturing Co., and the Nichols Chemical Co.

It is estimated that these factories alone will employ 10,000 people, and which alone means a population of 50,000.

Fully a dozen other large factories are trying to secure locations here, and it is stated, on good authority, that the Clinton Wire Cloth Co. and C. Sidney Shepard & Co. (both enormous concerns) have succeeded in arranging for their sites.

The following is what the public think about it:

Chicago Economist: "Persons familiar with the subject estimate that when the factories now located at South Waukegan are in operation, the total number of hands employed in the new mills will not be far from 10,000, which would mean a new population of pretty close to 50,000.

Inter-Ocean: "Considering the concerns to follow in the wake of the larger corporation as employing an equal number of hands, and the effect to concentrate 50,000 persons at the place selected. With this nucleus growth should be rapid."

Lake County Post: "It is now estimated, however, by those who know the most of the matter, that the increase of population for the next twelve months alone will be from 25,000 to 30,000."

Chicago Globe: "It is stated that when in full operation the Washburn-Moen Factory will carry with it a population of at least 15,000 people."

Chicago Tribune: "The establishment of the Washburn & Moen Works at South Waukegan means the employment of 3,000 men, and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Besides this, a number of kindred manufacturing interests will probably follow the barbed-wire works. The Clinton Wire Cloth Company is said to be considering the advisability of locating its plant south of Waukegan. The other important manufacturing interest to be located is the Nichols Chemical Company, of New York. This company has secured forty acres of land at South Waukegan, between the Outer Belt Line and the Northwestern Railroad, on the spur track which has been built between these roads by Morris & Ganse. The new company will at once begin work on the plant, representing an expenditure of $300,000. About ten acres of land will be placed under roof at once."

Inter Ocean: "South Waukegan has secured another great industry. The Nichols Chemical Company of New York on forty acres of ground acquired for the purpose, will erect a plant for the manufacture of chemicals, at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, this is to be increased by additional expenditures as occasion demands."

Chicago Herald: "There are those who steadfastly believe that the population of South Waukegan within ten years will be increased to 60,000.

Chicago Evening Post: "It is quite safe to say that in this new town, which lies south of and adjoins the city limits of the Wankegan of the past, there will be 50,000 people in the next five years. The Washburn-Moen Company begin operations this fall with 1,500 men; in a year 2,000 will be at work; in two years 3,000, and at the end of three years there will be 3,500 men engaged in making wire."

Chicago Graphic: "The Washburn & Moen Company are building immense works at South Waukegan, and the population, it is confidently predicted, will reach 50,000 in the near future.'

On these 2,000 lots we issue our Profit-Sharing Investment Bonds, which are now nearly all sold and as fast as the money is received for them it is applied toward paying for the lots. After the lots advance in value sufficiently we will begin selling them, and the Bonds will be redeemed, and also one-half of all profits will be paid over to the Bond owners.

BONDS ARE $10 EACH, and are SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

JAS. B. HOBBS, Pres. Commercial Loan and Trust Co., 117 La Salle St., Chicago, says:—"I am personally acquainted with Mrs. R. A. Emmons, Manager of the Woman's Land Syndicate. I also know of her general reputation, and believe she is an honorable woman, possessing many qualities which fit her for management of the business she has undertaken. The land is particularly well located, and is among the most desirable property around Chicago, and being located near the South Waukegan manufactories ought to make it sell well."

GEN. SINGLETON, President Total Abstinence Life Association, 902 Royal Insurance Building, Chicago, says. "I have investigated the Woman's Land Syndicate, and have advised my wife to invest in their bonds, believing it will be very profitable."

MORRIS, GANSE & Co., say: "We can see nothing in the management and methods of the Woman's Land Syndicate but what promises the greatest safety in the form of the investment, and a handsome profit to the bondholders."

JOHN E. RASTALL, Editor South Waukegan News, says: "Aside from every other consideration, Mrs. Emmons deserves to be ranked among the foremost women of her time. She has fearlessly carried the banner of womanhood into advanced territory, and shown that successful financial engineering is not peculiarly the province of men. The success of the Syndicate is assured. It only remains to determine the measure of its success."

Our Profit-Sharing Investment Bonds

Will be a source of great income. The investment is ABSOLUTELY SAFE, and there is no liability.

This advertisement appears this week in FIFTY-SEVEN LEADING PUBLICATIONS, and we think will sell the entire issue of Bonds. THEY ARE GOING FAST.

You can send a deposit, NO MATTER HOW SMALL, say how many you want, and we will consider it a sale. You may pay for them later. SEND FOR CIRCULAR; IT TELLS IT ALL.

MAKE CHECKS, DRAFTS AND MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE 161 La Salle Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, Manager.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH.'

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, July 21, 1892. Number 29.

Mrs. Ursula D. Hettick 2419 19th st

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The National Teachers' Association assembled in Saratoga last week.

John G. Woolley's temperance assembly began at Lake City, Minn., on Saturday.

The People's party of Minnesota has nominated Ignatius Donnelly for governor.

The Free-silver-coinage Bill was defeated in the House by a majority of twenty-eight.

Emperor William has ordered Chancellor von Caprivi to ignore the Bismarck controversy.

An Argentine vessel was lost off the coast of Uruguay, July 13; the crew of seventy are missing.

Cyrus W. Field, originator of the trans-Atlantic cable, died at his country home on the Hudson, July 12.

The sixtieth anniversary of Methodism in Chicago was joyfully celebrated in that city, Sunday, July 17.

The National Baptist Young People's Union closed its second annual session at Detroit, Mich., on Sunday.

The Democratic nominees for President and Vice-President received their formal notifications in Madison Square Garden, New York City, July 19.

The Methodists of Illinois are to have a model encampment at the World's Fair, furnishing tent capacity for two thousand five hundred people.

MISS ALICE PALMER writes cheerily from Edinburgh en route to South Africa. Dr. Bushnell and Mrs. Andrew are in Australia; Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt is lecturing in the west; Mrs. Frances J. Barnes is going to the Maritime Provinces.

LETTERS from the other side inform us that Lady Henry Somerset addressed thirty-five large meetings in fourteen days and evenings during the English elections; that her health bears the strain admirably and the work is moving in most hopeful fashion.

THE Senate has passed a bill requiring railroad companies to use automatic brakes upon all trains. This will save thousands of trainmen's lives per year. It is notable that reforms favorable to the toiling voter move with greatly increased facility in these campaign months. Alas! for poor, human nature, its motives will seldom bear minute analysis.

WE have been particularly pleased to notice the long, commendatory sketches of General Bidwell and General Weaver in the old party papers. The four American patriots who are now afield for votes, may congratulate themselves on the gentlemanly treatment that they have thus far received. May we all remain equally civilized to the end of the great race.

WE are more than sorry to learn that on the day after the adoption by the United States Senate of the motion of Senator Peffer, of Kansas, that the sale of intoxicating liquors in the World's Fair should be prohibited, the motion was reconsidered and lost by a majority of eight. Several senators who changed their votes say that they did so because they had learned that the directors of the Fair had already made rules that no bar-room privileges should be granted within the grounds, and had leased all the adjacent land so as to prevent saloons being opened near the Fair. The privilege for a number of cafés and restaurants with a right to serve liquor with meals as in hotels, had already been let, the contracts for these concessions involving penalties for non-compliance which amount in the aggregate to $600,000, for which the Fair corporation would be liable as damages in case liquors were not served in accordance with the contract as in hotels. This does not, of course, seem to us a satisfactory explanation, but we give it from the point of view of the senators who changed their votes. The vote by which the Senate decided for Sunday closing was forty-five to eleven. The phases of the great movement change daily. On the 19th the House votes, and there is reason to hope for favorable action, not only on the Sabbath question, but on that of no alcoholics on sale at the Fair.

THE People's party in Colorado struck a keynote which we wish might be universally followed, and we firmly believe if it were it would impart new vigor to every political movement between the oceans. They requested each county in the state to send to the state nominating convention to be held this summer, one delegate-at large, said delegate to be a woman.

DR. J. B. CRANFILL was one of the most notable men among the five thousand delegates, to the Baptist Young People's Union in Detroit last week. He presided over some of the sessions, spoke in his strong, racy way, and was made first vice-president for the coming year. Would that he might be vice-president in the larger "Union," and take his Baptist cold water habits with him to Washington!

THE Young Women's Christian Association secretaries of the nation have been holding a conference at Geneva Lake, Ill. This is well. Young women have now a wide field open to them in philanthropy, but they must be expert in methods or fail. We are glad of the multiplying schools under white-ribbon auspices—never so many as this year—and our advice to "sweet girl graduates" of thoughtful mind is to go to the nearest and "stay through."

THE office editors of THE UNION SIGNAL feel that it is but just to Miss Frances E. Willard that her friends should know the reason why she is not as active in platform work as she has been for the last twenty years. Some months ago her mother, known and revered by temperance people throughout the country for her remarkable character and talents (which have been delineated with so much affection by her daughter in all her books and speeches) began to fail in health. Madame Willard will be eighty-eight years old if she lives until next January. Her own premonitions are that her life will not be of much longer duration, and, while she suffers no pain, she is greatly prostrated and wholly without appetite or physical tone. In her growing weakness, she, who has always been so self-poised as to have won from white-ribboners the name of "Saint Courageous," clings to her only remaining child more strongly than ever, and feels that it is not safe for her to be absent from home long at a time, which Miss Willard has not been for some months, except in cases of what she deemed necessity.

MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE has "made his pile," as miners say, built his Opera House in New York City, bought his castle in Scotland, sent his cask of Scotch whisky and his telegram of congratulation to the President of the United States, and is traveling in his four-in-hand among the hills and heather. He is doubtless a man of many fine qualities, has given much money for libraries, and written a readable book on "Triumphant Democracy." We would not do him or any other capitalist an intentional injustice. It is the system that is wrong, rather than the men who have made fortunes out of it. We are at the parting of ways; a new order is surely coming in; organized labor is but beginning its mighty argument against organized capital; the subject is new, and the adjustments difficult, while powder and dynamite make the outlook lurid, unless there is enough non alcoholized brain-power and real Christian brotherhood in the nation to declare that not soldiers but sobriety shall be at the fore, and that arbitration shall settle the dispute instead of Pinkerton's men, Winchester rifles, and maddened mill hands. Alcohol is brain dynamite, and in all strikes and lockouts plays worse havoc than any other known combustible. We hope that martial law may be first of all declared at Homestead—alas for the awful mockery of that word!—against the drinks that make men devils.

LAKE BLUFF W. C. T. U. School of Methods began its convocation July 14, with Miss Esther Pugh, president, in charge. A children's meeting begins every day's work, and Y conferences enliven and adorn the heavy business. Many trained workers are in attendance, among them Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, National recording secretary, who gives the 10:30 a. m. sermon on the first Sunday; Mrs. A. S. Benjamin conducts a daily parliamentary drill; Dr. Alice B. Stockham lectures one evening on her wanderings round the world; Miss Frances E. Griffin is on the program for the evening of Saturday, July 23, and Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, the patron saint of the convocation, presents a paper July 22, on "Penal and Reformatory Institutions."

ONE of the most important results of the quarterly meeting of the board of directors on Wednesday last was the decision that THE UNION SIGNAL must hereafter be issued on Tuesday of each week, so that it can be mailed to our subscribers in time to reach them before Sunday. We recognize the fact that a large majority of our subscribers and readers are Christian people; they are also busy people, and if they receive their paper before the "day divine" they will be much more likely to give it attention than if it comes to them on Monday or Tuesday following. We shall be glad to hear from them as to their appreciation of this change, which is costing us no small effort, and for which we shall be chiefly dependent upon our very capable and gentlemanly superintendent of printing, Mr. D. H. Christophel. Arrangements are being perfected to make our issue for World's Crusade day, September 22d, the birthday of Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, one of remarkable significance and power. We urge our women everywhere to send out the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion to get ten cents apiece from as many good people as they can, that the local union may order a large addition, and mail or distribute copies to the homes of leading families that do not at present know our World's White Ribbon organ by sight, much less by head or heart. Happy the paper whose proprietors believe that "to know it is to love it, to name it is to praise."

THE Chicago managers of the World's Fair now virtually admit that the money aspect of the Sunday closing question is to their minds conclusive. They believe that the receipts would be larger if they could count in Sunday as a pay-day at the gates. To this complexion has it come at last. The facts are, that this country has struck hard-pan—it is "run" on a specie payment basis; money is its ultimate factor, and the golden calf its god. The same motive is openly declared to be final, so far as the sale of intoxicating liquors is concerned. "We must have the money" that comes from permits to sell and results from making the Fair acceptable to liquor-loving Europeans and Americans. All the arguments about "the poor working man" deprived of his Sunday show and his favorite tipple have simmered down at last, and are overtopped by this one: "Will it pay?" In presence of this supreme consideration, why did the United States Senate vote to close the Fair and to prohibit the sale of alcoholics for beverage purposes? Not because the men who, as a class, tolerate and partake of strong drink in the capitol restaurants and are not personally careful to observe the Sabbath have suddenly experienced a change of heart, but because they have heard from their constituents among the really "solid" people of this country. The churches, the temperance societies, the Christian Endeavorers have spoken. These had no money interest to keep them silent, and home-training, pulpit and Sunday-school teaching have found a potent voice in their millions of petition signatures and the steady cannonade of their press. The end is not yet, but one substantial fact goes into history, the highest legislative thermometer in the republic has registered the temperature of the Christian church, and that is, that we should have a Christian Sabbath and no intoxicants at the great thanksgiving feast of nations in 1893.

A SONG IN THE NIGHT.

BY ALICE CORA HAMMOND.

Through all the fragrant darkness of a summer night,
I ministered beside a couch of pain;
While with each shrouded moment, Death's dark wings again
Swept nearer, and no cheering ray of light
Seemed left to earth or me—
But waning hours grew darker over land and sea—

Then, far above my window, in the leafy shade
That made so fair a home in summer time,
A bird trilled forth in ecstasy of song, like chime
Of bells that call to prayer; all unafraid,
Knowing God's earth, held by His might,
Through the long hours of shadow still turned unto the light.

So through the starry gloom above an Eastern plain,
Upon a bygone night, the angels sang
To waiting earth the psalm that through the ages rang.
His gift to man proclaiming in that strain—
God, by the bond of motherhood,
Linked Christ to earth, while seraphs wondering stood.

And looking backward, I behold the dark, long years
That have swept by, since in a woman's hands
God laid the Saviour who should bring life to all lands;
So calling woman by the chrism of tears,
By pain, by loss of all things good,
By love, to service—God's best gift to womanhood.

Thus through the darkness of the narrow, devious ways
That human feet must tread, in every haunt
Where abide sin and woe and grisly famine gaunt,
A woman's ministry throws heavenly rays,
Reflected from the Light divine,
That far adown the future cycles radiant shine.

Then looking to the east, I saw the morning rise,
Roseate and smiling from the murmuring sea;
Foretold in darkness by the bird-song prophecy.
Oh, loving hearts! who in the darkness dare not lift your eyes,
To you that song of faith must say,
"God's earth will turn at last unto the perfect day."

"A SURE CURE"—A TRUE STORY.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

Chapter II.

"We've made a very good beginning," said the young superintendent to Miss Johns when the first hymn had been sung, and the twenty children had been divided into classes. Miss Johns played the reed organ and was to undertake the oldest pupils. He was a very inexperienced young man, that superintendent. With the best intentions, one must add knowledge to get on well, and Mr. Jordan made the mistake of thinking that because the little Steins wore good clothes they were superior children, and so had set them by themselves, a distinction the rest did not like. "I supposed there were only poor people in this quarter," he said in explanation.

"There are saloon-keepers," said Miss Johns, glancing at the Steins who were in flounced white muslins, cream-colored kid boots, and gold beads, with white Neapolitan flats trimmed in all the white feathers they would hold.

"Ah," said Mr. Jordan with sudden comprehension, and wondering what he ought to do to keep the school within the scope of its original plan.

"If they're not poor, I don't know of any class that needs the gospel more," said Miss Johns briefly. "We have opened this place for those who choose to come. I don't see that it is our province to send any away."

"Certainly not," assented Mr. Jordan, much relieved.

While the third hymn was going on Timmy Marshall appeared leading his twin sisters, Gertrude and Grace. There could be no mistake as to their identity, for the Stein girls leaned forward, and said in a loud whisper, "If there isn't Timmy Marshall!" and this exclamation was repeated all about the room, with such remarks as, "Hello, Timmy!" "Hello, girls!"

Timmy and his sisters turned very red under their freckles. They were the only children who were barefooted, and the frocks of Gertrude and Grace were very faded. To some eyes the pink was prettier than it was when the gingham was new, but Morris street liked positive colors. The twins felt shabby, and looked defiantly at the Steins, who in their turn resented what they took to be pride.

"Those Marshall girls feel dreadful stuck up," said Winnie in her sister's ear. "But it's over nothing. See how they look, and their father is drunk this minute, I'll bet!"

Hans, the brother, bent forward. His father intended him to succeed to the business. "He has a heap of sense," he was wont to tell his wife. "Hush you, Winnie," he whispered. "If he's drunk, it's father's liquor made him so."

"Father never touches whisky," said Louisa, proudly, "nor even beer. Mother drinks beer when she is tired, and she gives me a glass after school. I love it. But whisky is another matter."

"You'd better let beer alone, missy," said the sensible Hans.

Just then the hymn was over; so, too, was opportunity for whispering. Timmy Marshall and his sisters speedily forgot everything in their interest in the lesson and their admiration for their teacher, who was no other than the pretty Phœbe. She was so like their own sister Laura in her patience. Timmy was quite sure there was no one quite so dear as Laura, but this young girl he admitted to himself, might be next. The lesson was the wonderful story told in the second chapter of Matthew, and they asked questions until the young superintendent, who was by nature very impatient, struck the little bell he had brought with him, and compelled every one's attention to himself. Then came singing, first "I Love to Tell the Story," then "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." The twins could sing like birds, so could Timmy. Their voices were so sweet every one noticed them.

"You must be sure to come next Sunday," said their kind young teacher. "We should miss you very much."

"I don't know as I can come next Sunday," said Timmy bashfully, "but the twins can. I want our Laura to come. My! You ought to hear her, if you care to hear we! She said as how you said she might bring the baby, and maybe she will have to—but the baby is always good with her; there's no one like her with the baby and pa."

As his father's name passed his lips, Timmy's face turned scarlet, but he continued, after a minute:

"Oh, but I wish ma could come! But she can't unless you have a Sunday-school some other day."

"Perhaps we can have a Bible school during the week," said Miss Johns who had just come up. She was a timid woman, afraid to be on the streets after dark, but she went on boldly:

"We will make inquiries, and if the evening is the best time, we will hold a Bible school in the evening."

"Oh, ma can't be away evenings," said Timmy. "She has Friday afternoons, when it don't rain too much early in the week for her to wash. Ma earns money washing."

If Laura Marshall and her mother were the only ones who could manage John Marshall when he was the worse for liquor, the twins were the only ones who could say to him what they pleased. When his brain was muddled with spirits, it seemed to afford him intense pleasure, and to awake his wonder that the two were so alike. They ran to him the instant they had returned from Swan street. He was up now, and sitting on the kitchen steps smoking. Each one clasped a leg.

"It wath splendid," lisped Gertrude.

"Yeth," echoed Grace, "splendid."

He looked at the two inquiringly, and the more energetic Gertrude continued:

"When you wath a little boy, pa, did you go to Sunday-school?"

He drew himself up, pushed back his thick hair, and looked at the sky.

"Yes," he replied after a moment, "I always went."

"Oh, pa! I wath in hopes you didn't," said Gertrude plaintively. "I tole Timmy a-comin' home, I wath sure you didn't a cause if you did, you'd a-never—" she paused unable to go on, but Grace, whose mind traveled obediently after her sister's, came to the rescue.

"No," she put in, "you couldn't never go to Cobweb Hall, 'f you'd a been to such a Sunday-school asth ours."

The father rose so quickly the twins almost fell backward. He walked slowly down to the end of the tiny yard. His wife and Timmy had made a travesty of a lettuce bed, and had planted a few potatoes. Two dusty and forlorn hollyhocks looked over the ramshackle fence at the railway. He went to the poor things and touched their opening, stunted buds with feverish fingers. They had grown in stately companies about the well-house at his childhood's home. A vision of his squandered life rose before him. He had received the training of a civil engineer. He was now glad to tend a nail machine, and of his scanty wages his family received little. He worked to enrich Michael Stein, and pave Cobweb Hall with dollars, while his wife washed to clothe and feed the children.

"Lord-a-mighty!" he whispered to himself. It was an unconscious prayer. "Lord-a-mighty!"

He worked with feverish eagerness all the week, and revenged his self-denial of drink by a crossness even his patient wife found hard to bear. He came home at five o'clock on Saturday, his hands full of brown paper parcels. He at once gave his wife what was left of his wages. "Buy the children what is necessary for them," he said. "I won't have them at Sunday-school barefooted, and get Laura ready. She ought to have a chance, for she's the oldest."

"Yes, sir," said Mrs. Marshall meekly, hushing the baby against her thin bosom. She had always addressed her husband as "sir," save when she remembered his objections to the form. She had been a serving-maid in Judge Marshall's kitchen, and though John had married her, she never felt herself his equal, even when he was lost in drink. Perhaps she was mean-spirited, poor thing. It is certain she had a small opinion of her own value, and that she loved her John with all her heart.

"And you needn't call me sir," he went on roughly. "I don't like it. Sir! I'd rather be a negro and own myself, than to be Judge Marshall's son, and the victim of what I am. I've tried desperately all the week to keep sober, and I can hold out perhaps for to-day, but whisky has too tight a grip on me."

"Did you ever think, John, that it might be cured?" John Marshall laughed sneeringly, but the little woman persisted. "Miss Johns was here the other day, and she spoke of a place,—and medicine. She said a drinking man is a sick man and needs doctoring. If you could be cured, I'd work my fingers to the bone to pay for it."

"Cured, Mary! you're mad. There's only one cure, and that's death."

He remained sober another week, then drank himself into complete stupefaction.

"Father, when I grow up I shan't go on with the business," said Hans Stein, when he had returned from Sunday-school; "and I am ashamed that you are in it. There's a verse in the Bible, 'Woe to him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips.'"

"I never heard of it," said the father, staring; "and selling spirits is a good business; I have government permission."

"I don't care," said slow and stubborn Hans.

"You need not go to that Sunday-school any more," began the father.

"Oh, I like it!" said Hans indifferently. "I don't have to be sent any more."

(To be continued.)

THE CONGRESS AUXILIARY OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

II.

BY MRS. CHAS. HENROTIN, VICE-PRES.

The Committee of the Daily Press, Mrs. Mary H. Krout, chairman, has been duly organized. Its membership is composed exclusively of women connected with the working staff of the daily papers, either as editorial or special writers, reporters or correspondents. As the greater part of the work which will devolve upon this committee must be done while the Exposition is actually in progress it has been decided that little can be accomplished until then. The committee, however, is in a position to keep itself thoroughly informed and in readiness for immediate action should an emergency arise in which such action is necessary. In addition to this, each member considers herself bound to further the labors of the Congress Auxiliary and the Board of Lady Managers, both personally and professionally upon all possible occasions.

The Municipal Order Committee, Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, chairman, has succeeded in arousing much public sentiment for a clean city, and some effort on the part of the authorities to secure it. Its educational work is carried on through the agency of Home Science Clubs and the Columbian Guards. It has also assisted in organizing a permanent Municipal Order League. The committee is convinced that the women of the municipality are more than half responsible for the disgraceful sanitary conditions of the municipalities and townships throughout the length and breadth of our beautiful country. It is the housekeepers who must take this matter in hand, and insist on the municipal vote being accorded to women, and wrest from political machines the government of the cities and towns, and see to it themselves that they are economically and properly governed on a business basis.

The Indian Committee, the woman's branch of which is under the leadership of Miss Emma C. Sickles, has prepared a preliminary address which will soon be issued. Considerable work has already been done with a view to interesting the Indians in this congress and encouraging them to believe that they will there have an opportunity of showing to the world their native attainments in music, oratory, literature, and all intellectual development, as well as that which they have acquired from civilized education. Conferences have already been held with members of twelve tribes, all of which wish to participate. Six of these will make appropriations of money for sending their own representatives to Chicago, and in some cases are willing to assist less prosperous tribes for the same purpose. It is hoped that a fund may be provided which will place it within the power of every tribe of this strange and unknown people to there tell the story of its beliefs, its customs and its traditions, its history and its hopes, hitherto so little studied or understood, though acknowledged by ethnologists as the deepest and most hidden, because seemingly the most ancient of human origin.

Mrs. George B. Carpenter, chairman of the Committee on Musical Congresses, reports that one morning will be devoted to a recital in which the musical compositions of women will be heard, both instrumental and vocal. Madame Albani-Gye will give a paper on "The Proper Time to Commence Training a Woman's Voice"; this essay will be discussed by prominent artists and teachers. Miss Maud Morgan will give a paper on "The Early History of Harp Music," illustrated by her class of harpists, who play the earliest known compositions for that instrument. Madame Bloomfield Zeisler is in correspondence with noted pianists to secure their attendance and recitals. Mesdames Viardot and Marchesi have been requested to prepare essays on vocal culture.

The Literary Committee, Mrs. Charles Henrotin, chairman, has for its aim to present to the Congresses a summary of the work of the literary women of the nineteenth century. It is hoped to show woman's possibilities in this field by what she has already accomplished. The most eminent women in every branch of literary work will be secured for the essays and discussions.

The committee has a local membership of thirty, which is supplemented by an advisory council, carefully chosen and of the highest wisdom and experience. It is subdivided into five sections, Libraries, Historical Literature, Philology, Imaginative Literature and Literature for Children.

In the first section many of the members are practical librarians. Among the subjects which will come up for discussion under that head are the collection, arrangement and management of libraries and the importance of an International Publication and Exchange of manuscript archives.

In the second division, History, Mrs. Fannie Hale Gardiner, chairman, the office, condition and future of historical literature will be considered, as well as methods of historic research. The share women have had in that branch of literary work will be thoroughly examined and properly set forth.

In the third subdivision, Philology, Mrs. H. V. Reed, chairman, the field is very broad. Something of its range may be imagined from the suggestions of themes proposed: "The Unities of Language and Literature of all Times and Peoples"; "The Importance of Recent Archæological Discoveries, Including Egyptology, Assyrian Tablet Libraries, Aryan Language and Literature, Folk Lore, Unpublished Manuscript and Treasures," etc.

In the fourth section, Authors and Imaginative Literature, Mrs. Sidney Guy Sea, chairman, a most popular field is open. Not only will poetry and fiction be discussed, but it is expected to bring together from all parts of the world living writers who have delighted their generation with stories and poems.

The fifth section is Literature for Children, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, chairman. The woman's committee has this subject entirely in its charge. There is no corresponding branch in the men's department. Comradeship in literature for mother and child, magazines for children, school and Sunday-school literature, and a wide range of like subjects will be presented.

Mrs. Sidney G. Sea, vice-chairman of the Committee on Congress of Art, reports that the committee is subdivided into one on paintings, decorative art, sculpture, architecture and illustrative art. The advisory council has recently been augmented by the addition of many illustrious names. A representative of the Decorative Art Committee is now traveling in Europe, and will endeavor to secure papers from prominent women on the subjects assigned by her committee. Mrs. Sea will be present at the Congress of Artists in Washington next week, for the purpose of extending an invitation to that body to hold its next congress in Chicago, in 1893, under the auspices of the Auxiliary.

The Committee on Science and Philosophy, Mrs. Caroline K. Sherman, chairman, is moving at a philosophical and scientific pace, slowly but surely and steadily. Their address is already in the hands of the printer, and in the department of philosophy many of the speakers are decided upon, and the general trend of the congress is outlined.

The Committee on Household Economics, Mrs. John Wilkinson, chairman, is assigned to three congresses: The Labor Congress, to present domestic science; Agricultural, to present household life in village and rural communities, and farm life, and the Educational Congresses. Besides, this committee will hold special congresses and conferences during 1893, as occasion may require. It was necessary to formulate a science of household economics, so the Columbian Association of Housekeepers was formed to assist the committee in its work; this association is to be permanent.

It is not necessary to consider whether woman's sphere is limited to her home—it concerns us to so improve the work done in the home that out of it shall come a power so well trained, by careful study of scientific and economic principles, that it will facilitate and lighten, as well as dignify, household labor.

We wish, also, to call the attention of women to the need of holding congresses, in which topics relating to housekeeping and home-making can be discussed, where questions may be suggested and remedies considered, which would throw light upon the various problems confronting all housekeepers. Through channels of correspondence we shall doubtless find that in the matter of household economics the American woman has much to learn from her foreign sisters.

First, we desire to obtain statistics of how much is spent for food, material, rent, clothing, fuel, wages and all other miscellaneous expenses, that all of these expenses may be proportioned to various incomes.

Second, we desire to obtain opinions of women as to the advisability of using a system of bookkeeping, which would cover all the foregoing expenses, in the hope that with more business-like methods there would be less confusion in discussions as to what proportion of our incomes should be used in living expenses.

We particularly desire to arrange for the discussion of such topics as the adulteration of food and its effect upon the human system, and the study of what the human body needs in the way of nourishment. The value of all labor-saving inventions should be considered in connection with the economic use of strength, as well as the importance of bringing outside labor into the house. In this connection should come the consideration of the value of the work of specialists, thus opening a way for the rapidly increasing industries for women.

We desire to obtain statistics regarding the number of women owning and operating farms—the number engaged in bee culture, poultry raising, silk culture, gardening and other branches of agriculture, with a view of directing the attention of the women of our country to these new fields of work adapted to women; and at the same time we would emphasize by the presentation to be made, the success attending the work of the earnest, thoughtful women of our country, whose energies and skill are devoted to the development and building up of their farm homes.

The woman's branch of the Auxiliary would also emphasize the need of just recognition of and remuneration for woman's work in every field.

The Woman's Committee on Labor Congresses, Mrs. J. D. Harvey, chairman, submits the following report:

The whole subject of labor as it concerns woman, has been divided into three topics, viz: The Industrial Condition of Women, the Economic Dependence of Women, and Social Theories and Experiments.

The first topic, The Industrial Condition of Women, is in charge of a special committee, Mary Spalding Brown, chairman. For its information this committee has sent out a circular letter asking the following questions:

What occupations are open to women? How many women are employed? What are the highest wages paid to women? What are the lowest wages paid to women? Is there any difference in the wages paid to men and women for the same work? If so, how much, and is the distinction an equitable one? Are there any women who are complete artisans? How many women work by the piece? Would it not be an advantage for women to organize unions in their trades? Are there any women's unions or other labor organizations? How can the industrial condition of women be improved? In what kinds of work are children employed? How many children are employed under twelve years of age? How many children are employed between twelve and thirteen years? How many hours per day are children employed?

It is hoped through their replies to collect reliable statistics, as well as suggestions for the bettering of woman's industrial condition. In several cases these questions have been taken up by some association or club, and made their own work, not only helping us, but educating themselves as to conditions of their own environment. This we consider a hopeful result, the spreading of interest on this serious side of the labor problem.

The second topic, viz.: "The Economic Dependence of Women," has been given to a special committee, Charlotte C. Holt, chairman, which is again subdivided into three parts:

1. "The economic relations of men and women, with rights of children, and parental obligations," Jessie Millard Bolte, chairman.

2. "The political equality of women," Ada C. Sweet, chairman. This committee will study the historical vein of this question, and its consideration on the basis of equity.

3. "Protective agencies, including work having for its object the securing of justice for women in courts and other public places," Fannie J. Howe, chairman.

Special committee on "Social Theories and Experiments," Jane Addams, chairman. This topic is divided into nine different ones, viz.:

1. "Co-operation in France and Belgium," Ellen M. Henrotin, also, "Co-operation in Germany and England." 2. "National and International Adminstration of Industrial Affairs," under the charge of Corrina S. Brown. 3. "Directed Emigration," Julia Lathrop. 4. "Colonization; English Colonies in New Zealand, Australia," etc., Mrs. Dow. 5. "Voluntary Colonization by Societies. Mormons. Brook Farm, Rugby," etc., Charlotte C. Holt. 6. "Improved Housing of the Poor," Emma Wade Rogers. 7. "Clubs for Women and Girls. Their Effect on the Working Woman," Florence Hilton. 8. "The Toynbee Hall Movement," Jane Addams. 9. "University Extension," Ellen Starr.

The meetings of the Woman's Labor Committee are held on the third Thursday of each month. At these meetings short papers are read on different subjects, in charge of special and subcommittees. This is followed by questions and general discussion. Several prominent leaders in the labor movement have addressed the committee—Dr. Gertrude Kelley, of New York; Mr. Walter Crane, of London; Lady Somerset; and Mrs. A. B. Stevens, of Toledo; and the next meeting will be addressed by Mr. Thomas Morgan. It is interesting, as well as extremely instructive to note how moderate and sensible were the presentation of all these doctrines that are so much feared by conservative people.

Fraulein Heléne Lange, in a recent address delivered before a large audience in Berlin, quotes largely from the address of the Labor Committee, which was translated by the German commission and sent out with the Exposition circulars. She says: "This is the spirit which should animate women, not to put stress on what has been, but to enter heart and soul into what now is."

Chicago, Ill.

(To be continued.)

WHY I AM A PROHIBITIONIST.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

In the first place, I am a Prohibitionist because early impressions count so greatly in determining the direction of our character and principles. About the year 1851, when I was twelve years old, my father came home to the old farm in Wisconsin one night, bringing from Janesville the newspapers, of which he was a devotee, and said: "Well, Neal Dow has had his way. There is Prohibition in the state of Maine. No man can now sell intoxicating liquor without making himself a criminal." As he was a legislator and a politician, too, my father took a very practical view of this subject, and as he walked back and forth in the old kitchen, he said to my mother: "When do you suppose our poor, rum-cursed Wisconsin will have a law like that?" My mother looked up from her sewing, and quietly observed: "When women vote." Seated at a table with a book was "a chiel amang you, takin' notes"—"A little pitcher with large ears." Two principles then and there took root in my impressionable mind; first, that there ought to be a law against saloons; second, that the vote of women could be used to bring about such a law.

Years passed on, during which I heard but little, comparatively, about the temperance question. My home was altogether sheltered from the evils of drink. We lived in an isolated fashion, and were wholly preoccupied with studying the book of nature and the printed page. When I was fifteen years old my father said, looking up from his church paper, The Northwestern Christian Advocate: "Our Methodists have started a university in a suburb of Chicago, called Evanston, and have got a charter for it, which says that anybody selling intoxicating drink within four miles of the institution shall forfeit the title deed to his land. I believe that is the place we want to go to educate our children." Three years later this thought was carried into execution, and at eighteen years of age I became a resident of a strictly prohibition town, where I have now had my abode for thirty-four years.

It has been my observation that a prohibition law, even in close proximity to one of the greatest and most alcohol-stricken cities of the globe, is sufficiently well enforced to throw a guarantee and safeguard around the homes of the people, so that a sifted class of population comes to dwell here. From the first, Evanstonians have been remarkable for cleanliness of life. The university has a smaller percentage of drinkers and tobacco users than can be found in almost any other institution of equal size. There has never been a saloon or hotel bar or a public billiard hall in Evanston. That there is some illicit sale, we know, and beyond the four-mile limit the traps are set on every side, but the enforcement of the law is, on the whole, excellent. Our officers favor enforcement; our citizens insist upon it; the W. C. T. U, keeps up the education of public sentiment year in and year out; our white-ribbon kindergarten trains forty or fifty little people from the least protected homes in the way of total abstinence; the temperance text-book is in our public schools; temperance meetings are often held, and we have some pastors who believe it to be their duty to preach often and boldly on the sin of liquor drinking, liquor making, and liquor selling. Rev. Dr. H. A. Delano stands in the fore-front of those who take this view of a pastor's Christian duty. An overwhelming majority of our population would cast their ballots to sustain the law, if it should ever come into question, but there is no controversy whatever on the subject. Real estate men know that it is a good thing financially to have Evanston advertised as a prohibition town, and school authorities know that it helps our institutions.

When our wealthy and more pleasure-loving people formed a social club they entered it on their by-laws that strong drink should never be permitted as an article of entertainment at the club house, and no betting should be permitted on games played there.

In going out from a town now having 12,000 or more inhabitants to liquor-cursed communities, the contrast confirms me more and more in the belief in which I have been educated. I went to Maine and studied its laws, with the best helps that devoted temperance men and women could afford me. I have done the same in Kansas, Iowa, and Vermont, have studied the beautiful story of St. Johnsbury in the Green Mountain state, and other impressive object lessons of prohibition. I believe that no one thing could possibly bring so much sanity, health, happiness, cleanliness, morality and religion to our people as the banishment of grog-shops. But I find the two old parties nationally committed to the liquor system. It seems to me in view of this fact something must give way, and it is natural to work along the line of least resistance, namely: to form the nucleus of a party committed to the proposition, "the saloon must go," and to get its materials from among those voters who are most friendly to temperance and least bound by temperamental and habitual ties to the political armies wherein they have long fought. This, of course, is a difficult proceeding, and one that will arouse a vast amount of public censure, but as Lady Henry Somerset has tersely said: "All reformers are stoned until they succeed." Therefore, not only in theory but in practice, not only in law but in politics, I propose to do all that lies in my power to build up, not only the sentiment, but the action that controls at the ballot-box in the interest of prohibition law, with a prohibiting officer behind it. It is a thankless task, but we have become used to being criticised. We have formed noble and enduring friendships and comradeships among Prohibitionists, so we do not feel at all left out in the cold. We believe we are right in the sight of God and men, and so we go forward with the work we are in.

I am then a Prohibitionist by ancestry, by education, by observation, by study, by conviction, by experience, by hope, faith and charity. When we know these things, happy are we if we do them.

THE WORK OF LUCY STONE.

BY ELLEN BATTELLE DIETRICK.

Some one has lately declared that if a good deed is done it makes no difference who gets the credit. But to the historian it makes all the difference between truth and falsehood, between careless assertion and accurate statement; and there are two reasons why the present seems an opportune time to give Lucy Stone certain credit that is her due.

First, a student of Smith College has just written that not half a dozen girls in Northampton know anything about Lucy Stone or her life work! Second, the improvement in the legal position of women in Massachusetts is invariably referred to as a benefaction conferred upon them by men.

All reforms are accomplished solely as a result of reformed public opinion, and to the bold spirit who begins the pioneer assault upon the gnarled oaks of encumbering prejudice belongs the chief glory arising from the finished achievement. How much the race owes to Lucy Stone (I say the race, for unjust laws for women redound equally to the injury of men) can only be estimated when we review the legal status of woman at the time she first lifted her voice as one crying in the wilderness.

At that period the old common law of England regulated woman's condition almost universally in the United States. It was a law which handed the wife over to her husband on the wedding day, deprived of all right to thereafter hold any property, to make any contract, or any binding vow; which forbade her to buy or sell, or engage in any business without her husband's consent.

If the husband and wife were poor (and the large majority of husbands and wives have ever been poor) and the wife, therefore, compelled to add to their income, the law gave her husband the same right to collect and use her wages that a slave-owner fifty years ago held over the wages of his slave.

In the home the average wife took upon herself the combined duties of a cook, washerwoman, scrubber, child's nurse, housemaid and seamstress, in addition to those of general manager and buyer for the family, as well as performing the social duties of a wife and mother. In return for these multifarious and arduous services, the law allowed wives merely a legal claim upon their husbands for such board, lodging, medical attendance and clothes as a husband chose to furnish—quantity and quality being left wholly to his discretion. The wife not only could not claim any money she herself earned, but she was not legally entitled to demand even cash enough to buy an occasional postage stamp.

A legal case is actually on record in Massachusetts in which the wife of a miserly man was compelled to apply to the poor-house to save herself from starvation. As her husband was well able to pay, the poor-house trustees sued him for her board. But upon proof that the bill called for the price of food of quality superior to that furnished other paupers, the court decided that a husband could only be held for such food as other paupers received, that is, just sufficient to hold body and soul together.

Frequently a couple whose fortunes were about equal at start, would work unitedly, building up a property by joint labor, all of which the law secured to the husband, unless it took the shape of real estate, in which case a limited portion was allowed the wife after her husband's death.

When Lucy Stone first began her righteously indignant protest against the wicked injustice of these laws so degrading to womanhood, press, pulpit and bar united as one adamantine wall to refuse her right of way. Her motives were aspersed, her character attacked, she was assailed by mobs who considered that one whom press, pulpit and bar denounced must be fair game for rude assault. Poor, obscure, advocating a forlorn cause, the farmer's daughter went up and down the land with naught on her side but right and justice. Against the combined power of tradition, wealth, established force, Lucy Stone was a leader of the little handful who first dared to ask that woman might be permitted to enjoy a citizen's rights. Step by step one concession after another has been wrung from reluctant law-makers as a result of this forty years' bloodless battle between right and wrong. What a victory was that in which was won the privilege of a wife to control her own earnings! The proud time when a wife could say with George Macdonald, "The best thing about having rights is, that being our own rights we can give them up if we want to." Having something to give! It is all the difference between slavery and freedom. This right Lucy Stone won for the women of New England. (But it is to this day partially denied the wives of New York; a case was recently decided to that effect by Judge Vann, of Syracuse.)

In that era of wedded pauperism, it was almost impossible for a girl to procure collegiate education. It was deemed both useless and dangerous for a woman to know too much, and Lucy Stone (a daughter of Massachusetts by a line of ancestors going back to those who laid its foundation) was compelled to travel all the way to Oberlin, Ohio, for the training she ought to have been allowed to receive from Harvard. No such institutions as Wellesley or Smith had yet dawned upon men's imaginations.

In season and out of season, in the face of denunciation and ridicule, the sweet voice of this lover of justice has been steadily heard demanding perfect equality of opportunities for boy and girl, perfect equality of legal conditions for man and woman, a fair field and no favor on account of sex. And though much yet remains to be done before this goal is reached, as we look over the gains of the last half century, every woman must feel the debt of gratitude her sex owes to the labors of Lucy Stone.

Those who wish to preserve her features in imperishable form, that posterity may know the face of one to whom the world is so indebted, have undertaken to have the bust of Lucy Stone made by Anne Whitney, the sculptor, exhibited first at the World's Fair, then placed in such public position as the majority of subscribers may select. It is desired to have this a popular tribute, not an affair of large donations from a few, but of small offerings from the many, that a host of women may feel pleasure in paying honor to whom honor is so widely due. Send to Mrs. Ellen Battelle Dietrick, 176 Huntington avenue, Boston, Mass., in order that the bust may be completed in time to stand in line with those other heroines of the woman's movement, whose faces will greet us at the Exposition. It is an education in morals to begin now to pay just reverence to the noble amongst women.

Boston, Mass.

SIDE-LIGHT FOR WORKERS—THE GOSPEL CURE.

In response to the "Personal Equation" suggestion, the following testimonies which thrill with their own power, have come from the W. C. T. U.:

STARS IN OUR CROWN.

On Sunday afternoon, some five or six years ago, while some discouraged women were holding a gospel temperance meeting, there straggled into the room a timid, trembling, shabby little man, about fifty years old, who wanted to be saved from himself. He was a hard drinker; was "all broke up," he said. It was the old story—money, home, friends, will-power, wife, children, all gone. He signed the pledge, and some of the women remained after the meeting and prayed with him, giving him sympathy and encouragement. He was very weak, and he feared to go out of the room, dreading the jeers of his old companions. "Oh, keep me from them!" he cried, out of the depths of his crushed spirit, and so some one took him home to supper and brought him back to the evening meeting and accompanied him to his lodgings that night. He continued to come to the meetings; there came the light of hope into his face; we noted that he kept his pledge, and was working steadily at his trade, and we kept our hold upon him by our kindly human interest, never forgetting to ask, "Is it well with your soul, my brother?" Natural feeling revived in him, he looked up his wife—an excellent, self-respecting woman, who had found it impossible to live with a brute, who was, however, "a good man when not in liquor." She put him on probation; if he kept the pledge for one year, then they would gather their scattered children and refound a home. He used to call at her house and bring her to the meetings during that year, very much as he must have escorted her during their courtship days. At the end of the year the home was formed again; it was a happy, peaceful, loving place now; the angels in heaven must have rejoiced over it, and perhaps that couple, who had "climbed the hill of life, passed the little place at the top and begun to descend on the other side," were more truly happy than ever before. He grew tender and thoughtful of his wife. I met him in the street one night, when he apologized for hurriedly leaving me, saying his wife was not well and he was going to buy her some ice cream before the shops closed. The little attention to his wife "fell like a stone into the well of my heart and dashed a tear into my eye." He became a church member and a church worker, and finally a church officer. His timidity wore off, and he would frequently testify in the temperance meetings, almost invariably ending by saying that he "thanked God for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, by means of whose workers he was a saved man."

The years passed, and troubles many and grievous came to him. A son, born during the years before the father had "come to himself," pursued a wayward course that ended in crime; then the wife died suddenly, and we questioned, Will he endure the fiery trials? Then we who watched saw in the dark days an exhibition of simple and sustaining trust in the Heavenly Father. We are no longer anxious; the Lord is keeping him, and even as the Spirit hath taught him doth he abide in Christ.

"A WALKING ADVERTISEMENT."

So a redeemed man calls himself, always adding, "of the power of Christ to deliver." Fifteen years ago he was one of the very worst men of Philadelphia; he manufactured and sold and drank liquor until none were deeper in the mire. Then, as Amanda Smith would say, he was "tremendously converted." At once he reëntered the saloons and dives he had formerly haunted, and preached the great salvation. His evenings for fifteen years have been given to rescue work, and street-preaching. Part of the year he holds services on the wharves, where thousands attend. Like a wide-awake business man, during his daily toil he lies in wait for the chance to do the Master's work. His occupation throws him with seamen, and on all the seas it is said there are men brought to Christ through his efforts. His organized missions have been most successful. After abandoning rum-selling his family endured the extremities of poverty, but the evident prosperity of his present well-appointed home testify that those who wait on God shall want no good thing.

LOWER LIGHTS.

B. V. Cushman, M. D., superintendent of Bethesda Mission, tells the following:

"God has forgiven my sins, and what is a'most as good, my wife has forgiven me too! You ought to see the letter I got from her to day," said a man in Bethesda Mission last New Year's night. Those who knew his history saw a rainbow in the tears of joy upon his cheeks. The first frost had touched his head and his face was furrowed, but beside the marks of dissipation there shone, like lights upon a picture, the expression of tenderness and good-fellowship telling what had been his snare.

For twenty-two years this man had been given to occasional sprees which finally became continual, and he had wandered from home to this city, where, after six months of utter destitution and degradation he strayed into the mission, Thanksgiving night. There the loving message of good cheer awakened hope in his heart. He "signed the pledge and accepted Christ." We did not know until he had found work and was able to take good care of himself, what struggles he had for food and shelter at the start, but his faith in God and earnest purpose could not long fail to gain employment for him, and then he wrote to his wife.

As soon as she "forgave" him, he began to get the home ready, and no lover ever prepared for his bride with higher hopes. Three weeks ago she came, a patient, tender woman, and now father, mother and children are rejoicing in the new home—new in the sense that the earth and heavens will be "new" when all hearts and homes are so transformed.

***

Last week a woman came to me and said, "I am in trouble and I believe you temperance women can help me." I invited her to my room and there quietly she told her story. No tornado of tears is so touching as the dry eyes and steady tones after the tears have all been poured out.

It was the old threadbare tale of better times when the husband had a good situation—engineer on one of the main lines of railroad—with large wages, and the home was full of love and happiness and plenty. For ten years no one thought about it that the irregular drinks with friends were forming a deadly habit. Then the superintendent of the road observed that he was "getting a little unsteady," and admonished him, but the warning was resented and discharge followed. Harder drinking, more neglect and finally desertion was the sequence. But after six months he came home for a few weeks and looked for work. Not finding it, he had disappeared again, and the disappointed wife came to us for help. "If you Christian temperance women will only convert him, I know he will be all right," she said.

The woman told her story with hesitation and delicate apology, finally begging that it be kept secret, as she had hid it from her own folks even.

A member of the Central union had come in, whose motherliness reaches over her own brood to all the unmothered of the earth, and together we tried to lead the tempest-tossed one to the source of peace and comfort. She had not been taught in a Christian home; she had tried to pray lately, but was afraid she didn't know how. We told her it would be easy for her to understand the love of God, because she loved her husband, and love is all alike.

Was it good theology? I do not know, but the great theologian of the New Testament says, "Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." A great light shone upon her tender face—she "understood." We gave her a Bible, prayed with her for the wanderer, secured employment for a young sister living with her, learned her present needs, and promised all the help lying in human power to the tempted husband when we find him, as we surely shall. Love and prayer search the uttermost parts of the earth.

***

The letters that come to the mission from loved ones at home are the most delightful reading I ever get; and how proud the men are of them! They sometimes are a little off color in grammatical construction and orthography, but they never lack the warm hue that gives a letter its charm. I have two here now, handed me last night to read. One is from a sister, seventeen years old, who had not seen her brother or known where he was for six years. "You are my own dear brother, and I love you, if I haven't seen you since I was a real little girl, and, oh! I am so glad you are living a Christian life." She tries to tell the family news for six years. There have been marriages, births and deaths; separations by moving—families make history rapidly in these days of swift transit; "Mother is an angel, now," and the father has grown old fast. No blame is implied, it is all news, yet how it strikes the tender conscience of the repentant boy. He finds joy, however, in this: "I've been praying for her and my brother to be converted ever since I signed the pledge, and here they've been Christians for two years a-prayin' for me!" Ah, the home letters! Who of us could live in the wilderness of the great city without them? Write often, little sisters in the country homes. If brother don't answer every one, write again, not to chide, but to cheer. Tell him of the friends who ask for him, and how you miss him. Keep the home life fresh before him, in its brightest light. I knew a soldier, whose tent-mates always said when they heard a chuckle from his bunk, "Smith's got a letter from home," and sometimes added, "That must be a great little sister of his, he never knows anything else while he's reading her letters, and she writes every week or oftener." The fiery darts of army-life temptations fell away from Smith, and when the war was over he came marching home untouched by vice, to fulfil all the high and tender hopes vested in him.

The other letter is from a rejoicing father living in an eastern city: "Come home, my boy, quick! Here is money for clothes and fare. We won't say anything about what has been, we just want you. Praise God for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and their lighthouse." Oh, let the lower lights be burning!

NO MAN LIVETH TO HIMSELF.

Every man is the race: individual attainment is race potentiality. The very foremost member in his progress towards the divine human ideal represents a veritable race achievement.

Dogmatic theology has iterated and reiterated the injunction, "Save your own soul"; but the most ideal salvation is the forgetfulness of the "own soul" in devotion to the general soul. The very essence of salvation is the death of selfishness.

Selfish attempts at soul saving through the efficacy of ordinances, rituals and sacraments, rather than through intrinsic character, have narrowed and chilled the influence of the church, and rendered it artificial and unattractive. "Sons of God" are those who are crucified in the lower self, and from the high altitude of their resurrection are able to draw men unto them.—Henry Wood.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.
AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., The Temple, La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, 57 Gordon Square, N. W.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.
President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 57 Gordon Square, N. W. London, Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Assistant Secretary—ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

"At first you are careful that another does not cheat you; afterwards you become careful not to cheat another. Then your market cart has been transformed into a chariot of the sun."—Emerson.

Extract from a private letter from Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith:

"I have just been driving with Lady Mount Temple to Wimbledon, to see a charming old lady, Lady Castletown, who lives in a beautiful place on the edge of Wimbledon Common. Our way out was through a section of commons; the spring was just bursting out and we had a charming drive. I wish we Americans had been wise enough to adopt this system of commons. They are not parks for they are left in a state of absolute nature and belong as much to the poor as to the rich. The poor can keep their cows and donkeys and geese on them, gather the fallen wood and share anything the common affords. The great city of London is surrounded by these commons and their utter wildness makes a suburban feature of great beauty.

"Lady Castletown interested us exceedingly with her accounts of Frederick Robertson, the famous Brighton clergyman, whose sermons have been so much read by this generation. It seems that she was the moving spirit in having these sermons printed; Robertson never wrote his sermons but to please her, and as an act of pure friendship he used to put down all he could remember of what he had preached after church when she was absent, and in this way she secured the only record that was kept, which she printed years after. It was delightful to see an old lady so full of intellectual brightness as she was. She said she waked up every morning radiantly happy at thought of all the books she had on hand to read during the day, and of all the extracts she meant to take out of them, and she showed us volumes of these extracts.

"I hope when I am as old as she my intellectual vigor may be as great. I suspect one ought to be preparing one's self for old age and laying up a store of interests and pursuits for the evenings of one's days. I have always thought I should probably make scrap-books when I become too old to engage in temperance and evangelistic work."

This is an admirable suggestion. If the aged friends of the W. C. T. U. would keep collections of newspapers, pamphlets, programs, etc., it would be a great advantage to the reforms and reformers of the future, and to the historian who will one day write up the record now being wrought out through so much hardship, physical and mental.

***

WHAT THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST HAS DONE.

James Russell Lowell, some years ago in an after-dinner speech in London, thus replied to a sneer at religion:

"When the microscopic search of skepticism, which has hunted the heavens and sounded the seas to disprove the existence of a Creator, has turned its attention to human society, and has found a place in this planet where a man can live in decency, comfort and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is revered, infancy respected, womanhood honored and human life held in due regard, when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square in this globe where the gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared the way, and laid the foundation, and made the decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither and ventilate their views. But so long as these very men are dependent upon the religion they discard for every privilege they enjoy, they may as well hesitate a little longer before they seek to rob the Christian of his hope and humanity of its faith in that Saviour who alone has given to man that hope of life eternal which makes this life tolerable and society possible, which robs death of its terrors and the grave of its gloom."

***

Let me again remind our state auxiliaries that the five prize banners, called the president's banners, pass from one state to another according to the relative per capita increase each year—one for New England, one for the middle states, one for the southern states, one for the western states, and one for the Pacific coast. We wish that in each of these divisions the states that did not have the banner last year would make up their minds to win it. This would wonderfully help the aggregate of membership and increase enthusiasm all over the country. The bugle blast must come from the presidents, and we are listening. Blow bugles, blow, the time flies fast.

Frances E. Willard.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house.—Heb. 11:7.

The Woman's Business Journal of Chicago in its last issue says some handsome things of the Temple. We give a short extract: "To-day the founder's dream stands before the world an accomplished fact, the grandest of monuments to consecrated energy and womanly aspiration. Of what this building as a source of high and holy inspiration among women is to be in years to come, no mind can conceive. Already is its power known and felt; already the two hundred thousand women constituting the rank and file of the W. C. T. U., are turning their thoughts toward their own holy place in Jerusalem, and already many times this number of children, boys as well as girls, the men and women of the future, are being taught a loving reverence for this place, knowing that from thence come the help and teaching which shall most surely establish them in ways of pleasantness and peace. As a scheme in finance it is without parallel. . . . . A large corner room on the twelfth floor has been set apart as a reception room for the use of ladies in the building, and for a convenient place of meeting the constant streams of W. C. T. U. callers, all the time wending their way hither from a distance. This room is furnished handsomely in Moorish style; adjoining this is an elegant suite of toilet rooms in charge of a maid whose whole time is devoted to the care of the rooms and serving the wants of the lady callers. Women visiting the World's Fair will find this cozy nook among the turrets of this unique building one of the most convenient and charming of 'rest spots' in the city."

***

Miss Mary Allen West sends $10 to the Julia A. Ames memorial window. A friend, who does not wish her name mentioned, from Hawley, Pa., sends 50 cents for the same window. The East Troy Pennsylvania union sends $1, in memory of little Harold, infant son of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Smith, beloved workers in the cause. P. A., M. E. and E. L. Howland, Manchester, N. Y., send $15 toward a memorial tablet, in memory of Mrs. E. J. Decker, former president of Ontario county, N. Y. She was also state treasurer of the New York W. C. T. U. and state organizer, and was a most faithful, earnest worker in the temperance cause, and greatly beloved by all who knew her; she passed to her glorious reward about two years ago. Let all who desire to honor this noble woman's name send something toward the tablet, so generously started. Mrs. H. E. Bates, Syracuse, N. Y., sends $1, in memory of her daughter, Mrs. Della M. Harbattle. Mrs. Bates writes: "How I would like, if I could afford it, to give $100, that our family name might be inscribed on the walls of our beautiful Temple."

***

Rev. J. J. Rankin, Penfield, Pa., writes: "My wife and I feel we want to contribute our mite toward the Temple fund; I therefore send you my check for $15. We should like to have our children's names associated with the work. They are all now too young to appreciate it, but we expect them to grow. The gift is from them, also. Their names and ages are as follows: Donald, five years; Marjorie, four years; Carl S., two years." This young minister shows great wisdom in his desire to have his children's names connected with such a work. They will grow up with the knowledge that their money helped to build the magnificent Temperance Temple, it is theirs as much as anybody's. They will be taught by their parents that their names are entered in the great book of record of their state in the archives of the Temple, numbered among those who helped to build it. Without doubt this fact will be a most powerful factor in forming the character of these children, giving them a stronger bias for temperance than a thousand sermons. Youth is far more impressed with deeds than words. M. A. Stock, Richland, N. J., writes: "The inclosed mite, $1.19, was saved for the Temple by a mother and three little children, and represents real self-denial, as the family are making a home in a new place where money is very hard to get." Little Foster Curry, Ogden City, Utah, a four-year-old boy, sends $2 of his own savings gathered in a mite-box. He says: "I hope it will help to make little boys and girls good."

***

The Cherokee County, Iowa, W. C. T. U. sends $35 as a first payment on $100 pledged. The union at Rock Valley, Iowa, sends $40 on its pledge. The Longmont, Colo., W. C. T. U. sends $10 on $100 pledged. The Colorado state union sends $10 on state pledge. Twenty-five dollars is sent as a first installment on $100 by the Hillsdale, Mich., W. C. T. U. Mrs. N. Kent, of Sturgis, Mich., sends $36.50, which completes the $100 pledged by the fourth district of Michigan. Sharon, Wis., union sends a second installment of $20 on its pledge.

***

The Temple trust bonds are being sought by those who desire a safe investment. They are selling rapidly. The bonds are for sale by our financial agent, Mr. H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle Street, Chicago, and 412 Exchange Building, Boston, Mass.

***

A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite box ($3.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

A TEMPERANCE POEM.

JOHN ALCOHOL.

John Alcohol, my jo, John,
When we were first acquaint,
I'd siller in my pockets, John,
Which noo, ye ken, I want.
I spent it all in treating, John,
Because I loved you so;
But mark ye how you've treated me,
John Alcohol, my jo.

John Alcohol, my jo, John,
We've been o'er lang thegither;
Sae ye maun tak' ae road, John,
And I will tak' anither;
For we maun tumble down, John,
If hand and hand we go;
And I shall ha'e the bill to pay,
John Alcohol, my jo.

John Alcohol, my jo, John,
Ye've blear'd out a' my e'en,
And lighted up my nose, John,
A fiery sign atween.
My hands wi' palsy shake, John,
My locks are like the snow;
Ye'll surely be the death o' me,
John Alcohol, my jo.

John Alcohol, my jo, John,
'Twas love of you, I ween,
That gar't me rise sae ear, John,
And sit sae late at e'en.
The best o' frien's maun part, John—
It grieves me sair, ye know?
But "we'll gang nae mair to yon toon,"
John Alcohol, my jo.

John Alcohol, my jo, John,
Ye've wrought me muckle skaith;
And yet to part wi' you, John,
I own I'm unco' laith;
But I'll join the temp'rance ranks, John,
Ye needna say me no—
It's better late than ne'er do weel,
John Alcohol, my jo.

—Selected.

THE TEMPERANCE SHOW.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.

Chapter VI.

SOME THINGS THAT CAME OF IT.

Twenty dollars in money! Not all for tickets, to be sure, though many were sold. But at ten cents each you could not expect it. There were twenty dollars though, because the story of the Pansies in some way floated about and touched the generous spot in more hearts than you could have looked for.

And from the twenty dollars what a multitude of blessings and comforts went to Jane and into the Jones' home. Why, it seemed to mean education, wardrobes and ease for the whole six. Yet not a penny was spent for anybody except Jane. She would have been glad to divide had her mother consented. But Mrs. Jones told her it was equal to a division to have her wants looked after so far ahead. For now there was more for all the rest. The boys could have stout shoes as soon as they had worn out what had been given them, and Mrs. Jones herself could afford to have her wringer mended, "and that'll be a luxury I haint dared to hope for."

Friendship for Jane came of it. She had come and gone to and from school and Sunday-school and her poor home unnumbered times, and scores who had met or passed her had not noticed nor taken interest. Now they brightened at sight of her, smiled into her intelligent face, and now and then asked her how she was getting along.

Some of the men actually took pains to speak to Jones and congratulate him, and one man, more practical than the rest, began to give him odd jobs. More wonderful, Jones began to do them, and felt more like a man than he had done in some years, when he actually took home a dollar and gave his wife. I doubt whether he felt much like a man when he saw her gaze at it in astonishment and then begin to cry. His selfish, lazy nature wakened somewhat at that, and he improved enough to go out and ask for work instead of waiting for it. This was the beginning of industry and of whole weeks of sobriety. Mr. Jones was one of the kind who need busy hands to keep out of mischief. I know a good many men who are perfectly steady for months, if only they have steady work, but let the shop shut down for repairs, or any other thing leave them idle, and they at once begin to drink. They are the Jones kind of men.

When two or three, who did not get weary in well-doing, noticed amendment in Mr. Jones, they began to make efforts to draw him farther on toward decency. And though he resisted attempts to get him to church, or to get him to declare himself anxious, or even willing to be anybody, he gradually grew up to what we may call the "sticking point," and when Jane graduated from school he was so much a man that she was not ashamed to see him come in with her mother to listen to her recitation. Jane had come to be the best recitationist in school, not excepting Maggie Meade who had taken to composition strongly. Do you suppose Jane chose a temperance story for her recitation from any turn given to her thoughts by that far-away temperance show? It may be so, but whether so or not she is in great demand at temperance meetings where they need her sort of work, and she serves well and heartily.

From the temperance show came added graces, thoughtfulness and kindness to the hearts of the five young plotters. How glad we ought to be that God gives every humble and faithful worker so much benefit from His work. In this way at least, bread cast upon the waters returns to us. If you want a rich, sweet nature, forget yourself and do something for some one who needs it. You cannot order your life thus without finding your blessed return of larger, deeper sensibilities.

Another thing that came of it was the learning that no truer pleasure can come to a little girl than doing good with a mother to help. How seldom do children take any interest in the benevolent work their mothers do. Perhaps, alas! they do not know anything about it. Maybe the mothers do not realize that the children would like to know and help. The Pansies could have told them better.

All the things that came of it no one can tell. For, while the world stands the influence of good goes on and on. Of bad too? Oh, that we need not say; that, too, goes on and on. But since it does what a need that right acts should multiply and help the world to resist the bad.

Without Miss Robie this story could not be told. It needs a fruitful thought to grow to fruit. A mere wish that good may be done never does good. Therefore, if you think a kind thing, make it more than idle sentiment by getting about the business kind thoughts should inspire. Tell somebody. Interest somebody. Seize every advantage. Make use of all who will help. Lose yourself in your appointed task. Be wise, patient, persistent, and do not expect to turn the world over. Rather be thankful if you can turn a few hearts to a sense of duty.

And when you have, with the aid of your friends, done all you can, tell what came of it if you have a chance. The story of success inspires new endeavors.

THE END.

THE NOBLEMAN'S GREATEST COMPLIMENT.

One wet, foggy, muddy day, a little girl was standing on one side of a street in London, waiting for an opportunity to cross over. Those who have seen London streets on such a day, with their wet and mud, and have watched the rush of cabs, hansoms, omnibuses, and carriages, will not wonder that a little girl should be afraid to try to make her way through such a Babel as that. So she walked up and down, and looked into the faces of those who passed by. Some looked careless, some harsh, some were in haste, and she did not find the one she sought, until at length an aged man, rather tall and spare, and of grave yet kindly aspect, came walking down the street. Looking in his face, she seemed to see in him the one for whom she had been waiting, and she went up to him and whispered, timidly,

"Please, sir, will you help me over?"

The old man saw the little girl safely across the street, and when he afterward told the story, he said, "That little child's trust was the greatest compliment I ever had in my life."

That man was Lord Shaftesbury. He received honors at the hands of a mighty nation; he was complimented with the freedom of the greatest city on the globe; he received the honors conferred by royalty; but the greatest compliment he ever had in his life was when that little unknown girl singled him out in the jostling crowd of a London street, and dared to trust him, stranger though he was, to protect and assist her.

Men carry something of their character written in their faces. Day by day the acts of life chisel their impress on the human countenance; and the record there kept reveals the character of the man, and the history of his life and deeds. If worldliness, and selfishness, and sin are written there, the keen eyes of childhood will not fail to find the record; while if there beams in that countenance the grace and peace of Christ, and the gentleness and kindness of the Lord, even children will be attracted.—Christian Standard.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—This week we have the following story from a little girl only nine years of age:

MILLIE'S TEMPERANCE WORK..

Millie is a little girl six years old. She sometimes gets very lonesome. One night Millie climbed upon her papa's chair to kiss him good-night. But he didn't take her on his lap and kiss her and hold her on his knee until she went to sleep. Instead, he told her roughly to go to bed and that he was tired and did not like to have her bother him. She slipped down and ran to her bed, but she did not go to sleep as he supposed.

Soon he arose and walked softly to the bureau and took from the drawer a bottle containing an amber colored liquid. He drank some from the bottle and put it back in the drawer and lay down on the bed.

"That," said Millie, "is what made my papa act ugly tonight. I will break that nasty old bottle."

So she crept out of bed and taking it threw it out of the window. When her papa awoke in the morning he was very angry, but when Millie explained it, he kissed her and said he wouldn't drink any more and would sign the pledge for her sake. And he kept it, too.

Mendon, Ill. EMMA M. THORNTON.

I wish that many more papas besides this one of Emma's story who put the bottle or glass of intoxicating drink to their lips would sign the pledge and keep it, too. Don't you? This is an interesting little story. Who will write the next one for our Cozy Corner?

Aunt Jane

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

I saw your invitation in THE UNION SIGNAL to the boys and girls to join the Corner. I think it is nice and I would like to join it. I am a temperance girl and a member of the Juvenile Temple. Of course the boys and girls that join will be temperance children. I mean to do all I can for temperance. MARY L. B.

A warm welcome to you! Yes, the Cozy Corner boys and girls are all "temperance children" or will be.

I like to crack soft-shelled nuts. Those two last "pi's" in our Cozy Corner were good—good enough to eat—at least it is easy to digest them. I am eleven years old. I send kind greeting to you and the boys and girls.

Pingree, N. Dak. SCHILLER LOVETT.

We return your cordial greeting, Schiller, and here's a front seat among the "nut-crackers" for you.

I am one of the Cozy Corner girls, and I have a great desire to know Aunt Jane's real name. My brother and myself are learning Miss Willard's rhyme about the presidents. MABEL BROWN.

I am glad to hear that you and your brother are learning the rhyme, Mabel. It will always be useful to you. Aunt Jane ("truly" Aunt Jane) loves to hear from her "Cozy Corner girls," so write again when you can!

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

68.

1. Heavy lifting will strain the muscles.
2. Do unto others as you would be done by.
3. As happy as the day is long.
4. We offer our temperance pledge.
5. If one would gain a high place, he must climb.

A word is hidden in each one of the above sentences The words, rightly guessed, will form the inspiring motto of the Wisconsin Loyal Temperance Legion.

CHARADE.

69.

My first is seen among the fleecy clouds;
My second means to be firm e'en in crowds;
My whole is seen when looking toward the west,
About the time when birds are seeking rest.

LOIS ELDRIDGE.

70.

DIAMOND.

1. A consonant; 2. Something babies wear; 3. Is not a temperance drink; 4. A wager; 5. A consonant.

ROYAL J. DAVIS.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill

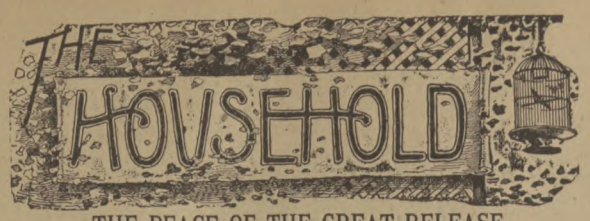
ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JUNE 30.

60.

I N G U L F
N U M E R O
D I R E F U
E V E R
P T
E H
N O
D F
E J
N U
C L
E A S Y

61. Flag, on; flagon.

Correct answers: Violet.



THE PEACE OF THE GREAT RELEASE.

O Time and Change, they range and range,
From sunshine round to thunder!
They glance and go as the great winds blow,
And the best of our dreams drive under;
For Time and Change, estrange, estrange—
And, now they have looked and seen us,
O we that were dear we are all too near
With the thick of the world between us.

O Death and Time, they chime and chime
Like bells at sunset falling!—
They end the song, they right the wrong,
They set the old echoes calling;
For Death and Time bring on the prime
Of God's own chosen weather,
And we lie in the peace of the Great Release
As once in the grass together.

—Selected.

TO A GENIUS.

BY JAMES D. CORROTHERS.

In all thy ways meek modesty is seen;
Fair genius kissed thy brow and sparkles in thine eye;
Thy soul is tranquil as an evening sky
Reflected in some calm lake's glassy sheen
When all the waves atwinkle dream between
Their shadowy banks, and listen silently
To all the night bird says. Oh, certainly,
In thee God sees His breathing image! Green
Meadows twilight-hued, and dusky bars
Where lows the evening herd, are not more fair
Than is thy mind that can with tender care
Muse on a drooping rosebud doomed to die,
Or, fired from above, through elemental wars,
Gird the round earth and finger all the stars.

Greensboro, N. C.

WORDS TO THE WISE.

BY ABBY MORTON DIAZ.

A CHANCE REMARK.

"Ah, glad to see you, Edwards. Come right in. Take a chair. Better throw off your coat, else you won't feel it when you go out, as Sister Jane says."

"Thanks. Dear me, Gibson, how your wood fire does brighten up things. Comfortable chair, very. Still studious, I see. Pray what are you poring over now?"

"You would never guess. A petition left here for Jane to sign. The women desire to express their opinion on various matters by the method called voting. But Jane never will sign it. She's an opposer, Jane is."

"That shows her good sense, Gibson, and your good influence. But what do you find there so interesting? Your visage betokens deep thought."

"Again, Edwards, you would never guess. I was thinking, my friend, that—hem! I was thinking—that perhaps—I—ought—to sign it."

"Ha, ha! A good joke. 'Joseph Gibson and others. Whereas,' and so on and so on."

"But, Edwards, I am in earnest."

"No! You can never mean it."

"Yes, I mean that signing this paper may be my bounden duty."

"Who converted you?"

"No one, Edwards. I am not converted. I am only on the anxious seat."

"But what brought you there?"

"It was just a chance word spoken by Aunt 'Phosie. In glancing over this heading she remarked carelessly, 'I wonder why it is that women folks, when they want to do things, should have to ask men folks!' Somehow her query kept running in my mind. I thought of all the progressive admittances of women, first to public schools, then to high schools, medical schools, law schools, college annexes; of the opposition to allowing them these privileges, to allowing them to speak in public or to preach in pulpits, and I asked myself, why allowing? I remember hearing my father say that in slavery times a world's anti-slavery convention was called in London, and that among the American delegates were women of high character and abilities, leaders in the movement, but that for reason of being women they were refused admittance. Women and men were enslaved together, women and men were workers for freedom together, why not together have held council? But my puzzling question is this: Whence got man this right to allow and to exclude and to forbid? Woman has moral perception, we know that, and a guiding conscience, we know that, and is an accountable being, we know that, and, therefore, it seems meddlesome, yes, and arbitrary, for us to plan her life for her. Why has this been done? How came we into our commanding position?"

"But surely, Gibson, there is something in the Scriptures regarding this matter. There is the text, 'Let your women keep silence in the church.'"

"Yes, Edwards, but men are not commanded to stop them from speaking. The word 'let' is used in a general sense. 'Let him that is on the housetop not come down.' Do any suppose that under the given circumstances they must compel all on the housetops to remain there? Not at all. The injunction is laid upon the housetop persons. It is their affair. Just so this whole matter concerning women is their own affair entirely. And it is very conceited in us men to suppose ourselves expected to attend to it. Women should decide for themselves, and leave us responsible only for our own behavior."

"But, Gibson, suppose that from ignorance they decide wrongly, their opportunities have been so few?"

"Still, it is their affair. Theirs only. Do we find that in regard to their conduct generally man stands valiantly blocking the path of all wrong-doing, forcing them back? No; they are left to choose their own course and take the consequences. Why so much solicitude as to the wickedness and danger of this special act? Where shall the line be drawn between the duty questions to be settled by woman herself and those we are to settle for her? and who shall draw it? Has she moral perception at some times and not at other times? A guiding conscience ditto? Judging power ditto? This is not a question of shirking my duty. I am willing to be guide, counselor and judge; but to tell the truth, Edwards, I doubt my competency to act these parts in all cases. Now there's Jane, competent teacher of a high grade school, and constantly introducing original methods. She helped prepare me for college, helped me with my themes, helped me pecuniarily. I should figure well as the judge and guide of Jane! Still, if this thing is a divinely natural law, a principle of action, it must work in all cases, for principles do not vary, and I ought cheerfully to perform the duties involved, and what is more, prepare myself for them. But think what this will demand of me! For questions as to what women ought to do, and need to do, will be forever coming up, and also individual cases, probably each different from every other. Now, in this matter of preaching, a man is supposed to choose the occupation because he feels himself to be divinely inspired, that he has a message to deliver. Can a woman have no such inspiration, no message? Is one-half of the human race thus cut off from the Father of all?"

"I see, Gibson, there is much to be considered in what you say. But there are still other considerations. Yonder document has not quite brought me to the anxious seat. I am yet some way from a willingness to extend suffrage to women."

"But, Edwards, how came it ours to extend? And the privileges we have more than begun to share with them, how came these ours to share? Also, I want to know why it is that men generally have been so far in advance of women generally as to capacity for inventing, for discovering, for scientific and philosophic research, for producing masterpieces in art and literature? How came we so to the front? so to the top?"

"Gibson, on these questions behold in me the most ignorant of the ignorant. But I have an inquiring mind and am much given to investigating the unknown. I will do this much for you; I will trace this matter back to its beginnings and let you know my conclusions."

Belmont, Mass.

ANOTHER VIEW OF THE SUNDAY QUESTION FOR CHILDREN.

[A true story told at the Colorado State Convention.]

BY E. M. C.

The woman whose story I want to tell you is a very commonplace woman, of meagre education, indifferent health, and straitened circumstances. But she had an overmastering love of souls. And the thought that any soul which owed its existence to her should be eternally lost, filled her with absolute horror. Nothing in all the range of human experience seemed to her so terrible as that.

From her marriage she prayed constantly that the Lord would never give her a child that should not also be His child. And then she set herself deliberately to work with the Lord to help answer her own prayers. She preëmpted their young minds for Bible truth, and their hearts while they were yet tender for the sweet and lovely character of Jesus. So that when the sower of tares reached them, he found no unoccupied ground for his noxious weeds. Her nursery knew more of Bible stories than fairy or other sort, and from the very first the authority of a Bible verse was indisputable, and a loving, sorrowful talk and prayer was found to be far more potent than punishment, although this, too, was sometimes necessary.

She gave up society almost entirely, and church and missionary work, so far as they conflicted with her duty to her children. She literally gave herself to them, and counted no sacrifice too great that was helpful in moulding their characters. "This one thing I do" seemed to be the rule of her life during those years. On Sabbath evenings instead of going to church she made a children's prayer-meeting at which the difficulties of the week were talked over, mistakes corrected, and the thoughts and feelings of each one freely expressed, so that "mother" knew how to suit her reading and talk to the perplexities of each. All took part in offering prayer, and so were soon relieved of that fear of the sound of their own voices which keeps so many Christians in bondage all their lives.

Now as to results from this life of devotion. When her oldest daughter was eleven years old she became very anxious to be a Christian. Of a very strong, self-reliant nature, she had great difficulty in accepting salvation as a free gift. The next in age was of a dependent disposition, and listening to the mother's talks, explanations and prayers, was enabled to surrender herself to the Lord more readily than her sister.

Thus it went on, until she had the delight of seeing them all "born of God," while yet under twelve years of age. Indeed, the Lord gave her more than she asked, for they were all converted at home, He thus making her their spiritual as well as their natural mother. She has had the satisfaction of sitting at the Lord's table with them all many times.

These children know nothing about theaters or dancing or cards or liquors, but they are presidents, secretaries and treasurers of missionary, Christian Endeavor and temperance societies.

One of the daughters, while a school-girl, was in the habit of devoting herself to a certain schoolmate, until, by prayer and effort, she had persuaded her to come into the kingdom, and she had the happiness of seeing three so brought in, in the same year.

The son had the unique experience of being ordained an elder in the Presbyterian church a few weeks before he reached his majority. He had helped establish a mission Sunday-school, that rapidly grew into a church, and he was elected and ordained on the strength of the reputation he had made for himself, in spite of his youth.

Three of the daughters have been or are now presidents of local W. C. T. Unions, and they are all earnest, devoted, consistent followers of the Lord Jesus. The two who are married have chosen Christian companions, and established family altars where the fire of devotion burns, (not fitfully) but steadily. And so, while she was sometimes blamed and often felt that she was doing so little for God, while they were young, her influence and work are now multiplied many times, and the multiplication yet goes on in other homes long after she has gone to her rest.

Now, then, mothers, here is encouragement for you. This woman's own life was far from perfect. Her environment was not particularly favorable. Her children had the inherent depravity of human nature, and yet the Lord used her for their salvation, because she was persistent in prayer and tried to do her part.

Denver, Col.

THE SECRET OF MR. GLADSTONE'S POWER.

In the interest of "the greatest number's greatest good" we give the opinion of a famous physician concerning good health as the secret of much of Gladstone's power:

"Mr. Gladstone is perhaps the most distinguished person of this age, and well he may be. He has one of the most superb bodies ever given to man and he takes the very best care of it. His chest and all the vital organs are large. His health is excellent. At the age of eighty-two he seems possessed of most of his physical powers to almost as high a degree as at fifty. If he feels overworked at all, which is seldom, he goes to bed and stays there till well. This is a great panacea with him.

"First among his mental qualities one may reckon power of going to sleep, for this is a mental power as much as that of memory. No matter what cares press upon him, he dismisses them all the moment he touches the bed. If this is not an element of greatness, it certainly contributes to it in a most marked manner. Many men who have only achieved mediocre greatness would have achieved it in a higher degree if they had cultivated this power of sleeping as Mr. Gladstone has.

"Next comes his habit of exercise. His large lungs require a great deal of fresh air, and he takes vigorous exercise out of doors, but not to exhaustion, either with his axe or in other ways. A cold bath every morning seems to him a delight, as it is to so many Englishmen. He masticates his food thoroughly, and this is one secret of his splendid digestion. His stomach is never upset, which few can say.

"His mental work is done without much friction. His mind is orderly in its workings and he knows how to get the best out of it, as well as out of his subordinates, whether in a liberal cabinet or in his office stenographers. Smoking he detests and he has always abstained from very strong or fiery stimulants, using only very moderately light wines, more probably from habit than from any real good they do him.

"Finally comes his memory, which, according to Mr. Stead is 'almost terrible.' It makes it very bad sometimes for those who attempt to dispute his recollection of a fact. This combination of memory with great reasoning power is very rare indeed. Here you have the analysis of the qualities which make Gladstone great and keep him young. They are, first, a splendid, healthy physique; secondly, rational care of it, and especially his power of throwing off care and sleeping well after exacting work; and third, system and order in his work.

"So far as others can possess themselves of the same bodily and mental conditions, they, too, may have equally good results in their lives."

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
LADY HENRY SOMERSET,
MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH,
MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, Office: The Temple Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—MISS ESTHER PUGH, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

W. C. T. U. COURSE OF STUDY.—AUGUST READINGS.

Bible.—"The Model Worker," Mrs. J. K. Barney.
Responsive.—"Railroad Work," Jennie Smith.
Topical.—Railroad Temperance Association Constitution Railroad Leaflets: No. 1, The Traveler's Psalm; No. 2, The Moral Suasion Railroad, No. 3, The Good Times Railroad.

Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings.—Mal. 4: 2.

OUR BILL OF FARE.

Our contributed pages this week contain a poem of faith entitled, "A Song in the Night," by Alice Cora Hammond. A second installment of Elizabeth Cumings' true story is followed by the second of Mrs. Chas. Henrotin's articles on woman's work for the World's Fair. "Why I am a Prohibitionist," by our World's and National president, should decide the question for every inquirer. "The Work of Lucy Stone" is graphically related by Ellen Battelle Dietrick, and the efficacy of the gospel cure is vouched for by many true incidents in "Side-Lights for Workers." The eye lights with interest on the items in the President's Column and concerning the Temperance Temple before reading the inviting Household and Children's pages. The World's W. C. T. U. and News from the Field occupy two pages of fine reading. The editorials sweep the field of current events and topics.

ONE OF OUR RED-LETTER DAYS.

July 11, 1892, is a notable day in our annals, and we think it would be well to add it to the number of those already officially included in the "red-letter calendar," sent out from our publishing house, and to celebrate on each return of that date in all our local unions the founding of the first woman's hospital in the world devoted to the promulgation of the great scientific fact that alcoholics are not an essential in the treatment of disease.

The greatest work of the white-ribboners is to produce "the arrest of thought" concerning the various branches of the temperance work in the brain of the average man and woman. By heredity and environment, a majority of well-meaning people still believe that alcoholic liquors, while harmful as beverages, are helpful as remedies. But we deem this to be one of the scientific superstitions, handed down from less enlightened ages, and we have the authority of medical men of the finest intellect and largest outlook in favor of the modern belief that alcoholics are unnecessary in materia medica. With people in general, however, "seeing is believing," hence the practical spirit that has always been predominant in our society led to the founding of a hospital, in which this view of the subject could be carried from the realm of theory into that of proof.

The first move in this direction was made in 1883 at the Detroit convention, when a few women gathered to consult as to the practicability of a new departure involving an outlay of money for which we were not then prepared. A board of directors was subsequently formed, among whom the names of Mrs. James B. Hobbs, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Mrs. Mary Bannister Willard, Mrs. Evelyn Peters, stand prominent. But, though much conference was had, the hospital was not opened until May of 1886, in a large building on Cottage Grove Avenue, opposite what was then the Chicago University. Here it was maintained for six years, and suffered from setbacks that crippled while they could not destroy its usefulness. In 1889 a new charter was obtained.

Since then prosperity has attended the enterprise, and it has paid its own way. Mrs. Judge Baker, of Evanston, Ill., came to the presidency of the board at a crucial period in its history, and her sturdy good sense and business capacity were of untold value to us in that emergency. She was obliged to relinquish the position in 1891, on account of duties calling her and her family to Missouri, when the position was accepted by Mrs. Mary E. Kline, another business woman, indeed a successful merchant on the South Side, Chicago, and she is advancing still farther every interest of the hospital. Mrs. Calista E. Bigelow, 539 West Adams street, Chicago, is now the treasurer, and has a "business head on her shoulders" that would have made her fortune had she devoted herself to practical affairs. Mrs. L. H. Plumb, the former treasurer, is a banker in her own right, and one of the most capable friends the hospital has known. Rarely has an enterprise been fitted out with so many "square-headed," as well as level-headed women; not only have they wrought untiringly, but they have given generously.

The Clara Barton Training School for Nurses has been one of the most successful enterprises carried out in connection with the hospital. Here capable young women have already been graduated, and scores are knocking for admission at the doors of the hospital. The time required in the course of study is two years, including the month of probation. Dr. Ousley, a graduate of Hahnemann, is the resident physician, and by her skill and tact has won the confidence and affection of the board of directors and of the patients. Dr. Charles G. Davis, than whom Chicago has not a more successful physician, sends his patients to the hospital, and other leading members of the profession are beginning to do the same. No one school of medicine has control, but any physician bringing patients to the hospital, treats them according to the school to which he belongs. In the last year one hundred and twenty-three patients were admitted, and one hundred and forty-six varieties of disease treated. The number of dispensary patients treated was three hundred and sixty-five; number of women, one hundred and eighteen; number of men, twenty-eight. Eighty-five of the patients were Americans, five Canadians, nine Germans, thirteen Irish. Mrs. Sarah M. Hornby, the matron, has been with us for years, and has made for herself a large place in the hearts of all connected with the institution.

The building on Cottage Grove avenue was not large enough for our use, and was not sufficiently well adapted to the purposes of a hospital, for which reasons the board has removed the institution to No. 1619 Diversey avenue, on the North Side, only four blocks from the lake and three from beautiful Lincoln Park, the finest in the city. The building was erected for hospital purposes, and is in admirable order, with steam furnace, elevator, electric lights and bells, and all modern conveniences. It has been beautifully furnished and dedicated, and accommodates from fifty to sixty patients besides the officers and nurses. State W. C. T. U's and our ever thoughtful Y's have fitted up several of the rooms in most attractive style, so that they are as homelike as if they were actually part of the homes of our own white-ribboners. Among the most beautiful of the rooms it is not invidious to mention those furnished by Mrs. Hobbs, Mrs. Ralph Greenlee, Mrs. C. E. Bigelow and Miss Katherine A. Jackson.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL.

Such was the situation when we met at two o'clock on July 11, 1892, to open the new hospital, with hearts grateful to God for all the way in which He has led us, and most of all for the bright outlook of the present.

The board of directors met in the reception parlor. Present: Mesdames Kline, president; Hobbs, first vice-president; Plumb, Bigelow, treasurer; Berry, Wilkins, of Rockford; Mrs. Judge Baker, Miss Katherine A. Jackson, Miss Ellen Snyder, secretary.

Mrs. Bigelow came forward with a bouquet of exquisite roses, sixty in number, and presented them to that "rose among women," Mrs. James B. Hobbs, in the following graceful speech:

"Dear Mrs. Hobbs:—Will you please accept from the board of directors of the National Temperance Hospital these roses? They tell the number of birthdays you have passed, and one besides.

"Many of us know the toil of these years which you have so freely given to alleviate the sufferings of others, and we appreciate not only what you have accomplished for the good of those about you, but even more, if possible, we appreciate you and your love for every good cause, and most of all for the Woman's National Temperance Hospital, of which you are one of the founders, and were for years president of the board of trustees.

"These roses will fade, so we present to you something that will last longer, namely, this volume, entitled, 'The Heroines of Shakespeare.' Mrs. Jameson has classified these heroines into four divisions: 'Characters of intellect, of passion and imagination, of affection, and historical characters.' Any one of us could doubtless put into her proper grade the world-wide names of Portia, Juliet, Ophelia, Desdemona, Cleopatra, Katherine of Arragon and Lady Macbeth. Our heroine, whom to-day we canonize, 'Mary, the mammoth-hearted' (M. M. H.), belongs to no one of these divisions alone, for truly her intellect has planned wisely for the good of our cause, her imagination has beheld visions of stately piles of brick and mortar, her affection has been manifested in too many ways to mention, and who dares to say that she will not be one of the brightest historical characters when the record of the hospital is made?

"We congratulate you, beloved sister, on this your natal day, and pray God's blessings to rest upon you and this hospital forevermore.

We wish a stenographer had been present so that we might have given the reply of Mrs. Hobbs, for this was a "really truly" surprise, and her gentle voice was suffused, as was her gracious countenance, with deep feeling as she told of her love for the enterprise and the women who had stood by her so faithfully, and as she predicted what should be in the future for this center of helpful sympathy and beneficent power. Then each one of us made bold to kiss the cheek of one who in these eighteen years of earnest and devoted toil we have learned to love for those qualities of mind and heart that made her the ideal of a woman philanthropist in whom strength and gentleness form the amalgam warranted to hold the hearts that gather round her.

But now, in the large parlors scores of invited guests were assembled waiting for the exercises, over which Mrs. Kline presided in her usual self-poised and sisterly fashion. A quartette of young ladies from the famous college in Wheaton, Ill., gave us choice music. As the occasion was historic we record their names: Misses Anna and Kate Dresser and Misses May and Jessie Plumb, the latter daughters of our former hospital treasurer. Then Rev. Mr. Swartz, of Kenwood, led us in a prayer of devoted earnestness and spirituality, wafting the great enterprise and those devoted to it into the conscious presence of Him whose name is Love. Next Rev. Dr. Charles Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, and son of that stalwart reformer, Rev. Dr. Jonathan Blanchard, lately deceased, spoke in his serious, true-hearted way of women and their development, of temperance and its divine meaning, of Christ and the healing that had gone out from His gospel, without which not a hospital would be on the face of the earth this day, and least of all one planted as this one is on the picket line of progress. We then had a speech from Rev. R. E. Martin, pastor of Grace M. E. church, in which our philanthropic friends, Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs are leaders. Mr. Martin is a young man of fine presence and the mellow voice that betokens a strong and genial character. We were proud to have him inform the audience that he learned his letters out of a primer held by us in the early days of our public school-teaching in a piney-wood, red school-house nine miles west of Chicago, and away back in 1860. He is an optimist by nature and by practice, and his words of cheer were a fitting "send-off" to the enterprise on this glad day of its larger hope.

It then fell to our lot to speak of the meaning of this novel movement; of its purpose to throw a still added protection around that choicest thing on earth, the organ of the mind, that its integrity might be less menaced and more conserved, and to commend this temple, dedicated alike to sorrow and to love, to pain and its relief, to disease and its amelioration.

We then visited every room in the large building, enjoyed the outlook over the city and the down-look upon the pleasant, shady, grassy lawn with seats and arbors. Refreshments in the homelike dining room concluded the entertainment, and we all went our ways more than ever thankful to Him who has thus far made every enterprise undertaken in His name by the white-ribboners, a growing power for humanity's protection, development and happiness.

In view of what we have here stated, we have a further suggestion for our readers. Aside from contributions, the furnishing of the new building has involved an outlay of five hundred dollars which is to be paid within six weeks, and for which we hereby appeal to our local unions. The sum is not large; the hospital is a great and growing power, and a great benevolence; to send a dollar, or two, or three, or five to Mrs. C. E. Bigelow, 539 West Adams street, Chicago, will not cramp or embarrass any of our organizations. THE UNION SIGNAL staff will lead the way giving five dollars apiece to help out in this emergency, for we do not believe in asking others to undertake anything to which we will not ourselves lend a hand. Let us see what can be done by a society so earnest as ours, even if the call comes in mid-summer! Hold a meeting in the interest of non-alcoholic medication; make the statements that we have made in this number of THE UNION SIGNAL; read extracts from the leaflet brought out by our Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, and entitled "Doctor and Druggist," then ask those present for a dime collection. You will have had a good meeting, helped to make sentiment of vital value, and secured the money almost without knowing it.

We count on hearing that you accounted this call worthy of your action. Miss Mary Allen West, senior editor of this paper, and one of the most devoted members of the board of directors that the enterprise has ever known, has written columns of clear and noble editorials to set forth the movement. They have gone into the minds and hearts of tens of thousands; shall we not have a response to what she has said in the past which we are but now recalling to your minds? We know it will cheer her in her work on the Pacific coast if she can hear that the friends of the hospital raised five hundred dollars to complete the handsome re-fitting and re-housing of an institution to which she devoted much thought and care.

THE YOUNG RECRUITS.

"Turn we now to the Gentiles." This was the verdict of a great apostle who was disavowed by his own people. White-ribboners have had a similar experience in these eighteen years of their slow and toilsome march. While the results of our efforts have been such as to cut the name of the W. C. T. U. deep in the annals of the age, they have not been at all commensurate with the expectations of the Crusaders or the calamity that called us into action.

The campaign of education now waves its harvest in every land, but the great country at large yet remains to be possessed. We have done little more than to send out the spies. Probably the best result that has been realized thus far is that we have learned what not to do. We have found the lines of least resistance. No thoughtful temperance woman if asked to-day what is the work that yields the largest interest on the investment of time and effort, but will answer, "What we do for the children and youth." It was well to seek the lost sheep, "astray on the mountains bleak and bare," but it is from the lambs of the flock that we are to win the allies of the future. We must build into the character and habits of children what we expect to realize from their maturer years. We cannot reap where we did not sow. If the reserves of the army are to be equal to the future's great emergency they must be drilled as well as armed. For this reason we have urged the admission to our National W. C. T. U. Conventions of all delegates regularly chosen by the Y societies and the Loyal Temperance Legions. The basis could be so arranged as not to make this element large, but it should have representation and would bring inspiration to the veterans, and power to the young recruits.

We cannot express the delight we feel in the progress that is being made in this direction. Wisconsin leads the van. She has the conviction of her courage, as well as the courage of her convictions. The second convention of the L. T. L. delegates was held last week, and Anna A. Gordon, World's superintendent of the juvenile work, and associate of Mrs. Helen G. Rice, of Boston, in the National L. T. L. work, went by invitation to present their diplomas to the young recruits. She has written, by our urgent request, the following account of the convention, which we, at Rest Cottage, have read with tearful eyes, and to which we call the earnest and devout attention of every white-ribboner who loves THE UNION SIGNAL. We incorporate Miss Gordon's sketch into this editorial, that it may come before a larger constituency, and with all the official sanction that the general officers who are in profound sympathy with this movement can give. Here is what she has to say:

"It has long been known that temperance boys and girls can work and pray for the cause; can march and sing for our blessed reform; but on July 6 and 7, at Delavan, Wis., it was proved that they can conduct a state convention quite as creditably as their seniors of the W. C. T. U.

"One year ago, under the inspiration of Mrs. Annie J. Bradbury, state superintendent of the L. T. L., a state Loyal Temperance Legion was organized at Milwaukee composed of those who had completed the course of study and passed such an examination as entitled them to the L. T. L. diploma. State officers were elected, and this convention passed into history as the first of its kind ever held. Miss Alice Guernsey, who was present and helped materially to make it a success, has its records carefully and artistically preserved.

"Delavan is a quiet, rural town of shaded streets and pleasant homes, and the coming of the young delegates caused no little commotion especially among the young people, some thirty of whom were ready to take their diplomas on the eventful 'graduation night.' Never was a warmer welcome extended than greeted the eighty or more delegates, all of whom were in their 'teens' and who were in most cases accompanied by adult teachers and superintendents.

"The Baptist church was beautifully decorated with daisies, clover-blossoms and pond-lilies against a background of ferns and arbor vitæ. A large globe encircled with white ribbon hung over the platform just above a large photograph of the world's president, and arched across all was the motto of the National L. T. L. department, 'Tremble, King Alcohol, we shall grow up!' Silk banners belonging to the different companies with Wisconsin's motto, 'The Future is Ours,' also 'Lifting Others as we climb,' 'Be Hardy and Endure,' with many others, added greatly to the effectiveness of the scene.

"A more devoted and indefatigable leader than Mrs. Bradbury does not live, and the thoroughness of her work with the boys and girls is most commendable.

"The convention opened on the afternoon of the 6th with delegates from eighteen towns, their seats being indicated by neat bannerettes. On the platform were the four young officers, Cornelia Powers, of Delavan, president; Neville Mowatt, of Ashland, recording secretary; Addie Johnson, of Milwaukee, corresponding secretary; and Robert Davis, of Racine, treasurer. A prophecy of the time when, after the same fashion, men and women shall combine to conduct all public enterprises.

"The graceful girl of sixteen who stands facing her first convention, holds in her hand a little white gavel made for the occasion by a ten-year-old girl in the Slöyd School of Industries connected with Mrs. Bradbury's Loyal Temperance Legion in Milwaukee. With no one near her to advise or suggest, she conducts the opening session of the meeting with perfect ease and composure, introducing the speakers and appointing committees as if presiding were second nature and had been the principal occupation of her short life. A young man from the senior L. T. L. of Delavan conducted the devotional exercises and a delightful address of welcome and response were given by the young people.

"A parliamentary drill at each session in charge of Wisconsin's new state W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. V. H. Campbell, brought to light the fact that these on-coming men and women had been well trained in the mental gymnastics by which a person learns to bring his opinions before a deliberative body. An 'amendment to an amendment' was a favorite motion and never failed to receive proper treatment by the wide-awake president who seemed to grow more clear-headed as the complications of the parliamentary situation increased.

"Other interesting features of the program consisted of reports from each branch of the L. T. L. represented. A most helpful talk on 'The Ideal Y,' by Mrs. Maude R. Barkey, state secretary of the Y. W. C. T. U., addresses by Miss Alice Guernsey, Mrs. Hanchet, state W. C. T. U. secretary, and the pastors of Delavan. Plenty of lively singing from 'Marching Songs;' the presentation of a banner to the junior L. T. L., of Delavan, and reports of committees on resolutions and plans of work.

"Telegrams of greeting were sent to Miss Frances E. Willard and Mrs. Helen G. Rice, 'our none-such' of a National superintendent, with the electric words, 'We are coming to the rescue and the future is ours.'

"The singing was always inspiring and Samuel McKillop, the boy soloist from Milwaukee, delighted everybody with his full, rich, soprano voice.

"One item of great interest connected with this convention did not appear on the program. On Thursday morning, one-half hour before the time for opening the convention, the young people gathered at the church with flags and banners, and formed in line two by two for a march through the town. 'Out into the sunshine went the procession,' and when they reached the main street they sang with a will their rallying cry, 'Saloons, saloons, saloons must go!' This 'marching song' arrested the public ear as nothing else had done. All business was suspended and the people gathered in front of their stores and shops to witness the novel sight, and it is claimed by an eye-witness that several saloon-keepers closed their doors until the children were out of sight and hearing.

"Another memorable fact is that these delegates found no difficulty in raising $50 to pay the expenses of their beloved Mrs. Bradbury to the next National W. C. T. U. Convention at Denver, Col., and their pledges were so generous and prompt that the amount was subscribed in a very few minutes. Let us give this 'Temperance Christiana' of Wisconsin, who, starting for a better civilization, 'takes the children with her,' a royal welcome at our next National gathering.

"Delavan's 'oldest inhabitant,' Mrs. Phœnix, felt the drawing power of this unique convention, and although in her ninety third year, came to give the children her saintly benediction and God-speed.

"On the first evening a Demorest medal contest entertained Delavan people and their enthusiastic visitors, and on the second evening occurred the 'president's address' and the graduating exercises. The church was filled to overflowing when sixty-two boys and girls from twelve to twenty years of age marched to the front seats reserved for the graduating class. Tears sprang to our eyes as we looked into their bright young faces and realized on what a solid basis of education, as well as inspiration, our L. T. L. work is founded, and what a powerful ally we tired workers shall soon have in these devoted young recruits.

"The little people of the Delavan Junior L. T. L. occupied the first ten minutes of the program, presenting Mrs. Bradbury with a basket of flowers and a charming welcome, followed by two recitations, that 'brought down the house,' and two songs, equally well received.

"An admirable salutatory, by Robert Davis, the state treasurer, and valedictory speech by Emily Moe, of Waterford, with music, a paper on Prohibition and a recitation, were all enjoyed by the sympathetic audience; but their interest centered chiefly in the president's address, which was dignified in diction, hopeful in sentiment and delivered in a manner betokening that all the statesmen of the future will not belong to the now regnant sex.

"The state banner to be presented to the local L. T. L. having the largest number of graduates during the year, remained with the enterprising society at Delavan. Earnest words from Mrs. Campbell closed the exercises, after which the children repeated in concert our W. C. T. U. benediction, 'The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace,' and so in the words their white-ribbon mothers use in parting from each other the detachment of light infantry went its way to the great field!"

It is remarkable, the ardent interest felt in the public weal by the manufacturers of Duffy's whisky! The Chicago Tribune and other papers in league with the liquor traffic advertise it under the heading, "Death in Water." They might well say "Death in Fire Water." But what they go on to set forth is "the millions of dangers that cold water contains, the rapidity with which these dangers increase" and their earnest exhortation is, "Don't take any chances for the very best water is full of germs and few people have any idea how impure even the purest drinking water is. From a single one of these germs comes more than 16,500,000 descendants in a single day."

In contemplation of such tender solicitude not only crocodiles but basilisks might weep.

***

The directory of the World's Fair has invited Miss Mary S. Monroe, a Chicago poet and contributor to the Century, to write the dedicatory ode for the World's Fair. Miss Monroe wrote the ode when the great Auditorium was dedicated, and received warm encomiums from good judges of poetry. She has published a volume, and is vouched for by our critics. Women may well be proud that for the first time in history a woman has been invited to do that which would have brought added distinction to any poet living! It will be remembered that Sidney Lanier wrote the ode for the World's Fair in 1876 and as a result of so doing attained to a continental reputation.

As we write that sentence it occurs to us,—why should any one desire a continental reputation? Probably for the same reason and on the same principle that sparks fly upward and water always tends to rise as high as its source. It is a law of mind as well as matter to seek the heights, and, when this is done by the normal evolution of one's own powers with kindly consideration of others in their efforts to do the same, the attempt is a noble one and to frown upon it is simply a relic of asceticism and an indication of fanaticism—"so there!"

***

Lady Paget is a vegetarian and makes some significant points in her recent paper in the Nineteenth Century. Among other things she says: "In affections of the heart vegetarianism is often the only remedy and the wonderful results are not difficult to explain in a case where rest often means cure, if one reflects that, while the meat-eater's heart has seventy-two beats in the minute, the vegetarian's has only fifty eight beats, therefore, twenty thousand beats less in the course of the twenty-four hours. Insomnia and nervousness are affected in the same way; there is less wear and more repose in the constitution under a vegetarian régime."

***

Two white-ribboners were discussing at the dinner-table that greatest of all questions—immortality. The younger said, "If I could be sure of endless life upon this planet as happily, usefully and painlessly spent as my years have thus far been, I should be glad to remain if the choice lay between that and annihilation; but if the choice were given between endless life such as I have known, which has been useful, happy and painless except for such seasons of bereavement and disappointment as have enriched my life, or going to an unknown life through the gateway of what we call 'death' I should consider myself an ingrate if I did not say, 'Let it be as He will who made me and started me out with a brain to think, a heart to feel, a hand to work.

"'I will not doubt the love untold
Which not my worth or want have bought,
Which wooed me young and wooes me old,
And to this moment me hath brought.'

"I then conclude," she said, "that the fact of my preferring to leave the future with Him who created me even though I might, under the supposition I have made, have endless life on satisfactory terms upon this earth, is a sure proof that I have great faith in God and overmastering faith in that immortality where all my ideals shall be met, and they are so much greater than anything this world affords that I would not risk the losing of them even to obtain the certainty of an endless, happy life upon this earth." And then the elder said, with a serene and steadfast look, "The choice of which you speak, to remain upon this earth forever under the best conditions or to dare death in the hope of something greater, would never present the slightest temptation to my mind. I have such faith in God that I expect soon to realize the truth of those wonderful words, 'eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the joys that God hath laid up for them that love Him.'"

ON DUTY.

World's W. C. T. U.

A SPIRITUALLY-MINDED CONVENTION.

The Dominion convention of the W. C. T. U. met in Ottawa, Ont., on the 17th of June. The session closed on the 22d. Mrs. Judge Foster, of Knowlton, Que., in the absence of Mrs. Stedman, of Fredericton, presided in her own inimitable manner. Miss Tilley, the faithful corresponding secretary, Mrs. Williams, the energetic treasurer, and Mrs. Rutherford, the capable recording secretary, were each in their respective positions on the platform. Among the guests were Miss Greenwood, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs. Burpi, of Houltin, Me., Mr. Carson, of the Dominion Alliance, and two clergymen from England, the Rev. Mr. DeWolfer, vicar of St. Mary's, Sheffield, and the Rev. Mr. Madden, of St. Luke's, Liverpool.

Delegates were present from Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime provinces. The meetings during the entire session were characterized by a spirit of helpfulness and love. A Dominion officer said: "This has been such a spiritually-minded convention."

In reference to the hour of prayer, Miss Greenwood commended the Canadian women for their loyalty to this set time, when business was suspended for the restfulness of communion with the Leader of Christian temperance endeavor.

There was much laughter, a complete absence of frowns, and just once a few happy tears shed during the sessions. These last came on the final day, when during the Y conference, a beautiful young girl in childlike language told the story of her conversion, which occurred while Mrs. Barney was holding evangelistic services in Ottawa.

The address of welcome from Mrs. Tilton, of Ottawa, conveyed a wealth of genuine hospitality, and in the reply Mrs. Todd, of New Brunswick, gave a charming word-painting of scenes by the seashore at the incoming of the tide. In realistic language she depicted in comparison the onward sweep of the temperance flood which is yet to envelope the House of Commons, and wipe iniquity from the land.

The address of the president, Mrs. Judge Foster, was one of deep interest. She said that "to-day the prayers of the whole Dominion were going up that our legislators might fashion their laws after the laws of the King of kings." She said, "Politics established the saloon, and politics must remove it." The whole address was a masterly effort.

At one of the evening meetings, when five minute speeches were in order, Mrs. Todd gave reminiscences of the wonderful World's Convention in Boston. Miss Phelps depicted the past and the present—the age when women did not allow women to pray in public and men were tabooed from a W. C. T. U. convention during business and only allowed admittance for devotional exercises.

At another public meeting the distinguished clergymen from England delighted their audience with their wit and wisdom, sustained by the force of consecrated, godly, temperance lives and teaching. It was to Miss Tilley, of Toronto, that the convention was indebted for the visit of these gentlemen, who were en route to British Columbia.

The annual sermon and Bible reading of Miss Greenwood were thoroughly appreciated and were conducive to the spirituality of the assembly.

The unions in Canada now number 362, the members 6,982; 17,318 signatures have been secured to the pledge during the past year, and 91,790 pages of literature distributed. A decrease in saloons is reported from British Columbia, Quebec and Ontario. For the coming year three new departments have been added to the plan of work, namely: Houses of entertainment and coffee houses, the World's W. C. T. U. missionary society and school of methods.

A few changes were made in the superintendents. Mrs. Carman, of Montreal, will have charge of the press work; Mrs. Gordon, of Ottawa, will be a power as Dominion superintendent of narcotics; Mrs. Alexander, of Ottawa, will have watch of Sabbath observance; Mrs. Cowan, of Gananaque, will oversee the work among soldiers, while Mrs. Allan, of London, Ont., will usher in a bright year for the happy Y's who will come under her kindly supervision.

Stirring resolutions—over twenty in all—were passed. Among these reference might be made to the condemning the bar in the House of Commons. Also to our asking the convention to call on all ministers to urge by precept and example the sin of voting for a political party in favor of the license system. Resolutions were also passed respecting the traffic in Chinese girls in British Columbia, and one regarding the opium question expressed disapprobation of the use of tobacco among ministers, Sunday-school superintendents and temperance lecturers.

During the past year there has been a movement to improve sanitary matters vital to women's welfare; this resulted in some improvements in the Factory Act. A good Tobacco Act prohibiting tobacco, cigars, etc., to minors under eighteen has also passed and will come into force on the first of July. Another important outcome of W C T. U. activity is the law for suppressing obscene literature. This bill, owing to the championship of the Hon. Mr. Charleton, has been incorporated in the Criminal Act. Hon. Mr. Charleton was presented with a basket of flowers, by a delegation of white ribboners, in the House, and afterward received a Chautauqua salute when he visited the convention.

This year a leaflet is to be prepared on the science of government and also one on the laws relating to the rights of women as owners of property, school trustees, voters, etc. Miss Phelps was appointed commissioner to look after the W. C. T. U. interests at the World's Fair.

Crusade day is to be observed in January, on Mrs. Youmans' birthday. Dominion day of prayer will be held in October.

SALOMA.

Carleton Place, Ontario.

MISS GRATTAN GUINNESS has been made World's superintendent of the anti-opium movement in the British branch of the World's W. C. T. U. Her address is Harley House Row, London, England.

POLITICAL EQUALITY IN NEW ZEALAND.

In September and October last I sent you some information as to the progress of the woman's suffrage question in this colony. You will, I have no doubt, be pleased to hear something of the position of that question at the present time.

There is in our House of Representatives a member who practically represents the liquor interest. He was the leading opponent of the suffrage bill when before the House last session, and has been lately very energetic in his endeavors to get up a demonstration against the suffrage movement so as to aid the opponents of that measure when the bill comes again before the House next session.

He is a very clever, energetic and determined man, not easily thwarted in anything he resolutely takes in hand. He is a hard man to beat, and he has all the liquor interests behind him. This being so, the women and their supporters have all their work on hand to get their suffrage bill through the House. We are, however, pretty confident of success.

A very successful meeting was called to checkmate the liquor interest in its endeavors to get up adverse petitions to our legislature. The friends of the woman's franchise are greatly encouraged by the support they are receiving from the press of the colony, and the recent vote on this question in the British House of Commons strengthens their hands.

We have every reason to hope that the necessary measures will pass during the next session of our parliament. One reason for this hope lies in the fact that the liquor representative has broken with the government. Last session he was a government supporter, and our premier (who is in reality in favor of the franchise), to retain his influence, did not give the suffrage bill a whole-hearted support, and proposed that, if passed, it should not be operative till after the next general election. Now the suffrage bill, which is not a government measure, but is in the hands of a private member, will, no doubt, receive the hearty support of the premier.

J. W. JAYOS.

Dunedin, Otago, New Zealand.

A LETTER FROM CHILE.

As this is "Semana Santa," Holy Week, we have three days' respite from the schoolroom, but there are quite a number of the boarders who cannot go home, as they reside too far away. To-day the teacher on charge has taken the pupils a short distance from the city for a picnic, and two other teachers are in Talcahuano for the day. I have had five hours of quiet, such as I have not enjoyed for some time.

This year I have thought more about the gospel temperance work than ever before, and I long to do something more than has been done, but my time is so completely occupied and my strength so utterly tested in the performance of duties connected with the college that I know not how to give a helping hand outside.

I am so glad, and rejoice in the victories and triumphs of the home work and that in other countries, and I truly sorrow for the desolations of Chile. I am looking to the Captain of our Salvation, Jesus, our Blessed Lord, for help. He only comprehends our needs and He alone can help.

Ours is a hand-to-hand fight with the demon. We meet it with the children in all circles, missionaries of some denominations, and ministers who wish to be popular with the people. To-day stores and banks were closed—Despachos and other places where liquor is sold were open.

It would be well if all the unions of the United States would pray especially for Chile. We need an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon all God's people and a general awakening on the part of the people to the peril of soul and body that environs them.

The mothers and the women of the United States were the first to be awakened, and so it must be here. We can do but little till the people realize their danger.

Send us temperance literature for distribution, tracts, papers for the young, and educational works. Give us a little help in these lines, we need it.

Yours in Christian work,

Concepcion, Chile, S. A. MARY STOUT.

WORLD'S WAVE CRESTS.

Mrs. Kaji Yajima, president of Japan W. C. T. U., is a resident of La Kyr.

The next annual meeting of the Dominion W. C. T. U. will be held in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The address of the president of New Zealand W. C. T. U. is Mrs. A. J. Schnackenberg, Auckland.

Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, our vice-president for Spain, has returned to her work in the American College for Women at San Sebastian, with her daughters, Bessie and Grace.

By a vote of the general officers of the World's W C. T. U., Lady Henry Somerset has been made superintendent of the European work throughout. She will go to Berlin within a few months to form a W. C. T. Union.

Mrs. Ella Williams, of Montreal, has been made president of the Dominion W. C. T. U., and thus becomes one of the vice-presidents of the World's W. C. T. U., besides being its treasurer. This is a deserved tribute to the quick brain and remarkable executive ability, accuracy and enterprise of this rising woman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. Zoe A. M. Locke, former president of the Bulgarian W. C. T. U., but who is now in this country, sends the following list of newly elected officers for Bulgaria: President, Mrs. Elenka Nicoloff, Philippopolis; secretary, Miss Bena Moloff, Philippopolis; treasurer, Mrs. Bogdana Kasaroff, of Sophia. Mrs. Locke will spend the coming year in the United States.

Our Canadian sisters selected Mrs. Dr. Todd, of St. Stephen, New Brunswick, as vice-president, and Mrs. Maj. Tilton, of Ottawa, accepted the position of treasurer. Mrs. Youmans, the veteran pioneer of Canada, is retained as a matter of course, as honorary vice president, and Miss Tilley, daughter of Sir Leonard Tilley, as corresponding secretary, with Mrs. A. H. Rutherford as recording secretary, headquarters at Toronto.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

MAINE.

A LARGE LIQUOR SEIZURE AND OTHER NEWS.

The months of May and June are with us the most favorable time for holding county conventions, and this year an unusual amount of enthusiasm has characterized them. Though many of the conventions have been held with new unions, some several miles from railway stations, so that buckboards and barges had to serve as conveyances, a larger attendance than ever before is reported. Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason, of Massachusetts, made evening addresses in several places, and Mrs. Helen G. Rice has also done most acceptable work in our state, and it is needless to say that our zealous state president has been on hand holding parliamentary drills, speaking for woman's work at the World's Fair, and putting in the right word at the right time as she so well knows how to do. She has been continually on the wing for the last two months. For instance, in order to attend the Androscoggin convention at Auburn, May 25, she had to ride fifteen miles in a buckboard after speaking in the evening to take the early train at Bangor, which is about 100 miles from the former city.

An incident occurred in connection with this convention which could have happened in few other states of the union. Just before the noontide prayer Mrs. Stevens called attention to the fact that since our organization is now world-wide, and it is always noon somewhere, continual prayer is ascending from white ribbon women for the overthrow of the liquor traffic. When the evening papers came out they contained the welcome news that at noon of that day, just across the Androscoggin river, there had been one of the greatest seizures of liquor ever made in Maine, two thousand dollars' worth. If the prayers of all temperance workers were answered as speedily as those of this convention seemed to be, the way of the rumseller and rum maker and rum politician would indeed be hard.

The special liquor deputies of the county, while looking about the Maine Central depot yard, had found a car suspiciously sealed, and on breaking it open beheld, piled one upon another, kegs and barrels, a whole car load of the "crather." One officer guarded the car while another found suitable conveyances. Seven job wagons were loaded and the procession moved in triumph up the street. The liquor was directed to Bill Smith and W. Smith, fictitious names, of course, and as no one ventured to claim it, it was a total loss, and it really seems a pity that Lady Somerset and Miss Willard could not have been present to enjoy the "spilling," which came off a few days later. Another carload has since been seized at the same place. This time the car was marked "Cotton, Androscoggin Mill," but although eleven drays were required to carry away this novel "cotton" it is hardly probable that it will ever be made into cloth. In the old days, forty years ago, when rum was freely admitted into Maine, such a quantity of liquor on the wharves of Portland would have attracted no special comment, but it is now a decided novelty to see so much at one time.

One of our village unions, away up in Aroostook, our great northern county, larger than the whole state of Massachusetts, has the past winter raised $150 for finishing its headquarters. The history of this hall is what Josiah Allen would call "new and uneek," and may possibly furnish a suggestion to some other union similarly situated. The little village of Amity contained no place suitable for the meetings. The active members could meet from house to house, but they were very anxious to gather in the young people, that they, in turn, might interest others. At length, some good brothers-in law came to the rescue, and one day, a year ago last March, armed with axes and shovels—the snow was several feet deep—started for the woods, four miles distant, to get out lumber for the frame for a hall. Toward noon the women followed, with a picnic dinner. After all had enjoyed it together, they stayed to watch the thirteen stalwart young men felling the great trees, or shoveling roads to reach them, that they might be hauled to a mill five or six miles away. But all were accustomed to such work, and by sunset had nearly enough at the mill, and soon afterward carried the small amount that was lacking. The union was then but ten months old, and now, though not the owner of a temple, it takes a pardonable pride in its neat hall, forty-four feet long by twenty-four wide.

MARY L. FRENCH,
State Reporter, Auburn.

MINNESOTA.

WORK, PAST AND PRESENT.

The eleventh district held its fifth annual convention in the Methodist church in St. Cloud. Sickness kept a number of delegates from attending, but those who came, aided by the St. Cloud union, made up in spirit what was wanting in numbers, and on motion, all white ribboners present were made members of the convention. Papers were read and followed by discussions on the following topics: "Personal Efforts," "Woman's Suffrage," "Our White Ribbon," and "The W. C. T. U." The subject of scientific temperance instruction was also taken up, the ladies urged to see that the law in regard to such instruction be enforced, and a district superintendent appointed, the lady chosen being Mrs. L. A. Bouck, of Millaca.

The convention took up the question of having all screens and painted windows removed from the front of saloons. The dead letter law on this point was referred to and the ladies decided it ought and must be enforced. The department of mercy had a superintendent for the district appointed, Mrs. A. D. Partridge being chosen. Mrs. Millie Akers, of St. Cloud, was appointed district superintendent of the suffrage work.

Nearly all the ministers of the town were present at one time or another, and expressed their hearty approval of the work. Rev. E. A Steiner, of the Congregational church, said he had declared he would marry a white ribbon, and he did.

Mrs. Newcomb, of Minneapolis, was present and presented the Rest Island work, which is arousing great interest in Minnesota, and enlisting the sympathies of many unions. The St. Cloud daily press gave extended and very kindly notices of the convention, and, taken all together the delegates were made to feel that their presence in the city was considered a blessing.

The ninth district held its annual convention in Anoka, the guests of the Anoka Y union. A driving rainstorm did not dampen the earnest spirits of the women, about forty of them going from other places to the convention town. The first session was occupied by reports of the work, showing increased interest and advancement. The evening was given over to the Y's, who furnished a most excellent program well carried out, The Anoka Union, the daily paper of the place, speaking very highly of their efforts.

Friday morning officers were elected. Mrs. Voorhees, the president for several years, retiring, Mrs. E. J. M. Newcomb was elected to the position. The question-box was next in order, followed by a talk from Mrs. Russell on the coffee palace. Mrs. M. E. Hoover gave a very earnest and forcible talk on the divorce evil. Friday evening Mrs. E. N. Law, a white ribbon sister from Michigan, who was present throughout the convention, and helpful in many ways, gave an address, "Shall the Saloon rule Christian America?" which was very well received.

Stearns county recently held its annual convention, but no report has been sent in, although rumors in the air say they had an excellent time.

It was my pleasant privilege to visit Paynesville union recently, upon its regular day of meeting. They are a band of earnest women, bravely trying to do whatsoever their hands find to do. Their meeting was well attended, one minister of the little town being present and manifesting his hearty interest. They have a membership of about fifteen and several honoraries also. One honorary member is a unique individual, probably the only one in America, belonging to our organization—an African parrot, "Prohibition Polly," the property—or should I say the friend—of brother and sister Kephart, formerly missionaries to Africa. Polly is a beautiful bird of dark dove color and red, grave and earnest, as becomes a Prohibitionist; and frequently expressed her sentiments by calling out, "Hurrah for Prohibition." "Saloons must go." "Down with the saloon, down with it! down with it!" bringing her foot down emphatically to emphasize the words. Little wonder the ladies thought her worthy of honorary membership in their union!

MRS. AMY A. GREEN,
State Reporter, Minneapolis.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

THE GOOD WORK GOES ON.

Our state is getting up a sort of temperance revival. Our men are becoming enthused, they are holding mass-meetings in every direction. Several months ago a call was made for a prohibition convention. It met in Columbia, and its object was to consider what was best to do in order to increase and intensify the prohibition sentiment in the state. One proposition was to nominate a state ticket and let it come before the Democratic primary. This was "side-tracked" by substituting the "lightning rod box that would draw the prohibition lightning, so that no harm would be done."

The plan is to place an empty box at each voting precinct so that all who favor prohibition in the state may put their vote into it, and if there is a majority of these votes, then the members of the legislature would feel bound to carry out the wishes of the people. Our good men returned from the conference rejoicing over this little prohibition box, whilst the wise one who manufactured it was equally delighted with the thought that he had kept the Prohibition party out of the race.

But the conference did do good, in planning to have temperance gatherings all about in the state and public opinion is setting in favor of temperance. Our women are working nobly here and there, and the men gallantly yield to the W. C. T. U. the honor of leading the battle. In all of their speeches they admit that they are following us. "We often work better than we know."

Our state treasurer, Mrs. J. L. Traxler, who is also president of the local union in Timmonsville, writes:

"Since my return from Florida I have visited each member of my union and endeavored in every way to keep them interested and feel encouraged since my last meeting, as a great many were present." The meeting was held at her home. After the business was through with she invited the ladies into the dining-room for refreshments, ice cream and cake. Mrs. Culpepper read a splendid selection from the life of Miss Jennie Casseday, written by Miss Willard. Mrs. Traxler insisted on the members of her union taking THE UNION SIGNAL. She has organized a Band of Hope, to meet at her house every Sunday evening. She made a wall-pocket and placed it in the depot and keeps it filled with good reading matter, and also ordered quite a number of tracts.

Mrs. Jessie McCown, of Charleston, wrote to me in May, telling of a young girl who had been arrested for drunkenness and sent to jail, who, through Mrs. McCown's efforts, is now at Augusta in the home for fallen women. In June, this dear little consecrated sister of ours wrote to me of a young man, a stranger, who had been bribed into a saloon-keeper's employ. After working for the man a while he asked for his pay, but instead of being paid, was arrested and taken to the station-house upon the charge of stealing money from his employer. After being in jail forty-four days, friendless, and not knowing how to act, Mrs. McCown got from him all the particulars. Satisfied of his innocence, she then went to a young lawyer friend, and by ten o'clock next morning had him out of jail, afterwards safely starting him home. The News and Courier tells of another case of charity of the "little-church-around-the-corner stripe," done by Mrs. McCown in saving Willie Riley from the slums of the streets to a place in a Catholic school for boys in New York.

One cannot read these reports from this earnest-hearted woman without feeling stirred up to try and work too for fallen humanity. Mrs. McCown is willing and anxious to visit the local unions in the state. The W. C. T. U. of South Carolina is asked to make a note of this, and let her know of any work she can do in the prisons. Her address is 24 Church Street, Charleston, S. C.

Mrs. Chapin addressed a large audience in Leesville lately on the subject, "God in Government." "It was," the press says, "a masterly effort, abounding in keen wit and forcible logic." She went to the Georgia convention, and then back again to Augusta, to help in the Prohibition campaign. She wants to "work up a temperance sentiment in Hamburg, so as to forestall the rumsellers from crossing the Savannah and settling in Hamburg, if driven from Augusta." She is guarding the lines, and if the enemy tries to cross over, they will find her pickets watching for them.

The Charleston unions are flourishing; the women are working in all the departments; the Y's gave the Loyal Temperance Legions a picnic. Their president, Mrs. Chapin says, is one in a thousand. She teaches, and yet finds time to get up monthly entertainments, interesting Demorest contests, and in every way instructs and entertains her devoted band.

Mrs. Chapin and Miss Yeargin went to Waynesville to attend the assembly. The South Carolina state convention pledged $300 to the assembly. The minutes of the convention are out in attractive form. My letter is already too long, or I would give notes from them. With the exception of treasurer, the same state officers were re-elected. Mrs. Traxler was made treasurer. Mrs. Chapin again consented to act as president, and while she fills that office our sister states may rest assured that the W. C. T. U. will not go backward in the Palmetto state, but will advance slowly, but surely.

Mrs. Lathrap addressed crowded houses during the convention. We are very much in love with her, and hope she will often find that South Carolina is her nearest route to wherever she is going. Dear Mrs. Sibley was also at the convention. We would not feel that we had a convention if she was not with us. NETTIE P. FARROW,
State Reporter, Spartanburg.

PENNSYLVANIA POINTS.

Pennsylvania's tireless president, Mrs. Mary H. Jones, is a model of industry. At our last state convention, Mrs. Jones objected most strenuously to a reëlection on account of her increased home duties, and she felt that her strength was not sufficient to justify again assuming the state presidency. But she had proved herself so well able to take command of the 17,000 white-ribbon women which grace the citizenship of the Keystone state, that the entreaties of her sisters finally prevailed, and she consented to take the position for "one year more." She is a graduate of the Girls' Normal School of Philadelphia, and a member of the M. E. Church, has been connected with the state union since 1880, five years as recording secretary, four as vice-president-at-large, and three as state president. She is a good parliamentarian and fine presiding officer, and has won the esteem of the membership generally by her loyalty and devotion to the work.

Mrs. Henrietta H. Forrest, our state corresponding secretary, is a resident of Philadelphia, where her husband is engaged in mercantile pursuits. Mrs. Forrest is a woman of very fine ability, and has won the enviable record of being one of the very best corresponding secretaries of the organization, and is known among those intimate with her, as an all around capable woman, ready to grapple with any emergency and run any business, from the supervision of a house up to moving the trains for a National convention.

Mrs. Olive Pond Amies, the state recording secretary, is a woman of commanding presence and fine physique. She has been identified with the white ribbon organization of Pennsylvania for several years. She was formerly connected with the temperance work in Connecticut, and was a valued teacher in the Sabbath-school. She is well known in literary circles under the name of Olive Pond. She is a graduate of the Oswego Normal Training School, and was most successful as a teacher of normal and primary classes. Mrs. Amies is an ardent supporter of every movement looking to the advancement of women. She is a member of the Episcopal church, and a contributor in the interest of the temperance work, to the Pennsylvania State Bulletin. She is heartily supported by Mr. Amies, who is a man of originality of thought and a fluent speaker.

Five new unions, one each from Chester, Clearfield, Erie, Montgomery and Washington counties, with a total membership of seventy-one, are reported in the June Bulletin.

The state convention will probably meet October 7 to 12 inclusive, and will be held at New Castle, Lawrence county. Miss Elizabeth Greenwood, whose Bible readings were such an inspiration to the convention last year, has been engaged also for the coming meeting.

Mrs. Lovell, superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, warns local superintendents against allowing charts to take the place of the authorized text-books in schools. She says that no chart has ever been indorsed by the union and that, according to the interpretation of the law, nothing can take the place of text-books in the hands of the pupils.

Mrs. A. C. Law writes in the Bulletin of mothers' meetings, and gives a most touching instance of the fall of a young man through tasting wine at the communion table, after he had reformed and joined the church. It does seem that those ministers who still countenance the possible ruin of some communicant by the use of fermented wine, are possessed of a much larger portion of religious fanaticism than of good sense.

Mrs. G. G. Kerr, of Washington county, writes as follows:

The semi-annual convention of the Washington County Woman's Christian Temperance Union met in the United Presbyterian church of Claysville, which had been beautifully decorated to welcome us. Our president, Mrs. J. L. Weaver, was untiring in her efforts to make the convention interesting and profitable. Reports from superintendents showed that our work is going forward, and two new departments were taken up, narcotics and Demorest medal contests.

Papers were read on "The W. C. T. U. and the Sabbath," "Echoes from Bradford" and "How to Enliven our Local Unions." These were followed by discussions, the one on the "cider clause" in our pledge being especially animated, and bringing out a decided sentiment in favor of it.

One afternoon was given to the Y. W. C. T. U., and it was cheering to see earnest, talented young ladies coming forward to take the work when our tired hands shall drop it.

In the evening Col. George W. Bain delivered one of his inimitable temperance lectures, which we hope will have a convincing effect on the minds of some of the good citizens in the large audience that listened to him.

BERTHA WASHBURN HOWE,
State Reporter, Bradford.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

ITS DAUGHTERS AT WORK.

The several annual district conventions have been held, and I send accounts of those which have been reported to me.

The fourth district held its annual convention at Andover, May 11 and 12. The church was handsomely decorated with pictures of our noted W. C. T. U. leaders, and a banner bearing the following inscription held a prominent place: "The daughters of South Dakota plead for justice."

Mrs. Simmons, district president, was in the chair, and devotional exercises were conducted at the opening of each session. The new state president, the winsome Emma Cramner, ably assisted the local workers during the regular sessions, and delivered a fine address entitled, "The Woman of the Nineteenth Century," the last evening to a full house.

The Andover ladies' quartette rendered inspiring music. The subject of hygiene and heredity was made an especial feature of this convention; there were papers by Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Huston, and a general discussion proved that the women of the fourth district are awake to the importance of this department.

Mothers' meetings were also accorded a prominent place; there is no department more deeply appreciated by the young mothers of the West than that one which instructs them in the methods of training and rearing the little ones entrusted to their care, so that they may grow up strong in mind, body and morals. Mrs. Garwood gave an excellent paper upon the "Sacredness of Maternity," and the local superintendents gave interesting reports.

Mrs. Roberts reported L. T. L. work; a dearth of labor in this department is felt throughout the state, but it is not the fault of the children as proven by the Legion in a country place in Day county, where, through all the cold winter the children walked two miles regularly each week to attend the L. T. L. meetings.

"Resubmission and how to avoid it," brought forward an animated discussion; this is the dread of our temperance people, that our prohibitory law may be resubmitted to a vote of the men before it has been given a fair trial. Mrs. Thorp urged the women to attend the primaries; to visit the prohibitory voters and enlist them to agitate and labor against electing legislators who will vote for resubmission. This is to be an issue of the next state campaign, though politicians pretend to ignore the fact.

The report of your correspondent who was a delegate from the fourth and sixth districts to the National Convention was read in sections, when there did not seem to be any other part of the program in readiness, and was not enjoyed as much as a less fragmentary reading would have been. It was a lengthy and carefully prepared collection of the features of the great Boston convention, which seemed most impressive to the delegate.

Four clergymen participated in the exercises of this district convention. A nicely prepared paper on the "Liquor Traffic," by Mrs. Barney, was ordered printed. Mrs. Haines, of Webster, was elected president; L. P Crow, Aberdeen, recording secretary; Jessie Wilson, Andover, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. L. Beebee, Ipswich, treasurer.

Mrs. Anna Simmons was made delegate to the National from the fourth district. Some time was given to the children for recitations, which crowded the business hours of the convention.

The first district W. C. T. U. met in convention at Sioux Falls in June. Thoughtful and excellent papers were presented upon "The Tobacco Habit," by M. E. Sargeant; "Hygiene and Heredity," by P. S. Pauline; "Parlor Meetings," by F. E. Conkling; "Evangelistic Work," by Mrs. Ross, and "Franchise," by Mrs. Buzzell. Social purity was presented by Mrs. Wilkes; Sabbath observance, by Mrs. Smart; mothers' meetings, by Mrs. Cramner, and Mrs. M. Sheldon, a coming lecturer, who has been appointed superintendent of franchise for this district, spoke upon the "Moral Issues."

Mrs. Meyers, state corresponding secretary, conducted a school of methods each afternoon in a decidedly able and comprehensive manner. The address of greeting by Mrs. Boyce was well received, and also the response by Mrs. Pattee. Most excellent was the president's, Mrs. J. M. King's, address, who pleaded earnestly for prohibition, sounding the needed warning against resubmission by the next legislature. State president, Mrs. Cramner, spoke the second evening in her accustomed attractive manner. The officers elected were, president, Mrs. O. J. Ward; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. M. King; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. Russell; treasurer, W. A. Lyman. Yankton entertains the next convention.

The third district annual meeting convened at Wessington Springs. It was welcomed by the seminary students with marching song and banners, and with addresses, by C. W. McDonald, Reverends J. B. Freeland, J. Kimball, J. G. Campbell and Mrs. M. H. Freeland. These addresses were in behalf of the citizens, ministers, farmers and W. C. T. U. respective y. The appropriate responses were given by Mary Parker and Anna Simmons.

Papers of marked ability were presented by Mrs. Sarvis on "Enforcement of the Law"; Mrs. Stark, "Shall we go to Housekeeping?" Miss Patterson, "What I think is the Work Nearest Us." Discussions and speeches by many women gave zest to the meeting, and helpful hints to the workers. The proceedings were ordered printed, and sent to the president of each local in the district. There was excellent music by a quartette led by Professor C. W. Shay. Anna Simmons organized an L. T. L., with Edith Whitney as superintendent, and Eva Whitney, president. Resolutions of thanks were extended to the South Dakota members of United States Congress, for their influence given for Sunday closing, and for excluding liquors from the World's Fair grounds. Mrs. Pickler spoke upon Temple mite-boxes, describing the Temple, and also urged the support of The White Ribbon Journal.

The officers elected were president, Alice M. Pickler; vice-president, Addie Wilcox; corresponding secretary, Miss Matie Porter; recording secretary, Jennie H. Miles; treasurer, Mary Parker. The public school furnished a pleasing program for the last evening's session.

NOTES.

One of the ladies of Hudson organized an L. T. L., inviting Mrs. Blair to give a chalk talk. An interest was thus aroused which resulted in a W. C. T. U. with nineteen members.

At Springfield, Mrs. H. A. Radway organized an L. T. L. with fifty members which by paying five dollars became auxiliary to the first district W. C. T. U. and has given the state treasurer ten dollars. There is no union at Springfield.

Mrs. Johnson (formerly state reporter) is superintendent of music at the Sisseton Agency school; she has there organized a W. C. T. U. and a Y; both unions are composed of whites and Indians. The president and treasurer of the Y's are bright Indian girls, well educated and greatly interested in the temperance work. The W. C. T. U. held an open meeting at the Presbyterian mission school-house recently, which is located one-fourth of a mile from the government school. A good program was furnished, and many triple pledges secured from the children and young Indians. Four bolts of white ribbon have been used there for badges.

Their first Demorest medal contest occurred this spring. All the contestants were Indian girls; Emma Vánderheyden won the medal, reciting "The English Sparrow Must Go." Her speaking is reported as really fine, and would have been a credit to any girl anywhere. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Good Will mission school.

The executive committee of the state recommended that a committee from the W. C. T. U. attend the several state conventions of the political parties, and urge the insertion of a plank in each platform against resubmission. State president, Emma Cramner, presented at the Independent party convention such a request, and though composed largely of Prohibitionists, for "political reasons" they dared only declare as the National Republican Convention did, "We are opposed to the repeal of any criminal laws upon our statutes." Verily a politician is the prince of cowards. A prominent W. C. T. U. worker, Susan Hassell, was nominated by the Independents for state superintendent of schools.

A two weeks' session of a school of methods commences the 11th inst. at Madison Chautauqua assembly grounds, conducted by Mrs. C. M. Woodward. July 19th is W. C. T. U. day in the assembly.

Unions have been reorganized at Newark, De Smet, Broadland and a new union at Iroquois.

The Newark union recently gave a reception to their townsman who won first honors at the state oratorical contest.

Salem W. C. T. U. tendered a banquet to the State Medical Association, the women made speeches and propounded toasts, served exquisite refreshments, sang, conversed, and thus demonstrated that women are not waiting for opportunities, but making them.

Flower mission day was pretty generally observed for the purpose of raising funds for state treasury. McCook county school-houses have all been supplied with printed copies of the scientific temperance instruction law, upon large cards, suspended by white ribbons. In one corner, in fine type, is printed, "Compliments of Salem W. C. T. U."

The state convention meets at Brookings, September 9, 10, 11 and 12.

A clergyman and a United States commissioner of Sioux Falls are acting as the attorneys of the devil to mediate between the weak-kneed officials and his satanic lowness, and establish an open saloon in the city, under a pledge from the powers that be not to interfere. The people generally are watching the outcome. Woe unto any who enter such a compact with the perjured oath of office upon their honor. "A municipal saloon" with pure liquors, and no drunken men lying about loose, to show what kind of work is being done within, is what these men propose to establish. Just the place, oh, parents of Dakota, to draw your boys into the meshes of hell. Denounce it boldly, and the men who propose it.

IRENE G. ADAMS,
State Reporter, Webster.

TEMPLE RECEIPTS.

California—Visalia: W. C. T. U., $3.50. Escondido: Baby Band, $3.50.

Carolina, North—Dillsboro: W. C. T. U., $1.

Carolina, South—Spartanburg: L. T. L., 50 cts.

Colorado—Eastonville: W. C. T. U., $1.

Connecticut—New Haven: Miss Ellen E. Miles, $3.32; South Glastonbury: L. T. L., $5; Bethany: W. C. T. U., $10.

Dakota, North—New Rockford: Rachel Marriage, $3.65.

Dakota, South—Yankton: W. C. T. U., $18.25.

District of Columbia—Washington: Maggie Gittinger, $1.

Florida—Lake Kerr: J. S. and M. L. Pennell, $3.65; Bushnell: Mrs. Lucy Bigelow, $3.65.

Illinois—Greenville: W. C. T. U., $5; Mattoon: Mrs. Neel and Miss Christian, $1.90; Polo: W. C. T. U., $3.65; Brighton: Baby Band, $2.70; Sandwich: W. C. T. U.. $12.90; Delavan: Ida Burlingame, $1.37; Chicago: Mrs. M. E. Ranney, $3.65; Mary Allen West W. C. T. U., $1; Mrs. R. M. Shipe, $2.50; Plymouth Kindergarten, $2.11; West Side W. C. T. U., $28.50; Union Park Sunday-school, $100; Mrs. F. M. McKay, $5; Oak Park: W. C. T. U., $11.27; Lostant: L. T. L., $4.21; Swan Creek: $19; Humboldt Park: Mrs. E. Thomas; Irving Park: W. C. T. U., $21.15; Aurora: Mrs. M. E. Wilson, $20; Pawnee: Sabbath-school, $4.05; Springfield: Christian Church Sunday-school, $12; C. P. Church Sunday school, $1.13; Jacksonville: Presbyterian Sunday-school, $2; Congregational Sunday-school, $3; Monticello: Lillie Peck, $1.25; Quincy: W. C. T. U., $10; Plainfield, Mrs. H. A. Wood, $3.65; Afolkey: W. C. T. U., $15; Gilman: Mrs. Frances Russell, $1; Wataga: Amanda Williamson, $3.75.

Indiana—Charlottsville: $2; Terre Haute: Jane Weeden, $2; Zion: W. C. T. U., $5.91; Carthage: Henry Henley, $100; Wabash: W. C. T. U., $10.

Iowa—Riceville: Mrs. Proctor, $1; Sibley: Mrs. Estelle P. Armin, $2.50; Shenandoah: W. C. T. U., $38.21; Morning Sun: W. C. T. U., $7; Asbury: W. C. T. U., $16.56; Des Moines: $1; Forest City: Mrs. Dr. I. D. Ruyt, $3.65.

Kansas—Harris: Mrs. Seba Monroe, $1.25; Shiloh: W. C. T. U. $5; Rose: Mrs. A. P. Everson, $3.65; Cunningham: W. C. T. U., $5.85; Atchison: Mrs. H. W. Stone, $3.65; Lawrence: W. C. T. U., $21.45; Sabetha: W. C. T. U., $1.40.

Kentucky—Carrollton: W. C. T. U., $5.96.

Maine—Presque Isle: W. C. T. U., $75; Strong: Mrs. J. S. Nash, $5; Portland: Miss C. M. Dow, $3.01.

Massachusetts—No. Adams: Mrs. A. E. Babbitt, $2; Mrs. Isbell, $1.60; Salem: Baby Band, $5; Brookline: Mrs. Walter S. Perry, $2; per Mrs. Cheney, $2.50; Fall River: Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Boston: White ribboner, 50 cts; Dunstable: Mrs. E. R. Fletcher, $1; Ashburnham: W. C. T. U., $7.08; Hinsdale: T. A. Frissell, $1.98; W. Somerville, $2.

Michigan—Eleventh District: W. C. T. U., $85; Colon: Mrs. Lamb, 50 cts; Sault Ste Marie: Austin and Verne Lipsett, $3.65; Woodland: W. C. T. U., $2.75; Coldwater: Baby Band, $4; Charlotte: W. C. T. U., $11.50; Victor: Delia Brunson, $1; Fifth District, $193.

Minnesota—Blue Earth City: Y. W. C. T. U., $27; Anoka: Mrs. S. E. Lapham, $3.65; Warren: Isabella Kenmir, $4; Minneapolis: Central W. C. T. U., $64.95; Janesville: W. C. T. U., $5; Euclid: Mrs. Lucy Chapin, $4.26; Mrs. S. B. Williams, $5; per state treasurer, $3.29; Wasioja: W. C. T. U., $5; St. Paul: Mrs. Eleenia Cook, $1.

Missouri—Fenton: Martha Brossard, $2; Stockton: W. C. T. U., $28; Sedalia: W. C. T. U., $14; Pleasant Hill: W. C. T. U., $30; Carthage: Junior C. E., $3.32; Webster Groves: L. T. L., $20; Meadville: M. B. Goodall, $1; Harrisonville: Veteran Band, $12.

Mississippi—Humphreys: May Russell, $1.

Montana—Great Falls: W. C. T. U., $75; Bozeman: Mrs. C. Rich, $1.50.

Nebraska—Salem: Mrs. Dr. Brooke, $3.65; York: Per Mrs. K. B. Northrup, $65; Grand Island: $3; Genoa: Mrs. S. Clark, $1; Beatrice: $5.

New Hampshire—Lakeport: Emma Whittier, $1; Nashua: Y. W. C. T. U., $10.51.

New Jersey—Keyport: Mrs. T. W. Seabrook, $2.50; Richland: M. A. Stock, $1.19; Bound Brook: Mrs. M. F. Scully, $5; Passaic: Mrs. J. B. Pudney, $5; Cape May: D. L. Hughes, $1.

New York—Keuka Park: W. C. T. U., $1; Waverley: Mrs. F. G. Payne, $3.65; Collins: W. C. T. U., $5; Yonkers: W. C. T. U., $15; Scottsville: W. C. T. U., $3.50; Auburn: Mr. Beshtagour, 75 cts.; Ellenville: W. C. T. U., $5; Campville: W. C. T. U., $5; Richford: W. C. T. U., $5; Owego: W. C. T. U., $10; Palmyra: W. C. T. U., $5; Boston: L. T. L., $5; Brooklyn; E. J. R., $2; Plattsburgh: W. C. T. U., $30; Cortland: W. C. T. U., $14; Mrs. C. R. Harmon, $1; Yonkers: Dorothy Brown, $3.65; Fairport: Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Buffalo: Mrs. Mary Hubbard, $5; Greene: Mrs. M. Page, $1.

Ohio—Cincinnati: Mrs. Kate Jacoby, $1; Twenty-fourth District: W. C. T. U., $7; Newark: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; New London: W. C. T. U., $4.63; Oberlin: Julia R. Green, $7.75; Medina: Miss H. Haines, $1; Geauga County W. C. T. U., $10; St. Clairsville: Baby Band, $2.50; Jefferson: Mrs. R. E. S. Crosby, $1; Burton: W. C. T. U., $10.

Oregon—Astoria: Mrs. J. T. Rogers, $5.70.

Pennsylvania—Strasburg: W. C. T. U., $21.90; West Salem: W. C. T. U., $4.80; Worth: Y. W. C. T. U., $2.63; Clinton county: W. C. T. U., $1; Erie county: W. C. T. U., $70.16; Allegheny county: W. C. T. U., $25; Blair county: Mrs. Stratton, ; Mrs. Latshaw, $1.70; Rix: L. T. L., $6; Rockwood: L. T. L., $5.26; Independence: Mrs. Mary Westlake, $1.25; Philadelphia: 1st Y. W. C. T. U., $56; M. A. Bolster, $5; Williamsport: Mrs. A. H. Berwick, 10 cents; Mrs. E. A. Dickson, 70 cents; Mechanicsburg: Irving College, Y. W. C. T. U.. $5; Yardley: H. A. Howell, $1; Carmichael: W. C. T. U., $3; West Damascus: Mrs. C. B. Brown, $1.

Rhode Island—Burrellville: W. C. T. U., $4; Providence: W. C. T. U., $10; Mary A. Gould, $2; F. H. Maynard, $10.

Texas—Odessa: L. T. L., $4.

Wisconsin—Eau Claire: Lois Russell and Annette Shaw, $1 each; Ashland: W. C. T. U., $6; Roberts: J. S. Ingerson, $5; Green Bay: W. C. T. U., $30.85; Hillsborough: W. C. T. U., $4; Evansville: W. C. T. U., $9.21; L. T. L., $1.40.

South Africa—Orange Free State: Harrismith W. C. T. U., $50.83.

France—Paris: Misses Searle and Scott, $1 each.

Sales of models, $164.06; sales pictures, etc., $4.55.

Thirty-eight dollars credited to W. C. T. U., Providence, R. I., should have been credited to Y. W. C. T. U.

ESTHER PUGH,
Custodian Gift Fund.

Our Library Table.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS RECEIVED.

AMERICAN HAND-BOOK AND CITIZENS' MANUAL, by Manlore N. Butler, Avalon, Mo.

DIXON AND INGERSOLL, by Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., J. S. Ogilvie, 57 Rose Street, New York.

GEMS FROM THE POLITICAL FIELD, OR THE LIVING ISSUES OF TO-DAY, by William Clark, Quincy, Ill.

IS LICENSE CONSTITUTIONAL? A second brief by Eli F. Ritter, before the Supreme Court of Indiana. Funk & Wagnalls Company, N. Y.

BIBLE LESSONS FOR INTERMEDIATE CLASSES, by Susan Woodford Kimball. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago.

The July issue of the MAGAZINE OF POETRY, a quarterly review, contains, among a variety of good things, some exquisite poems from the pen of Esther T. Housh, a well-known worker in the temperance reform. A pleasing portrait of Mrs. Housh accompanies the poems. This magazine gathers up the cream of the poetry of the day, making its readers conversant with the authors, besides reprinting many productions from standard writers, whose gems "never grow old."

Charles Wells Moulton, publisher, Buffalo, N. Y. $2 per year.

Perhaps one of the features of city life that appeals most strongly to warm-hearted Christian people is the street child. These little ones, without any fault of their own, are often homeless, or what is far worse, living in places which are fatal to the healthful life of soul and body. To meet this sad state of affairs, God-fearing people have instituted various organizations for these needy ones, prominent among which is the "Children's Home Society." It is a national organization, chartered as "The American Educational Aid Association." Its official organ is the CHILDREN'S HOME FINDER, a monthly magazine that ought, for the sake of the cause it represents, to have a wide circulation. It gives official reports of work done, tells touching incidents in the histories of the little ones who are rescued from their homelessness and misery, and is a medium of communication and information between those who are looking for homes in which to place the children and the homes that can entertain them. The journal has for its motto, "Nulla dies sine linea"—not a day without a line. May God bless this daily record of work done for His poor!

Rev. Geo. K. Hoover, editor, Davenport, Iowa. $1 per year.

THE LITERARY DIGEST is a wide-awake, up-with-the-times periodical, issued weekly, and is a thoroughly readable and valuable acquisition. The number for June 9, under the department of Political Reviews, contains the "Views of Representative Congressmen," from the Arena. Several pages are also devoted to the opinions of the press, touching the Prohibition Party, its candidates, platforms, etc.

Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18–20 Astor Place, New York City. $3 per annum.

THE PROBLEM OF DOMESTIC SERVICE is a pamphlet by Mrs. C. H. Stone, setting forth very minutely the conditions of this vexed problem, with sound, practical suggestions for their amelioration.

Nelson Printing Company, St. Louis, Mo.

EARNEST THOUGHTS FOR EVERY DAY, by the author of "Thoughts for Weary Hours," is a booklet that is choice enough for the adornment of the daintiest boudoir, and whose contents are worthy a place on any library shelf. The "Thoughts" are in prose and verse and are peculiarly fitted to impart strength and inspiration to him who reads the sweet, earnest, soulful pages.

Published by T. Whittaker, 2 Bible House, New York City. Price 25 cts.

The July PANSY wears as fair a face as ever to greet its numberless little friends. A particularly interesting feature is Elizabeth Abbott's paper in the English Literature Series, on Charles Dickens. Perhaps no author whose stories are not wholly for little folks, makes and wins so many friends among the juveniles, as this man whose sweet-spirited soul could so beautifully and accurately portray child life, and surely the Pansies have good times visiting with the English story-teller.

D. Lothrop Company, Washington St., Boston, Mass. $1 a year.

Mary Lowe Dickinson, who is so well known in the world of literature, has given to Christian young women and men a book entitled, "Onward Christian Soldiers," which they will be glad to possess. The first portion has a page devoted to each day in the year, with helpful prose and poetical selections, Scripture texts and space for birthday autographs. The remainder of the volume is made up of comprehensive sketches of the most prominent young people's religious societies in the world, written by their leaders, viz.: Mary Lowe Dickinson, general secretary of "The International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons"; Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., editor of the Golden Rule; Rev. Joseph F. Berry, D. D., editor of The Epworth Herald; Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, World's superintendent of "The Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union;" Miss Kate F. Kimball, executive secretary "The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle"; Rev. J. M. Cook, D. D., editor of The Loyalist. These sketches are beautifully illustrated by photographs of the above named friends, and others prominent in the Christian warfare, besides handsome plates of the colors, mottoes and badges of the various societies. The book, containing over seven hundred pages, is handsomely bound in white-silk cloth, gold embossed.

Published by The Brodix Publishing Co., Washington, D. C. Sold by subscription.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

South Waukegan Items.

This column is devoted to advertising South Waukegan, the new temperance Manufacturing Town.

THE farthest point of the platted town site of South Waukegan is just about one mile from the lake shore. Say twenty minutes' walk.

THE work of opening the streets and putting down the sidewalks in South Waukegan has been begun in earnest in the northwestern section.

THREE hundred thousand feet of lumber for sidewalks will be on the switch in South Waukegan in a few days, that amount having been purchased by the contractor.

MORROW BROS'. harness factory is developing into a huge affair. There will be two principal three-story buildings, between which a railroad spur will extend. A third building is up.

THE Clinton Woven Wire Works is the latest factory to secure a site in South Waukegan. Their raw material will be the product of the Washburn and Moen Works. Thus one industry begets another.

UPON the beautiful bluffs, over one hundred feet above Lake Michigan at South Waukegan, an admirable view can be obtained of the Washburn & Moen works, the largest wire manufactory in the world.

A FOUR-TON roller for the streets of South Waukegan, as a kind of "trailer" to the grading machine, will soon be at work. It will be named "Jumbo," and is expected to accomplish a good work in the making of good streets for the new town.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS' success in the Woman's Land Syndicate is something remarkable. She expects to sell the entire issue of her bonds at an early date. The appreciation of South Waukegan lots, upon which the bonds are predicated, is rapid and certain. This appreciation credited to the first series of bonds sold, amounted to $162,500.

THE artesian well-drill struck the Joliet limestone formation at one hundred and seventy-five feet in depth, and at last accounts the drill was crushing its way through the rock towards China, quite rapidly. At 2,000 feet depth a four-inch stream of water will rush upward and stand in the air fully fifty feet above the ground. The water will be slightly impregnated with iron, but be clear as crystal.

THE Nichols Chemical Works, of South Waukegan, though not yet breaking ground, will probably cover from ten to fifteen acres with buildings this fall. Their forty-acre site is just south of Morrow Bros.' factory, in South Waukegan. The firm has set apart $400,000 to be expended in buildings at once. The other plants of this firm are at Laurel Hill, L. I., Troy, N. Y., and at Capleton, Canada.

MR. C. E. SAYLER agrees to loan the South Waukegan union all the money it needs with which to erect its building upon the lots donated to it by Morris, Ganse & Co., at 6 per cent, and a tenant has offered to pay half the interest on this fund for one floor of the proposed four-story structure. Fourteen hundred white ribboners and their friends were present at the dedication of these lots on Saturday last.

THE purchase of the bonds of the Woman's Land Syndicate, managed by Mrs. R. A. Emmons, is a sure and safe investment. There can be no possible loss. The bonds rest upon 2,000 town lots bought as soon as the town was laid out, and at a great reduction from the plat prices. The appreciation in values since this purchase has been very great, and every bond so far sold gets the advantage equally. Mrs. Emmons' contract to day is worth $100,000 more than she agreed to pay for it. If the contract could be recalled the original owners would willingly pay the face value of every bond issued, all the expenses, and a very handsome bonus, but that will not be done. She will go forward conquering and to conquer.

ONE of the steel buildings of the Lanyon's Zinc Oxide Works at South Waukegan is called the "bag" house. It will be a very large structure. Sixteen steel columns, forty feet high, resting upon masonry piers, will stand upright to support the roof trusses. These immense steel trusses or bridges are eighty feet long, and when placed upon the top of the steel columns will sustain the roofing. The other buildings of the Lanyons are equally large in proportion to their uses. There will be 1,000 "bags" in the "bag house," each having a metal opening large enough nearly for a grown man to crawl through. The whole work, when completed, will be one of the most attractive features of South Waukegan.

Publisher's Notes.

THE JUNIOR PARTNERS.

BY ABEL M. RAWSON

is now ready

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

This is an opportunity which should be improved. The book is entirely different from any heretofore on the market, and will be in greater demand because it will be enjoyed by business men as well as by their families. Not many books are written which appeal to business men as this does. Those who have read it voluntarily testify to its merits in this direction. A prominent and wealthy business man of this city who employs wishes to place it in the hands of each one that they may be benefited by its teachings. This is valuable indorsement. It will be of especial help to young men just starting in business life—employer and employed, as showing where the shoals lie upon which they may make shipwreck.

Hundreds of Men

The influence of home life is also portrayed with power, and that of a noble-minded daughter, in restraining destructive tendencies is outlined in detail in the course of the narrative. The fallacy of the belief "I can use it or let it alone" is fully exposed. The circulation and reading of this book will be a blessing to thousands.

Testimonials.

Here are a few testimonials from leading journalists in different cities.

Read What They Say.

"The Junior Partners" is a thunderbolt against rum.—New York Sun.

"The Junior Partners" is a transcript of real life, and full of interest.—The Inquirer, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The Junior Partners" is the title of a remarkably strong and realistic temperance story.—Daily Free Press, Burlington, Vt.

"The Junior Partners" is a strong temperance story, and the world is none too full of them. The argument is that intemperance is an hereditary disease, and is curable. This is often true in both assertions, and a perusal of the book will do many persons good. —Evening Journal, Albany, N. Y.

"The Junior Partners" is a temperance argument. How many we have had, yet none similar to this. The descriptive powers of the author are of a high order, a delirium tremens scene being unusually powerfully drawn. The book can be classed as a well written and interesting temperance lecture, equally well printed and illustrated. —The Sunday Item, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The Junior Partners" is a powerful temperance story, and has for its fundamental truth the theory that intemperance is a disease, inherited in many cases, and should be treated as such. The book is a strong argument for prohibition.—The Denver Times, Denver, Col.

"The Junior Partners" is an excellent temperance story, written to illustrate the social and mental perils encountered by those who dally with the subtle tempter, alcohol.—Burlington Hawkeye, Burlington, Iowa.

"The Junior Partners" is a temperance story out of the usual line. Interwoven with the story itself, which is designed to show that alcoholic thirst is an hereditary mania, are powerful arguments against the use of alcoholic stimulants which cannot fail to appeal to those who are interested in the suppression of the great evil of intemperance.—Manchester Union, Manchester, N. H.

"The Junior Partners" is a temperance story of ability and power. The author deals with the social and mental perils attending the use of alcohol in a startling manner. The book is a large illustrated volume, and is cordially recommended to the attention of our readers.—Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

Reviewers pronounce "The Junior Partners" one of the best stories ever written.—Dallas Morning News, Dallas, Texas.

"The Junior Partners" is one of the best temperance works ever published. If you get a copy it will give you a delightful surprise.—Daily Journal, Phillipsburg, Pa.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE.

If you want to make money, send for our special terms circular.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SOUTH WAUKEGAN

The Ideal Manufacturing Town

Combines: First, Unrivalled shipping facilities for factories.
Second, Land of rare beauty for homes.

South Waukegan and Waukegan are the Northern Terminus of Chicago's Outer Belt Railway which swings way around Chicago.

South Waukegan, thus, can get Chicago rates for freight on 22 trunk lines of railroad, which center in Chicago.

The Mammoth WASHBURN & MOEN PLANT is now in operation.

The LANYON ZINC OXIDE & PAINT CO., and MORROW BROS. are busy constructing their new plants.

The WOODBRIDGE PROPERTY lies right next to the Washburn & Moen land, and is thus in the very center of the development.

The NICHOLS CHEMICAL CO. have secured about forty acres for their immense works, south of Morrow Bros. Many other industries are seeking sites in South Waukegan.

Every new industry that locates in South Waukegan adds value peculiarly to the Woodbridge property, as the Woodbridge property is very prominent in South Waukegan, and fronts on the busiest highway in the town. It is the verdict of very conservative real estate men, that the Woodbridge lots are VERY CHEAP.

LOTS in the Woodbridge tract can be bought at $200 each and upwards. These lots in other well-known temperance towns would cost the purchaser several times this price.

The Washburn & Moen plant, alone, at South Waukegan, EMPLOYS MORE MEN than all the factories combined at the most widely-advertised temperance towns in the United States.

Before buying at South Waukegan, investigate thoroughly all the corresponding points about Chicago, and then come and see us. This will convince you that the Woodbridge property at South Waukegan offers the choicest opportunity for investment.

The Washburn & Moen plant is erected upon the old summer home of Mr. Elisha S. Wadsworth, the brother-in-law of Mr. John Woodbridge, one of the owners of the Woodbridge tract.

The Woodbridge land lies right next to the Wadsworth property. The Woodbridge deeds contain the CLAUSE PROHIBITING THE SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR. This will insure the settlement of the property by sober, industrious people.

PRICES in the Woodbridge property will be advanced July 31st, 1892. The prices of the lots will be further advanced from time to time.

We prefer greatly to have you see the property before you buy. But if it is inconvenient for you to come to Chicago, write us, and we will select a lot for you. Send for price list, map, and other information.

J. B. MESNY, CHARLES WEINLAND, } Agts. Room 26, 94 Washington St., (Tel. Main, 992.) CHICAGO, ILL.

CLARENCE E. SMITH, Agt., Masonic Block, Waukegan, Ills.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Like those now offered at SOUTH HARVEY are very few. Lots are being sold at prices usually paid in country towns. The choicest inside residence lots 27 ft. front only $250; corner lots, $300.

SOUTH HARVEY offers the double advantage of being a residence suburb of Harvey and also of Chicago.

You can now get lots near the depot, with only a 5 ct. fare to Harvey. Many residences are now being built there, and prices will soon advance from present figures.

You can buy these lots on payments of

ONLY $10 PER MONTH.

To get the best location send $10 at once, and the best unsold lot will be marked down to you, and a plat sent, showing location. If you are not suited, you can change it or have your money refunded.

Title perfect. Abstract and Guarantee certificate of Title with every deed.

Builders and carpenters are wanted to locate here. There is steady work. Address

CHARLES G. FRENCH,

185 Dearborn St. Chicago, or Harvey, Ill.

MISS LYDIA J. NEWCOMB.
AUGUST SCHOOL.
Elocution. - Physical Culture.
SPRING LAKE, MICH.
Regular Course, 3 hrs. each day, 5 days in each week. Tuition, $35. Special courses, $5 for 20 lessons in large classes; $10 for 10 lessons in classes of 5; $20 for 10 private lessons. Lectures on Wednesdays.
Send for Announcement to MISS NEWCOMB, or Dr. O. W. NEWELL, Spring Lake, Mich.

TAPE-WORM Expelled alive in 60 minutes with head, or no charge. Send 2c stamp for circular Dr. M. Ney Smith, Specialist, 721 Olive, St. Louis, Mo.

HOME BAKERIES EVERYWHERE
Do you want one in your town? Address
MACHINERY DEPT.,
THE WOMAN'S BAKING CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.
Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

HALF RATES TO WASHINGTON VIA B. & O. R. R.

For the National Meet of the League of American Wheelmen at Washington, July 18 to 20, the Baltimore and Ohio railroad will sell excursion tickets at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be sold at offices of the company and offices of the principal roads of the West, July 16 and 17, and will be valid for return journey until July 24. Bicycles of passengers will be carried free of charge. The Baltimore and Ohio has been designated as the official route to the Meet by the officials of League of American Wheelmen.

For full information as to time of trains and rates of fare, apply to L. S. Allen, Ass't Gen'l Pass. Agent, The Rookery, Chicago. Upon application, Chas. O. Scull, Gen. Pass. Agent, Baltimore, Md., will send free of charge, a handsomely Illustrated Guide to Washington.

A POPULAR CHICAGO SCHOOL.

The eighteenth year of the well-established Chicago Female College begins at Auburn Park, September 14th. This school was formerly at Morgan Park, and has now located a new building complete in all departments. All ornamental branches are taught by competent artists. Miss Julia H. Thayer, who is in charge of this school, will be glad to send a catalogue to any interested person, and any inquiry for such purpose should be addressed to her at Auburn Park, or 245 State St., Chicago.

BUTTERMILK Toilet Soap

It Excels Any 25-cent SOAP in the Market.
If your dealer does not keep it
Send 12 cts. for FULL SIZE Sample Cake and Beautiful Souvenir worth 10 cts.
THE COSMO CO., Box 1108, CHICAGO.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

There seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance than by placing Drinking Fountains on the streets of our cities and towns.
Special prices given to readers of this paper.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue and full particulars.
J. W. FISKE,
21 and 23 Barclay Street,
NEW YORK.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA
PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.
It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.
New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.
It will pay you well to write to us.
THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

DON'T CHEW TOBACCO.

Beeman's Pepsin Gum
Helps to overcome the Habit.
CAUTION—See that the name Beeman is on each wrapper.
Each tablet contains one grain pure pepsin, sufficient to digest 1,000 grains of food. If it cannot be obtained from dealers, send five cents in stamps for sample package to
BEEMAN CHEMICAL CO., 64 Lake St., Cleveland, O.
ORIGINATORS OF PEPSIN CHEWING GUM.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF
Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.
We offer in parcels of 1 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.
GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.
For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

FARMINGTON COLLEGE, West Farmington, Ohio. 62 years. Both sexes. Expenses very low. Four College Courses. Seven Departments. The Normal a specialty. Inducements to agents to secure students. Address REV. E. B. WEBSTER, A. M., President.
ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE of Philadelphia offers to pay board, tuition, and all necessary expenses in above college one year to the Boy or Girl who secures the largest club this year. 1 year's tuition (not board) to any Boy or Girl sending 100 new subs'rs.

THE CLAVERACK COLLEGE
And HUDSON RIVER INSTITUTE
For Young Men and Women, will open its 39th year Sept. 19th. For catalogues, address
REV. A. H. FLACK, A. M., Prest., Claverack, N. Y.

Lake Erie Seminary
FOR WOMEN.
PAINESVILLE, OHIO.
Early application necessary for September, 1892.

STUDENTS IN
JENNINGS SEMINARY
will have special privileges at the
WORLD'S FAIR.
For information address
REV. C. C. LOVEJOY, A. M., Pres., Aurora, Ill.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE.
(Formerly Morgan Park) removed to Auburn Park. 18th year begins September 14th. New building. All departments. Ornamental branches taught by artists. Send for catalogue to JULIA H. THAYER, Auburn Park, Chicago, or 247 State Street, Chicago.

MONTICELLO Opens September 24th. Full and superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address
MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal, Godfrey, Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE,
Nyack, N. Y. Both sexes. Thorough work; splendid results. An endowment takes Ladies at $200. Catalogues. W. H. BANNISTER, President.

TODD SEMINARY, a delightful home school for boys. 44th year. Send for circular to NOBLE HILL, Woodstock, Ill.

BEATTY Piano. Organ, $33 up. Want agents. Cat. free. Dan'l F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N. J.

Publisher's Dep't.

CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

Stirring,
Entertaining,
Convincing.

See

TIMELY TALKS:

1. Shall We License the Dram Shops? Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
2. How the Dram Shops Pay the Taxes. Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
3. How the Dram Shop Helps Business, Prof. Geo. E. Foster.
4. The Delusions of High License. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
5. License, High or Low, Wrong in Principle. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
7. Our Drink Bill and the People Who Pay It. Rev. J. C. Fernald.
8. The High License Craze. Rev. H. H. French.
12. Fallacies of High License. Frances E. Willard.
13. High License a Backward Step. Pres. John Bascom.
14. Symposium on High License. Mary Allen West.
17. On Which Side Are You? Frances E. Willard and Mary T. Lathrap.
24. Prohibition not an Invasion of Personal Liberty. Herrick Johnson, D. D.
29. High License—Is it a Step Toward Prohibition? Clara Hoffman.
30. Restriction or Prohibition? Neal Dow.
32. Why William Dustin Became a Prohibitionist. Mrs. A. E. Sigsbee.
33. The Greatest Party. Frances E. Willard.
36. Down with the Traffic. John P. St. John.
37. Echoes from History. Charles Sumner on the Third Party.
41, 42. License vs. Moral Law. Rev. F. L. Goodspeed.

SONG LEAFLETS.

1. Saloons Must Go.
2. Samantha and Josiah, and The Battle Cry.
3. Clear the Way and The Cause.
4. Rallying, and "Keep Pegging Away."
5. Prohibition is the Watchword and The Crank.
6. Home Protection Song.
7. Down with Rum.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

1. Thy Battle. John G. Woolley.
2. Christian Patriotism.
John G. Woolley.

SIGNAL LIGHTS.

1. Individuality of Conscience in the Voter. Frances E. Willard.
3. Why the Old Parties Have not Met the Saloon Issue. Prof. W. G. Frost.
5. The Crime of Nations—What Can We Do? Geo. C. Hall.
8—13. Words for Wage Workers. Augusta C. Bristol.
18. Temperance and the Labor Question. Frances E. Willard.
21. Declaration of Independence (new version.) Rev. F. O. Blair.
27. Facts for Organized Labor. Augusta C. Bristol.
28. Needed—Only Pieces of Paper. Geo. C. Hall.

Price: Timely Talks, 30 cts. per 100. Song Leaflets, 50 cts. per 100; Voters' Leaflets, 90 cts. per 100; Signal Lights, 15 cts. per 100.

We will send this sample package to any address on receipt of 10c.
For these supplies send to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

A new Series!

V-aluable,
O-pportune,
T-elling,
E-arnest,
R-inging,
S-ound.

Two Numbers Now Ready.

1. THY BATTLE. By John G. Woolley. An appeal to Christian voters to consult conscience before party.

2. CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM. By John G. Woolley.

The full text of the address of Mr. Woolley at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, July 4, 1892. Printed from advance sheets revised by the author.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE
Fairbank's Gold Dust Washing Powder.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address
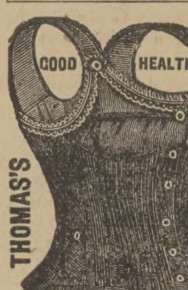
THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

RAMBLER BICYCLES
SPRING FRAME.
G. & J. PNEUMATIC or CUSHION TIRES.
"Bicycling for Girls From a Medical Standpoint," and Catalogue "F" free.
GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO
85 Madison St., Chicago.
174 Columbus Av. BOSTON. 1325 14th-st., N. W. WASHINGTON. Broadway & 57th. NEW YORK.

GIRLS!
Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings? If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. I. M. Association,
269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.
Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50 Misses 1.25 Children. 60
Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.
Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.
Agents wanted everywhere.
H. A. Thomas & Co., Manf'r's
465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION.

A SAMPLE BOX
of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S
Tissue Builder
for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romans was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N. J.

DON'T YOU THINK

Your baby would look pretty in a carriage like that?
We have prettier ones.
Also cheaper ones.
All shown in our catalogue, which we will mail FREE if you write for it.
FREIGHT PAID BY
WALTER HILL CO., 218 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

MISS BEACH'S
Curling Fluid.
Keeps the hair in curl for days Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.
30,000 Ladies Have Endorsed It
At druggists, or prepaid, 50c.
LADY AGENTS wanted.
DENISON CHEMICAL CO.,
56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

THE COBLENTZ CURE
Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. L. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

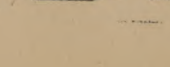
R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTIGIAN
CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT
SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Wall Paper Retailed. Good Paper 8c. Gold Paper 5c. Send 10c for postage on samples, and his guide "How to Paper" will be sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take Crochet work to do at home. Steady work. Write for particulars. L. WHITE & CO., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.



HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES.
Agents Wanted. Catalogue free.
Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

Why do you continue to use an inferior table water, when you can obtain the best at the same price? By chemical analysis the is shown to contain a larger number of digestive and corrective properties than any other table water extant, and as it is by far the most refreshing, being absolutely pure and unadulterated, you should at least sample it before continuing in old methods.

Manitou Table Water

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use.
Packed in cases of
50 Quarts. 24 Quarts. 100 Pints. 48 Pints.
Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer.
Address
Manitou Mineral Water Co., Manitou Springs, Colo.
Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

HAY-FEVER
A GIBBS'
ORONASAL RESPIRATOR
used at home, will afford absolute relief throughout the season. A wonderful invention, Convenient, Scientific, Infallible; thoroughly tested for many years. Costs but little—relief obtained is beyond estimate. Equally good for Catarrh. Sent postpaid. Pamphlet with testimonials free.
GIBBS RESPIRATOR CO., 43 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

"AUGITE"
The Women's Friend
Stove Mat.
Food of any kind can be cooked on this mat without stirring, and cannot scorch or burn. Can be placed on the blaze or on top of cook or gasoline stoves. Price 35 c. each.
Agents Wanted.
KEESTER & CO.,
81 S. Clark St., Chicago.

SAFEST OF ALL INVESTMENTS
CITY AND COUNTY BONDS Secured by tax lien on all property within their limits.
Descriptive Bond Lists furnished on application.
N. W. HARRIS & CO., BANKERS,
163-165 DEARBORN ST. CHICAGO, ILL.
New York. Boston.

IMPROVED HALL TYPEWRITER.
The best and most simple machine made. Interchangeable Type into all languages. Durable, easiest running, rapid as any. Endorsed by the Clergy and literary people. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Agents wanted. Address N. Typewriter Co., 611 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

Wherever the Rocker Washer is used the washboard becomes a relic of barbarism. It is warranted to do an ordinary family washing of 100 pieces in an hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for description and price. Rocker Washer Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind. Agts. wanted

Fat People You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials Free. F. B. Clarke, M. D. Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

Do you want to buy a
PIANO OR ORGAN?
If so you will save money by addressing
BEETHOVEN CO., P. O. Box 701 WASHINGTON,
Warren Co., New Jersey. Information FREE.

AGENTS Coin Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Every woman buys. Best and cheapest cooker sold. Big Profits to good workers, male or female. Sample's weight 12 oz. Adv'g matter furnished
For circulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, Baltimore, Md.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free.
G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

☞ See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

BAKER'S COCOA.
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL.

Subscription Rates for 1892.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " not in advance	1.50
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15
Per 100 copies	1.00

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

FROM A GIFTED D. D.

The following does us good "as it doth the upright in heart":

CHICAGO, July 14, 1892.

To The Union Signal:

I wish to record my profound appreciation of THE UNION SIGNAL and the able article of John G. Woolley, Esq., in the issue of last week.

With no disparagement of the Voice, or other able papers which advocate the overthrow of the liquor crime, I wish to state that I am deeply impressed with the power of your organ as a reform journal.

Mr. Woolley's article is keen, incisive, masterly. It states the truth pungently yet tenderly—even pathetically.

"Lady Henry" alone is worth many times what we pay for her heaven breathed thoughts.

The battle blade in such fair, tender and steady hands as you employ is doing very effective work.

"Better and better" is the fact, whether or not the motto, with you. I have wavered in my loyalty to your principles just a little, of late, but the last issue of THE UNION SIGNAL—Miss Willard, John G. Woolley, and others—vertebrate me.

It was like going to an old-time revival; hearing mighty gospel truth and getting reconvicted and soundly converted.

God bless you! May your SIGNAL long shed its mountain light and fire of truth over the whole earth.

As a social force, reform advocate, and literary journal of sterling merit you need not lift your hat to the best of 'em.

Sincerely your brother, ———.

The article by John G. Woolley, so highly commended by the distinguished gentleman whose words are here quoted, has been reproduced in two voters' leaflets which can be secured at the rate of 90c per dozen samples on receipt of a two cent stamp. Let the voters read before election day.

Send for same to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

OF SPECIAL IMPORTANCE.

It is a matter of special importance that the "why and the wherefore" of the position taken by the W. C. T. U. be largely scattered. Men are thinking, women are thinking; young men are to make a decision which will give a bias to all their lives.

Get the thoughts on our printed pages before the people.

See to it that the campaign literature advertised on page 14 is widely scattered.

Do you know the best use of a penny? Invest it in seed for the temperance harvest.

NOTE.—For ten cents you can secure the package of campaign literature that requires nearly a column to enumerate. Send for it and see that your neighbor has one leaflet to arouse thought.

Sow with discretion. Send THE UNION SIGNAL everywhere.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SEPT. 22.—WORLD'S W. C. T. U. DAY.

The special number of THE UNION SIGNAL now being prepared for this memorial day, will excel all previous "special numbers."

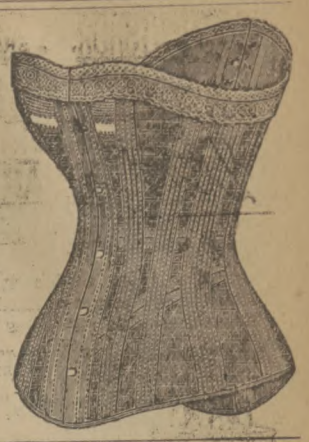
Order early!

Order it to show outsiders what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is doing in all nations!

Order it because strength at home will be increased by the knowledge of respect and admiration abroad!

Now is the time to educate. See that our papers and leaflets are put into the hands of voters.

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE
JACKSON CORSET CO.,
The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.
RETAIL PRICE $1.00.



The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.

Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.
Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.
The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.
Absolutely Safe, Thoroughly Established
OWNED AND MANAGED BY WOMEN.
IT HAS PAID ANNUAL DIVIDENDS SINCE 1885.
Capital Stock, $125,000.
Members of the W. C. T. U. who desire a safe investment do not need to try new things so long as a little of the capital stock of the remains unsold. We are offering now about $20,000—all that is left. It is ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE.
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
PRICE, PER SHARE, $25.00.
For further particulars, address
Mrs. F. H. RASTALL, Mg'r.,
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
THE TEMPLE, - CHICAGO, ILL.

TOKOLOGY TREATMENT SAVED A LIFE.
TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Mrs. G. W. C., of Detroit, Mich., writes: "Tokology treatment, under God, saved my life in childbirth, and gave me a strong, healthy baby girl. I would like to place a copy of your book in the hands of every woman in the land." Price prepaid $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago.

Hay-Fever Sufferers
Should read our new 112-page book on the treatment and cure of Hay-Fever and Asthma. Sent free on application.
"I have been a sufferer from Hay-Fever and Asthma from birth—26 years. I have tried all remedies that came to my notice without permanent relief. I am pleased to say that your medicines certainly cured me to stay cured.
W. L. WEDGER, Roslindale, Boston, Mass."
P. Harold Hayes, M. D.,
716 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR
DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT
OR LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE
A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.
A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31*st thousand.* 5,000 more Agents Wanted.—Men and Women. $200 a month. Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
TAKE A COURSE IN THE
SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW. (Incorporated.)
Send ten cents (stamps) for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y,
DETROIT, MICH.
525 WHITNEY BLOCK.

GENUINE STANDARD SINGER
Sewing Machines. Latest improved. Best made. Noiseless. Warranted 5 yrs.
SAVE MONEY now while you can get a Complete set of attachments FREE. Adapted for light or heavy work. Light running. Nicely finished. Send for catalogue.
$35.00 Machine for $9.50
$45.00 " " $14.00
$55.00 " " $18.50
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 355-357 Dearborn St. B. 149 Chicago.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY.
$12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working, reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

Handsome Paper
on a room is half the furnishing. Our part in the commercial world is tasty wall papers. 100 samples mailed for 8c. Prices, 5 to 50 cents a roll.
A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Phila.

3,000 Job Lot BICYCLES 20 to 50% off.
Lowest prices on all '92 makes & 2d hd Easy payments. We sell everywhere.
'91 Cush'n $85 Juno, balls. $65 | 40 in. $37 Victor Jr. balls. $17
'90 Crescent ('91 make) " $50 | '91 $135 Rambler " $90
'91 $145 Cush'n High Grade $90 | And 20 other styles as cheap.
Largest stock & oldest dealers in U. S. Agts. wanted.
Cata. free. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G. St., Peoria, Ill.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

AGENTS wanted throughout New Jersey for those wonderful Christy Knives (Bread, Cake and Paring), ready sellers; large commissions. For particulars write New Jersey Agency Christy Knife Co., Room 514, Prudential Building, Newark, N. J.

YOUNG LADIES SHOULD WEAR GOOD SENSE
CORSET WAISTS. Permit full breathing.

WALL PAPER. Good Paper, 3c. Gold Paper, 5c. Large package of beautiful samples and guide, "How to Paper," sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE BABY will be given a beautiful birthday card if the mother will send baby's name and age to Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. This is done to advertise LACTATED FOOD. The food that SAVES BABIES' LIVES.

GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation.
Send for Free Sample to 319 West 46th Street, New York City.

SPECIALTIES for AGENTS Ladies and Gents.
Rubber Gloves & Dress Shields, Convertible Wire Baskets, Self Threading Needles, Handy Button, and many others. Catg. free. CHICAGO SPECIALTY CO. 134 VanBuren St. Chicago

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New Articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SON, 28 Bond St., N. Y.

CUT IN TWO Prices of Sewing Machines, Safes, Scales, Blacksmith's Tools, Road Carts, Buggies, Harness and 1000 other things. List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Signal Notes.

FORTY-FIVE hundred women in England make a living by type-setting.

THE increase of suicides among the women of India is alarming, and but one reason is assigned, viz.: opium.

THE first state to legislate against the sale and manufacture of the deadly cigarette is Massachusetts.

THE Mississippi W. C. T. U. propose, they say, to send to the World's Fair a model of the Temperance Temple built of cotton in all stages of growth.

A MINISTER writing from St. Petersburg says that all classes of Russians from the Czar down have given very liberally for the relief of the famine victims.

DR. GEO. F. SHRADY, an eminent N. Y. physician, says that whisky is not a preventive of the grip; also that it is never good to ward off anything. Good food is the best means to ward off disease.

THE practical nature of women's inventions has often been commented on. A lady in the South has recently been awarded a diploma by a French society for her invention of a bread-raiser.

IRISH women are up and doing too. Ten thousand have recently signed a memorial to be presented to the board of Trinity College, Dublin, praying that the educational benefits of that University be opened to women.

A UNIVERSITY Extension Conference will be held at Chautauqua during the week, July 18–23. All Extension societies are to be invited. Prof. Moses Coit Tyler, of Cornell, and other men of experience will lecture and give practical talks.

THE scheme to produce the Passion Play in Chicago has failed, for the Oberammergau cast has refused to appear. Their leader says, "We give this play not for the financial profit, but as a religious duty, in fulfilment of a vow made by our ancestors."

NO OTHER small party shows the persistence of the Prohibition party, says a prominent daily paper. The men rise from every defeat only to push onward. The men who declare that the next foe to the American government to be downed is the saloon are evidently in training for a providential purpose.

THE Sargent prize of one hundred dollars offered at Harvard for the best metrical translation of an ode of Horace has been awarded this year to a young woman. Two years ago a young woman took it over forty masculine competitors. It behooves the young men to bestir themselves.

THE recent christening of the Texas with a bottle of cold water is not the first instance on record. In Canada, over thirty-five years ago, a sailing vessel was to be launched. The owner and wife, the present hono-rary president of the Dominion W. C. T. U., insisted that the christening should be done with cold water.

AFTER Gambetta's death his brain was given for examination. The report read that if it were not known to whom the brain belonged, the physician would have said that it belonged to a woman who used all her faculties well. As Gambetta was an opponent to woman's advancement, the decision might not be flattering to his pride.

SIXTEEN years ago, twenty-five Swedes, with a capital of nine thousand dollars, started a furniture factory in Rockford, Ill. Each man was a stockholder. The business has so increased that there are now twelve factories, including furniture, piano and knitting, employing eighteen hundred men, with a profit last year of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The community now numbers thirteen thousand people, maintaining eight churches of six denominations. They learn and use the English language as fast as possible. The voters are a unit for prohibition, and nine-tenths of the men are total abstainers. The granting by the city council of three licenses for saloons on their main street, is an annoyance and grief to these sturdy Norsemen. Every immigrant understands he can become a stockholder in time. The sons are taken into the factories, which thus become trade schools. They generally own their homes. The fame of the community has gone all over the world, as furnishing a practical solution of the problem between labor and capital. Its success has depended on the brotherliness and spirit of helpfulness among the Swedes.

Good Cooking

Is one of the chief blessings of every home. To always insure good custards, puddings, sauces, etc., use Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk. Directions on the label. Sold by your grocer and druggist.

A good Turkish bath can not be had everywhere, but a bath with Ivory Soap can, and the same feeling of invigoration and perfect cleanliness results.

COPYRIGHT 1892, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

"THEY ARE NOT IN IT!"

AS EURIPIDES REMARKED MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO.

"Cowards do not count in battle; they are there, but NOT IN IT!"—Euripides, Fragment 523.

Thus we see the wisdom of the great tragic writer of Greece, who flourished 400 years before the Christian era, become the slang of the 19th century.

"They are not in it!"

But slang or classic, the words are absolutely true of the so-called "additions" to Chicago's great manufacturing suburb, the town of Harvey, Illinois, and misleadingly advertised as Harvey property.

"They are not in it!"

They are outside the limits, outside the costly improvements, outside the peculiar privileges secured by contract, as to employment in the factories.

Our pamphlets explain this important point fully. Write for them to the very men who built the town,

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION,
819 to 825 The Rookery,
CHICAGO, ILL.

[Mention this paper.]

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE

Bonds are going fast. They will all be sold by August 1st. Over 2,000 lots at South Waukegan, contracted for last April at $500,000, are now worth fully $662,500, and August 1st $75,000 additional will be credited to all bond-owners, and bonds will be accepted by us at par value, plus said credits in exchange for lots.

BONDS ARE $10 EACH, AND ARE SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

They are secured by above-named lots, which are held in trust by the Commercial Loan and Trust Company, and when they are sold the bonds are redeemed, and profits less expenses are also paid to the bond-owners. They will be a source of great income. The investment is ABSOLUTELY SAFE, and there is no liability.

Factories now Located at South Waukegan

Warrant a population of 50,000. When this number is reached our lots for which we paid $500,000, will be worth about $4,000,000 (based on values in other similar towns), and each $10 bond would then be worth about $80. See our advertisement in this paper July 9th.

The largest free excursion train that ever left Chicago carried the different organizations of the W. C. T. U. of Chicago and vicinity to South Waukegan on last Saturday to participate in the dedication of ground for the Temperance Temple. Many prominent W. C. T. U. workers were there.

THIS is our LAST OFFER of BONDS

If you wish to come and see the property or investigate our plans more fully or collect in your money with which to pay for bonds, write us at once enclosing a deposit, no matter how small, and we will reserve as many bonds as you wish for sixty days. Your deposit will be returned in case you are not satisfied after investigating. Our circular contains full information. Send for it.

MAKE CHECKS, DRAFTS AND MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE TO

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE 161 La Salle Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Mrs. R. A. EMMONS, Manager.

REFERENCES:—Commercial Loan and Trust Co., 115 La Salle St., Chicago; Total Abstinence Life Insurance Co., Royal Insurance Building, Chicago.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, July 28, 1892. Number 30.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Unusual progress was made with the World's Fair buildings last week.

The president has accepted the resignation of E. Burd Grubb, minister to Spain.

An explosion of gas at York Farm colliery in Pennsylvania on Saturday killed fifteen men.

Dr. A. L. Chapin, president of Beloit college from 1850 to 1886, died in Beloit, Wis., on Friday.

Children's Day at Monona Lake Assembly, July 23, called out an audience of one thousand boys and girls.

King Humbert, of Italy, sends a friendly greeting to President Harrison concerning the Columbian Exposition.

William K. Vanderbilt's private yacht was wrecked by a steamer off Nantucket Shoals July 24. The passengers and crew escaped unharmed.

H. C. Frick, manager of the Carnegie Steel Company, was seriously shot and stabbed by a New York anarchist on Saturday. Strikers condemn the attack.

Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke, the poet and author of stories of high moral purpose, died suddenly of heart failure in Pittsfield, Mass., July 18th, aged sixty-six years. Mrs. Cooke was born on a farm near Hartford, Conn., and her parents were of Puritan stock.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the temperance leader in the English Parliament, has been returned. He has been in Parliament off and on since 1859. He is an advanced radical, favors disestablishment of the church, abolition of the House of Lords, doing away with standing armies and the direct veto of the drink shops by the vote of the people.

The death of Thomas Cook, chief of the well-known tourist firm, occurred in London, July 19th, at the age of eighty-six. He invented the excursion system, by which inexperienced travelers are enabled to go all over the world, having previously had their tickets and accommodations secured by the agency. He also invented the system of touring described in the famous phrase, "personally conducted." He was always a teetotaler, and he and his millions of patrons, nearly all of whom were teetotalers, have proved to a demonstration that it is not necessary to drink intoxicants in any climate nor under any circumstances.

AN article on women in the General Conference by Mrs. Isabella Webb Parks, one of the ablest writers among women, is given in this number, and we ask for it special attention.

BY vote of the general officers of the World's W. C. T. U., the superintendency of white-ribbon work in Europe has been assigned to Lady Henry Somerset, in her capacity of vice-president-at-large. She goes to Berlin in the autumn, and will also visit Paris in the interest of the movement.

A GREAT demonstration is expected in San Francisco, August 4, at the formal notification to General Bidwell, of his nomination for President by the Prohibition party. Colonel Ritter, chairman of the recent convention, will make the formal address. A similar demonstration will occur a little later at Waco, Tex., the home of Dr. Cranfill, Prohibition candidate for Vice-President.

JOHN BURNS is bound to cut a great figure in Parliament, to which he has been elected as a representative of labor. He is a man of the people, living within the limit of £100 a year, and he will not take a penny more. This income of his is made up from individual subscriptions of one penny, willingly contributed by those on behalf of whom he toils. He fixed the amount himself, it being the equivalent of his yearly earnings before he became a labor reform speaker and worker. The man who, coming to power and fame, thus keeps himself "unspotted from the world" is sure to have, as he deserves, the confidence of those for whom he toils.

IT is not well to be too sanguine over the present situation in Congress relative to Sunday closing. The chameleon is not more uncertain in color than is a legislative body in action. While we are devoutly thankful that the Christian sentiment of the country has prevailed in this great skirmish, let us remember that next winter will witness the decisive battle. Meanwhile let us pray as if there were no work and work as if there were no prayer.

OUR grand brother, John G. Woolley, is now holding his annual meetings at Rest Island, near Minneapolis, Minn., where they are building Willard Cottage, to cost three thousand dollars, and have a capacity to accommodate twenty persons. It is to be the gift of Minnesota women to the Island Mission, no one being asked to give more than five dollars. We believe this island is going to prove a veritable "city of refuge" to those who are under the curse of drink.

THE true anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus is October 21st. The discrepancy between this and the popular date, October 12, is to be credited to the difference between old and new style. Congress has already placed the anniversary to be celebrated by the public schools on the 21st, and it is to be hoped that it will name the same date for the opening of the Exposition, so that the comical predicament of a two-headed celebration day may be avoided.

IN these days of many questions it will be well to remember that the Cincinnati women delegates—about 120 in number, including alternates—were not sent by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but by Prohibition conventions. Also that no W. C. T. U. is in any wise bound to be a Prohibitionist or a member of any political party. We have Republicans and Democrats in our ranks, but our moral support is given nationally to the only political movement that nationally antagonizes the liquor power.

JOINT letters have been sent from the president of the World's and National W. C. T. U., and from Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, department superintendent of peace and arbitration for both these societies, to Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania; H. C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel Works, Pittsburg, Pa., and Mr. Hugh O'Donnell, Homestead, Pa., urging them in the name of God and humanity and the white-ribbon host to secure the submission of the questions at issue between the Carnegie Steel Works and the men therein employed, to arbitration. We wish we could do more. We have at least done this much in the interest of justice, peace and brotherhood.

THE Whittier Memorial in Willard Hall is to be a beautiful clock with symbolic figures now being designed by the celebrated sculptor, Carl Rohl Smith, who has made the bust of Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, and who has been engaged by George M. Pullman to design a group symbolic of the early history of Chicago, at a cost of thirty thousand dollars. Mr. Rohl Smith has a studio in the Woman's Temple and is hard at work upon this group which is to be presented to the city at the time of the World's Fair. The Whittier clock is to have a ship as its chief ornament symbolic of the lines written by the poet at the request of leading white-ribboners, and which are as follows:

"Freighted with love, our temperance ship
Around the world shall sail,
Take heart and hope, dear mariners,
God's errands never fail."

Mr. Whittier supposed that he was writing this verse for a tablet at the entrance to the hall, but by the present arrangement the most attractive ornament that it will contain will be this memorial to himself. The clock will cost five hundred dollars, and all friends of the poet should be stir themselves, as the money will be needed very soon. Please send subscriptions to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, checks payable to Miss Esther Pugh.

WE are receiving letters asking "How can we help to win votes for Bidwell and Cranfill?" We answer, walk by the same rule and mind the same thing. Circulate that marvelous Fourth of July speech of John G. Woolley, and other literature issued by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association and The Voice. Get THE UNION SIGNAL into as many homes as possible; its purpose is not to anger or antagonize those from whom it differs on the political issues of the day, but to bring before them what we believe to be the better path in politics, the higher outlook for humanity. Let the women in any local union who are especially interested, form a "campaign circle" and canvass for votes on the million-vote agreement of The Voice; as we understand it, that agreement still holds good and can be pushed to much better advantage now that the candidates are known, and men cannot excuse themselves by saying, "We prefer to wait and see what names are on the Prohibition ticket." Send to The Voice for blanks and push this work! From now on there ought to be a rally all along the lines for definite work to secure votes. The W. C. T. U. is made up of women of all political faiths, but its spinal column is strung on a cord of prohibition in politics, and we believe those women who have seen this vision would do well, as we have herein suggested, to band themselves together as campaign circles for the peaceful war, in the midst of which we are, and whose outcome we predict will be not fewer than half a million votes with a strong tendency toward one million. The tariff and force bills are not heartsome issues. American women will not rally to them with enthusiasm. But a home protected from the ravages of drink, a manhood pure, a womanhood clothed with the power to defend itself and little ones from the saloon in law and politics—these are issues that may well stir the blood of every woman who has a brain to think, a heart to feel, a hand to help.

THE Republican State Convention in Iowa, by an overwhelming vote, laid on the table the following resolution: "That the Republican party reiterates its former utterances on the temperance issue, and will take no backward steps on that or any other moral question." The Iowa State Temperance Alliance, hitherto non-partisan, now has the following to say in a circular recently issued: "This action of the Republican State Convention was without justification or precedent. The party has heretofore, after indorsing the national platform, also outlined its policy on state issues, but now for the first time a declaration of principles as to state issues is omitted, and there is deep significance in the fact. The saloon element in the convention was united, bold and aggressive, and, supported by the railroad influence, carried its point with a uniformity that indicated a pre-arranged plan. It placed at the head of its electoral ticket, by much the largest vote accorded to any man balloted for by the convention, a man, who is, next to Governor Boies, the most pronounced advocate of the licensed saloon in the state." The Alliance at its last meeting adopted the following: "That we regard the question of prohibition in Iowa as paramount to any political issue now at stake, and we will hereafter give our suffrages and influence to no individual or organization that is not true to prohibition. The next step will be an effort to induce the Republican State Convention of 1893 to relegate the prohibition to the legislative districts. Unless this program is met with a vigorous and determined protest, the prohibitory law will be repealed by the next legislature. The disposition of so many friends of prohibition to approve and aid in carrying out the suggestions of party leaders without questioning their purpose or the result, makes the situation still more critical. Let it be remembered that prohibition enforced is prohibition respected and popular. While politicians plot and betray, let us not be found wanting in energy and devotion." All honor to the brave men and women who have put forth this pronunciamento. The people of Iowa have no truer friends than they.

SUNDAY EVENING.

BY N. W. HODGE.

Farewell, sweet day, thy placid close
Steals silent on: the fading light,
The trembling star, the wind's repose,
Foretell the solemn, quiet night.

Day on which rests Jehovah's smile,
Farewell! may still thy influence blend
With all that would the soul beguile,
And all my weekly paths attend.

O may my life all emblem Thee,
Hallowed of God—serenely sweet—
Its peace like some wide river be
That gently flows a silvery sheet.

Day on whose morn the Saviour rose,
Farewell! thine evening calm be given
To me, at life's deep, solemn close,
A foretaste of the rest of Heaven.

Ripon, Wis.

"A SURE CURE"—A TRUE STORY.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

Chapter III.

(Concluded.)

How hot the long summer days were in Morris street! Michael Stein and his family went to the seashore for a fortnight in July, and Samuel Conover went with his family to the mountains in August. But the people whose earnings supported these two stayed at home, the men to swelter in the exhausting heat of the nail works, the women to bend fainting over washtubs and ironing tables, for if men will become slaves to earn money for drink, women will become slaves to earn bread for their children. Miss Johns thought it was hot in the cool shadows of Oak avenue, but she remained at her post because of the Swan street Sunday-school. She was feverishly anxious to do her best for the people who came there. Without rising to consciousness there was a feeling within her that her service must win some reward from heaven, and she had a definite reward to ask for, namely, the restoration of her dear and only brother to himself. He was in a private asylum for the treatment of the drink habit. It was hard to look at Phebe and realize that the curse that overshadowed the Marshall family, overshadowed her.

Earnest work for the Master is sure of reward, though it does not always take the form we ask for, and though as the months went by Bertrand Johns was not released from his merciful prison, Laura Marshall's studies of the Bible had resulted in filling her heart with love for the Saviour. For her humble-hearted mother to love her John and keep his commandments had become all the simple soul's religion. She had a poor, worn out string of beads. When John abused her, in his cups, she secretly said them over, and was vaguely comforted. But when Laura brought her Bible home and read the story of the Redeemer of the world, and Miss Johns prayed for the mothers at the Thursday night Bible-school and prayer-meeting, a new life began for Mrs. Marshall, and one never-to-be-forgotten night, after a long and vain meditation over what she could do to earn enough money to send her husband away to be cured, there came into her head the words of our Lord to His disciples, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all things shall be added unto you." If only John had attained the kingdom of God, if he would give himself to Christ, and try to attain his Christliness, strength would come more potent than medicines to cure him. She spent the rest of the night in silent prayer, and in the morning when he was gone, she gathered her little flock about her and told them the comforting hope that had come to her in the night.

"We'll all pray. We'll do our work, but we'll pray all the time," said Timmy who was earning sometimes fifteen cents a week now, picking up old iron. "Oh, nothing will keep father out of my mind a minute."

"But you must not tell your father," said the mother with a sudden recollection of her John's masculine dislike of being "preached at."

"No," said Gertrude, "we'll just love him."

He who knows the secret of the whiteness of the lily, and the blush of the rose, may guess how those prayers were answered. After a little the father knew that something was going on. One night he heard the twins whispering his name to God behind the heavy vail of the hop-vine that now shaded one side of the back door, and one morning he saw little Tim kneeling by his bedside. The climax came when his wife awoke him praying in her sleep:

"Lord, dear Lord," she murmured, "give him a heart that loves Thee! I will never cease entreating till Thou hast heard me. Father, teach my John to love Thy Son. He can never be a true man till he has his hand in Thine, and is trying to be Christlike."

The man rose and went out into the night. He knew that this group of creatures, the nearest to him of all beings, was besieging Heaven in his behalf. His mother had prayed for him till she had died. Perhaps—he scanned the mysterious depths of the sky—perhaps she was praying still. Who knew? He sat there in the quiet till a red light began to glow in the east. Then he went back to the bed. He noted for the first time that his wife's thick, brown hair was full of silver threads. He saw, as with new sight, the lines on her forehead, the faded and shrunken contour of her cheeks. She was only thirty-four and she was as fresh and fair as a rose when he had married her. He had sometimes told himself with bitterness that he had married beneath him. It came upon him with swift reproach that this woman, who knew little of book lore and less of social conventions, was in finer branches of knowledge every way his superior. He went away again and sat down under the shadow of the hop-vine while the robins and orioles sang and the stars one by one disappeared in the light of the coming sun. That there was a God was a fact he had always accepted, as he accepted the daily miracle of the day. He had accepted, too, his wife's love which seemed now to bear him as on wings to the mighty love whose hand had set the sun in its place and sent the stars upon their courses. What a wonderful thing was love! What strange stirrings filled him!

A week went by. Not even forgetful Timmy forgot the goal of the family desire for a moment. John Marshall felt the glow in those five pairs of eyes upon him as he tended the inexorable furnace and his nail machine. Drink? Oh, no! He wasn't thirsty any more. At least he felt no bodily thirst; but there was another thirst that when Sunday came again he could put off no longer. "I'll tell you what I want," he said, over his untasted breakfast, "I want the living water my mother used to tell me about. I cannot go on any longer without it, and you must teach me, Mary to find it, you and the children."

. . . . . .

Six years have passed. John Marshall teaches in Swan street Sunday-school now when he is at home, for he has gone back to his profession, and is sent about the country to lay out railways and plan bridges. He is not given to speech-making, for he does not resemble his father, the late judge, but he spoke once. It was when he asked to be admitted into the church, six months after he felt himself born to a new life. "You know my past," he said simply. "For a long time I feared the appetite for stimulants would come back. I felt it early in my teens, and used to spend my allowance at saloons. I cannot tell you who do not know it, what the desire is like, but it is like a fire in the veins. But I say it in awe, and in humble gratitude, that from the moment I cast myself at the feet of Jesus, even the smell of the stuff has been repugnant to me. The appetite seems dead. I know that the love of God in the heart is a sure cure."

Terre Haute, Ind.

THE CONGRESS AUXILIARY OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

III.

BY MRS. CHAS. HENROTIN, VICE-PRES

The Committee on Government and Law Reform, Mrs. Myra Bradwell, chairman, reports:

First and foremost in the consideration of government reform, so far as women are concerned, the keystone of the whole arch is in the enfranchisement of women, and therefore, logically, political and economic reform should precede law reform, but as the latter is given first, let us consider it first.

LAW REFORM.

One sentence of Lady Henry Somerset's is significant: "The life-giver should be also the law-giver." It is very fitting that women should discuss law reform in a World's Congress, for without a voice in the councils, without a vote at the polls, it is only in a Congress of Ideas that woman stands upon an equal footing with man in shaping any reform in the law. To many, it may seem rather absurd for one-half of the human family to advocate measures of reform when they are powerless to carry them into effect. It is the intention of the Woman's Committee on Law Reform to consider with the men's committee needed reforms in international law. Perhaps we may claim an added interest in this branch of law, for in international law, all nations, whether great or small, stand upon a perfect equality, and in case of a breach, the bar to which appeal is made is a bar in which we sit as peers with our brothers, the bar of public opinion.

It is the wish of our committee that Madam Emily Kempin, the only woman who ever graduated in law from Zurich University, be invited to write a paper upon some topic in international law. While considering the many perplexing problems in this department of law, it has seemed to some members of our committee that the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus might be fitly commemorated, not only by an exhibition of the material progress of the world and by a congress of living workers and thinkers, but also by a congress of the nations of the world. The frank, full and free discussion of all these problems by duly accredited representatives from the enlightened nations of the world could not fail to be of signal service to humanity.

The second topic that we expect to consider under law reform (with the men's committee) is the needed reform in the administration of justice. The delay of the law in many instances amounts almost to a practical denial of justice. It is interesting that this complaint was prevalent in the time of Shakespeare. Year after year lawyers meet in conference, and this topic furnishes a never-ending theme for discussion, and yet we are no nearer the solution of the difficulty. David Dudley Field offers the code as the panacea for the ill, but the same complaint comes from England, where the code has been in practical operation for many years. In our own state the average duration of a lawsuit is four years! Is it any wonder that a poor man hesitates to begin a lawsuit which must drag its course through the courts at such a snail's pace? No subject in the whole domain of law reform is more worthy to engage the attention of a Congress of Lawyers.

The third subject for consideration which the Woman's Committee expects to consider as a separate committee is needed reform in the legal status of woman.

This will include the consideration of needed reforms in all laws relating to the wife, the mother and the widow; in all laws relating to the domestic relations (there is to be a paper on Uniform Marriage and Divorce Laws, and ample time given for discussion pro and con); in all laws enacted for the protection of women and children (child labor, age of consent, etc.); in fact, in all laws which can be construed in any way to relate to women and children. Many of the themes for consideration under this head have not been decided upon as yet, and we are asking our advisory council for suggestions upon that point. Certainly no paper will be heard with greater interest than that upon "The Rights of the Mother to the Custody of the Child." When we consider that but five states in the United States give the mother an equal right with the father in the custody of her children, we perceive the great need of law reform in the legal status of women. This also includes, of course, needed reforms in the laws which shall permit a woman to engage in any occupation or profession to which her inclination leads her.

It is also the intention of the committee to call together a congress of women lawyers. Mrs. Mary A. Ahrens is the chairman of this congress. One theme for consideration by this congress has already been decided upon; an historical paper upon "The Admission of Women to the Bar," in which will also be set forth the present opportunities in the various nations for women to engage in the practice of the law.

POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC REFORM.

Conservative and enlightened reforms prevent revolutions. Lamartine has said, had there been in France, previous to the French Revolution, poor laws similar to the poor laws in existence in many of our states, the French Revolution would never have occurred. Perhaps it is better for humanity that France did not have her poor laws! Dark though that page of history is, yet salutary the lesson emphasized.

But in the work of government reform it is necessary for us to underscore the words enlightened and conservative reforms. It is a noteworthy fact that the average reformer changes his hobby every few years. He who accepts his ideas to-day is hurried on to-morrow to something entirely different. Even the great Russian, Tolstoi, changes his reforms every two years. We need not fear, however, this tendency in the great reform of the age—the enfranchisement of women. The noble band of pioneers has stood firm throughout the trying years, unshaken in its devotion to this great principle. If it is true that every reform must pass through three stages—ridicule, argument and adoption, then surely this reform is ready for the crowning act of adoption. The irresistible logic of a progressive civilization is bound to recognize woman's equality with man in that privilege so long withheld,—suffrage. The Woman's Committee of the World's Congress Auxiliary feels on this festal occasion it is most fitting that that noble triumvirate, Lucy Stone, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony, should have charge of the department of suffrage, which includes the consideration of suffrage as it now exists in republic, kingdom and empire; the right to vote, its nature, conditions, exceptions and qualifications, including age, sex, nationality, naturalization, education, property, payment of taxes, etc.

The department of political and economic reform includes besides the section on suffrage, political economy, public revenues, statistics, weights and measures, postal service and civil service reform.

In the department of political economy special attention is to be given to the problem of wages, in considering the industrial condition of women. Carroll D. Wright tells us that the discrepancy between men's and women's wages is not so great as is imagined. It is a pity that statistics as to the relative value of men's and women's work have not been systematically gathered.

Some of the themes which have been suggested for consideration are:

"The Relation of the State to Labor"; "Proper Limits of Economic Legislature"; "The Relation of Capital and Labor"; "Modern Theories of Taxation"; "How Shall we Improve our Postal Service?"

The country which bids the nations of the earth come and celebrate the anniversary of its discovery may hope to give to the peoples of the world an object lesson in constitutional government.

While the foreigners may find much to admire in our national government, they cannot fail to be struck with the weakness, nay, with the absolute failure of the government of American cities. President Andrew D. White says, "that without the slightest exaggeration, and with very few exceptions, the city governments of the United States are the very worst in the world."

Is the scheme of our city government at fault? Is there greater need of self-government? Are our large cities, teeming with millions of human beings, handicapped by the supervisory control of state authorities? Do the charters of our cities need to be changed? Wherein lies the trouble? The consideration of the perplexing problems connected with the government of cities promises to bring out some of the most fruitful papers of the World's Congress Auxiliary. While the Woman's Branch realizes the immensity of the task of collecting statistics which aim to be world-wide in their scope, yet alive to the necessity of more light upon these questions, it is preparing to send out blanks for information.

Some of the questions asked are as follows:—the plan is as yet tentative—Form of Government; Relation of City to State (Has the City Home or Self Government); Send Copy of Charter of Your City; Point out what you Regard as Advantages and Defects in Same; The Three Governmental Powers, Legislative, Executive and Judicial, and Their Relation to Each Other; Proper Distribution and Limitations of Municipal Powers.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE.

Revenue.—How levied and disbursed; mention any interesting facts as to the sources of the city revenues, as sale of franchises, etc.

Public health.—Public sanitation; care of streets; removal of waste; sewerage; water supply; limitation of height of buildings; any measures tending to prevent "congestion of city," such as directed immigration in London; public baths, if any, and description of same; inspection of tenements; any laws as to the number of persons in one room; any measures tending to eradicate the "sweating" system. Police protection.—Interesting facts in relation thereto. Judicial protection. Public service.—Transportation; what are the facilities for; does city control same? Postal service. Telephones. Telegraphs. Public works.—Water supply; light; heat, etc.

Civil service reform.—With a change in the heads of city departments is the entire office force changed? purification of municipal politics; what are the duties of the citizen? Should compulsory voting laws be passed? What can the citizen do to whom the ballot is denied in municipal affairs?

Mention any work which women have done in municipal affairs (where the ballot is granted and where it is not). The work which New York City women have done in municipal politics is a sufficient answer to those who would sit down and do nothing because they are denied the ballot. It is the intention of the committee to have one paper on "The Reformed Municipality," or "Municipality of the Twentieth Century." No measure in that paper is to be advocated which has not been put into practical operation by some city and shown to be successful in its working.

PEACE AND ARBITRATION.

A step forward in the history of civilization is the effort to substitute for the brand of war the olive branch of peace. These friends who wage a peaceful war in the effort to consecrate the friendship and fraternity of nations are looking forward to arbitration as the cornerstone of international law. When the disputes between nations are settled, not by that relic of barbarism, physical might, but by civilizing and humanitarian methods, then may we hope to inaugurate the era of "Peace on earth, to men good will."

The committee has entered into correspondence with all the peace societies of whose existence it knows. It was a source of surprise and gratification to learn not only how many peace societies there were scattered throughout this broad world of ours, but to learn how many of the organizations had women for their officers, and what a deep interest and active part women were taking in the deliberations and work of these organizations.

THE GREAT FACTORS.

The two great factors of modern civilization are co-operation and centralization. The value of one person's mind or one person's work is steadily diminishing; it is the associate mind, the many hearts beating as one that now move the world, and this is so well understood by women that they are rapidly learning what can be accomplished in economic, social and intellectual life by the power of an educated public opinion.

Women have achieved much during the past forty years of the world's history, and they are rapidly adapting themselves to new avenues of employment, and boldly entering the new paths of knowledge. And not alone in America, but also in England and on the Continent, even from Turkey and the Orient, come to us voices on the breeze, inarticulate, it is true, but expressing to us that "divine discontent" which is the forerunner of freedom, of equality, and of fraternity. Society is awaking to the truth that no one nation has spoken the last words of wisdom, and national prejudices are disappearing. The willingness to learn, one of another, is ever on the increase. In these international conferences we shall learn each other's needs and necessities, participate by sympathy in the victories which have been won, and aid by our words of encouragement the battles yet to be fought. These congresses will be specially valuable to women, for they have to adjust themselves to an entirely new point of view as regards their political, economic, and spiritual life. In all these questions women have hitherto accepted the laws made by men. To quote again from Fraulein Helene Lange, when she contrasts Gretchen's self-surrender as she exclaims of Faust: "Such a man must know everything!" with Nora's speech to Helmer in which she says: "I must solve these problems for myself; I must consider and endeavor to decide if what the pastor says is right, above all, if it is righteous for me." That is the point of view of a modern woman; this is the question she must ask of government, of law, of labor and of religion.

The congresses of 1893 may answer many of these questions for us. To quote the address of the Labor Committee: "While we recognize the leavening power and priceless value and force of high ideals and great ideas, the voice of burdened humanity is so loud in our ears that we feel constrained to lay stress upon the 'living present,' to give ear to what now is, rather than what may be, and thus to fasten attention upon the realities of life, its glory and its shame, its victories and defeats, its powers and possibilities, for the coming year of miracles, 1893."

THE DIRECT POPULAR LOCAL VETO.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

[From an address during the recent English elections.]

Among the gravest of the problems that claim the responsible consideration of every man who would use his vote for his country's good, temperance reform is one of the most urgent and momentous. Both great parties in the state have again and again reiterated the necessity for some legislation, and to day the people of England, shamed by the sight of the temptation that is legalized in their midst, stirred by the bitter lesson of the nation's drink bill, and moved by a lofty and loving zeal for the cause of home, demand with no uncertain voice that such legislation shall be immediate and effective.

We have been caught by no passing burst of enthusiasm. We proclaim no new principle, ill-considered and untried, in protesting the people's right to sanction or forbid a crying evil by their vote. It is not in the turmoil of public life that we have evolved the principles of reform; they have been revealed to us in the sacred seclusion of home; they have been taught us by drink-ruined lives, and we have been fired with a determination born of no passing enthusiasm to protect the on-coming generation. Therefore, by incorporating the direct veto in the Newcastle program the Liberal party has only shown itself sensible of the nation's wish. We are now asking Parliament to give to the people a right which already belongs inalienably to them by all democratic axioms. Moreover, the machinery of the popular veto is familiar through the Borough Funds Act in thousands of districts to day. If the principle is rightly applied to questions which affect the health and recreation of a locality, how much more should it be applied to a question which touches vitally the moral and physical well-being of the community. It is but the application to the most serious of the social evils of our day of a principle which the common law enforces against every one whose trade or pleasure wars against the comfort and the safety of his neighbor.

It is just about twenty years since that great statesman, Mr. Gladstone, wrote the following passage in a letter addressed to the United Kingdom Alliance: "I could not go beyond a reference to my votes and speeches in the House of Commons, including declarations made in the Session lately expired, from which you would see that my disposition is to let in the principle of local option whenever it is likely to be found satisfactory."

In 1864, Sir Wilfrid Lawson obtained leave for the first reading of his Permissive Bill, when half a million people signed petitions in its favor. On a division, however, only forty members voted for it.

In 1879 Sir Wilfrid was followed by one hundred and sixty-four members into the lobby, when a division was taken on his local option resolution, and in the following year, when he brought his motion once more before the House, Mr. Gladstone spoke for it and uttered that memorable aphorism: "Greater calamities are inflicted on mankind by intemperance than by the three great historical scourges, war, pestilence and famine. This," he added, "is true of us as a nation, and it is the measure of our discredit and disgrace." On the division it was found that the resolution had passed by a majority of twenty-six, and in the next year, when Sir Wilfrid moved that legislative effect should be given to this resolution, Sir William Vernon Harcourt advocated the control of the traffic being placed in the people's hands, and maintained what the judgment of the House of Lords in the case of Sharp vs. Wakefield has since declared to be true, that there is under existing law no vested interest in any license. On this occasion again Mr. Gladstone was to the fore as a temperance reformer, and was followed in the division by seven of his cabinet.

With this as their record, and with the renewed assurances given by the Newcastle program, we may now safely trust that the Liberal party is earnest in its purpose to carry this pressing reform to a successful issue.

A little while back the Duke of Westminster was credited, amid the cheers of his class, with having closed thirty-seven out of forty-eight public-houses on his London property. If one fortunate possessor of great estates can do this without injustice and for his tenants' good, may not the people do it for themselves? The present system has been worked with a total disregard of the requirements and wishes of the localities for which it has been called to legislate. For instance, on the outskirts of London, a building company erected artisans' dwellings over a considerable area of land; public-houses were rigorously excluded, and many sought homes there, because that plague did not exist. Before long a great brewer bought a site within a stone's throw of their Board School, and applied for a license for a gin palace, which was twice refused, but on a third application two magistrates sitting on the Harlesden bench granted the demand that was a sentence of misery in all likelihood to thousands who had purposely sought that safeguarded neighborhood.

The echoes of the brewers' outcry over their vested interest in a public sin have not died away; but now, on the eve of the day when the people's voice shall be heard in this land, we plead for interests vested so deep in sanctity that our voters must be roused to a fierce resolve that now at last the best the nation has shall be protected from its worst. We plead with all entrusted with the vote for the motherhood of the race that has gone down into the valley of unutterable pain and in the shadow of death has borne the children that are the vested interest of England's homes.

God guide those to whom the sovereign citizenship has been given; in their hands lies the future of the poor, the weak, the forgotten, the defenseless. It is they who will decide whether to these the message of the coming year is the happiness of hope, or an unbroken bondage.

NOT A FAIRY TALE.—HOW TO VISIT THE WORLD'S FAIR CHEAPLY AND COMFORTABLY.

BY MARY HAYDON.
Assistant Secretary Dormitory Association.

We (in Chicago) have all heard long and tiresome accounts of the enormous prices paid for lodging and board in Philadelphia during the Centennial. We have also hoped to profit by the experience of others, and plan for ourselves some comfortable, homelike rooms near the Fair grounds; but even to-day, at this far-off period, e'er the Fair begins, we find it impossible to rent a room "down Fair way" at any reasonable price, and later on it will be impossible to get accommodation at any price.

This fact being brought to the notice of the Board of Lady Managers of the Woman's Congress Auxiliary, fourteen of the resident ladies, of the wealthiest society women of Chicago, formed themselves into a stock company incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois, as the Woman's Dormitory Association, to provide lodging, cleanly and safe for industrial women at forty cents a day. It was a very complicated scheme to plan a way to accomplish this at so low a price. And many times while the matter was in embryo, have these noble women been weary in well-doing and felt like dropping the burden and letting the "unprotected woman take care of herself;" but with the encouragement and advice of two of the best lawyers in Chicago, the Dormitory scheme blossomed into a bright and glowing success, and they now feel assured that before the first of September the stock will be sold, the buildings commenced, and women will be clamoring for shares when it will be "too late," and stock will be selling at a premium.

One share of stock costs ten dollars. No person can buy more than ten shares. This share entitles the holder to twenty-five days' lodging in one of the Dormitory Buildings. She may bring a friend, and both may stay on one certificate twelve and one-half days, or they may stay less time, and lend the certificate to other friends, who will use the coupons, returning the certificate to its original owner. The rooms will be single, with single beds; double, with double beds; and double, with two single beds, furnished with woven wire mattress, feather pillows, rocking chair, mirror, good bed clothing and toilet articles. One dollar and a half will cover all expenses for a day: Entrance fee, fifty cents; lodging, forty cents; breakfast, twenty cents; lunch, ten cents, and dinner, thirty cents.

What more could anybody ask? How to proceed to get a share of stock. Buy a post-office money order or a draft, payable to ELBRIDGE G. KEITH, Treasurer.

Write a letter giving your full name and post-office address, enclosing this draft or money order, and mail it to

HELEN M. BARKER,
Care Board of Lady Managers, W. C. A.,
Chicago,
Ill.

A draft can cover a large amount. Send letter advising to whom the shares shall be made out, and each person will receive a receipt made in her own name for her stock.

It is desired as nearly as possible that each person shall state during what month she desires to come, so that rooms may be recorded for them.

The association will build four dormitories, each to accommodate 1,250 women for twenty-five days, or in toto 35,000 women during the Fair time. The sewerage will be perfect. Flowers and vines in the grounds will make a homelike place.

One lady in paying for six shares of stock said: "I intend to take a course of education in the World's Fair and attend every day for all the six months. When I leave the grounds at night, wearied, it will be a great comfort to know that within walking distance there awaits my coming a cleanly, pleasant, quiet room at the end of only one short flight of stairs; and after resting for a time I may go out only a block away and get a wholesome 'New England dinner' for fifty cents. Coming back we may assemble in one of those large, airy parlors on the ground floor of the dormitory buildings. The evening may be cool and a big, old-fashioned fire-place will hold a hospitable log-fire, and we shall find friends from the East and West, North and South, and also from over the sea. We shall form clubs—of women whose remembrances of the World's Fair will be illuminated by memories of friendships originated in the Woman's Dormitory."

If you desire to invest in stock in this association, do so at once; all the shares must be sold by September 1, as the building committee must then commence work.

The shares are non-assessable and are transferable, so after the $10 investment there will be no further care—only to build air-castles as to the pleasant time you will spend in the dormitory, and if you are denied the privilege at the last of coming, you can lend your share to your "next of kin," or sell it to your neighbor.

The matrons will be refined, motherly, Christian women, who, not being wearied with the care of a kitchen, or that vexed question, "What shall we eat?" will always be ready to help every weary, waiting woman.

The restaurant privileges will be granted to some thorough-going, honorable person (probably a woman), who will sign a contract to furnish food at uniform prices during all the time of the Fair.

When all is ended, the tents folded and the Arabs have stolen away, then the president, that wonderful woman builder, Mrs. Carse, will clear away the débris of doubt, and if the association finds a surplus over expenses, each holder of a certificate will have her pro rata share in dividends.

This will be in defiance of the old adage "You cannot have your cake and eat it." You will have had lodging, and may get dividends. But buy your stock to-day.

Chicago, Ill.

MARY ALLEN WEST.

BY EMILY A. KELLOGG.

Mary Allen West, the senior editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, is a noble product of a peculiar state of social, moral and intellectual development. Her parents, Nehemiah and Catherine Neely West, were of a high type of the pioneers of Illinois, and came hither from the Empire State inspired by a quiet, though intense enthusiasm for the maintenance of human rights and the establishment of a state of society in which the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man should be openly acknowledged and practically exalted. The very atmosphere surrounding the Galesburg colony at that time was surcharged with the electricity of intense religious vitality and an unfaltering and heroic devotion to the twin causes of liberal education and true liberty. The Wests and their fellow colonists were practical Prohibitionists in that they banished all liquor-selling from their village, and "black Abolitionists" acting frequently as roadmen on the lines of the underground railway. In those days it cost much to stand to such principles, but these colonists were made of the stuff which never stops to count the cost when duty points the way. It is natural, then, that this woman of to-day bears the impress of the lofty and simple living of those earlier years, for she grew up strong in the conviction that the right course is the only one to pursue, that direct action is more powerful than circumlocution, that to do a duty promptly is most just and most effective, and that a life of unselfishness is the only true exponent of a Christian faith. Her interests have ever been as broad as humanity and as deep as Christianity, a natural outcome of such parentage and such surroundings.

The founding of Knox College by the colony marked their love for education, and that phase of development became the paramount object of interest in the community, thus directing the child's ambition toward the teacher's desk. She was healthy, vigorous and studious, and maturing early was ready for college long before her age made her eligible for admission. When seventeen years old, after graduation, she entered upon the work of teaching for which she was doubly qualified by love of learning and love for learners. Her success in this line was one of the upbuilding forces in Galesburg, and later throughout Knox county, where she became superintendent of public instruction. It is an interesting point in the school history of Illinois that the laws of the state were that year amended so as to make this young woman and some half dozen others eligible for the office of county superintendent of schools, and that these candidates were elected and served most acceptably under the new law. It always seemed incongruous to Miss West that she should for nine years fill an elective office and yet that she and her fellow-women could not cast a vote for the incumbent of that or any other office. This thought prepared her logically for her later interest in the cause of equal suffrage.

MISS MARY ALLEN WEST.

Miss West's educational work throughout the county broadened what had always been a strong social position, and made her universally known and loved by old and young. Children instinctively turned toward her, reading aright her true heart of motherhood, and young men and women brought to her their crudities and their aspirations, confident that her genuine friendship and insight would prune and train wisely and tenderly. Under her hand grew to Christian womanhood a wonderful Sunday-school class, and through twelve of that number Miss West is now teaching the gospel in foreign lands.

The most significant mental capacity of this grandly useful woman, her immense capacity for hard work, systematic work, was developed first during the days of the Civil War, when, as one of the officers of a life saving station, being secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Society of Galesburg, she accomplished great things. In planning the work of the women of Knox county she also discovered her ability in organization, which later came into play most effectively in the temperance work.

While in the educational field she wrote frequently for professional papers, and also edited at long range the Home Magazine, published in Philadelphia. Her nine years of service as superintendent of schools was closed when she was chosen president of the Illinois Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in which body she had long been recognized as an earnest and consecrated worker and organizer. It was in her travels in connection with this work that she studied the homes of Illinois, and supplemented her knowledge of child nature and needs, so that she was specially equipped for the production of "Childhood, its Care and Culture." This book is dearly loved by earnest young mothers, who turn to its chapters for suggestion and encouragement when anxieties deepen and perplexities bewilder judgment.

The masterpiece of Mary Allen West is the work which she has done in the development and upbuilding of THE UNION SIGNAL, and this is no less a masterpiece in that it has been spread over a series of years and able co-editors have aided. It was in 1885 that she assumed the position of editor-in-chief, and during these years her responsibilities have been immense, but they have been carried with a steady hand and an level head. To meet the demands of an enormous constituency of nearly one hundred thousand earnest women, many of them in the front rank of intelligence and advancement of thought, needs judicious and strong as well as thorough and comprehensive editing. This THE UNION SIGNAL has had, and many women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union have repeatedly, in the most emphatic manner, indorsed this leader in regard to the policy and conduct of the paper.

Miss West's own views of the responsibilities of her position may be learned from quotations from a paper of hers on "The Managing Editor," which was recently read before the Illinois Woman's Press Association, of which she has been for six years the honored president. She says: "Like a solid the managing editor needs length, breadth and thickness (or depth)—length of experience, breadth of comprehension, and depth of knowledge, both of subjects and of men. She needs also a keen insight, quickness of apprehension and ability to see whereunto discussions will lead. She needs sound judgment, level-headedness, and that rarest of all gifts, common sense. Thoroughly just, she must be able to see the merits of an article though its writer may be her enemy, and able also to deal exact justice to subordinates. She it is who decides the policy of the paper, subject only to the formulated intentions of board or proprietor; she arranges departments and has a voice in saying who shall fill them, but when thus filled she wisely meddles as little as possible with the work of department conductors, rarely giving unsolicited advice, yet keeping a sharp lookout over all. Questions on which there is a difference of opinion should be freely discussed and amicably settled if possible, but if an agreement cannot be secured the managing editor's dictum must be the ultimatum."

The "sanctum" of this editor was ever a sanctuary for troubled souls, and to it has turned many a burdened one confident of sympathy and all possible help, for in an unusual degree the woes of others are her woes, and the knowledge of injustice and cruelty wrings her heart. Now that she is absent from this sanctum taking her few months of much needed rest, she is missed by the faithful friends who have so long helped her upon the mechanical part of THE UNION SIGNAL. Her six months' vacation now bids fair to be prolonged to twelve, for she is looking forward to a visit to the Sandwich Islands and the Mikado's empire, where she will do effective work as World's lecturer on W. C. T. U. methods. But this temporary absence, whether abbreviated or lengthened, is but an episode in her busy life, for the editorial chair is pre-eminently her place of power, the editorial pen her best organ of expression and influence. Here lies her strength, and to this sphere she has been appointed by the Providence which fitted her for the work.

THE PRESENT STATUS OF THE QUESTION OF WOMEN IN THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

BY ISABELLA WEBB PARKS.

Four years ago the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church decided, by a majority of seventy-six, that the term "laymen," in the Second Restrictive Rule which provides for lay delegation, did not include women. In accordance with this interpretation they submitted to the annual conferences the question of so amending the rule as to include women. It was also submitted to a vote of the laity, but their vote had no effect beyond its moral influence upon the ministerial. A good majority of the laity, a very large majority of the more intelligent portion, voted in favor of the proposed change. The ministers also gave a majority in favor, but not the requisite three-fourths.

At the session of the General Conference held in May last, at Omaha, a majority of eighty-one sent the question again to the annual conferences but in reverse form. In order now to exclude women from the General Conference a three-fourths majority of the ministers must vote in favor of introducing into the Second Restrictive Rule the words, "and said delegates must be male members." This turns the tables and loud and bitter is the outcry arising from the camp of the enemy. The New York Advocate denounces it as a "crafty scheme," a "nimble and sinister trick and shift," a "gross and grievous blunder." The plan of the campaign is clearly laid out. During the next four years we shall hear comparatively little about Paul's teaching the permanent subjection of woman, the sphere of woman and the fatal folly of leaving her free to choose her own place and work. A large and intelligent majority has already declared its contempt for this kind of argument. Henceforth we shall hear chiefly that the very life of the church depends upon rebuking such methods of procedure by voting down the amendment in its present form. It is claimed that unless this is done, the constitution of the church becomes a rope of sand; for, in accordance with this precedent a mere majority of the General Conference may read into any section of the constitution whatever it pleases, however contradictory to the obvious meaning, then send the section thus construed to the annual conferences for amendment. A three-fourths vote of the ministers would thus be required to amend the paragraph so that it should mean just what the framers of the constitution intended it should mean in the first place.

Is this, then, the character of this new move? If it is, then indeed the Methodist Episcopal Church has to deal with a more "dangerous" question even than the admission of women to General Conference, if one can imagine such a possibility! Bearing upon the case in hand is the recognized principle that when the same body which has enacted the law also interprets it, interpretation is simply new legislation. For this reason constitutional governments, like those of England and the United States, separate entirely the judicial and legislative departments. Our own and English statesmen have repeatedly refused to express an opinion upon the meaning and application of laws for which they had themselves voted. The General Conference labors under the difficulty of being both the legislative and the judicial body of the Methodist Episcopal Church. One General Conference is not therefore bound by the decisions of another, for a change in the views of a majority of the members is itself a change in the character of the judiciary, and any judicial body may reverse its decisions. This power is, of course, liable to abuse, and herein lies the danger of uniting in one department the legislative and judicial functions. When the meaning of any part of the constitution is honestly capable of but one interpretation, the General Conference has the power, but not the moral right to put upon it another construction, but where there is room for honest difference of opinion concerning the meaning, especially where the church at large is seriously divided upon it, one General Conference has the same moral and legal right as another to interpret the disputed passage.

Unfortunately the General Conference cannot submit to the annual conferences for amendment an article of the constitution without assuming an interpretation of that article. When the meaning is unquestioned this causes no difficulty, but when there is decided difference of opinion as to the meaning of the portion to be amended, one party has unfair advantage over the other. Of necessity the General Conference must assume that the article means thus and so and submit it to the annual conferences to be amended, if they desire, to mean something else. As a matter of course, whichever interpretation is held by a majority of the members will be adopted by the General Conference, and upon their opponents will be thrown the burden of securing a three-fourths majority of the ministers in the annual conferences and a two-thirds vote of the General Conference. But, from what has been already established, it necessarily follows that one party has just as much right, morally and legally, as the other to put its construction upon the paragraph. Hence the very next General Conference may rightfully reverse the previous decision and send the question again to the annual conferences with the opposite construction. This, in fact, is precisely what has been done in the present case, and whether it is a crafty trick, to carry by foul means what has failed by fair or a perfectly straightforward proceeding, depends entirely upon whether the Second Restrictive Rule is one whose interpretation is beyond reasonable question or whether there is room for honest difference of opinion concerning its meaning. Let it be remembered that to establish the legitimacy of the present plan, it is not necessary to prove that the interpretation of the Second Restrictive Rule now assumed is correct, but simply that there is ground for honest difference of opinion concerning the interpretation. The Rule in question reads: "The lay delegates shall consist of two laymen for each annual conference, except, etc." The General Conference of 1872 interpreted the term "laymen" in this paragraph, and it was really this interpretation rather than the Rule itself that the General Conference of 1888 discussed. This interpretation reads as follows: "The General Conference holds that, in all matters connected with the election of lay delegates, the word "laymen" must be understood to include all members of the church who are not members of the annual conferences." During the discussion, the brilliant Dr. Hamilton said: "We are told that the General Conference of 1872 did not intend to admit women, then, sir, the General Conference of 1872 was a fool." I confess this severe remark seems to me a simple statement of fact. If the language used does not include women it would be difficult to find any that does. For if women are not "laymen," then, according to this very paragraph, they are not members of the church. Nevertheless, the General Conference of 1888 preferred to assume that women were not members of the Methodist Episcopal Church rather than admit that they were eligible to membership in General Conference.

Of course these remarkable logicians do not acknowledge their absurd position; the Methodist reasoners argue that women are laymen in the "sense" of being members of the church, but not in the "sense" of being eligible to General Conference. I leave it to my readers to determine by what process of "sense" or nonsense room for such a distinction can be found in the statement, "the word 'laymen' must be understood to include all members of the church who are not members of the annual conferences." At least no honorable person will attempt to deny the point in question, viz., that this is not a case of clear, unmistakable interpretation, but one about whose meaning there is room for honest difference of opinion. But no argument is needed to prove this point, in view of the undeniable fact that there is great difference of opinion on the subject. A prominent lawyer, a lay delegate to the conference of 1888, and also to that of 1892, said that nearly all of the lawyers in the former conference held that the term laymen included women. The writer heard one of the bishops, not one who has advocated the admission of women, say that he couldn't understand how the conference of 1888 reached its decision, for if "women were not laymen he was sure he didn't know what they were." But it is needless to multiply examples. It is an obstinate fact, which no amount of sophistry can remove, that the church is about equally divided upon the question. Indeed, it is probable that the majority of the church believes that women are constitutionally eligible to membership in General Conferences. It follows then that a majority on either side has a right to interpret this question. The party which believes that women are "laymen" in every sense of the word had a majority in the last General Conference. They submitted the Second Restrictive Rule to the annual conferences in a form in accordance with their interpretation. In so doing they exercised exactly the same prerogative that the opposite party did four years ago, and the action is a perfectly legitimate one. The attempt to make it appear otherwise is worthy of an "arguer," not a reasoner; of a "great debater," determined to carry his point regardless of methods, not of an honorable opponent seeking only the truth and the good of the church.

Rochelle, Ill.

THE SENATE'S SOMERSAULT ON LIQUORS AT THE FAIR.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The Senate of the United States on July 13th passed a resolution prohibiting sales of liquor within the grounds of the World's Fair, by a vote of 28 to 26. To-day Senator Palmer, of Illinois, moved to rescind that act, and it was carried, by a vote of 29 to 21. And Mr. Cullom, one of the recent candidates for the Presidency, and now a candidate for reëlection as a senator this winter, voted for the rescinding of it under a threat of the Fair management that they would otherwise publish over the state that he was a "Prohibitionist."

Would it not be well to ask the temperance people of Illinois to carefully consider whether it is their desire to have two senators representing that progressive state who are in favor of public liquor selling in violation of the laws of the state? It was put under the plea that it was just a privilege granted to restaurants and hotels while the facts are, it is a clear license to sell all kinds of liquor on the public grounds of the great National Exhibition.

Your legislature ought to be ardently and widely petitioned to inquire whether its highest and best interests, and those of its best people, are properly represented by such action. If men will pander to the shameful, law-breaking body and soul-destroying liquor power in such a way, should they not be called to an account? Temperance lovers of Illinois, arouse for the highest interests of the present and coming generations!

It is a burning disgrace in the eyes of the civilized nations of earth that Christian America should engage publicly in the liquor business, and that prominent men of one of the foremost states should lead in such action. It should be added that both President Palmer and Mr. Frank Lawler, of the Commission, violated the laws in their lobbying here by being on the floor of Congress while their own bill was in debate. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

Washington, July 14.

(Correspondence continued on page 12.)

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.—Heb. 10: 38.

Another $10,000, with interest, has been paid Mr. Marshall Field this week. This makes $115,000 we have paid him on stock since February. We could not have purchased his stock so rapidly if it had not been for the money we received from the sale of the Temple Trust Bonds. Let our friends remember, in purchasing these bonds, they not only make the very best and safest kind of investment for themselves, but help the W. C. T. U. to get the Temple stock into their own hands, and thus gain sole ownership of the building. We hope by September 1st the entire issue of the bonds will be sold. Mr. H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle Street, Chicago, and 412 Exchange Building, Boston, Mass., is our financial agent for the sale of the bonds. All particulars in regard to them should be addressed to him.

***

Mr. Geo. Birkhoff, a Hollander, and a successful contractor in Chicago, who has won for himself the respect and love of all who know him, called at our office the other morning and left $50, which with a former $50 completes his gift of $100. He was converted to the principles of temperance years ago in our Farwell Hall temperance meetings, since which time he has been a firm friend of the W. C. T. U. and has done valiant service for temperance among his own nationality as well as on the Chicago Builders' and Traders' Exchange, of which he is an honored member. In passing through the city a short time ago, Rev. D. L. Hughes, D. D., of Cape May, N. J., a retired minister, visited the Temple and was greatly delighted with it; he left $1 at the office for the building fund. He said his only regret was that he could not give one hundred. The Fulton family, of Jefferson City, Mont., sends $4.15 to the building fund. If every temperance family in the nation would make up a little offering of this kind and send it to us at once, how long, think you, would it be before the Temple would be paid for? Before the harvest moon of September lights the world with glory, the W. C. T. U. would possess enough money not only to buy up the entire capital stock—but also to pay its bonded indebtedness. We ask, therefore, that every temperance family that reads this will go to work and make up a little purse and send it to us at once for the Temple building fund. Said one of Chicago's great builders yesterday to the writer of this as they were examining the Temple, "What a mighty engine this building will prove in the hands of the women of this country with which to destroy the liquor traffic." This is a self-evident fact—but we must be entire owners of the building before we can come into possession of the magnificent income which will enable the National and state W. C. T. U. to branch out in the education of the nation in temperance on a scale of such magnitude as has never before been attempted. Reader, have you done your part towards paying for the great building, so that the Master in sitting in judgment upon you can say, "She hath done what she could!"

***

Mrs. Leonard, of Proctor, Vt., writes: "I have just finished reading 'Temple Items,' and have decided to send for a mite-box at once, for I have no doubt I shall be able to fill it before April. I have thought many times if circumstances should ever permit me to visit Chicago, and see the beautiful Temple, I should want to feel I had helped if it was but little." Mrs. Leonard has expressed in the above the feeling which must impress every white ribboner. Surely the name of every woman who wears the white ribbon should either be found on the marble tablets in Willard Hall, or in the state books of record. The name of every person who pays one dollar or upwards will appear there. These great books, one for each state, alphabetically arranged, are to be kept in a large vault opening off Willard Hall, the walls of which are of granite three feet thick and impervious to fire; even though the city should burn up, the contents of this vault would remain intact. The only fear is from dampness; every precaution, however, is being taken to prevent this, and an extra lining of tile with an air chamber between is being built into the vault this week, which will increase the thickness of the walls to four feet; in addition to the concrete floor a flooring of Mosaic is to be laid. The size of the vault is thirteen feet by ten, and it will be lighted by electricity. A short flight of white marble steps will lead from the Hall into it. A custodian will be in charge and the books of record will be open every day, except the Sabbath, for the inspection of visitors.

***

"I would rather have my name on a tablet in the Temple than on the most expensive monument," writes Mrs. M. E. Weston, president of the W. C. T. U. of Riverton, Va. Mrs. N. E. Babbitt, North Adams, Mass., sends $2 to the Elizabeth Tobey tablet. The Manistee, Mich., W. C. T. U., sends a third installment of $25 to the Mrs. E. N. Peters tablet. Ethel Stout (editor Midget), Melbourne, Fla., sends $10 to the Mrs. Trego tablet.

***

In purchasing gifts for friends, don't forget the beautiful models of the Temple in silver. Banks, $1.75; inkstands, $2.25; jewel cases lined with either blue, purple, or yellow velvet, $2.25. A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite box ($3.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

JUST YOU AND I.

BY HARRIET FRANCENE CROCKER.

If you and I, my dear, should try
To do what we know is duty
This world of ours with its sun and showers
Would blossom into beauty.
There'd be more joy without alloy
There'd be much less of sighing,
If you and I, my dear, should try,
And never give up trying.

If you and I, when the heavy sky
Spills over with its tears, dear,
And the world looks sad and the times are bad
And life a waste of years, dear,—
If you and I, as I said, should try
To laugh and be right cheery
Do you know 'twould prove that light and love
Could make the day less dreary?

If you and I, when we'd like to cry
Should hum a bit of a tune, dear,
And gayly smile,—in a little while
The weather'd seem like June, dear.
If when we fret, with eyes tearwet,
O'er some of the things that bother,
We'd pitch right in with a hearty vim
And help dear, tired mother.

Oh, wouldn't it be a happier world
And wouldn't life be worth living
If more and more from our heart's full store
Of love we'd just be giving!
So dear, let's try,—just you and I,
And never give up—O never!
And life will be brighter and sad hearts lighter
Because of our endeavor.

Haymaker, Pa.

THE FUTURE IS OURS.

BY CAROLINE POWERS.

[President's Address before the Wisconsin L. T. L. Convention.]

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Loyal Temperance Legion:

One year ago our Legions united as a state organization, and to-day we have met in our second state convention to review the work that has been done and to make plans for the future.

I congratulate you on the bright outlook before us. With harmony and a spirit of emulation within our ranks, with no outspoken enemies without, and with kind friends who are devoted to every good work to aid us in our efforts, we may well indulge in bright hopes and anticipations for our future. Our motto truly says, "The future is ours."

We know that there are great evils and wrongs in the world, and though we have seen little of them as yet in our own experience, and hope to be long spared the sight of them, yet in our L. T. L. we shall gain the strength to resist them in the future; here we shall find the armor with which to defend ourselves from their attacks and the weapons with which to assail them.

The disseminators of these evils, the gainers by these wrongs, may see little in our organization that should cause them to fear. What can the youth and children of the land do to stem the tide of intemperance whose proportions are so dreadful? What can we do to destroy or restrict the manufacture and sale of strong drink? What can we do to rescue from ruin the victims of vice, to draw the poor inebriate from the gutter, or to lessen the wretchedness of heart-broken wives and neglected children? Little, alas! can we do in this line of work for the present, but "the future is ours." To-day our elders must fight the battles while we organize and prepare. And the more complete our organization and the more thorough our preparation, the greater will be our victory when the time shall come for us to engage in the conflict. The great army which we can muster if we work with zeal and courage, if we give way to no discouragements and weary not in drawing under our banner the hosts whose place should be with us, will be irresistible. It will be such an army as the world has never seen. It will be an army whose battles will be bloodless, but whose victories shall surpass those of the most famous warriors of the past and which shall be won in a cause more holy than any which inspired their efforts. It shall be an army fighting for God and Right and our country's best and truest interests.

We may well believe that this is an army which God loves and that it is an instrument which He has chosen for His work. And judging from the rapid progress which has already been made in the organization of new Legions, and in gaining new members, we have every reason to believe that the Loyal Temperance Legion will indeed at no distant day, reach the magnificent proportions toward which our hopes and efforts are directed, and that it will in a few years cover the whole land.

Though so young a state organization it already numbers sixty-nine Legions with about 3,000 members. Last year there were forty-nine Legions with about 2,500 members. It would seem from this that the number of our Legions has increased in one year over forty per cent, and the number of our membership about twenty per cent.

Even at this lower ratio if it be continued and compounded from year to year, our membership will in ten years number 18,000. But I think we may fairly anticipate a greater increase than this. If the number of our Legions has increased at the rate of forty per cent in a year, surely we may expect an increase of at least thirty per cent, for the new Legions will not stop with their original members. Taking this as the basis of our calculation we are justified in expecting that in ten years our membership will be over 40,000.

Wisconsin was the first to create a state organization of the Loyal Temperance Legion, but other states are preparing to follow our example, and as we have set an example in this, let us also set an example of earnestness and usefulness in our work. Though, as I have said, it is in the future that we expect the greatest good from our organization; though it is in the future that our influence in the world is most to be felt, there is much that we can do now to help in the work of reform and make the world more as God would have it to be.

At the last state convention of the W. C. T. U., two departments of their work were given to the state Loyal Temperance Legion, the department of books and reading for the purpose of circulating temperance literature in the public and school libraries, and a mercy department. In working in the mercy department it will be our duty to do all in our power to prevent cruelty to animals, for instance, the dreadful practice of vivisection in our high schools and colleges, and many other ways in which dumb animals are treated.

In conclusion I will borrow some thoughts from a letter written by Lady Henry Somerset to the British Women's Temperance Association. Though these thoughts were addressed to women they are almost equally suited to the young people of the L. T. L., by changing a few expressions: "We are working to-day to mould, to educate and fit ourselves for our coming responsibilities. We are learning how to guide a mighty engine, that when the motive power shall set it moving, shall rapidly, silently, unerringly accomplish that over which many noble men and women have been toiling for many years. To this educational end let us gather our forces together. Let us work this coming year with an intentness of purpose and an unflagging energy, for the goal towards which we press is not set in the kingdom of this world, but the end of our work is hidden in the golden glories of eternity."

Delavan, Wis., July 7, 1892.

TABLE MANNERS IN RHYME.

It is so hard for the little folks to be polite and orderly at meals, and they so often forget the rules with which papa and mamma try to help them to be gentlemanly and ladylike, that it would perhaps be a good thing for children who are troubled in this way to commit to memory these rhyming rules from the Philadelphia Inquirer:

In silence I must take my seat,
And give God thanks before I eat;
Must for my food in patience wait
Till I am asked to hand my plate;
I must not scold, nor whine, nor pout,
Nor move my chair and plate about;
With knife, or fork, or napkin ring
I must not play—nor must I sing;
I must not speak a useless word—
For children must be seen—not heard;
I must not talk about my food,
Nor fret if I don't think it good;
My mouth with food I must not crowd,
Nor while I'm eating speak aloud;
Must turn my head to cough or sneeze,
And when I ask, say, "If you please;"
The tablecloth I must not spoil,
Nor with my food my fingers soil;
Must keep my seat when I have done,
Nor round the table sport or run;
When told to rise, then I must put
My chair away with noiseless foot,
And lift my heart to God above,
In praise for all His wondrous love.

WHILE her mother was taking a fly out of the butter little Daisy asked, "Is that a butterfly, mamma?"

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—On our page this week, instead of the usual story, is something very interesting, although quite different. It is the address of the state president of the Loyal Temperance Legion, which was given at Delavan, Wis., not long ago. You will all read it over carefully, will you not? Did you read the report of that Wisconsin L. T. L. Convention on page nine in last week's UNION SIGNAL? If you did not, please get the paper (of July 21) and read the whole account. You will think, as did those who were there, that the juvenile temperance band, "whose name is Legion," is going to be a mighty force against the power of evil.

Loyally, your temperance,

Anna Gordon

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

I am an L. T. L., and a lover of puzzles. I read in THE UNION SIGNAL about two saloons being put up in Jackson Park. I am sorry that this is so. ROYAL J. DAVIS.

South Wabash, Ind.

So say we all of us. There would be no saloons at the World's Fair if the L. T. L. had its way, would there?

I hope you will not object to a Canadian reader. I live on the St. Lawrence river. I am twelve years old, and go to the high school. I have signed the pledge and intend to keep it. I wish we had two pages for the children.

I am your little niece,

Prescott, Ont. EVA E. GREENHILL.

A welcome to the little Canadian who has signed the pledge and intends to keep it. You belong to us, and we are glad to hear from you, Eva.

Mamma has taken THE UNION SIGNAL a long time. At first I used to read just the stories, now I read some of the other pieces. I am a little white-ribbon girl, nine years old. I am trying to help temperance. I can't do much yet, but when I am grown up I want to be like Miss Anna Gordon, and help the children to be Prohibitionists. When I speak pieces in school, I speak temperance pieces. There aren't any other children but what drink sweet cider in our school; they tease us, but we don't care, because we know God is pleased when we do right. I love you and everybody. MARGARET E. BROWNELL.

Mumford, N. Y.

You are on the right path, dear little friend. There'll be lots of work in the world for you to do, and you'll do it bravely and well.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

71.

WHAT IS IT?—A RIDDLE.

If all the suns were globes of gold,
And all the moons as pearls were told;
If every star were diamond bright,
One little word, divine in right—
Outweighs them all.
Heed thou its call!

Five letters spell this little word;
In silence best its voice is heard;
Obey it, and thy soul shalt rest
With heavenly satisfaction blest.
It speaks to all
With earnest call.

HARRIET B. JAYNES.

72.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

I am composed of twenty one letters.
My 16, 17, 18, is part of the body.
My 8, 7, 6, 4, 5, is mineral.
My 1, 2, is to behold.
My 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, is to spring, to leap.
My 3, 10, is a pronoun.
My 21, 20, is not so.
My 19, a pronoun.
My whole is composed of the temperance youth of our land. ALLIE GREEN.

73.

TRANSPOSITIONS.

I am a choice fruit; behead me, and I am every one; give me a new head, and I dwell near the ocean; behead me twice, give me a tail, and I am a pain; behead me, add a tail, and I am an act produced in eating. E. C. A.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JULY 7.

62. Demorest Medal Contests.

63.
GOLD
ODOR LOVE
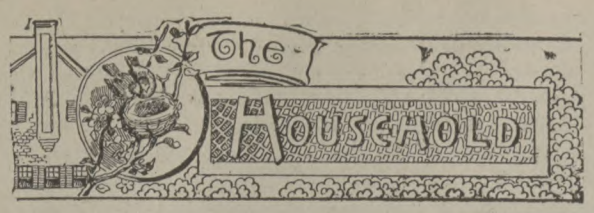
DREW

64. Isabel Somerset.

Correct answers: Royal J. Davis; Mysie W. Adams.



SLEEP.

"Behold, I lay in prison like St. Paul,
Chained to two guards that both were grim and stout.
All day they sat by me and held me thrall:
The one was named regret, the other doubt.
And through the twilight of that hopeless close
There came an angel shining suddenly,
That took me by the hand, and as I rose
The chains grew soft and slipped away from me.
The doors gave back and swung without a sound
Like petals of some magic flower unfurled.
I followed, treading o'er enchanted ground,
Into another and kindlier world.
The master of that black and bolted keep
Thou knowest is life; the angel's name is sleep."

HOW WE ALL HELPED THE TUTTLE FAMILY.

BY ELIZABETH GRINNELL.

John came home one day looking so tired I thought he might be sick, but he never is "poorly" so I was sure, on second thought, that it must have something to do with that Tuttle family down in Cades canyon. He had driven the children over in the afternoon, "just to give them an outing," he said, but I knew his real errand was to see how Ben Tuttle was getting along.

Ben wasn't poor, but was on a good salary, though he worked hard. He kept the outlets clear, and the main pipes in order for the water companies, and was obliged to stand in cold water up to his waist for hours at a time.

Somebody had suggested to him a year or two before that a little "spirit" of some sort would keep him from taking cold and "tone up his constitution," as he seemed to be running down. Ben is a well informed man who can read French and German as well as English, and he told John afterwards that he knew better than to touch the liquor, but he felt that he needed "something."

His wife soon found out about the drink, and, quite naturally, took to scolding. I say "quite naturally," for when a woman feels helpless in any cause she scolds as a last resort. I scold myself sometimes, and am ashamed of it afterwards, though John says I "needn't be, for when a great many women scold in concert they effect reformations in church and state;" so I suppose it's only individual scolding that is really ill-bred and useless.

Ben told me afterwards that if Mrs. Tuttle had sent him down a dipper of hot coffee by the children two or three times a day it would have helped him to let the drink alone. I have noticed a great many times that a drinking man (as well as other transgressors) is fond of blaming his wife for such advance as he has made in the line of his besetting sin, and there have been a good many sermons preached from the text, "Am I my brother's keeper?" but I don't read anywhere that God ever excused a man for sinning, by telling him that his brother or his wife ought to have done differently. And so I told John one day, and he only answered that he "supposed that God must think a great many things to himself that he wouldn't dream of telling us."

I had been often to see the Tuttle family; Cades canyon was full of ferns, and then the children were bright and winsome, and I liked to hear them talk as their father did in mixed French and English. Mrs. Tuttle was a real pretty woman, but so slovenly I wondered her husband ever came home at all. She was sick a great deal, and the children managed as best they could.

After awhile people became interested in them, and scarcely a day passed but they were visited by more than one committee on account of Ben's intemperance. They would sit down and sigh, or take up the youngest child and say, "poor thing." If Ben Tuttle happened to come in they looked at him reproachfully, and asked him if he "knew how sick his poor wife was?" Once I saw a lady sniff at his coat which was hanging behind the door to see if she could smell a bottle. But Ben knew better than to bring bottles home; he hid them behind the rocks down in the wash.

About Christmas, last year, Mrs. Tuttle suddenly "took religion," as she said, and then the household economy was neglected worse than ever. Well-meaning women came early in the morning to sing and pray and talk; they had little occupation at home and seemed to forget in their own overflow of leisure, that it is an error, if not a positive sin, to cause others who have more pressing duties to neglect their necessary work.

When Tuttle came home for dinner, tired and wet and hungry, he expected something to eat, of course. But what did he find? A dirty baby asleep in the middle of the kitchen floor, hens walking around it pecking at the scraps it held in its little closed fist, the breakfast dishes unwashed and covered with flies in the sink, his wife sitting on the side of the bed reading "Woe unto him that puttest the bottle to him . . . and giveth his neighbor drink."

If she had turned her Bible to Proverbs and read the vivid description of the wise woman who "riseth while it is yet night and giveth food to her household," results might have been different. She never looked up when her husband came in, but kept on praying and reading, hoping to convince him.

The oldest girl was trying to get dinner. A piece of steak was steaming and oozing in a faint attempt to fry itself in the milk-warm skillet, and in a kettle were some potatoes simmering beneath a gallon of water, "done" long since in their dirty jackets.

I saw this picture several times and am not exaggerating it. Ben looked at his wife and then at the baby, drove the hens out and—did he scold? No, indeed; men pride themselves that they never scold, but he did what was almost as bad he; boxed little Tom's ears, kicked the cat who was licking out the breakfast plates in her blind desire to be doing something, muttered a few words about "the efficacy of prayer when combined with a good dinner"—and walked out doors.

Then Mrs. Tuttle and the oldest girl began to cry and the way looked darker than ever. John persuaded Ben to wear rubber tights when he was in the water as an aid in preventing chills, but he drank all the same, and the family went on praying and crying and eating irregular meals.

John says, "when a man joins hands with God in this matter he can conquer. When a man's will is God's will he can leave off drink the same as swearing. And as for taking away a man's appetite for drink, so does the love of God. Why not go to the fountain-head instead of drinking at little seeping springs which, after all that can be said of them, are known to fail in a dry time? A man of weak will may fall back to the habit as soon as the human prop is removed. Whosoever will may take the water of life freely."

A strange sort of people who call themselves scientists, I believe, got to arguing with Tuttle one day; he told us about it. They said there wasn't "any such thing as whisky, that he just imagined it was good, and that imagination was what was driving him and his family wild.

"Don't you see," they said, "there isn't any evil in the world but in man's imagination, and here's the orthodox Bible to prove it: 'And God saw that the imagination of man was only evil continually.' So you mustn't believe that there is any good in drink; really there is neither good nor evil in it, and you can leave off your habits if you just think of something else."

"Well," returned Tuttle, "it's a pretty kind of reviving imagination, sometimes, when a man is cold and hungry. Ought to be cheaper, don't you think? The idea of a tariff on imagination."

I worried and worried about the family, and so did other women who belonged to the church. We used to drop in and sympathize with Mrs. Tuttle, and try to do up the work a little, just to show her how it ought to be done; but it made Ben so angry when he came home that we had to give it up. Mrs. Tuttle didn't like it either, "the neighbor women peering round into her closets," she said, "and winking at one another when they found a particularly dirty corner, or a wasteful platter of scraps in the cupboard."

Yes. indeed, I worried, but John didn't. He never worries about anything. He said God hadn't lost sight of the Tuttle family, and He would probably see that they had a chance to touch the hem of His garment yet, if the crowd of meddlesome committees and folks who lacked judgment would fall back long enough.

He remembers the Tuttles in family prayer every morning; not putting God in mind, as though He was in danger of forgetting them, nor nagging at Him in an impatient sort of a way, but emphasizing "Thy will be done," just as if that particular will was all the world needs to set it right.

Well, this takes us up to the time I commenced my story when John came home looking tired. After a while he took the Bible down and read how Peter in his "zeal without knowledge" drew his sword and cut off the right ear of a servant of the high priest; and then he told me that he had been over to Cades canyon and found Brothers Goodsoul and Rightenough there, arguing with Tuttle. They'd gone down to where he was working in the water (he'd had a hard time that day, the connections had burst) and attacked him with all sorts of pious abuse.

They had read to him all the Bible says about "damnation," and "better put a knife to thy throat," and "without are drunkards," etc., hurling all sorts of terrible insinuations at him, and there stood Ben in the water shivering with the cold and anger. His "right ear" had been cut off by Peter's officious sword, and he was in no condition to hear a word they said.

This lack of Christian courtesy and good judgment on the part of the well meaning visitors was what made John so tired. He says he thinks such passages in the Bible are intended to be read in a tender, pitying tone, with entire lack of assertion, which would do away with their seeming harshness, and make a man feel sorry that his sin had driven the Father to inflict pain on his children, which could only be equalled by what he himself felt on their account.

A week or two after this John went over again and stopped at the house a minute. There he found a Salvation Army woman telling the children stories while she cleaned them up, and made Mrs. Tuttle more comfortable (she had been rather worse). John said he stayed around the yard examining the cow and the hens, and the vegetables, just to see how things were going. The whole family liked him, and he felt that he was in no eavesdropper's shoes.

While the stranger was at work she sang rollicking songs that soon made Mrs. Tuttle stop groaning, and then to laugh, the very first time she had laughed in a year. Not the words, but the tune was so rollicking. John said if he had had "the blues" himself he should have smiled.

To the tune of "So early in the morning," she sang:

"I am a soldier as you see,
The Lord spoke peace and now I'm free.
To the Army brave I will be true,
And fight 'neath the yellow, red and blue."

And this, to the tune of "I'm a man you don't meet every day:"

"The Salvation Army will conquer the world,
While Jesus is leading the way;
We'll march on the streets with our banners unfurled,
We are folks you can meet every day."

John could see that the little woman was conquering that household by a draft of the right sort of "spirit," and so he wandered down to the water pipes. Long before he could see Ben he heard somebody singing, moving along in the underbrush toward the spot where Tuttle was. The tune was, "Now, isn't it funny they don't," and the words were the song we often hear on the corner, where the torches stop in the evening, right in front of Peterson's cigar stand.

"For years I have followed the Devil around,
But Satan and I are out!
He promised me pleasure, but none I have found,
So Satan and I are out!
He once held a mortgage upon my poor soul,
But Christ paid it off and made me quite whole,
And off from my heart the burden did roll,
And Satan and I are out!"

When the man got opposite Tuttle he stopped and passed the time of day, and inquired if he wasn't cold. "I was a minute ago," Ben answered, "but that singing of yours made me forget. Do you come this way often?" "Oh, yes," his companion answered, "when I have an errand."

It was dinner time and the two walked up to the house together, and the visitor began to sing again, not in a rollicking tune this time, but in a sweet voice that fluttered up into the tree tops, and then trailed along in the dried leaves, or rustled in the wild grape vines.

"I'll trust Thee noo, dear Saviour, I'll trust Thee as I go,
Oh, I will live and seek Thy love, nae ither wud I know;
Ye've ta'en the burden of my sins, ye've dune a heap for me—
Oh, tak my heart, dear Jesus, it's a' I hae tae gae."

John said he didn't even stop to speak to the Tuttles; they didn't seem to need him that day, and he came home, and he looked so happy, just as if he had found out a secret that was worth knowing.

Now, I never admired the operations of the Salvation Army; they seemed to be so flippant with religious things, and they shock refined people with their noise and lack of good taste. But John says, "We nice, polished people mustn't put out our hands to steady this ark of the Lord. Better to make the ground smoother, grade the track a little, and the mysterious secrets of the Almighty will be taken care of all right."

He attends their meetings, sometimes, and once, when they were mobbed by some of the town roughs, an egg came plump against his back. John told me afterwards that there was such a rush of perfect peace into his soul that he could have wished the pelting might be prolonged. He heard some one say, "Bear ye one another's burdens," and looked behind and around him, but nobody was speaking save the captain in red, who was saying: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these."

I always thought that "bear ye one another's burdens" meant to go and sit by the sick, and carry them jelly and flowers, or to attend funerals, and be sympathizing with people generally in distress; but John says the text has had a new meaning to him ever since he felt the explosion of that egg on his shoulder, which was meant for the speaker's face. John is so queer!

As I was saying, those Salvationists quite won the Tuttle family. That was six months ago, and Ben hasn't touched a drop of liquor since.

Pasadena, Cal.

The Union Signal
AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—MISS ESTHER PUGH, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter

For who is God, save the Lord? and who is a rock, save our God?—II Sam. 22: 32.

OUR BILL OF FARE

serves the last course of Elizabeth Cumings' "Sure Cure"; completes the weekly installments of the "Congress Auxiliary"; furnishes a forceful extract from Lady Henry Somerset's address during the English elections, a racy description of the "World's Fair Woman's Dormitory," a sketch and picture of Miss Mary Allen West, "An Outlook upon the Status of Women in the Methodist Church," the usual column of attractive "Temperance Temple Items," the Children's page, with its variety of interesting matter, (including an address to the L. T. L.), new heads in the always popular Household and Queen's Gardens departments, and extra Correspondence on page 12, aside from the News From the Field and Editorial.

REAL ESTATE VERSUS PHILANTHROPY.

At the regular meeting of the directors of the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, held in the office of Mrs. F. H. Rastall, business manager, July 13, 1892, the following resolution, offered by the President of the National W. C. T. U. was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we have no criticism to make upon our friends who have gone into the real estate, hotel or bichloride of gold business, or into any syndicate they may have seen fit to form, but we do not purpose to injure the influence of a great religious and philanthropic movement by permitting that influence to be in any wise utilized by any individual or corporation for the promotion of their own financial interests. Therefore,

"Resolved, That the name of the initials of the W. C. T. U. shall not again be used in any advertisement in any of our publications."

Another resolution, offered by Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, president of Illinois W. C. T. U., was unanimously adopted, namely:

"WHEREAS, Circulars have been received from the Woman's Land Association, wherein the business manager and others in the employ of such association use the letters W. C. T. U., and make allusions to our society with evident design to help float their project, we therefore

"Resolve, That they be requested to cease the use of such letters, and if the request be not heeded, that we publish the facts in the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL."

It was not intended by these resolutions to cast any reflection upon any association whatever. Probably it has not occurred to those thus using the name of the W. C. T. U that there was harm in so doing, and we did not ourselves think of it at first. We have before us a circular that we have reason to believe has gone out broadcast over the country. It contains the following sentence: "The ladies interested in the association are all W. C. T. U. workers, and naturally we have had a hearty support from that organization." We are so deeply interested in the development of women along all lines of honorable occupation that we have been glad to lend a hand in all the years since THE UNION SIGNAL was founded, but the outlook has now changed. When the day of great things comes, one almost wishes that the day of small things had not passed! A few years ago none were so poor as to pay us reverence or revenues, but now the men and women who seek the W. C. T. U. as a peg on which to hang an enterprise, would make a procession reaching from the Woman's Temple a long way on the road toward the newest real estate venture in the illimitable suburbs of Chicago! All this has come about, not by wrong intention, but through the instinct of self development and acquisition.

We are not writing this that we may blame our friends who are engaged in the endeavor to improve their fortunes, but we have been slowly waking to the significance of it all in its relation to the white-ribbon movement. In short, it was time to call a halt and this has now been done, with malice toward none and charity for all. We believe that real estate is apt to be an illusion and a snare to good people by reason of the obfuscation of their minds in dealing with it; for instance, we have been told by one of our leaders of an excellent man—a minister at that—who came to her and said if she would allow it to be known that she had bought a lot in a certain new section of the city she would never need to pay for the same, but it would be given her in recognition of her work, whereupon she replied: "I will accept the lot if you will allow me to state through the press that it was given me in consideration of my promise to speak well of the enterprise." But at this the fashion of his countenance was altered and he said: "Oh, no, that wouldn't do." It is needless to add that no "transaction" grew out of this interview.

Now it is quite likely that all the business ventures advertised in THE UNION SIGNAL are of par value. We have nothing to say to the contrary; indeed, we know nothing to the contrary, but we are not willing to stand in the attitude of "backers" to these enterprises, and we are the more determined not to do this because we have, perhaps, the most unique constituency that any paper has ever won. Those who read our columns are true, loyal, homelike, and to a great extent confiding people, who, if they see a thing advertised in THE UNION SIGNAL, think that it must have twelve inches to the foot, sixteen ounces to the pound, be warranted to wash, and all the rest of it. Since this is the case, we have tried from the beginning to choose from the great number of advertisements coming to us those that would do most good. In order to compass this we have been obliged to throw out from one-fourth to one-half of all those offered to the business department, and thus we have lost immense sums of money since the publication house was founded. But we find that our readers "jump at conclusions" as to our relations, especially to the real estate enterprises advertised in our columns; for instance, as a matter of good-will toward a fellow worker, the editor-in-chief of THE UNION SIGNAL agreed to speak some Sunday during the World's Fair at the World's Fair Hotel in an addition that has been made to the temperance town of Harvey. We had also said that we were glad a hotel was to be built there for temperance people (and we can freely say we should be glad if every hotel on the planet were of the same wholesome variety), but now appears a pamphlet with a presentation of our physiognomy wherein we are generously idealized, and the statement, "Read what the leaders say." Surely this is not in accordance with what we had supposed we were doing when we promised to make a speech as a token of our good-will. Again, a bichloride of gold institution was recently founded in the city, and connected with it a society for the moral and religious training of the men and women who came to be treated. We were asked to be one of the vice-presidents of this society, when, behold, a similar photographic presentation was made in the pages of a beautiful pamphlet which has gone broadcast over the country. We are warmly friendly to this movement and believe it to be doing great good; we also feel complimented to be set forth in such a handsome manner, although the sequel will be worse for us when those who accept the picture as correct have their mental image of us dashed to the earth by the facts as they exist should we ever come face to face. We are always glad to be associated with good men and women in their enterprises, but we feel that the impression made concerning our relation to these movements is not altogether correct, and for that reason we are writing this editorial.

A friend of ours to whom we were speaking in this strain a few days ago said, "But didn't you go into the soap business, giving your name to a saponaceous enterprise years ago in Maryland?" Yes, we did, but it was in our callow days and the bargain was that the W. C. T. U., and not any private individual or corporation was to receive so much on each cake of soap that it would sell. We claim that this was altogether different in spirit and intention from the business enterprises of which we have been writing. But we are now grown so way-wise that we are not sure we would accept the World's Fair as a present even if it were offered to the W. C. T. U. in fee simple—we should fear that behind it lurked some sort of speculation in corner lots!

We must give the credit of our practical wisdom in this particular to that noble man and eminent jurist, Judge Merrick, of New Orleans. We were in his home when the first of many offers came to us to be gratuitously insured as to the continuance of our longevity upon this sphere. We were simple-hearted enough to think it a good plan and most generous on the part of the agent, but the Judge remarked sententiously, "If you take my advice you will have nothing whatever to do with agents and enterprises, even though they may be 'all right,' as men say, you, as a reformer, can never be mixed up with them except to the injury of your own standing and that of the reform in which you have embarked 'your life, your fortune and your sacred honor.' If I were you I would not own stock in any corporation and I would be able to say; that my finances had not been enriched beyond an honorable maintenance and the ability to give somewhat to the movement as your prosperity shall warrant." We do not pretend to repeat our friend's language, but it was to this purport that he spoke. We, therefore, can take but little credit to ourselves for having acquired a certain amount of wisdom in respect to finances, and we hereby asseverate that the records of speculation will be searched in vain for any autograph of ours, and we believe this to be true of white-ribboners in general.

There are just three enterprises of a national character in which we have endeavored to enlist the great constituency that has our confidence even as we have theirs, and the outcome of all three is philanthropic and not personal, so far as gains go. These are the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, the Woman's Temperance Hospital and the Woman's Building Association, which last was organized for the purpose of erecting the Woman's Temperance Temple.

We are credibly informed that in many towns there are agents selling lots of land and other material of an earthly nature who make bold to go into meetings of the local unions, to exhibit copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and say to our simple-hearted women, "You see this is a great enterprise: THE UNION SIGNAL advertises it and we wish the opportunity to speak of it here and now." Against everything of this nature we must strongly protest, and against every such person we warn our local unions. When you see real estate advertised in THE UNION SIGNAL, inquire for yourselves, and remember it is a private venture with which no department or branch of the W. C. T. U. has any connection whatever.

We do not believe it to be right for money to be made by private individuals or business corporations out of the name, reputation and work of a society born in prayer and sacrifice, continued in faith and devotion, and, if we are loyal to God and humanity, certain to be crowned some day with such a consummation of its hopes as shall endear it to every home on earth, and hasten the coming of Him who is the light of life and whose kingdom is not of this world.

THE GREAT STRIKE.

For a fortnight the country has been watching with painful interest the progress of the strike at Homestead. It is not because of its magnitude, merely; it is not because of any features peculiar to itself which distinguish it from other strikes that it attracts the attention of the nation. It is rather because it is one of many; because such occurrences are becoming so frequent as to be characteristic features of our civilization.

He must be a superficial observer of the signs of the times who does not see that these conflicts between capital and labor indicate a disease inherent in our competitive system, and one which strikes at the vitals of our civilization. In all of its fierce struggle for civil liberty the Anglo-Saxon race never faced a greater problem than confronts it now. On the one hand is our myriad-sided civilization demanding untold wealth with which to carry out its vast projects. On the other are capital entrenching itself in trusts and monopolies, striving to make itself the absolute ruler of the world, and labor organizing against its own utter and hopeless enslavement. Already these opposing forces have met in contests which shook the world, and the end is not yet. Deeper and wider grows the chasm between these two whose separation is death to our institutions. Fiercer and more bitter grows the hatred between those whose interests stand or fall together. How to unite in indissoluble bonds capital and labor, is a problem to which our most gifted statesmen may well give their best thought, even though they are obliged to neglect the fisheries for a time or allow a few seals to be stolen.

No effort worthy of mention has thus far been made to solve the problem. Both old parties are ready enough to accuse one another of guilt in this matter, as they are to lay the blame of excessive rain and failing crops at one another's door, but neither has any remedy to propose beyond electing itself to power.

But, though the problem is a most complicated one which it may take more than one generation to solve, it is of a kind for which the Anglo-Saxon race has shown a special aptitude. The student of history knows well how slowly and painfully the fabric of Anglican civil liberty was reared. To make the chief executive dependent upon the legislative assembly, by committing to the latter the keeping of the nation's purse is a very simple device, but it was only after many years of struggle and defeat that our ancestors hit upon the plan, and converted an irresponsible despot into a constitutional monarch. Every institution which enshrines a sacred principle of our liberty was wrought out by years of painful toil and discouraging defeats. Before a problem as difficult, as important as any of the past we stand to-day. There may be before us long years of struggle and defeat, even of strife and bloodshed. It may involve a more complete social revolution than most of us think, but we believe that, in the future as in the past, the Anglo-Saxon race will accomplish its own peculiar mission—the development of civil liberty. With faith in our country and in Him who ruleth over the affairs of men, we look with confidence to the complete fulfillment of that mission in the evolution of a perfect Christian state.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW.

One of our city editors has an excellent editorial on the subject of parliamentary usage, in which he refers to the time when abbesses and peeresses participated in the legislation of the realm; this they did as holders of land and as a safeguard against the immemorial encroachments of what were called the commonality; but as time went on, the crown confiscated the ecclesiastical possessions and the abbess disappeared from the circle of government. Now, however, women are slowly returning to power; and if they would succeed, they must know parliamentary law: but it is difficult for them to believe that there is not something unwomanly connected with such knowledge. This is where they make their great mistake, and the conclusion of one of our chief city editors, with the recent Federation of Women's Clubs, is a text so full of pith that we quote it herewith, urging every woman who reads at all to read it twice:

"Parliamentary law is a grammar of deliberation. It is the economy of debate. It is the only means known to man in convention whereby he may be saved. Recently three hundred of the most intelligent women of the United States were tangled, labyrinthed, lost to sight and almost to memory because neither on their platform nor on the floor was there one able and willing to guide the graceful ship of the confederation through the little choppy sea of amending a constitution.

"The strange part of the incident by which hours were wasted is that every woman is, and for years may have been a member of a club managed, presumably, according to rules of debate. Yet, in spite of plain, constitutional inhibition, the same speaker was allowed without check by chair or question on floor to speak many times on the same motion; the special order was ignored without protest, and when it was proposed to set it aside debate was allowed, with no consciousness that only by restrictive steps of reconsideration and a two-thirds vote could the closed action of the preceding day be rescinded.

"It is quite true that men violate procedure, but they always are stopped short by some one and they get right speedily. The women who are of mind to take part in public affairs must resolve, if they are to succeed, that their first duty is to become parliamentarians. They should remember the solemn injunction in First Chronicles, where disaster fell upon those who sought not the Lord 'after the due order.'"

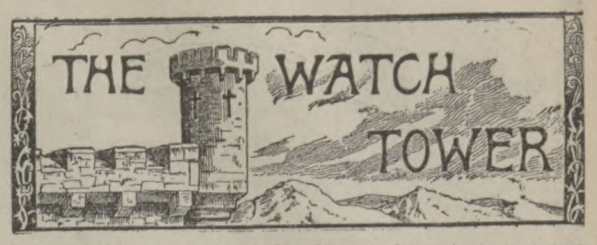
LADY HENRY SOMERSET spoke recently before a great meeting in St. James' Hall, in London, in the interest of the Woman's Liberal League of England. This is well known as an association, having branches all over Great Britain, through which women belonging to the Liberal party, of which Gladstone is the head, work to help carry the elections. It is an offset to the Primrose League of the Conservative party which helps Lord Salisbury. Since Lady Henry Somerset's return to England, she has taken a decided stand for women's ballot in the British Women's Temperance Association, and that measure has been carried by an overwhelming majority, although there was sharp opposition, just as there was in the W. C. T. U. of the United States some years ago when the subject was first broached. Our English leader was then invited to join the Central Council of the British Woman's National Liberal League, which she gladly consented to do, if that society would put a temperance plank in its platform, giving the power of the direct veto of saloons to the citizens locally and calling for the Sunday closing of public houses everywhere. We do not go into the technicalities of the law proposed, but outline its general features to the best of our ability. This plank was adopted with but twelve dissenting votes out of six hundred. On the same evening that this occurred Lady Henry Somerset was one of the speakers at the great public meeting of the Liberal party. One who was present writes: "She had but a quarter of an hour in which to make her argument, but she spoke out fair and square for our great cause. She told that immense congregation why she was there, setting forth the promises made by the Liberal party, and then went on to explain the bill and its necessity. Having done this in a most convincing way, she closed by reminding them how Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton stood with one supporter only in the House of Commons for the Abolitionists in the controversies of long ago,—how Daniel O'Connell, the unconquerable Irish leader, came to Parliament at that time with but one Irish member to support him,—and how the West India party went to O'Connell and said: 'Here are twenty-seven votes on every Irish question if you will not support Buxton and the Abolitionists again!' Whereupon O'Connell answered: 'Gentlemen, I speak for the saddest country that the sun sees, but may my right hand forget its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if for Ireland, even Ireland, I forget the slave one single hour,' 'and for myself,' said Lady Henry Somerset, 'I stand here to say, because I believe it is God's truth, no blessing can rest on legislation for Ireland if the party that shall be in power forget, even for Ireland, the drink-cursed slaves of England.' The house was enthusiastic, and cheered again and again, but the platform was silent. The party politicians had a brewer among them, and the papers next day boycotted Lady Henry Somerset's speech just as they do the speeches of temperance women in America. The battle is on. The party methods are identical with those of which we know so well; the temperance reform is out in the thickest of the fight, and bullets will whistle with a shriller sound than ever before the music ends."

THE Wardens' Association of the United States and Canada has compiled a table of statistics of prisoners for the year 1890, from which an expert has deduced remarkable results. For instance, he says that although agriculture is believed to be a pursuit that tends to innocence, these figures show that the percentage of persons engaged in agriculture being put at 44.10 of the whole population, the percentage convicted of crimes sufficiently heinous to send them to the penitentiaries was 15.27, but, while the percentage in relation to the population of persons engaged in mining, manufacturing and mechanical pursuits was 22.06, the percentage of such persons convicted of crime was but 6.55, which is equivalent to saying that while the agricultural population is hardly double that engaged in mines, manufactures and mechanics, the criminal population from agricultural sources is nearly two and one-half times as great. The agriculture population is not quite four times as great as that engaged in trade and transportation, but the number of agricultural convicts is nearly five times as great. Another remarkable fact is that though waiters, barbers, body servants, lawyers, doctors and preachers (known in census records as "personal and professional") form less than one-fourth of the population of the country, they evolve nearly three-fourths of the crime. The exact per cent is 23.42, in relation to the total population, and 72.09 in relation to total number of prisoners for crime. It should be remarked that this is on the average the best educated class. The expert makes the reasonable comment "that this class is on the whole well educated" and that "another surprise awaits us in the discovery that the illiterate form a comparatively small part of the criminal population, being only about ten per cent among white prisoners and only 19.56 per cent among all prisoners. Of the 9,859 committed to the penitentiaries, but 1,932 were colored, which is not a bad showing for the race; 1,851 were of foreign birth." But the most interesting fact to women is the following: "Of the 9,859 prisoners, inmates of 38 prisons in the states and territories, only 227 were women, of whom 89 were colored." We thank the expert of the Inter Ocean for making a commentary, which comes perhaps with better grace from a man than from a woman, namely: "These figures indicate that, despite the facilities for divorce, the excitements of modern life and the growing freedom of the sex from traditional restraints, the standard of womanly virtue is as high to-day as in those other days when, 'she sat at home and span her wool' was a woman's best epitaph."

A TRAVELING man sends us this criticism: "Is it possible that there is a shadow on the fair fame of the grand and noble W. C. T. U.? Yes, there is one thing at least that needs correction. I am a traveling man, and my business carries me into many states. In hundreds of railroad depots I find wall pockets for temperance literature, which have been placed there by the W. C. T. U. This is a most excellent idea. Sometimes I find them well stocked with good reading for the traveling public. This is admirable. But as a rule, I am sorry to say, they are either empty, stocked with railroad or other advertising matter, or with pernicious literature, placed there by those who have found them not occupied by the owners. Why, I have almost felt like crying to see such a grand opportunity lost! Can you not appoint one earnest, faithful woman, or young man, if necessary, who will promptly attend to the matter of supplying the wall-pocket constantly. Under the wall pocket should be printed 'Free Literature, Take Some.'"

This is a sorry state of things when we have tons of temperance matter in the Temple ready at cheap rates for those who will buy. Dear sisters, let us have a temperance revival, and that right early! The printed page pleads where no temperance voice will penetrate. Whatever you don't do, keep that page moving!

THE following resolution would be, we think, helpful, if adopted by labor organizations: "Resolved, That we recognize in the W. C. T. U. one of our strongest allies in all good work and noble undertakings, especially in the effort not only to remove the man from the liquor but the liquor from the man, and to secure the enforcement of laws for Sunday closing and against the legalization of the liquor traffic, by placing the ballot in the hands of women for their own protection and for ours. We also rejoice in the good work of the W. C. T. U. in the White Cross and purity movements, and pledge them our co-operation in all their efforts for the protection of the home, and the elevation of individual life to higher and better standards, especially the education of public opinion to the level of equal requirements upon men and women in respect to the personal wholesomeness and purity of their lives."



In Spain, no greater indignity can be put upon a man than to call him a borracho; that is, a drunkard. The law takes cognizance of such insults.

***

We hear much about eulogies in these days but we shall hardly get beyond that pronounced by a great French orator upon Prince de Condé. Said he: "At the moment I open my lips to celebrate the immortal glory of the Prince de Condé I am equally overwhelmed by the greatness of the theme and the needlessness of the task. What part of the habitable globe has not heard of his virtues and the wonders of his career? Everywhere they are rehearsed! His own country in extolling him can give no information even to the stranger!"

***

The differing opinions of those who have knowledge are far less to be feared than the dreary unanimity of ignorance. The period of inquiry is always a period of controversy. The final outcome of controversy is wisdom

***

The following poem might be called "progressive," each verse being contributed by different papers, in the order given:

"'The saloon must go!' the preacher says,
And good men say, 'That's right!'
And all are sure to have their way,
For they're going day and night."

"And behind each bar within the state,
Stands a bruiser slick and fat,
Who is a true Republican,
Or a trusted Democrat."

"And behind each slick saloon man
Stands the legislature grim,
With the license voting Christian,
Just in the rear of him."

"And within the license voter,
Is a heart by idols cursed,
That makes him bow the knee to Baal,
And worship party first."

***

A person's mind can be set just as a switch is set for a train, turning it this way or that. The total abstinence pledge is nothing more nor less than the setting of the switch of the mind so that the train of habit will run smoothly along the line of self-control.

***

Rev. Dr. Lockwood gave voice to these terse sayings at the Cincinnati Convention:

"The soul of all improvement is the improvement of the soul."

"From the policeman on the street to the governor in his chair there is a concealed hatred of the liquor traffic. The battle against us is largely a sham battle."

"There is nothing right asked by labor that can be divorced from the principle of prohibition."

***

Mrs. General Weaver is state superintendent of temperance work at the fairs and expositions for the W. C. T. U. of Iowa. Mrs. Dunham writes that she is a most lovely woman, and that her son, who is a famous whistler, will chime in at the next state convention. Mrs. Dunham adds: "I shall ask our women to work for the Prohibition party, not that we love General Weaver less, but General Bidwell more."

***

Lady Henry Somerset has said repeatedly that nothing in her personal experience has impressed her so strongly as the difference between English and American audiences. Our people are quite attentive and kindly, but practically silent, while in England the speaker feels buoyed up and carried forward by the constant responses of the audience in clapping of hands and stamping of the feet and the cheery, full-toned "Hear, Hear," that seems to multiply the speaker's voice and power a hundredfold. We greatly wish this method could be introduced into this country, and have repeatedly urged our white-ribboners to form the habit of a greater responsiveness. We tried in the first World's convention to get the audience to say, "Hear, Hear," and with enough success to feel encouraged in now urging once more these helpful methods upon our comrades in all their meetings and conventions. Audiences make the speaker more than the speaker makes the audience.

ON DUTY.

THE VALUE OF A WOMAN.

BY HESTER M. POOLE.

"Among one barbarous tribe in mid Africa," says that adventurous traveler, Mrs. French Sheldon, "the price of a woman is fixed at five blue-glass beads, while the price of a cow is ten beads." In that country, it may be presumed, the value of the mothers of the race is at its lowest ebb. From that extremely infinitesimal worth, up the rounds of human development to the topmost narrow apex yet reached, how vast the space! Over what varying conditions of depression and servitude has been the outlook!

Yet even in enlightened America is woman often held too cheaply. Only a short time since, John, our man of all work, came to tell us that he was about to marry, and wished to secure a good place for the housekeeping sister, who would then be at liberty to go to service. Now as John had professed an abhorrence to matrimony, and apparently no "best girl" had secured his affections, we wondered why he should suddenly desire to change his state.

"Why do I marry, ma'am?" said he in answer to my questioning. "Because I can't afford to keep my sister as housekeeper. She can easily earn ten dollars a month and I can't give her half that. I'm saving my money, you see, and I wouldn't have to pay a wife anything."

"Ah, John! you don't think your wife ought to have any money, do you?"

"No, ma'am; she'd have a good home, you see, and she'd earn herself enough to keep her tidy, besides taking care of the garden and feeding the pigs. I must have a wife, ma'am, to help me save."

Ah, John! John! you are far from being alone in looking at a wife solely from a material standpoint. You will pay for a woman shelter and a part of the food she consumes. Her clothing she herself must earn.

Shortly after this conversation another man higher in the scale of intelligence, one who held an official position in the town, in speaking of his wife said, simply and sincerely:

"I married Mary because she was a good worker about the house. You know that's all a man need look for in a woman, if she's only honest."

Here, again, the value of a wife is acknowledged to be the same as that of a horse or an ox, namely, the amount of work she can do in a day.

Among the Indians a beautiful squaw is purchased from the old brave, her father, for a pony or two. Sometimes she is only worth a few skins, beads or trinkets. Often a jug of fire-water is added if she be peculiarly esteemed. After marriage she is expected to more than pay her way as a drudge. She plants and harvests and dries the corn; cares for the ponies, preserves the game, jerks buffalo meat, pitches the tepees and takes them down, packs the household gear for the trail, carries wood and water, and is general factotum for her lord. Cheap enough for a pony is all this service!

Away back in the dawning of Aryan history was woman's value determined by her motherhood of male children, and by her faithfulness in keeping alive the fires of the domestic altar. Full rights of succession were inherited by the sons; the father need not make a will under the laws of the Greeks and Romans. With the religion the sons succeeded to the estate. According to Roman law the daughter does not inherit if she is married; according to the Greek law she does not inherit in any case. "The farther," declares de Coulanges, "we ascend from the Institutes of Justinian toward earlier times, the nearer we approach the rule that woman could not inherit. In Cicero's time if a father left a son and a daughter he could will to his daughter only one-third of his fortune. If there were only a daughter she could still have but half. To enable her to receive a third or a half of this patrimony it was necessary that her father should make a will in her favor; the daughter had nothing of full right."

As religion, not laws, first guaranteed the right of property (still de Coulanges who is authority) and the offices of religion descended alone through the son or the daughter's son, failing a direct male descendant, the wife was only of value in providing male posterity and in caring for the sacred fire upon the family hearth.

In ancient Greece woman was so little individualized that upon marriage she must abandon her own Lares and Penates to practice other rites and sacrifice only at the hearth of her husband. Once more must she offer libations at a sacred fire, but it is no longer the fire consecrated to the names of her ancestors. If the wife became not the mother of a child through whom family worship might be perpetuated, then the husband had full liberty to put her away and seek another alliance. In order that he might have repose and happiness in the next world, the Grecian citizen required posterity to offer libations and preserve the sacred fire of his own household. This a stranger could never do.

Yet, even such a value put upon womanhood, a value which completely ignored her selfhood as an individual, had its dignity. Certainly it was far more ennobling than to regard a wife simply for the gratification of sensuous desires or for the admiration she might excite in the world of fashion. While both ignore the true worth of woman as an integral part of dual humanity as much as man, yet there was nothing light or trivial about such an estimate. It was connected with the morals and well-being of the family, through that religious sentiment which lifts men out of brutehood into the intuition and longing for immortality. Consequently, in some regards even the old estimate of wifehood before the time of Christ, rises superior to that which is held by the more worldly and superficial members of the social centers of to day.

Everywhere is civilization to be measured by the value it puts upon woman. In many portions of China and in India, those two nations numbering such an enormous population, the advent of a girl baby is greeted with shame and mourning. To have several daughters in succession is regarded as the direst misfortune. Among the Mohammedans, woman is worthy to enter heaven only as the appendage of a husband. She is similarly regarded by the Mormons. Nearer home she is often held only as "Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse." Yet thankful are we that a higher standard is growing day by day.

Laying aside all minor values, is not woman's true worth in the state that of an inspirer in the moral and spiritual domain? The doubting, disputative mind of man needs the counterbalance of woman's affectional nature, her religious reason, her pure, aspiring courage to work for righteous ends with a hope and charity most tender and divine. Might, in its lower, outward perishable forms, the might of force, the developed woman truly regards as transient and temporal. Power, gentle, serene, steady and trustful, the power sleeping in the heart of love ready to waken at the call of wisdom, is the dower of true womanhood.

When by any great number of men is this value of woman understood—and illustrated it is in the noble work of the W. C. T. U.—then shall dawn that "new age of higher civilization when moral power shall take the place of brute force, and peace succeed to war." What higher value in all the universe can there be placed upon any soul created in the image of its maker?

Metuchen, N. J.

MASSACHUSETTS.

HERE AND THERE.

First, in beautiful Pittsfield, at the annual convention of the Berkshire county W. C. T. U. This gathering was held in the South Street church and was of unusual interest. Berkshire is a county of magnificent distances, many of its towns hidden so securely in its mountain fastnesses as to be quite out of the reach of the railroad's din and intrusive bustle. Charming as is this fact for the towns themselves, it makes the establishment of our work more difficult than in our more thickly-settled counties. Berkshire has but fourteen unions, though its area warrants a much larger number. This deficiency will soon, we trust, be remedied, since a plan is on foot whereby each union shall play the rôle of missionary to the neighboring towns which have not W. C. T. U. light.

Three new unions were reported during the past year, with several other towns almost ready for organization. Miss Gordon, whom Massachusetts women will always claim as their own especial property, is to be in that part of the state during the present month, and we expect soon to report large increase for Berkshire county.

The county president, Mrs. H. N. Brigham, was unanimously re-elected to the office she has so acceptably filled for the past year, likewise the secretary, Mrs. Fannie Isbel; but a new treasurer was chosen because of Mrs. Taylor's resignation.

A unique feature of the Pittsfield convention was a drunken man who arose and declared himself sick of the drink and of sin; signed the pledge and asked us to pray for him. He prayed for himself in a mixture of earnestness and pathos that would have been mirth-provoking if the case had not been so intensely pitiful. The women succeeded at last in getting him down stairs where strong coffee and a good dinner sobered him somewhat. A good brother took him in hand till the evening, promising then to take him to a mission. Some felt that the saloon-keepers had sent him in, since the W. C. T. U. is especially obnoxious to that class of citizens just now in Pittsfield; but whether or not that be true, we did what we could for him and must leave the result with God. While eating his dinner he broke out with, "I wonder what rum seller that's taking my money would treat me like this?" We wondered, too; but the saloon is as legal in Pittsfield as it is in Boston.

On the Fourth of July the women of the Boston Central union held their customary tent meeting on the Common. Few not actively engaged in the work realize what an outlay of vital force this tent meeting stands for; but that it pays again and again, our earnest women are more than sure. The program for this year did not differ materially from those which have preceded it in years past. There were the customary addresses each hour, with a change of leaders, singing, distribution of literature, obtaining signatures to pledge, etc. The Boston Herald the next morning said, "the W. C. T. U. tent was full all day, which was more than could be said for the fakirs." Two hundred and ninety six signatures to the pledge were secured, and the tired women went home feeling that their labor had been indeed blessed of Him who promises that a cup of cold water given in His name shall in no wise lose its reward.

Suffolk county W. C. T. U. has a most faithful superintendent of prison, jail and almshouse work, Mrs. Margaret Magennis. Unfortunately for Boston as a city and Massachusetts as a commonwealth, there is ample scope in our midst for the work of a superintendent in these lines. Our penal institutions are many, and usually overcrowded with inmates. Mrs. Magennis is on the reportorial staff of the Boston Traveller—one of our busiest toilers—and yet there is hardly a Sabbath in summer's heat or winter's cold which does not find her visiting these saddest factors in our nineteenth century's problem. On a recent Sabbath it was my own privilege to accompany her on this mission, Charlestown's state's prison being our point of destination. It was a day never to be forgotten; it seems as if the faces of those men must stand before me forever. Mrs. Harris was there and sang as I had never heard her even in convention. The men listened as if entranced, while tears attested that more than one heart was touched. Mrs. Magennis made a few earnest introductory remarks; the other speakers were, Mr. Harbour, one of the editors of the Youth's Companion, Mrs. Cheney, Mr. Harris and the narrator. There was but one message possible for me, and that our Master's own declaration concerning His mission: "The spirit of the Lord is upon me because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor, he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Never before had I so fully realized the absolute oneness of sin, and the fact that the most hardened sinner needs only the same power we all need, and needs it no more than we all—the infinite grace of God.

A visit of a somewhat different nature and yet very like in its underlying cause, was that of the state president and secretary, in company with Mr. Henry H. Faxon, that unfailing friend of the W. C. T. U., to the Garten Sanatorium on July 7. This institution is situated on Lake Massapoag, a beautiful sheet of water in the town of Sharon. It has been opened but a short time, though the Garten Cure claims to have been used successfully for fifteen years in Dr. Garten's private practice. There were four patients in the sanatorium at the time of our visit, one having been dismissed as cured that day. The company offers to the state union the privilege of placing there for treatment three patients free of charge. The state is unwilling to assume any responsibility in the matter; but if there are those who wish to avail themselves of the offer, understanding that we in no wise indorse the treatment, from our present stock of knowledge, we are willing to send their names to the authorities, to whose courtesy and kindness we are indebted for a most delightful day. The most conspicuous lack to our thought was the spiritual. The men presented themselves for treatment with no apparent longing for a clean life in the highest sense of that term. We may have misjudged them; but it seemed as if they were trying to escape from the disagreeable consequences of their particular form of sin, rather than hungering for deliverance from all sin. With Mr. Woolley we felt that the "hope of glory" must ever rank before the bichloride of gold as a cure for body or soul. We can imagine the two methods combined with glorious results; but when that shall be done sanatoriums must be founded for a higher purpose than the making of money.

We are inclined as Massachusetts women, to dispute the claim of one of our sister states to the honor of the legislature first voting for a covered exhibit at the World's Fair. Whatever may have been the faults and failings of the Massachusetts legislature just adjourned (and we cannot boast of it as a very statesmanlike body), we cannot forget that even before our women had gotten ready their perennially fresh petitions upon the subject, our brethren under the gilded dome had decided that in this respect, if in no other, Massachusetts shall be true to the traditions of her ancestors. It is something for which to be thankful that we are not, as a state, to be put to the blush, whatever may be true as a nation. Few states, we are sure, have so devoted a superintendent of Sabbath observance as has Massachusetts, in the person of Mrs. L. B. Earle. It was a cause of rejoicing to us all when she received the Brown prize of one hundred dollars for the best essay on the Sabbath question. Few persons have ever put more self-denying labor into any work than has she into this, and it is good to know that some little reward has come to her in this life.

From Mansfield, one of our recently organized unions, come the following interesting items: "Our union quarterly temperance meeting for Sunday evening, May 22, was of unusual interest; our president, Mrs. De Wolf, presided over the meeting. The program included singing by the Universalist choir, and the L. T. L.; prayer by Rev. C. E. Beals, of the Methodist Church; Scripture reading by Rev. Spencer Tunnell of the Baptist Church; an outline of local W. C. T. U. work and aims, and the work of the Massachusetts union by Mrs. DeWolf; addresses by Rev. L. M. Powers, of the Universalist Church; Rev. Mr. Tunnell, Rev. Mr. Beals, and Rev. Jacob Ide, the beloved pastor of more than fifty years standing of the Congregational Church; congregational singing, and benediction by Rev. Mr. Ide. The convention of the Bristol county L. T. L., which was held here on June 6, at which a Mansfield boy, Master George Hudson, was elected county president, was shortly followed by a lecture in the Town Hall, by Mr. John G. Woolley, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Our union held a mothers' meeting on May 31, at which Mrs. DeWolf read her paper on "The Influence of Mothers," and there were several other interesting features. We have recently obtained new headquarters, a hall large enough to accommodate not only the W's and Y's, but the L. T. L. as well. We are going to furnish this hall ourselves, having already an organ, a desk, and some money contributed, and for this purpose we held a Gipsy encampment in the grounds last Friday night, which was quite well patronized. When our hall is completely furnished, at the suggestion of our president, we shall dedicate it under the name of Fessenden Hall. The ladies of our union have always worked with enthusiasm and perfect harmony, and I trust that this new hall with its inspiring name will prove a pleasant home and incite them to greater effort in the cause to which we are pledged."

But the event of events in our items for July was the day at Lake View, South Framingham on Tuesday, July 12. We went by the courtesy of the board of trustees for the New England Chautauqua, which meets annually at Lake View, and who offered us special inducements if we would take possession for the day. It proved one of the very hottest days of the season, still the audience was large, "the largest," says The Assembly Daily, "ever convened on the first day of the assembly."

Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason, our brave narcotic leader, made the first address on the question, "Who is responsible?" and proved conclusively that the responsibility for the existence of the liquor traffic must rest with those who are indifferent to the claims of the temperance cause and the ravages of intemperance. Miss Tobey followed with a little talk on evangelistic work and one of her own earnest Bible readings on the feeding of the multitude. Mrs. S. Louise Barton followed with a short talk, in which she argued the success of our work as sure, from the fact that "when a woman will, she will, you may depend on't, and when she won't she won't, and that's the end on't." Miss Florence E. Balch, a teacher in Mt. Holyoke College, sang several inspiring solos.

After dinner came a parliamentary drill by Mrs. Fessenden, which even the extreme heat could not prevent from being interesting, and the "Regular Bi-weekly Meeting of the Y. W. C. T. U. of Hope for the Future Town," led by Miss Fessenden, assisted by about twenty of her brightest Y's. There is indeed hope for the future if that meeting is in any sense a type of the Y meetings of to-day. Alas! we fear with our girls as well as with ourselves, perfection exists only to be striven for. It is something, however, to have it presented as an object lesson and we are sure that those who witnessed that model meeting will not soon forget it. Reports were given by the various superintendents, each evincing a cheerful alacrity in the performance of her duty, with correspondingly encouraging results. One young lady gave a very interesting account of the process of fermentation; another actually set up a miniature still, and distilled brandy before our very eyes, illustrating further its effects upon the human system by experiment with the white of an egg.

The orator of the day was Rev. L. A. Banks, so well known for his vigorous onslaught on the sweating system. He brought to us the only kind of message such a day left us strength to receive, viz., "notes of cheer." It was indeed cheering to learn of the vast strides made by the temperance cause within the less than a century of its existence. When we think of a boy of fourteen being treated to whisky by the board before whom he had been examined on his application for membership to a Congregational church, when we think of a Baptist deacon bringing suit against Dr. Cheever on the ground that he had injured his business and defamed his character by writing the tract, "Deacon Giles' Still;" yes, and Dr. Cheever was condemned, and served a term of imprisonment for this offense; when we think that the Methodist General Conference of 1812 refused to pass a law that no minister should "eke out his support by the sale of spirituous or malt liquors," we are ready to concede that "the world do move." But all these and many other startling facts Dr. Banks brought to us in his own breezy way. He closed with an impassioned appeal to the Christian church to vanquish the saloon at the polls.

At the close of Dr. Banks' address a purity symposium was held in the pavilion, conducted by Mrs. F. C. Carrington, state superintendent. Mrs. Carrington is a woman of marked ability, and brings to this work a consecrated enthusiasm. We congratulate ourselves as a state union upon having this especial department in such safe hands. Her remarks were thoughtful and earnest, as was also the paper read by Mrs. McClintock, of Wollaston. The state corresponding secretary made an appeal to mothers to guard their children and train them aright.

This closed a busy, helpful day. Our next summer meeting will be at Cottage City, August 5, 6 and 7. Look out for a full report.

KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON,
State Reporter, Boston.

NEW JERSEY.

THE CLANS MEET.

Truly there is no place more cosmopolitan than Ocean Grove, for besides the hundred or more of the white-ribboners from New Jersey, there was a large number of visitors from Pennsylvania and many other states, who, on the morning of the 6th and 7th of July, gathered to attend the two days devoted to the New Jersey W. C. T. U. summer school of methods. Mrs. Rapheal, the wide-awake president of the "Y's" of Ocean Grove, had made "Janes Memorial Tabernacle" look most inviting, with its wealth of flags, trailing vines, potted plants and water lilies through which life-sized portraits of Frances Willard and Sarah J. C. Downs looked their silent benediction.

Promptly at ten a. m. the president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, struck the gavel and in a few well-chosen words opened the "school." The president of Asbury Park led the devotional services and struck the key-note of the session,—"Consecration to the Lord, not to the work," and this note was prolonged by Mrs. Anna Hammer, of Philadelphia, National superintendent of parlor work, at the noontide hour of Bible reading and prayer. The singing by over one hundred children from the "Home for the friendless," of Newark, was most pleasing, and caused many an eye to weep as they were told by the president why these children were orphans, or even worse—the liquor traffic.

The first paper by Mrs. R. A. Anderson, of Trenton, was given in a most interesting and original manner on "How to Secure a Large Audience at a Temperance Lecture, and how to Pay Expenses." It was thoroughly practical and suggestive, excellent in thought and plan. Miss Ada Sulger gave one much food for thought in her paper on "Physical Culture," concerning health, food, disease germs, and the free play of the muscles of the lungs, upon which the highest brain power is largely dependent. Madam Alberti, principal of the Delsarte school of expression, of New York, while agreeing with and indorsing all that had previously been said on this line, spoke more particularly on the "Practical Application of the Delsartian Methods," in a manner most pleasing and yet instructive. By special request, at the close of her address, Madam Alberti recited the "Song of the Spinning Wheel," to the delight of the audience. Mrs. H. H. Forrest, corresponding secretary of Pennsylvania, gave a most excellent paper on "What is a Model W. C. T. U?" and her suggestions were exceedingly helpful and practical. Mrs. Leggett, of Washington, D. C., gave a paper on "Journalism," and handled her subject in a masterly way.

Dr. Dormer, of Boston, in his illustrated lecture on the "Effects of Alcohol on the Human System," proved from his charts, and his own experience, in his practice, that always, and at all times, alcohol is an irritant poison. Although full of scientific facts, yet given in such plain language, avoiding technical phraseology, the lecture could not fail to make an impression, and it did.

A social purity paper by Beulah Ewing—a beautiful Quakeress—handled in a most delicate manner, yet, withal, very impressively, called out the first real discussion of the session, and many startling truths were given of the great need of earnest work by consecrated women on this line. When the statement was made that one in every ten of the girls who land at New York from foreign lands was lost to a life of purity, it is evident that it was none too soon for the W. C. T. U., as well as other philanthropic societies, to meet these girls on the threshold and in a measure counterbalance the evil which is always on the alert to greet them!

Mrs. May Sparks, state superintendent of juvenile work, turned the audience for a little space into an L. T. L. and with rapidity of action and clearness of plan, took the school through the exercises of one session of a model L. T. L. much to the delight and profit of all present, closing with a blackboard lesson which was original and to the point. Upon a large canvas suspended from an easel we saw at the left a rum tower, surmounted by the whisky bottle flying the black flag, enveloped by the fiery serpent. This tower was fully protected by the government license wall. The only entrance to the tower was over a moat called "political corruption," and through the gate-way by the payment of the license fee. At the right, the battering ram of the early temperance societies, just behind, on a little higher ground, is the Gospel gun, and several holes by this gun have punctured the walls of the tower. Near by is the large wooden pop-gun of some of the political parties; it is stuffed with promises, constantly firing on the wall but producing no effect in breaking down the wall, because it is so very strong that it will take the dynamite of public sentiment and united effort to break down the stronghold—not promises. The highest ground yet taken is the little battery of the W. C. T. U., and several shots from the forty different departments have made one or two holes in the wall. Right down near the tower are the Prohibitionists with pick and shovel, going to the very root of the evil—legalized lawlessness. Away up at the top is the dawn of the rising sun and from that point where one can scarcely distinguish the outlines of little forms, whose columns widen until they almost reach the Prohibitionists in the moat at the tower wall, and in line with the W. C. T. U. battery, while just before them is enlightened public sentiment, created by THE UNION SIGNAL and other temperance literature, and by the noble men and women whose public utterances are making way for these ten million of children who, from the land of the rising sun, in the morning of life, assure us that already victory dawns!

From beginning to end of the session, each hour was full of interest, and so practical that we think the seed sown must bear fruit among our workers in the near future. Nevertheless amid all this interest there was running a sadness, because she who originated this school at Ocean Grove many years ago, and had always presided at them, would never in person be present, and the memorial service held the last afternoon was a beautiful tribute by her comrades to her worth. Mrs. Ellis, the corresponding secretary, conducted the hour, and most ably, in her opening remarks, brought out the inspiration she was to the women who were more than glad to be counted as children of Sarah J. C. Downs. The many tributes showed that purity of thought, loyalty to principle, combined with a wonderful executive ability, a tenderness rare to find to the weak and timid—an earnestness which knew no rest, intuitiveness to see and draw out the talent in new workers, entire abandonment of self to the work, native politeness sanctified by divine grace, which made her never too busy to listen to the appeals of the humblest if she might be helpful, made up a character so symmetrical, so fully ripe, that is it any wonder when the Master called she should triumphantly enter into rest? At the same hour several loving tributes were given to Mrs. Helen Peek Crane, the indefatigable reporter of the Ocean Grove meetings for the New York papers, and for so long our efficient superintendent of press work in the state. Dr. Stokes, the president of the Ocean Grove association, gave a very appropriate welcome on the first evening and most cordial invitation to return another year.

John G. Woolley, of Minnesota, was the speaker for the first evening, and most forcibly pressed home the responsibility of Christian men to clear the road of thieves from Jericho to Jerusalem, and by presenting their bodies to the Lord, help the women close the saloon. Rev. Anna Shaw captured the large audience on the second evening, in her lecture on the "Fate of the Republics"; it must be heard to be appreciated. Woman suffrage from a Christian standpoint never had a better exponent.

But time and space remind us that we must hurry on, though not half the good things said at this summer meeting have been given, to a shadow on our bright picture. As we left to attend this feast of good things, our hearts were saddened to read in one of our morning dailies a letter written, it is said, by one of our city ministers, on the "Awful crimes committed by the Third Party Prohibitionist." While admitting that "the efforts of the women's organizations have done more than all others to arouse public sentiment, notwithstanding their advocacy of the Third party," yet he arraigns the Third party as a "hindrance, a schemer, and as chargeable for all liquor laws and rum control in our legislature, and so long as the party is in existence, so long will the rum power rule."

We thought it about time for such a tirade, but didn't think a minister of the gospel would so debase his calling. Now that a presidential campaign is upon us we wish to ask why it is worse for a person to be a member of the "Third Party" than for another person without being ostracised to be a member of the fourth party? As I am a woman, and not supposed to know, I wish the query answered. The Monmouth Park races are in full blast, and the press and prominent business men are in sympathy, because they are "so very respectable," "not at all like Guttenberg or Gloucester"—God help us!

A mistake crept into one of my former letters which I wish to correct. The bill taking away the appointing of the county board of excise from the governor was presented but failed to pass, though so reported at the time, and Lambertville has not been allowed to have the "voice of its people" expressed in the closing of the saloon. County commissioners have been appointed by the governor, and the saloon is victorious. Whether the presenting of such a bill was simply to allay the aroused temperance sentiment, I cannot say, as I am not in the "political ring." But I do say, as a woman, and a Christian, that "vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord!"

N. L. CAMINADE,
State Reporter, Trenton.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MISS ELIZABETH J. SCOVEL, of Nashville, the evangelist, is at Green Brier Springs, Tenn., with her father for his health.

A VERY promising Y. W. C. T. U. of fifteen members was organized this spring in Alexis, Ill., and it has since grown to twenty-six.

MRS. EARLE, superintendent of Sabbath observance for Massachusetts W. C. T. U., was recently awarded an hundred dollar prize for the best practical paper on the Sabbath question.

MRS. A. S. BENJAMIN, of Portland, Mich., our National superintendent of parliamentary usage, celebrated the Fourth by organizing a union of twenty-four regular and five honorary members at Geuda Springs, Kansas.

CONNECTICUT W. C. T. U. will observe its annual temperance field day at Willimantic camp ground, Friday, July 29, with Rev. J. H. Hector (the colored orator) and Mrs. J. T. Ellis (corresponding secretary of New Jersey W. C. T. U.), as speakers. Mrs. C. H. Fitz Gerald will superintend the children's meeting.

SARAH S. GAGE, who has been fitly called the "Jennie Casseday of Canada," was released from her long years of suffering, at her home in Fitch Bay, Quebec, July 10. Always patient and cheerful, through years of suffering, her life was a living example of trust and hope to those about her whom she comforted and blessed.

MRS. MARY JEWETT TELFORD conducted, quite successfully, a series of six public meetings in Rochester recently and by special request added to the series her social purity lecture, entitled, "White Lives." Mrs. Telford also gave the principal address at the semi-annual convention of the Monroe county union, in Penfield, not long ago.

MRS. E. B. INGALLS, National superintendent of the department of narcotics, is mourning the loss of her mother, Mrs. J. B. Buckley, who was probably the oldest temperance worker in St. Louis. She had learned to an eminent degree the grace of mercy for the erring, and was rarely absent from her place in the weekly meeting of her W. C. T. U.

MRS. ANNA R. RIGGS, Oregon's faithful president, was reëlected at the last state convention to this position, which she has filled so worthily for six consecutive years. Just now Mrs. Riggs is in Eastern Oregon, holding a school of methods at Le Grande, and meetings at other points. Her unflagging zeal and tireless efforts are the source of much of her success in the white-ribbon cause.

A SCHOOL of methods was held in the Alexander Street Methodist church in Rochester last month, by the Y unions of western New York, nine counties having been invited to participate. Mrs. C. J. A. Jump, of Albany, state superintendent, and Mrs. L. H. Dudley, of Rochester, county superintendent of Y work, together took charge of the meeting, which was attended by over sixty representatives of the local unions of this section of the state, and proved most encouraging and helpful to the young workers.

A VERY interesting county convention was held in St. Charles, Mo., not long since. A chorus of fifty children took an active and pleasing part, enlivening the sessions by their sweet temperance songs. The conventional program was carried out, some special features of interest being the papers and lectures on the timely topics of literature, heredity, public sentiment, and "the root of all evil." A gold medal contest was held, new names added to the membership roll and the convention adjourned to meet at O'Fallon, in June, '93.

THREE unions have been organized in Rochester during the past six months, besides a union of colored women, mostly members of Zion M. E. church. Once in three months the local unions of the city, now ten in number, hold rallying-day services, in which a large number of members unite and spend the day at the central headquarters, hearing reports of the work of the local auxiliaries and formulating plans for the work of the next quarter. At the noon intermission lunch is served by the local societies in turn. These meetings are in charge of the central board of managers, which is composed of three representatives of each local union of the city.

(Continued from page 5.)

LADY HENRY SOMERSET'S ELECTION WORK.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Lady Henry Somerset has just inished a most successful two weeks' tour in the north of England in the interests of the British Women's Temperance Association. Among the large centers visited were Manchester, Leeds, Sheffield, Sunderland, Chester, Norwich, Ipswich. Conferences with the women of the association were held during the day, with a grand mass-meeting in the evening.

The giving of the direct veto on the liquor traffic to the people of England is agitating the United Kingdom from shore to shore, and the evening meetings were held in this interest. At Manchester between six and seven thousand persons listened to a masterly address by Lady Henry; at Sunderland over three thousand people were present to hear her eloquent words, while at all the other points the crowds were only restricted by the capacity of the halls.

An appeal made by Lady Henry to the voters and to the church and clergy of England, asking that demonstrations in favor of the direct veto be made June 18, 19, has met with a great response from hundreds of villages and cities in England. In the vicinity of Newcastle over nine hundred churches preached temperance sermons on Sunday evening, June 19. There has not been such an uprising in favor of total abstinence since the great meetings against the Compensation Act as this manifesto of Lady Henry's, eloquent in its appeal, has called forth, and it can be truly said that the Christian conscience of England has been roused by her upon the necessity of the temperance vote.

Under the influence of these meetings, many Liberal candidates are pledging themselves to vote in favor of giving the people the Direct Veto and Sunday-closing Act. Lady Henry's eloquent words, pleading on behalf of "Home Protection," ballot for woman and the arousement of the Christian man and womanhood to their duty upon the most sacred vested interests of home and state, have been listened to by thousands of the thinking citizenship of England and cannot fail to create an enormous popular feeling in favor of the overthrow of the public house. The liquor traffic has issued a manifesto calling attention of the trade to the demonstrations of June 18, 19, and the probable effect on their business, and paid Lady Henry the high compliment of calling her Joan of Arc.

HELEN L. HOOD.

London, Eng.

TID-BITS OF EXPERIENCE.

FROM NOTES OF A NATIONAL ORGANIZER.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—1. They wanted added impetus and a few new members if possible. They had "never done much," simply a country union down east, meeting at members' houses every month. On inquiry I found this small union kept up two L. T. L's in adjoining townships, brought young women into membership and officership in the union, had paid eighty-five dollars toward one hundred pledged for our Temple in Chicago, and that three-fourths of the husbands of these unionists had come to vote the Prohibition ticket. Since that visit I feel like devoting myself to rural unions exclusively, as the greatest gain for the outlay. . . . .

2. There was only time to tuck in one Sunday afternoon meeting, by riding a few miles after the morning lecture, over mountain roads to a school-house in one of Colorado's fruitful valleys, just out of the foot-hills. Twenty people, perhaps, listened patiently to a faint outline of woman's temperance work, and assented to a proposition that sometime, when I had more time and strength and they could better advertise the movement, a union might be organized among them. As we were about concluding, a middle-aged man said he thought we better not wait; something might happen. He couldn't do much for us, being only a man. But he believed a union could be made then and there, and it would grow. It was "made," and the officers elected. It has done good, steady work. It is one of the "entertaining" unions for the coming National Convention. . . . .

3. A good colored Sunday-school gathers statedly at Lincoln Memorial church, whose pastor's wife is president of their union. That part of our nation's capital city was long known as "Hell's Bottom." A visitor was talking with the school. "And what about these little white rolls I see in boys' mouths,—smoke at the farther end, you know? Nothing the matter with them, is there?" Quick as a flash a dozen dark-skinned hands were in the air. "Yes, yes," eagerly. "They're cigarettes." "They're bad!" "They're poison, too." "Why, we learn all about them at school. They're poison!" And I went out telling my glad heart there was hope of the nation after all, if the work of the W. C. T. U. had reached "Hell's Bottom."

. . . . . .

4. We waited two hours for the midnight train at a fire "camp" in the Rocky mountains, nearly two miles above sea level. Cultivated women of the place helped me while away the time in the station, as well as a German saloon-keeper's wife who had known me in a charitable enterprise. She put a lunch into my hand as the snow-decked engine plunged into the town. "Der may be plockade, don' you see? Snow plockade." The train men found a seat for me alone in the narrow gauge car. I demurred as crowds came in at way-stations,—men taking advantage of the winter holiday excursion rates. But the brakeman insisted: "Not a man wants to crowd you. Cuddle down now if you can and rest." Unsalaried workers can't always afford sleeping cars, so I "cuddled down," though the only woman in the car. Directly a group in front passed a bottle among themselves once and again. Their social leader, a kindly-faced, elderly man, now somewhat hilarious, pressed it upon the young conductor when he passed through, with "It's a wild night. 'Twill do you good!" I'm afraid the only woman in the car shook a shake that minute which neither the mountain railway nor the snow-blast could have answered for. The conductor's voice rang out the length of the coach as positive as it was cheery and respectful: "No, thank you! Not a drop. I smile, but I don't smile that way!" He did smile all over his face and I went to sleep.

Daybreak paled the electric towers of Denver as our train came in sight. I whispered to the conductor, "I've had a better night, because you didn't 'smile that way.'" The light broke over his face again. "No railroad man ought ever to touch the stuff," he said. "I'm glad our company doesn't allow it. And then," tenderly, "I told my old mother she should see me dead before she saw me drunk, and she shall see me dead before she sees me drunk. Tickets!"

GOLDEN GATE GLEANINGS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The no-license conflict in Placer county, California, marks an era in the history of prohibition in the Golden State. All eyes are centered on it; several counties are ready to swing in on the double quick.

The liquor leagues are alarmed, the San Francisco branch contributes $25,000, so with the amount pledged by its home league a total of over thirty thousand dollars is at the disposal of the saloons in Placer to defeat the no-license ticket. This evinces the importance of the local contest.

In all the campaigns in which I have had a part, I have never witnessed a more gallant fight. If we are beaten it will not be owing to lack of energy and determination on our part. Good generalship is shown. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union wing is commanded by Dr. Mary B. Mallory, and no braver or more determined captain ever led a regiment than "Our Mary." The church contingent has at its head the tireless, intrepid and valiant leader, the Rev. S. E. Crowe. His song, "Marching through Placer," makes votes every time it is heard by an audience.

An evidence of the unbounded enthusiasm prevalent, on the occasion of my third visit to Penryn, was the booming of cannon, strains of music, singing "Marching through Placer," waving of handkerchiefs and clapping of hands as we were escorted to the speaker's stand. A collection of $138 was taken at the close of my address, though a large sum had previously been contributed by the people there.

Yolo, Humboldt, San Benito, Mendocino, and Sonoma counties are on fire. A revolution has occurred in Santa Clara county. The supervisors have enacted an ordinance that carries with it restrictions that prevent a number of licenses being granted. The closing of saloons in San José, the county seat, at 10 p. m. Saturdays to 5 a. m. Monday is a gigantic stride towards prohibition. Besides no room other than the main room can be used for the dispensing of liquors, and one-half the front must be of clear glass that persons from the outside may be able to see what is going on inside.

This local option fight in Placer county may close with a victory for the enemy, but sentiment for prohibition will have been made. Many a non-partisan man sees with open eyes. The attitude of some of the leaders in the old parties tells them that their place is not in the ancient ranks but with the new, progressive, home-protecting, Prohibition party. MAJ. E. T. SCOTT.

Clipper Gap, Cal.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS A POSITIVE INJURY IN CASE OF SYNCOPE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In response to your inquiry as to what can be used in place of alcohol for a person becoming suddenly unconscious, I shall speak as follows: Place the person in a horizontal position in free access to air; dash the face, chest and neck, at intervals, with a few drops of water, repeating till breathing becomes regular; put a teaspoonful of water in the mouth, and if it is swallowed follow with another containing ten drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or give a spoonful of tea or coffee. After consciousness returns no remedies but rest and simple nourishment are needed. Alcoholic liquors are a positive injury in such cases, and I state it with emphasis. Very sincerely, N. S. DAVIS, M. D.

Publisher's Notes.

TAKE NOTICE.

The persons named below have sent money for THE UNION SIGNAL and failed to give their addresses. We shall be glad to receive information concerning the same:

Henrietta Buck.
Mrs. C. T. Cook.
Mrs. Jas. Long.
Mrs. Geo. W. Reed.
Mrs. A. W. South.
Mrs. J. Colegrove.

THE BEST YET.

The fair number of THE UNION SIGNAL, which will be issued under date of August 11, will be the finest number ever printed. Distinguished agriculturists will give their views of the situation, while such writers as Mary A. Livermore, Emily Huntington Miller, Dr. Bessie V. Cushman, Mrs. Josephine Nichols, Mrs. M. C. Campfield and others will aid Miss Willard in furnishing material for the most attractive sheet ever prepared for the clans who gather at state and county fairs. In addition to this, a World's Fair supplement will be added. This will be illustrated, many of the designs being prepared by our own artist. Now is the time to advertise the W. C. T. U., by circulating a paper which will be read with interest and cherished for its attractive appearance.

We appeal to unions everywhere to see that it is scattered generously at every fair held this fall.

Let all the unions in a county unite in providing a generous supply for the county fair.

Let state unions appropriate generously to scatter this UNION SIGNAL at the state fair.

Send single copies to rural homes whose inmates do not attend the fair.

Price for fair number, with supplement, if ordered before August 5, $1.50 per 100; after August 5, $2 per 100.

No time should be lost. Order without delay.

Send all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DO NOT FORGET,

In planning decorations for your booth at the fair, that we still have some of the aquarelle-tint pictures of Miss Frances E. Willard. You should introduce her to all newcomers. So send for one or more copies. A letter recently received says of it:

"The picture of Miss Willard was duly received. It is very beautiful and far surpasses my expectation in every respect."

Price 50 cts. each.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Send for Campaign package. Price 10 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

The Advance Guard is gaining favor everywhere. It fills a "long felt want." Send for sample copy and see.

Price 5 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

EVERY W. C. T. U. should secure a copy of the "Young Woman Journalist." Price $1.50. Send for it.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

South Waukegan Items.

This column is devoted to the interests of South Waukegan, the new temperance Manufacturing Town.

THE hotel at South Waukegan is fully roofed and inclosed. Another thirty days will probably find it occupied.

PLANS for a school-house for South Waukegan are being perfected. An excursion will take place when the building is opened.

MR. C. E. SAYLER has fully decided to erect at once about twenty houses for tenants in South Waukegan. These houses will be rented or sold, as required.

VISITORS to South Waukegan should remember that north of the railroad track is where street improvements are in progress, and where the residence portion of the new city is designed to be.

CORRESPONDENCE in regard to building at South Waukegan is very heavy. There have been at least one hundred inquiries looking to the erection of business houses and residences within the last few weeks.

IT IS hoped the first of August will close the bond sales of the Woman's Land Snydicate, of which Mrs. R. A. Emmons is the manager. Four hundred bonds were sold on the 20th inst., a good day's business.

THE great factory buildings of the Lanyon Zinc works begin to show the designs of the builders. Piles of zinc ores abound, and preparations are being made for active business at as early a day as practicable.

RULES, strong as the laws of the Medes and Persians, governing the advertising columns of this paper prevent any allusion to the recent great occasion, and so it is left to the editorial columns to do justice therein.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS stands before the country as one of the most successful financial engineers the century has produced among womankind. The South Waukegan interest is but the beginning of her career, however. She deserves success, and all good women will bid her "good speed."

THE man or woman who thinks the "male persuasion" can alone do business should visit the office of Mrs. R. A. Emmons, of the Woman's Land Syndicate, 161 La Salle Street. There everything works like a banking house—quiet, rapid and regular. There is no excitement, no matter how much business is being done.

MANY inquiries are made as to the proposed "business center" of South Waukegan. That is something which cannot be controlled. Business finds its own level, like water. There is no attempt to control it, and there will be none. Business houses will be built where they are needed, and not where interested parties choose to place them.

PLENTY of pure water is an absolute necessity for a city, new or old. Until properly equipped water-works are constructed, with Lake Michigan as the source of supply, artesian wells will afford the needed fluid upon the town site of South Waukegan. It is, indeed, fortunate that so much water is below the town, needing only the drill to release it.

THE South Waukegan depot will take a new start very shortly, and there will rise, upon the foundations already in, one of the prettiest, as it will be among the most capacious along the line of the Northwestern railway. The Belt Line depot will have to be placed west of the Lanyon's Zinc works on account of its high grading over the Northwestern.

THE clay test has not yet been made, but there is no doubt in the minds of geologists but that South Waukegan clay is similar to that at Milwaukee. It was produced of the same elements and by the same agencies as the material found in Milwaukee, and there can be no difference chemically. A practical test would settle the matter, by burning a kiln of a few hundred thousand brick on the new town site.

FOUR million pressed brick have just been contracted for by the Washburn & Moen works at South Waukegan. Their immense plant is thus to be extended. It is well known by "insiders" that the great factory will soon add the manufacture of copper wire to their product. The ore will be brought by vessel from Lake Superior, smelted and wrought in the new works. The demand for copper wire for electrical uses is very great, and the copper market has often been "cornered" after heavy contracts have been let, resulting in heavy losses. Under the prospective arrangements with their own mines, smelters and machinery, any outside pressure would be futile. The extensions to the Washburn & Moen factory buildings will be on the south. Already these works, as the bee flies, is only about one-half mile from the South Waukegan depot.

WOMAN'S COLUMBIAN LAUNDRY CO.,

Incorporated Under the Laws of the State of Illinois. Capital, $300,000.

A GREAT INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISE. A WOMAN'S COMPANY, OWNED, OPERATED AND MANAGED BY WOMEN.

Shares are Ten ($10.00) Dollars Each, and are SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

We propose to establish 100 or more Branch Laundries, and for that purpose we offered 10,000 shares of our capital stock for sale at $10 per share, par value, payable, if desired, in monthly installments of $2.50 per share.

Five weeks only have passed since we made the above offer, and already a large number of shares have been taken by women from all parts of the country.

A SAFE AND PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

With the complete operation of our laundries we will have a capacity of turning out 100,000 laundried shirts per week, and as the population of Chicago requires many times this number of shirts a week, and as the profit on each shirt is 5 cents, you can readily see that running our full capacity we would be able to make a profit of $5,000 a week, $20,000 a month, or $240,000 a year on shirts alone, to say nothing about revenues to be derived from our other work and departments, which will be large. Taking this, then, as a basis, and that money is worth 8 per cent, we would be enabled to pay a dividend of $8.00 on every share of stock. We do not believe it will be less and it may be more.

AN IMPORTANT FEATURE.—Our improved method of doing laundry work gives better satisfaction than any other process, as NO CHEMICALS ARE USED, therefore the fiber of the linen is not worn or eaten away.

HOW MANY SHARES DO YOU WISH?

SEND FOR YOURS BEFORE You Lay Down This PAPER.

They are only $10 each, fully paid and forever non-assessable. Better secure as many as you can, as we have now less than 10,000 shares to offer at this price, and they are being taken very fast. Orders for stock will be filed as received, and all subscriptions received in excess of above amount will be returned to subscribers.

Price of stock will be advanced to $12.50 per share, as soon as the 10,000 shares now offered are sold.

No better investment can be found than our capital stock. Invest now while the Company is new, and reap the benefits paid in dividends perhaps for the balance of your life.

The plant of the Company which is now running is paying over fifty per cent on the amount invested.

Write to-day and send a small deposit to show us you are in earnest, state how many shares you wish, and we will reserve them for you any reasonable length of time. Full information sent free on application.

The Interior, one of the leading religious papers of Chicago, says: "The energy displayed by the officers of the Woman's Columbian Laundry Co., in pushing their undertaking to success, is truly remarkable. They have just closed a number of large contracts for Hotel, Apartment Building and Railroad Laundry work that will be exceedingly profitable to the fortunate stockholders."

"The work of the Woman's Columbian Laundry Co. is important, and should receive the support of every housewife in the country."—MARION HARLAND.

OFFICERS AND BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS:

MRS. LAURA A. CHAMBERLAIN, President and Treasurer, Recording Secretary Illinois Woman's Press Association.

MRS. MARY FRENCH SWARTHOUT, Vice-President, Author of School Text-Books on Mathematics.

MRS. ADDIE R. SCHUYLER, 2d Vice-President, Preceptress Central State Normal School of Pennsylvania.

MISS I. F. PARSONS, Secretary, Manager the Parsons Stenographic Bureau.

MRS. SARAH WILDER PRATT, Member of the Woman's Club of Chicago.

MRS. SALLIE M. MOSES, of the Papyrus Club, Chicago

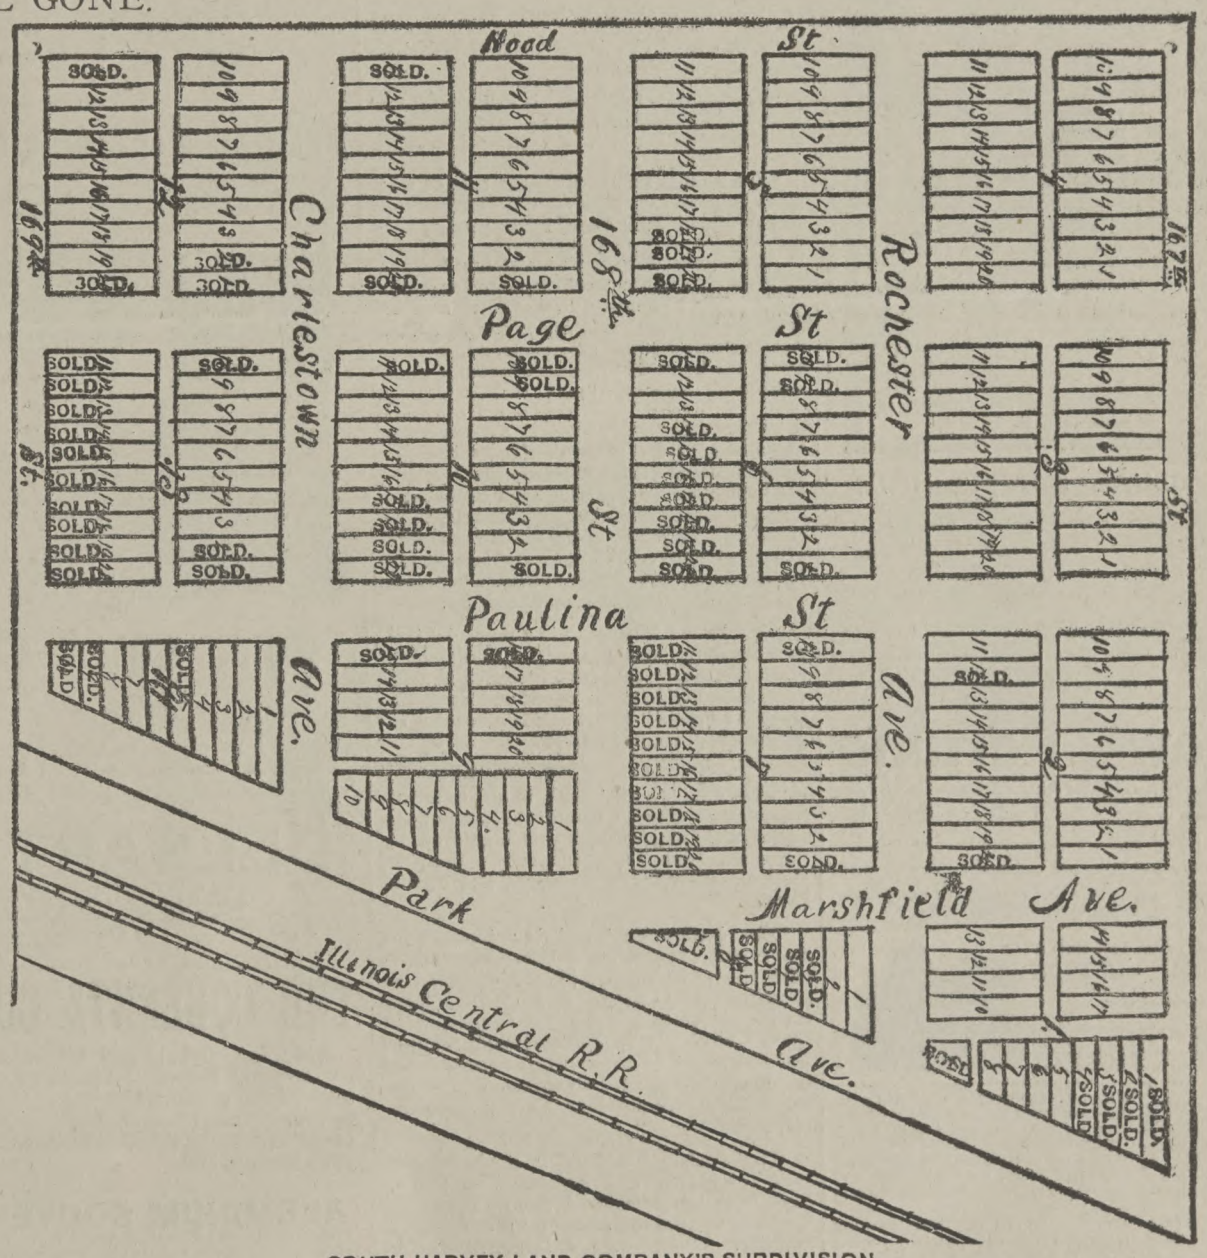
MRS. MARION HARLAND, Author of "Common Sense in the Household," the "Dinner Year Book," etc

Address correspondence and make Drafts, Checks and Money Orders payable to

WOMAN'S COLUMBIAN LAUNDRY COMPANY, 134-142 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

INVESTORS OF MODERATE MEANS

Can embrace the opportunity to make money at SOUTH HARVEY, as well as millionaires. Buy a lot and pay $10 per month on it. It will be increasing in value all the time, and by the time it is paid for you will have a valuable piece of property that may be the nucleus of a fortune. Act quick, BEFORE THE BEST CHANCES ARE ALL GONE.



SOUTH HARVEY LAND COMPANY'S SUBDIVISION.

THERE NEVER WAS A BETTER TIME THAN NOW, while lots are cheap and choice locations near the depot are still to be had.

CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS are wanted to help build the town, and can find steady work. The immense manufactories at Harvey employ thousands of hands. It is only a three-minute ride and a 5 ct. fare from SOUTH HARVEY to these factories. Opportunities are great here, and the wise will embrace them.

Choice inside residence lots 27 ft. front can still be had for only $250; corner lots $300 on monthly payments of $10 per month. Select one or more of the best unsold lots from the accompanying plat, and remit $10 for each lot selected, and the proper papers will be mailed you at once. You can then pay $10 per lot per month until paid for. Send at once before some one else gets the lots you want.

Title perfect. Abstract and Guarantee Certificate of title with every deed. Address

CHARLES G. FRENCH, 185 Dearborn St., Chicago, or HARVEY, ILL.

BE SURE "GOOD SENSE" is stamped on your waist, there are many imitations but no equals

SENSIBLE WOMEN
all want FERRIS'
GOOD SENSE
CORSET WAISTS.
Best for Health, Economy and Beauty
BUTTONS at front instead of CLASPS.
Clamp Buckle at hip for Hose supporters.
Tape-fastened Buttons—won't pull off.
Cord-Edge Button Holes—wont wear out.
FIT ALL AGES—Infants to Adults, Short and long waist.
Made in FAST BLACK, drab and white.
Send for circular.
FERRIS BROS.
Manufr's and Patentees.
341 Broadway, N. Y.
MARSHALL FIELD & CO., Chicago, Wholesale Western Agents.
For Sale by ALL LEADING RETAILERS.

AGENTS FOR ALL WHO WANT TO BUILD
Our new book of 172 pages, 8½ x11 inches The "Cottage Souvenir," containing a great variety of Designs & Plans of Artistic Dwellings
costing from $500 to $10,000.
The Beauty and Completeness of these Designs, combining so many new features, has given this book a wonderful sale, and hundreds of Beautiful Homes are being built in all parts of our land from its designs. Price $2. Send for prospectus and sample pages, FREE.
GEO. F. BARBER & CO., Architects,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION.
A SAMPLE BOX of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S
Tissue Builder
for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romans was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N.J.

How TO MAKE A Fortune
WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser; patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen to whom we give EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new, will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO., 134 Hermon Street, Worcester, Mass.

IMPROVED HALL TYPEWRITER.
The best and most simple machine made. Interchangeable Type into all languages. Durable, easiest running, rapid as any. Endorsed by the Clergy and literary people. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Agents wanted. Address N. Typewriter Co., 611 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

Wherever the Rocker Washer is used the washboard becomes a relic of barbarism. It is warranted to do an ordinary family washing of 100 pieces in an hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for description and price. Rocker Washer Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind. Agts. wanted

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

AGENTS WANTED ON SALARY or COMMISSION, to handle the New Patent Chemical Ink Erasing Pencil. Agents making $50 per week. Monroe Eraser Mf'g Co. x 213 LaCrosse, Wis.

Fat People You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials Free. F. B. Clarke, M. D. Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

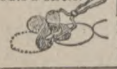
Cuts a Circle.



No Good Kitchen complete without a Chicago Rotary Biscuit and Cake Cutter, they sell at sight. AGENTS WANTED. Sample mailed for 15c. Columbia Specialty Mfg. Co., 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.

AGENT made $71 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

BEATTY Piano. Organ, $23 up. Want agents. Cat. free. Dan'l F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N. J.

Publisher's Notes.

THE JUNIOR PARTNERS.

BY ABEL M. RAWSON

is now ready

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

This is an opportunity which should be improved. The book is entirely different from any heretofore on the market, and will be in greater demand because it will be enjoyed by business men as well as by their families. Not many books are written which appeal to business men as this does. Those who have read it voluntarily testify to its merits in this direction. A prominent and wealthy business man of this city who employs wishes to place it in the hands of each one that they may be benefited by its teachings. This is valuable indorsement. It will be of especial help to young men just starting in business life—employer and employed, as showing where the shoals lie upon which they may make shipwreck.

Hundreds of Men

The influence of home life is also portrayed with power, and that of a noble-minded daughter, in restraining destructive tendencies is outlined in detail in the course of the narrative. The fallacy of the belief "I can use it or let it alone" is fully exposed. The circulation and reading of this book will be a blessing to thousands.

Testimonials.

Here are a few testimonials from leading journalists in different cities.

Read What They Say.

"The Junior Partners" is a thunderbolt against rum.—New York Sun.

"The Junior Partners" is a transcript of real life, and full of interest.—The Inquirer, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The Junior Partners" is the title of a remarkably strong and realistic temperance story.—Daily Free Press, Burlington, Vt.

"The Junior Partners" is a strong temperance story, and the world is none too full of them. The argument is that intemperance is an hereditary disease, and is curable. This is often true in both assertions, and a perusal of the book will do many persons good. —Evening Journal, Albany, N. Y.

"The Junior Partners" is a temperance argument. How many we have had, yet none similar to this. The descriptive powers of the author are of a high order, a delirium tremens scene being unusually powerfully drawn. The book can be classed as a well written and interesting temperance lecture, equally well printed and illustrated. —The Sunday Item, Philadelphia, Pa.

"The Junior Partners" is a powerful temperance story, and has for its fundamental truth the theory that intemperance is a disease, inherited in many cases, and should be treated as such. The book is a strong argument for prohibition.—The Denver Times, Denver, Col.

"The Junior Partners" is an excellent temperance story, written to illustrate the social and mental perils encountered by those who dally with the subtle tempter, alcohol.—Burlington Hawkeye, Burlington, Iowa.

"The Junior Partners" is a temperance story out of the usual line. Interwoven with the story itself, which is designed to show that alcoholic thirst is an hereditary mania, are powerful arguments against the use of alcoholic stimulants which cannot fail to appeal to those who are interested in the suppression of the great evil of intemperance.—Manchester Union, Manchester, N. H.

"The Junior Partners" is a temperance story of ability and power. The author deals with the social and mental perils attending the use of alcohol in a startling manner. The book is a large, illustrated volume, and is cordially recommended to the attention of our readers.—Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

Reviewers pronounce "The Junior Partners" one of the best stories ever written.—Dallas Morning News, Dallas, Texas.

"The Junior Partners" is one of the best temperance works ever published. If you want a copy it will give you a delightful surprise.—Daily Journal, Phillipsburg, Pa.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE.

If you want to make money, send for our special terms circular.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

SOUTH WAUKEGAN

The Ideal Manufacturing Town

Combines: First, Unrivaled shipping facilities for factories.
Second, Land of rare beauty for homes.

South Waukegan and Waukegan are the Northern Terminus of Chicago's Outer Belt Railway which swings way around Chicago.

South Waukegan, thus, can get Chicago rates for freight on 22 trunk lines of railroad, which center in Chicago.

The Mammoth WASHBURN & MOEN Plant is now in operation.

The LANYON ZINC OXIDE & PAINT CO., and MORROW BROS. are busy constructing their new plants.

The WOODBRIDGE PROPERTY lies right next to the Washburn & Moen land, and is thus in the very center of the development.

The NICHOLS CHEMICAL CO. have secured about forty acres for their immense works, south of Morrow Bros. Many other industries are seeking sites in South Waukegan.

Every new industry that locates in SOUTH WAUKEGAN adds value peculiarly to the Woodbridge property.

It is the verdict of very conservative real estate men, that the Woodbridge lots are VERY CHEAP Corresponding lots in other well-known temperance towns would cost the purchaser several times the price charged for the Woodbridge lots.

The Washburn & Moen plant, alone, at South Waukegan,

EMPLOYS MORE MEN

than all the factories combined at the most widely-advertised temperance town in the United States.

The Washburn & Moen plant is erected upon the old summer home of Mr. Elisha S. Wadsworth, the brother-in-law of Mr. John Woodbridge, one of the owners of the Woodbridge tract.

The Woodbridge land lies right next to the Wadsworth property. The Woodbridge deeds contain the

CLAUSE PROHIBITING THE SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR.

The prices of the lots will be advanced from time to time.

We prefer greatly to have you see the property before you buy. But if it is inconvenient for you to come to Chicago, write us, and we will select a lot for you. Send for price list, map, and other information

J. B. MESNY, CHARLES WEINLAND, } Agts. (Tel. Main, 992.) Room 26, 94 Washington St., CHICAGO, ILL.

CLARENCE E. SMITH, Agt., Masonic Block, Waukegan, Ills.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE

Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents. F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co. 134 Van Buren St. Chicago, Ill.

FREE.

Our large 24-page Catalogue, profusely illustrated, full of information on the proper construction of Pianos and Organs. We ship on test trial, ask no cash in advance, sell on instalments, give greater value for the money than any other manufacturer. Send for this book at once to

BEETHOVEN ORGAN CO.,
WASHINGTON, N. J.
P. O. Box 701.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.
Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE COBLENTZ CURE

Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish. St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL in your own home. First class Sewing Machines shipped anywhere to anyone at wholesale prices. All latest improvements. Warranted five years. Complete set of attachments FREE. Send for catalogue. Standard Singer Machines, $9.50 to $15.50 $50 Arlington Sewing Machine for $19.50 $60 Kenwood Sewing Machine for $23.50
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 160 W. Van Buren St. B 26 Chicago.

SEWING MACHINES Our List Prices are about ONE-HALF those of any other manufacturer of Sewing Machines. We will cut these prices IN TWO to INTRODUCE them. We have the newest and best. LIST FREE. AMERICAN MACHINE COMPANY, Chicago.

HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES. Agents Wanted. Catalogue free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order. American Desk & Seating Co. 270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

HOTEL FREDONIA WASHINGTON, D. C. H Street, between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET, HOMELIKE AND STRICTLY TEMPERANCE. G. H. LA FETRA, Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New Articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SON, 28 Bond St., N. Y.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. O. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists. McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

BORSCH-OPTICIAN 103 E. ADAMS ST. CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Wall Paper Retailed. Good Paper 8c Gold Paper 5c. Send 10c for postage on samples, and his guide "How to Paper" will be sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED Women to take Crochet work to do at home. Steady work. Write for particulars. L. WHITE & CO., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.

GUARANTEED CURE

OR NO PAY.

Nothing Fairer Than This.

When we say cure, we do not mean simply to stop it for the time being, but a

PERMANENT AND POSITIVE CURE

for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Impure Blood, and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver. Write for Treatise, Testimonials and Free Sample Bottle of

DR. ROC'S LIVER, RHEUMATIC and NEURALGIA CURE, to

CULLEN & NEWMAN,

143 GAY ST., Knoxville, Tenn.

Habit causes one to continue the use of an article, although inferior, rather than change to a superior which is new. It is a bad habit that causes one to cling to an inferior article when in

Manitou

Table Water

he can get a better for the same money. We ask all those who desire a pure, healthy, pleasant and highly effervescent table water to try Manitou, and one trial will convince you it is far superior to all others.

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use. Packed in cases of

50	24
Quarts.	Quarts.

Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer. Address

Manitou Mineral Water Co., Manitou Springs, Colo.

Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

EDUCATIONAL.

FARMINGTON COLLEGE, West Farmington, Ohio. 62 years. Both sexes. Expenses very low. Four College Courses. Seven Departments. The Normal a specialty. Inducements to agents to secure students. Address REV. E. B. WEBSTER, A. M., President.

ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE of Philadelphia offers to pay board, tuition, and all necessary expenses in above college one year to the Boy or Girl who secures the largest club this year. 1 year's tuition (not board) to any Boy or Girl sending 100 new subs'rs.

MISS LYDIA J. NEWCOMB.
AUGUST SCHOOL.
Elocution. - Physical Culture.
SPRING LAKE, MICH.

Regular Course, 3 hrs. each day, 5 days in each week. Tuition, $35. Special courses, $5 for 20 lessons in large classes; $10 for 10 lessons in classes of 5; $20 for 10 private lessons. Lectures on Wednesdays. Send for Announcement to MISS NEWCOMB, or Dr. O. W. NEWELL, Spring Lake, Mich.

STUDENTS IN JENNINGS SEMINARY
will have special privileges at the
WORLD'S FAIR.
For information address
REV. C. C. LOVEJOY, A. M., Pres., Aurora, Ill.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE.

(Formerly Morgan Park) removed to Auburn Park. 18th year begins September 14th. New building. All departments. Ornamental branches taught by artists. Send for catalogue to JULIA H. THAYER, Auburn Park, Chicago, or 247 State Street, Chicago.

SHORTHAND Typewriting, Book-keeping & Penmanship thoroughly taught. Twelve teachers, 700 students, cheap board, and the finest Commercial College building in America. Graduates readily secure situations. Beautiful Illus. Catalogue free. Address D. L. MUSSELMAN, Principal. Gem City Business College, Quincy, Illinois.

MONTICELLO Opens September 24th. Full and superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal, Godfrey, Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE,
Nyack, N. Y. Both sexes. Thorough work; splendid results. An endowment takes Ladies at $200. Catalogues. W. H. BANNISTER, President.

THE CLAVERACK COLLEGE
And HUDSON RIVER INSTITUTE

For Boys and Girls, will open its 39th year September 19th. For catalogues, address REV. A. H. FLACK, A. M., Prest., Claverack, N. Y

TODD SEMINARY, a delightful home school for boys. 44th year. Send for circular to NOBLE HILL, Woodstock, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL.

Subscription Rates for 1892.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " not in advance	1.50
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15
Per 100 copies	1.00

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

FRUITS, AND HOW TO USE THEM.

This valuable book should be in every home at this season of the year when fruit is becoming so abundant. It is by one of our best white-ribbon workers, Mrs. Hester M. Poole. It is a book of 242 pages of exceedingly valuable suggestions and recipes for the use and care of fruits, showing the best results to be obtained from the use of the same. The opening chapter is on Fruit as Food, followed by one on the Hygienic Value of Fruit, on the Increase of the Use of Fruit, and on the Relation of Fruit and Temperance. One dollar could not be invested to better advantage, especially at this season of the year. It should be in every home in the country. From the preface we quote:

"It is frequently the case that the housekeeper who is blessed with a superabundance of apples, peaches, pears or dates finds her household cloying upon two or three modes in which they are usually served. Recipes for a dozen new dishes to be made out of the same fruit are then an acquisition, the value of which only a housekeeper can justly estimate."

The object of the compilation is to supply recipes for "a greater variety of dishes in which fruit enters as an ingredient, that are at once easily made, appetizing and wholesome."

As before stated it contains 242 pages and is bound in cloth. Price, $1. Secure a copy at once. Send to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

A DEFENSE OF THE JERICHO ROBBERS.

Do you want a pleasing satire?

Do you want an argument which is not in the form of an argument against high license?

Do you want the attitude of license men toward the liquor traffic portrayed with power?

Then send for

A Defense of the Jericho Robbers

and learn how the types of the saloon men of to-day were defended before the court of the Sanhedrim. How the parties to the cause, Achan Sneakthief, Ishmael Bacchus, Cain Adam, Haman Hangman, Demetrius Silversmith, Herman Gambrinus, Isaac Longface, Simon Barabbas, Democritus Balaam, Ahab Dives, Esau Soddom, Simon Magus, and Levi Priest argued the case, and a committee was appointed to report a plan of action and a bill was framed entitled:

An Act to legalize and regulate the business of stealing, robbing and murdering between Jerusalem and Jericho.

It will do much good wherever read.

Price 20 cents.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

YOU NEED.

To be equipped for work you need the following supplies—so Miss Willard says:

Questions Answered	25c.
School of Methods Manual	25c.
Y Manual	25c.
Helping Hand	10c.

Send for these to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE HANDY MANUAL.

This little book of 440 pages is a perfect encyclopedia of information. It answers almost every question that you might ask, whether of law, history or concerning mercantile business or farm interests. Social matters have due attention. It also contains fifty maps. The price of this manual has been 50c. We will send it to any address for 25c.

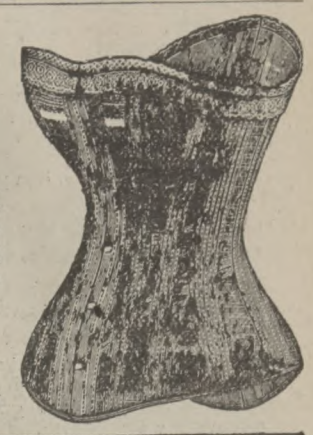
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE

JACKSON CORSET CO.,

The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.

RETAIL PRICE $1.00.



The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.

Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.

Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.

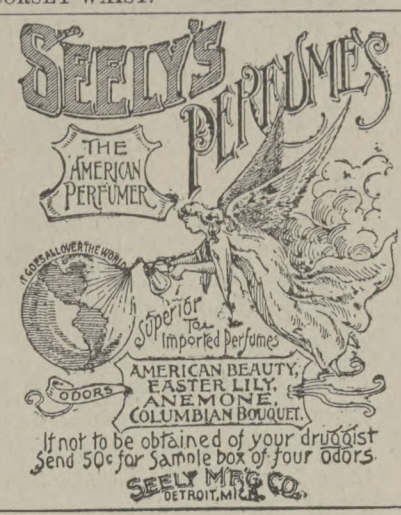
The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.



Hay-Fever Sufferers

Should read our new 112-page book on the treatment and cure of Hay-Fever and Asthma. Sent free on application.

"I have been a sufferer from Hay-Fever and Asthma from birth—26 years. I have tried all remedies that came to my notice without permanent relief. I am pleased to say that your medicines certainly cured me to stay cured.
W. L. WEDGER, Roslindale, Boston, Mass."

P. Harold Hayes, M. D.,
716 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y

TOKOLOGY A COMPLETE LADIES' GUIDE IN HEALTH AND DISEASE.

A mother writes: "We have a TOKOLOGY baby two months old. She came before the nurse could get in from the next room. We did not have a doctor in the house. I never get along so well before, and this is our tenth baby." Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago

WALL PAPER. Good Paper, 3c. Gold Paper, 5c. Large package of beautiful samples and guide, "How to Paper," sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

DIAMOND DYES give the fastest, brightest handsomest colors, and make the old clothes look like new. They are the original and only reliable package dyes. Sample card free. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation. Send for Free Sample to 219 West 45th Street, New York City.

SPECIALTIES for AGENTS Ladies and Gents. Rubber Gloves & Dress Shields, Convertible Wire Baskets, Self Threading Needles, Handy Button, and many others. Catg. free. CHICAGO SPECIALTY CO. 134 VanBuren St. Chicago

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them. YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

BAKER'S COCOA.
ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

THE

Total Abstinence Life Association

OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.

Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.

SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

GIRLS! Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings? If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. Y. M. Association, 269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR

DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT

or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

LADIES' BICYCLES All makes, new or 2d hand at lowest prices; easy payments, no extra charge. Cata. Free. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St. Peoria, Ill.

It is No Trouble

for us to send you samples of Artistic Wall Paper. One hundred for eight cents. Prices, from five to fifty cents a roll.

A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St, Phila.

AGENTS wanted throughout New Jersey for those wonderful Christy Knives (Bread, Cake and Paring), ready sellers; large commissions. For particulars write New Jersey Agency Christy Knife Co., Room 514, Prudential Building, Newark, N. J

HOME BAKERIES EVERYWHERE

Do you want one in your town? Address

MACHINERY DEPT.,
THE WOMAN'S BAKING CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Signal Notes.

THIRTY-FIVE states have adopted ballot reform.

IN prohibition Maine, one person in four has a bank deposit.

THE Czar of Russia is the largest individual land owner in the world.

EVERY saloon in Ogdensburg, N. Y., closed the first Sunday after the advent of a Prohibition party mayor.

FIFTY fires in Hartford, six serious accidents in New York, deaths and disasters everywhere followed the gunpowder way of celebrating the Fourth.

THE Fourth of July in Boston was exempt from the law which closes the saloons on holidays. In consequence three hundred and ninety-seven arrests were made, three hundred and thirty-five for drunkenness.

LUTHER was not undecided on the question of drunkenness, for in one of his sermons he says: "Such as wilfully and publicly persist in this vice, and refuse to reform are not to be admitted to the Lord's Supper."

A NUMBER of the best Republicans in Massachusetts organized the Republican Temperance Guard. Its aim was to promote the cause of temperance. Their demands were very moderate, but they have hardly received common courtesy from the Republican legislature. Query.—Will the Guard disband or force a reply to their demands?

BISMARCK in celebrating his recent birthday said that he feared drinking was going more and more out of fashion, and on sipping a glass of Cognac remarked: "We northern nations require strong drink. Not until a German has poured a bottle of wine down his throat does he know his power." Surely the Iron Chancellor is growing rusty.

ON the Fourth of July Colorado Springs, Colorado, had a celebration with the least noise and the greatest significance of any thus far reported. Some months ago the only beer garden within a mile of the corporate limits was closed by the city council at the instigation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Good Templars. Suit for damages was instituted by the owner whereupon the council, through Mayor Sprague, bought the garden, poured out the beer, tore down the dancing stands and formally dedicated it as a cold water park. It consists of nine acres and costs eight thousand dollars, all donated. The feature of the day was the industrial parade. The orator was State Senator Eddy; the churches, Sunday schools and temperance speakers were largely represented.

IN arguing against the Direct Veto Bill, some one rashly challenges a comparison between the healthiness of drinkers and abstainers. The Registrar-General is authority for the statement that the highest rate of mortality among any class of men engaged in any regular branch of industry is found among persons engaged in the liquor trade. A table containing the comparative death rates of males engaged in one hundred occupations in England and Wales gives very convincing arguments. Men engaged as inn or hotel servants have the highest rate of mortality, clergymen, ministers and priests the lowest. Of persons engaged in the retail liquor trade, the death rate is four times that of the clergy between the ages of twenty-five and forty.

THAT was a good resolution adopted in the greatest of the Gulf States, recently: "Resolved, by the People's party of Mississippi, in convention assembled, June 22, 1892, That we are in full sympathy with the Prohibition movement in the United States, and recommend to the National Convention such action as they think will advance the temperance cause." THE State Ledger (Democrat) says: "State officials are wondering (and so are their friends) why the buzzards congregate on the capitol. For the past week a number of these protected scavengers have made their headquarters on the state house cupola." Commenting upon the Ledger, the temperance paper in Mississippi, The Leader, thus hits the nail, the buzzard and the dominant party of the South on the head. "The Leader thinks it can explain it: The buzzard is a bird of keen instinct, and ever since the People's party and Prohibitionists united in Mississippi they have foreseen that the Democratic party is about to collapse, and are hovering about the capitol waiting for its carcass."

False Economy

Is practiced by many people who buy inferior articles of food because cheaper than standard goods. Surely infants are entitled to the best food obtainable. It is a fact that the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant food. Your grocer and druggist keep it.

Mothers take more pride in the garments of the baby than in those of any other member of the household; dresses of sheer India linen, soft flannels, dainty woolen socks, cashmere shawls, afghans in bright colors, all are the most expensive that the family purse can afford. It is not necessary that they should be renewed frequently, as almost the only wear is in the washing.

Ordinary soaps and washing powders should never be used; they will weaken the fibre of light materials, causing them to tear easily or to wear into holes.

Professor Cornwall, of Princeton, says of the Ivory Soap: "It not will injure the most delicate fabrics."

COPYRIGHT 1892, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

THIS IS OUR LAST OFFER OF BONDS.

THEY WILL ALL BE SOLD BY AUGUST 1st.

If you wish to come and see the property or investigate our plans more fully or collect in your money with which to pay for bonds, write us at once enclosing a deposit, no matter how small, and we will reserve as many bonds as you wish for sixty days. Your deposit will be returned in case you are not satisfied after investigating. Our circular contains full information. Send for it.

Make Checks, Drafts and Money Orders Payable to

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE,

161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. R. A. EMMONS, Manager.

REFERENCES:—Commercial Loan and Trust Co., 115 La Salle St., Chicago; Total Abstinence Life Insurance Co., Royal Insurance Building, Chicago.

DRUNKARDS BY THE SCORE

are being completely cured at the National Bichloride of Gold Institute, Chicago. Many pronounce this the Grandest Work of the Age. You should know all about it. We will send you our Brochure, "A Glad Evangel," giving full particulars, if you will send your address. If you know of a drinking man it is your duty to write to us about him.

We have just paid a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent to our stockholders, although our work had only been established three months when the dividend was paid. There is not much stock remaining unsold.

THE NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD COMPANY,
19 to 21 Quincy St.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

TO EXCHANGE IN HARVEY

Central and well-improved lots, $450; new eight-roomed houses, $1,500; half in any good property time on balance. An old-established mortgage banking house of Chicago will give apprisals of any property upon receipt of $3.00. Write us for plats and printed matter.

M. M. BROWN, Chamber of Commerce, Room 1111. - CHICAGO, ILL.

RAMBLER BIGYCLES

PNEUMATIC or CUSHION TIRES

A LADY'S WHEEL SHOULD HAVE a SPRING FRAME

One of the "Signal's" Editors Rides a Rambler.

Catalogue "P" free.

GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO.
85 Madison St., Chicago.

174 Columbus Av. BOSTON. 1325 14th-st., N.W. WASHINGTON. Broadway & 57th. NEW YORK.

HALF RATES TO WASHINGTON VIA B. & O. R. R.

For the National Meet of the League of American Wheelmen at Washington, July 18 to 20, the Baltimore and Ohio railroad will sell excursion tickets at rate of one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be sold at offices of the company and offices of the principal roads of the West, July 16 and 17, and will be valid for return journey until July 24. Bicycles of passengers will be carried free of charge. The Baltimore and Ohio has been designated as the official route to the Meet by the officials of League of American Wheelmen.

For full information as to time of trains and rates of fare, apply to L. S. Allen, Ass't Gen'l Pass. Agent, The Rookery, Chicago. Upon application, Chas. O. Scull, Gen. Pass. Agent, Baltimore, Md., will send free of charge, a handsomely Illustrated Guide to Washington.

TWO HARVEST EXCURSIONS — HALF RATES TO THE WEST.

August 30th and September 28th.

On these dates the BURLINGTON ROUTE will sell tickets from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis to the farming districts of Nebraska, Colorado and Northern Kansas. Half rates will apply, and tickets will be good for twenty days. Nebraska in one year produced three hundred million bushels of corn, besides other grain, fruit and live stock. Write for free pamphlets, maps, etc., to P. S. Eustis, G. P. A., Burlington Route, Chicago, Ill.

Attention is called to South Harvey in our advertising columns. Mr. French is offering choice property there at very reason able prices. That whole section is bound to increase in value very rapidly. South Harvey is high, and the drainage is therefore excellent. The manufactories are being extended south from Chicago along the line of the Illinois Central R. R., and it is only a question of time when there will be manufactories at South Harvey.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, August 4, 1892. Number 31.

Lesbia D Herrick 2419 19th st

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Mr. Gladstone has recovered from his late illness.

The Homestead, Pa., strike and riot have already incurred an expense of over a million dollars.

The four hundred non-union men at work in the Homestead mills held divine services in the mills on Sunday.

Silver has almost collapsed on the London bourse, being quoted at one-sixteenth of the lowest rate on record.

The secretary of the Carnegie company states that the mills will be running their full capacity by the last of this week.

It has been decided to use tricycles operated by electricity at the World's Fair grounds, for the convenience of visitors.

Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer has finally accepted the position of Advisory Dean of the woman's department of the Chicago university.

The Althrop library, comprising 50,000 rare volumes, has been sold to an Englishman who will generously share it with the general public.

Ex-Governor St. John supported the Prohibition, Governor McKinley the Republican, and W. C. Warner the Democratic party at Monona Lake Assembly on Friday last.

The corner-stone of Willard Cottage, Rest Island, Minnesota, was laid July 25, by Mrs. Elizabeth Greer Hibben, of Peoria, Illinois, who was Miss Willard's successor as president of the state's union, and one of the truest and best women that the white-ribboners have in the great prairie commonwealth. One thousand two hundred and fifty dollars was raised to remove the indebtedness from the cottage.

THE World's Petition was adopted without a dissenting voice by the Baptist Young People's Union, which includes several hundred thousand bright and brainy patriots in the dew of their youth. We may thank Mrs. Lillian Hollister, president of Detroit W. C. T. U., and Dr. J. B. Cranfill, with others good and true who aided them to do this strong stroke of work for the great cause.

THE question is asked if the editors of this paper indorse the nationalizing of the liquor traffic. No, they do not and never have. They have been and are willing to hear what can be said on the subject and to believe that the motives of good men who have urged this method are sincere, also that in some countries and at some times the system may have been measurably helpful, but THE UNION SIGNAL stands uncompromisingly for the prohibition, abolition and annihilation of the liquor traffic! If this is not explicit we will try to make our position clear some other time when the thermometer is less ferocious.

AT THE recent Republican State Convention in Kansas Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Laura M. Johns, Amanda Way, Mother Bickerdyke and other leading ladies were invited to seats on the floor of the convention. This was a significant innovation, and was made without objection. The ladies were present for the purpose of asking for a woman's suffrage plank in the Republican platform; a motion was made to hear Miss Anthony, and she was conducted to the speaker's stand, where a sight was beheld that has never occurred in any state convention before, except that of Massachusetts, namely, a woman addressing a Republican state convention. Miss Anthony spoke in her usual strong, frank, kindly way. Subsequently a hearing was accorded to the committee of ladies by the platform committee, and when the platform was given to the convention it contained the following clause: "We favor the submission to the vote of the people and an amendment to the constitution eliminating the disqualification of sex in the enjoyment of the elective franchise." The vote on this was 455 in favor and 267 against, which was received with shouts that seemed to raise the rafters.

BY latest accounts Gladstone will have a majority of forty-two. Speculation is rife about his ministry, to which Harcourt, Morley, Trevelyan, Lords Roseberry and Ripon will probably belong. We grieve to say that Dilke was elected to Parliament, but Gladstone will hardly defy the Non-conformists by making him a member of his cabinet. Press telegrams state that Arnold Morley and Cyril Flower will receive peerages. Herbert Gladstone, speaking at Hawarden, declares that the home rule bill must first be passed, and that the temperance bill, giving the people a direct veto, would come next. The new House will have 167 members pledged to a direct vote for Sunday saloon closing—the strongest temperance party that Parliament has ever seen.

THE Chicago Times comes out with the frank statement that the receipts of the twenty-six Sundays of the Fair would no doubt foot up seven million dollars, "as preparations have been under way for some time for the running of monstrous Sunday excursions, and it might be expected that with the immense turnout of Chicago wage-workers, the Sunday attendance would be swollen to four hundred thousand people." President Baker, who is at the head of the World's Fair Commission, says: "We have invited foreigners here and they will not stand any blue-law regulations." It is well that the moral sentiment of the country at large is at a higher level than is evinced by the Chicago press and some of the managers of the World's Fair.

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, recording secretary of the National and secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., is a prophet who is honored in her own country. She is to supply the pulpit of the Congregational church, to which she belongs, in Ravenna, O., during the pastor's absence throughout the month of August. Mrs. Woodbridge has just returned from an important trip to Colorado, where her presence and power on the platform and in private counsel have been most helpful to the work in that vigorous young state which we are to visit in October, when our National W. C. T. U. convenes. She has also spoken and preached at Lake Bluff at the white ribbon convocation, Miss Esther Pugh, president, which is declared to have been the best thus far held on that historic ground.

THE Denver white ribboners, who are planning to entertain our next National Convention, write that its necessary postponement of one week from the date originally proposed will not interfere with delightful trips to the mountains after the convention to view the wondrous handiwork of God in their state of lofty altitudes. They say that as a rule Colorado weather is fine until Christmas and that the chances are good for such weather, so that enjoyable excursions to Manitou, Rainbow Falls, Garden of the Gods, Cheyenne Canyon, and through the Royal Gorge can be made by our delegates. Let us do all we can to work up excursions, and induce a large attendance of visitors who will accompany the various state delegations. Write Miss Mary G. Hay, Headquarters W. C. T. U., Indianapolis, Ind., about railroad rates.

WE should be glad to know how the opening of the Fair would benefit Chicago's 50,000 workingmen. If it were open, what good would come to the men employed, who would have to work seven days in the week? Who makes the demand for seven days' work in the week? It is the capitalist and the monopolist, who, because they have put money into the Exposition, want the Sunday gate money to swell the receipts of the Exposition. The American workingmen would do well to beware of the opening wedge for seven days' work. They, of all others, have the most to fear, if this should come to pass. The sympathy of the rich is not manifested for them in very practical ways; their true friends are the reformers, philanthropists and earnest Christian people of the middle class, whose names are almost without exception on the petitions for Sunday closing.

"WERE one of the parties to declare in favor of theft and the other of honesty, he would be a poltroon in the pulpit who for fear of the pews should remain silent, or side with the party committed to the theft. Were either of the parties fully, unequivocally and everywhere for prohibition, and the other as fully to license, men had better quit the pulpit than remain in ing to take sides for the right." This is the langu leading pastor in a recent sermon; but, honored b there is a party that takes sides, and who shall say your argument does not apply with equal force agai those excellent ministers who do not side with the part that sides with the home?

IN the story entitled "Some Passages in the Practice of Dr. Martha Scarborough," to begin in our next issue, the Fair number, Mrs. Helen Campbell will give in familiar form the results of some of the latest investigations into the treatment of inebriety, with the practical experience of some of the most successful heads of inebriate asylums. While the story does not deal directly with institutions, it applies their skilled methods to the poor, and aims to demonstrate the possibilities bound up in the wholesome and savory preparation of food. More and more the wisest physicians rely upon diet, with fresh air, sunshine and natural methods for any radical cure of disease, and more and more it is plain that these are the only real curative agents. Where inherited tendency to inebriety is the case, it has been found by Dr. Crothers of Hartford, as well as Dr. Jackson, of Dansville, and his followers, perfectly possible to practically eradicate the poison, and all alike rely largely upon certain forms of food. So far as limited space allows, the short story will handle these and kindred matters, regarding them as vitally bound up with the whole question of temperance.

JOHN G. WOOLLEY said in his great speech before the Christian Endeavor Society: "Too long we have heard and preached and lived a dwarfish and a little gospel under stained glass, in artificial heat, making nosegays of personal experience. Too long we have kept the face of Jesus Christ, like an old ambrotype in limp morocco covers, to ornament withal our spiritual center tables; too long employed the church as an ambulance, and ourselves for 'stretcher' service, digging graves and bearing off the dead, while at the cradle of our citizenship, License, the courtesan, sits and rocks and sings her nameless lullaby. Ask the motherhood of New York where it wants protection. It will answer: 'We want it where our sons are.' Where are the sons of New York? In the saloons. The same Congress that refuses even to consider the ravages of the liquor traffic appropriates one hundred thousand dollars a year to investigate hog cholera. One hundred thousand dollars outlay to save swine from infection; one hundred million income to spread contagion in the way of boys. Gospel temperance is apoplectic with idle sentiment. I have seen the saloon jackals come yelping all along the ways to shred the fallen bodies, to shred the souls and bodies of men, and even while I watched their frantic flight and observed them on their way, I have seen the majestic lion of the law leap from his marble lair in the capitol and fell them with a blow of lethal velvet. It has happened many a time in this city of New York that a man has lain aside the linen apron of the bar for the ermine of the bench. The men who simply 'quit,' begin again; restrictive permission perpetuates the saloon piracy; and after one hundred years of negative reform the saloon is going to enter the twentieth century in triumph, dragging the church chained to its chariot wheels." The New York papers characterize Mr. Woolley's speech as a magnificent address. He and Mrs. Woolley are going to England in October, by invitation of Lady Henry Somerset. We assure our friends across the water that America's loss will be England's gain, and they must not keep our brilliant campaigner too long.

CONCERNING MOSQUITOES.

BY ANNA A. GORDON.

[Feelingly dedicated to their discounted bills.]

Skeeters have the reputation
Of continuous application
To their poisonous profession;
Never missing nightly session,
Wearing out your life's existence
By their practical persistence.

Would I had the power to veto
Bills of every mosquito;
Then I'd pass a peaceful summer,
With no small nocturnal hummer
Feasting on my circulation,
For his regular potation.

Oh, that rascally mosquito!
He's a fellow you must see to;
Which you can't do if you're napping,
But must evermore be slapping
Quite promiscuous on your features;
For you'll seldom hit the creatures.

But the thing most aggravating
Is the cool and calculating
Way in which he tunes his harpstring
To the melody of sharp sting;
Then proceeds to serenade you,
And successfully evade you.

When a skeeter gets through stealing,
He sails upward to the ceiling,
Where he sits in deep reflection
How he perched on your complexion,
Filled with solid satisfaction
At result of his extraction.

Tiny form attenuated—
By my life blood stimulated—
Reckless in your perseverance,
Heedless of all interference,
You can yet command my favor
If you'll only bite my neighbor.

Evanston, Ill.

THE EXPOSITION—LAW OF THE SABBATH.

BY. MRS. J. C. BATEHAM.
Nat. Supt. Sabbath Observance.

Surely a song of praise wells up from all our hearts to Him who has heard the voices of our united prayers, and has moved Congress to close the gates of the Exposition on the Sabbath. To Him be all the praise.

Now is the time for the Christians of Chicago, the Sabbath and ministerial associations, the churches and the women, to plan wisely and largely for the gathered multitudes on the sacred day. Song services, gospel meetings and reform speaking in many a large tent or hall will, of course, be secured, additional to the usual church privileges. It should be made a day not only of rest but of benefit and enjoyment to the masses.

In reply to a recent article in THE UNION SIGNAL, I would suggest that while we all believe more light will yet be thrown on the subject of Sabbath employments, we must always take our stand where Jesus did and say: "It is written," whether it pleases us or not. A few points from my forthcoming Sabbath Observance Manual may help some just here.

In the command "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," the word holy signifies sacred, and refers, as I believe, not so much to the nature or object of the day or even to the mode of keeping, as to the completeness of the keeping. What, then, are the purposes for which the day is to be thus sacredly kept? The primal reason is pointed out by the first word, remember, which takes us back to the primeval Sabbath in Eden, where we find that man's creation was the last act of the sixth day, and at sundown the Sabbath commenced.

Man had not labored and needed no rest. They were to begin their married life with a sacred home day, to begin their week with a day of sacred leisure for the culture of mind and heart, and above all, to begin not only the week but their life with a worship day, and thereafter at intervals of seven days, were to sacredly set apart one entire day as a worship day, a home day, a day for the culture of the higher nature; and an incentive and an illustration of such higher use of the day is drawn from the example of God, who after six days (or eons) of creative work rested the next, not by inaction, but a change to the higher work in which He is still engaged, of maintaining and blessing His creation. "My Father worketh hitherto and I work," said Jesus of the Sabbath.

Having covered and guarded the positive side of Sabbath observance in the first clause of the fourth commandment, God next protects this sacred day for all time from the encroachments of greed, by making rest from labor compulsory upon all, and the law exceedingly strict, thus guarding the rights of the most helpless, since only by such rest can the body be fully restored to vigor, or laborers have sufficient time for the culture of mind and soul.

The sublime close of this wonderfully beneficent law announces that the day has been hallowed or consecrated by its maker, and made a perpetual blessing; referring back still to Genesis 2:3, where in almost the same words we are told, "God blessed the seventh day (man's first day) and hallowed it," which can mean nothing but a command to hallow or keep sacred the day that thus kept was full of blessing. Both laws are designed for all the race.

Law, human and divine, holds a man responsible for what he does through his agents, and we are not allowed to suffer our "manservants" who keep the liveries, deliver the ice, or the morning paper, or handle the cars, or the mails to labor for us, and we do, and are responsible if we patronize them on the Sabbath. Jesus, its maker and Lord, says it was made for man's benefit, and excepts from the scope of the law only work of necessity, mercy and religion, and we must not stretch these exceptions unnecessarily, lest laborers be defrauded. Being careful that we do not break the rest law for any, let us be equally careful that we keep the first clause and use the day as one of blessed liberty for its higher purposes.

It is preëminently the worship day, and this should always be provided for; it is the home day, yet many have no homes, and need that mothers with no little ones about them to train on the Sabbath should open their hearts to make the whole world homelike, and mother some stranger boy in the blessed hours and show him the beauty of a Christian Sabbath where both sides of the law are guarded.

It is the home day; yet multitudes have no grounds in which to walk, and no home comfort only the stifling air of a close tenement, with brawls instead of music for the children; for such, the freshness and quiet of some park near at hand is a boon from heaven. But while granting and taking gospel liberty along these lines let us not therefore favor excursions or other forms of dissipation or amusement, remembering, first, that these almost without exception violate the fundamental maxim that the law of rest and right to rest is upon all, and we have no right to deprive any one of his right to a rest day except for sickness or other necessity; second, that it is the dictate of experience as well as a Bible truth, that in order to make "the Sabbath a delight, and the holy of the Lord honorable," we must forsake our own "pleasure, words and ways," meaning thereby such occupations and conversation as pertain to the secular life and are not helpful for the threefold purpose of the Sabbath.

May we realize the blessings bound up in this commandment, and may the Holy Spirit "incline" all "our hearts to keep this law."

Asheville, N. C.

THE WORLD ABROAD, OR TEMPERANCE NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.
Author of "Physical Education," "The Bible of Nature," "International Health Studies," etc.

A TEMPERANCE COLONY.

A few months ago a number of Mormon commissioners managed to get the permission of the Mexican government to establish a settlement in the state of Chihuahua, ostensibly for the sake of the genial climate, but incidentally, perhaps, with a view of providing for the possibility of a national exodus. California newspapers now report an interview with a Mexican statesman whose attention had been called to the risk of encouraging immigration from the land of Latter Day Saints. "We have considered all those emergencies," said the frank politician, "and the risk seems greatly preferable to an invasion of Chinese or East European paupers. Those settlers from Utah are thrifty and industrious enough to turn deserts into gardens, and above all, they are the soberest people on earth. We would prefer angels if we could get them, but a temperance colony is about the next best thing." Public opinion, in the land of our next neighbors, has evidently changed since the time when the aborigines were denounced as barbarians for refusing to patronize the Spanish wine-shops.

RELIABLE WITNESSES.

In Bosnia, where the Turkish government is as unpopular as ever, Mohammedan witnesses are nevertheless in great request to decide conflicting evidence before a court of justice, the prejudice against their orthodox neighbors being founded on "spirituous, rather than spiritual considerations," as a German traveler expresses it.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

The charity commissioners in the famine districts of eastern Russia report that many families have established domestic stills to turn a portion of their bread-corn into alcohol, and that the spontaneous products of the wilderness (berries, for instance) are often abused for the same purpose. The cause is supposed to have something to do with the wretched quality of the available provisions and the desire to supplement the deficiency by strong "stimulants." "Narcotics" would be a more appropriate term, and the true explanation of the moral paradox can be found in the circumstance, that persons who have been taught to use alcohol as a specific for the little ailments of daily life will try to palliate serious afflictions in the same way, and without any hope of "stimulating" their ebbing energies, resort to brandy simply for the purpose of drowning their misery in the Lethe of stupefying drugs.

PAGAN ABSTAINERS.

A historian of "European Morals" holds that the fundamental conceptions of right and wrong have not varied nearly as much as the standard of morality prescribed by the ethics of the times. Temperance has not always been carried to the consistent outcome of prohibition, but its advantages over drunkenness have never been denied, and Prof. Jules Arnot in his work on the "Customs of the Celtic Druids," demonstrates that the priests of the ancient Gauls prided themselves on the strictness of their abstinence from intoxicating beverages. The chiefs of the ancient Arabs, too, were distinguished for their sobriety long before the time of Mohammed, and the followers of Pythagoras practiced total abstinence at a time when the temples of Bacchus were found all along the south shore of the Mediterranean.

EXHILARATING.

In a suburb of Groningen, in North Holland, a gang of street Arabs recently rummaged a country wagon while the proprietor was treating a friend in a neighboring coffee-house. One of the youngsters happened to see a pile of fodder covered with an old overcoat, and after removing an armful of straw discovered a keg of Schiedam Schnapps, the same liquor which our importers of foreign high wines describe as a "strengthening and exhilarating beverage." Not one of the little marauders was more than twelve years old, but their leader managed to procure a wheelbarrow that enabled them to trundle the keg out of town and along the towpath of an old canal, where they turned into a side trail and lifted their prize over the fence of an out-of-the-way pasture. Here they encamped under a shade tree and agreed to devote the afternoon to the pleasure of exhilaration. After an hour and a half the prescription began to work, and the members of the symposium fell like Baresarks upon a flock of sheep at the other end of the pasture, ripping and stabbing away with their pocket knives till the result would have kept their parents in mutton for the rest of the year. In the dispute for the prize of bravery, the young heroes, however, proceeded from words to blows, and at last to knives. Two of the younger combatants were slashed in a horrible manner, two others got drowned in the attempt to escape across the canal, and one of the victors has since died from an overdose of alcohol.

A DIRE ALTERNATIVE.

A tribe of Araucanos, or roving Indians, on the southern borders of Chili, recently cut off the ears of a peddler whom they caught selling brandy to their squaws. They had left him the option of swallowing a gallon of his own liquor, but he appears to have preferred the less deadly alternative.

THE BEER HABIT.

Statistics from northern and central Europe have repeatedly been quoted for the purpose of proving that the craving for alcoholic drinks threatens to assume the form of an epidemic, and that the stimulant habit among millions of our fellowmen has acquired the force of a second nature. But the strongest proof of that fact is incidentally furnished by a pamphlet intended to demonstrate the ruinous tendency of overtaxation (as a consequence of the enormous expenditure for standing armies, etc). Circulars had been addressed to German mechanics of all classes, asking them to state the cost of living and rate of wages in their neighborhood, and the classified result has now been published by the committee of a leading labor organization. From that pamphlet it would appear that a plurality of such mechanics as masons, bricklayers and house carpenters earn less than one thousand marks (about $200) a year, and have to limit their household expenses to the absolute necessaries of life, but among those necessaries a considerable number of the respondents continue to include beer. Thus one laborer, from Erlangen, in the Kingdom of Bavaria, states that his total earnings as foreman of a quarry are 950 marks a year, the aggregate added by his wife and children picking up odd jobs at washing, errand-running, etc., about 100 marks more. Their house rent does not exceed 150 marks; clothing and shoes, 80; food, 750 marks (about $150 dollars a year, for a family of five), taxes and contributions 40 marks; but the same family admit to be spending 120 marks for beer—while evidently cruelly stinting themselves in food and clothing, for the prices of both are almost as high in Bavaria as in Illinois. And, moreover, that pamphlet is avowedly published for the purpose of demonstrating that with the utmost possible economy it is hard to make both ends meet under the present system of taxation.

ALCOHOLIZED NATIONS.

Scandinavia is gradually beginning to recover the political prestige which the forefathers of the modern Swedes claimed for nearly three hundred years, culminating during the Thirty Years' War, when the victories of Gustavus Adolphus decided the fate of Northern Europe. A century after the battle of Lützen, Sweden was still a match for any comer, but from that time the star of her glory began to decline, and it is a remarkable fact that the era of the most complete eclipse coincides with the period when the maximum of intemperance was represented by the monstrous total of 52,000 distilleries to a population of less than four millions. The Gothenburg system is at best a compromise, but its union with numerous active temperance societies has, after all, begun to regenerate a nation which, like the Indian of Hudson Bay territory, was for a time exposed to the peril of actually perishing in a deluge of alcohol.

FEVERS AND ABSTINENCE.

The rumors about the death of Emin Pasha have been refuted by a dispatch from Zanzibar, where a companion of the indefatigable explorer reports his safe arrival at Wadelai after a desperate march through a district afflicted with famine and small-pox. Fortune favors the brave, but the almost miraculous escapes of the white Pasha have a good deal to do with the fact that he makes it a rule to subsist on a minimum of non-stimulating food and drink during the warm season, as well as during every expedition involving unusual perils and fatigues.

(To be continued.)

WOMEN IN THE PSYCHIC SCIENCE CONGRESS.

[We print this contribution from a member of the committee.]

Among the many congresses projected by the World's Congress Auxiliary there is one which enjoys the unique distinction of having women as well as men among its councilors. Most of the congresses have their corresponding organizations in the Woman's Branch of the Auxiliary, and their counterpart councils and committees. But as no psychical science was projected in the Woman's Branch of the Auxiliary, it at once became an important consideration with the executive committee of the Psychical Congress to secure the friendly support and active coöperation of women. This committee consists of Col. John C. Bundy, chairman; Prof. Elliott Cones, vice chairman; Lyman J. Gage, Ernest E. Crepin, Rev. Dr. H. W. Thomas, A. Reeves Jackson, M. D., J. H. McVicker, D. Harry Hammer, and D. H. Lamberson. As one of the first moves the committee had for its object the formation of an advisory council, to consist of many of the leading psychical researchers of the world, and other individuals prominently interested in, if not identified with the great movement now on foot to place psychical science on a solid and enduring footing. By resolution of the committee of last March, Dr. Cones was requested and authorized to undertake the necessary correspondence, and has since written hundreds of letters to all parts of the world. With the full approbation of President Bonney, and the hearty concurrence of the whole committee in the views of the chairman and vice-chairman, it was determined the advisory council of the Psychical Science Congress should be formed with regard to a full and fair representation by women.

Realizing also that a one-sexed Psychical Congress would be an absurdity as well as an inexpediency, the committee has taken a step beyond its action in the formation of the council, by including women in the list of those who are invited to address the Congress in open meeting. Realizing further the intimate and necessary bearing of psychical science upon questions of religion, of sociology and of general reform, the committee sent its first invitations to Miss Willard and Lady Somerset, both of whom responded with great good-will, and the expression of every desire to assist the committee in the difficult and somewhat delicate undertaking. Many names scarcely less distinguished have since been placed on the roll of councilors of this congress, with results that already demonstrate the wisdom and the propriety of the committee's action in this respect.

Nothing that is true in any department of religious thought and feeling can be affected except for good by demonstrating its truth scientifically. It is well to believe some things not yet scientifically proven; but it can never be ill to exchange faith for knowledge wherever possible. That is a distinct advantage to every thoughtful soul; and many a doubting soul is helped by assuring its hopes. And some evidence of the truth of those "eternal" things which are ordinarily "unseen," is precisely the aid and countenance which psychical science feels competent to give to religious faith. It is therefore by no means an ally to be rejected, or a weapon to be repressed, by those whose convictions are most heartfelt and sincere. It is rather to be welcomed and made useful.

Apart from any question of religion, the great world is not, after all, so callous and indifferent to spiritual stimulus as the surface indications might lead one to suppose. Its thick skin is full of cracks through which the inner light may be seen shining by those who have eyes to see—through which, too, the light of the world's oversoul, "that was never on land or sea" may enter and irradiate one's inmost life. In the present state of spiritual development few things are more remarkable than the interest, nay, the avidity, shown by numberless apparently indifferent or preoccupied persons in every walk of life, when the subject of psychical research comes up. The fact that some of the problems are deep and dark does not prove that they are insoluble by scientific methods of investigation; and even if they be so, the occult and the mysterious, like the marvelous and the miraculous, have, by a known law of human nature, their irresistible charms for many persons of many minds. In developing their plans and purposes for this congress and seeking the best methods of accomplishing practical good results, the committee has been gratified if not surprised to discover what "a man to conjure with" is the very name of "psychics," what a "divining-rod" is this official staff of councilors and collaborators.

At present writing it seems certain that the Psychical Science Congress will materialize in full form, and constitute one of the most remarkable of the many notable features of the World's Congress Auxiliary. On a later occasion we may go into details of the program. Our present object is simply to bring it to the attention of THE UNION SIGNAL readers and give an intimation of what may be confidently anticipated respecting its character, scope and probable result. It will cover the whole of the debatable land between the dogmas of orthodox religion and the dicta of orthodox science. It is not unreasonable to think that there must be a natural bond of union between all that is true, whether spiritually or materially; or to expect that the earnestly desiderated "missing link" may be found by psychical research. In that event, the "night-side of nature" may be turned to the light, and the light "that shineth in the darkness" become comprehensible.

Correspondence is invited from those of THE UNION SIGNAL readers who may be interested in the success of the congress. Letters may be addressed either to the chairman of the committee, Colonel John C. Bundy, Chicago, or to the vice-chairman, Dr. Elliott Cones, Washington, D. C.

NOT IDENTIFIED.

BY A. TOLMAN SMITH.

A summer day in the open country, in an upland valley teeming with harvests! Fields of grain stretching far up the hillsides, undulating in the light breeze, their golden crests lost in the dark foliage of forests which crown the rounded summits! Humble homes nestle mid the fields, and here and there rises a statelier mansion surrounded by pleasure grounds. Everywhere are signs of industry, of thrift, of plenty and of peaceful content intensified by the whir and whiz of passing trains. Through the valley runs a broad highway crossed by numerous roads that give a neighborly air to the populous region.

The railroads have absorbed the greater part of the traffic, but still loaded wains pass up and down the highway, mingled with the lighter dearborns of village market folks, the family carriages of wealthy landowners and the stylish turnouts of young gallants. Here also pass and repass fateful shadows of misery and unrest blown from the turmoil of distant cities, for this highway is well known to that nomadic host which has developed strangely in the midst of our settled population. Up and down the main roads go these incessant wanderers, easing their journeyings when they can by stolen rides, and breaking their fast at hospitable farm-houses, where a stranger is always welcome for the gossip he brings from the outer world. They wander upon various pretenses of seeking work, or finding friends, or without pretence, but for the most part with an air of idleness and aimlessness. They are in companies generally of two or three, separating often but soon reuniting, for, though drawn from widely distinct classes, there is among them an easy comradeship that replaces the ties from which they have drifted. Thus, in the disintegration of social life they have preserved its chief attraction.

Life reduced to elemental conditions effaces individual traits, hence these nomads, in dress, in gait, in expression, in the sum total of outward appearance, conform to a common type. It is the absence of this conformity which marks a wanderer who passes along this upland highway on this pleasant summer day; a wanderer like and yet strangely unlike the class to which he is unmistakably allied. His step is unsteady, he bears himself wearily, at times he falters, but still he pushes forward. His course is not aimless but determined by a fixed purpose plainly indicated in his intense, concentrated expression. This alone would attract attention were his face otherwise unnoticeable, which it is not. It is a face to be remembered, to become a haunting memory. It is a grave, wan face; despair and want have worked heavy lines into it, the thin mouth is drawn, the brow is furrowed, and dark curves under the eyes intensify their gloom and lustre. The gloom is not threatening, but sullen, and the lustre is a sign and foreboding such as comes into human eyes when the physical forces are far spent.

The face would have melted the heart of any woman, and won response to any appeal that the stranger might have made. But he made no appeal; he kept to the main road, turning neither to right nor left, and noticing naught save now and again some passing straggler. They recognized kinship with him and at the same time recognized in him a native superiority, and one and all saluted him respectfully as he passed. To each he murmured without pausing, "comrade." It was the only word that passed his lips that day, and they were the only persons who claimed his recognition. One of the number who passed would have offered service but something in the man's look overawed him and he forbore. Nature was in a kindly mood, on this summer day; clouds tempered the noon heat and a fresh breeze blew from the west. That he was not insensible to its influence was evident by his deep inhalations. Here and there a group of maples or a branching elm made deep shade by the roadside; from such a sheltered nook two who had halted for refreshment hailed him, but received only the wonted salute, and still he pushed forward. At the foot of a ravine which he descended with some signs of faltering, the road forked. He turned to the right and caught, as he did so, the distant sound of an engine. It seemed to revive his energies, he quickened his step and in a few moments was in full sight of the crossing. The train was near, already the steam from the slackening engine was curling through the cut. The sight roused him to a supreme effort, he swung himself forward with long strides, sprang for the train just as it started, missed it by a hand's breadth and fell forward amid the startled cries of passengers who saw the perilous movement. The strong hand of the flagman seized and drew him back and the rough voice of the rescuer blurted out an oath, but stopped instantly in the reproach, for the arm fell limp in his strong grasp, and to his horror, he saw blood ooze from the stranger's mouth. Awestruck at the spectacle he laid the body down gently by the roadside and looked about for help.

The crossing was on the outskirt of a village and the passing train was a daily sensation to the few idlers who whiled away the summer months in this upland valley; excited by the cries of the passengers many had already hastened to the spot. They looked at the prostrate form and instinctively drew back, as life does from the touch of death. Only the village doctor who was in the group bent down over the body, lifted an arm and dropped it gently.

When the first effect which the presence of death always produces in the soul, the mingling of awe and pathos, the sudden wrench from the material plane, the momentary projection upon the spiritual, when this has subsided, and there remains only the bald fact of a corpse before you, there are formalities which must be observed. These in the case of the unknown dead are somewhat peculiar, and although managed briskly enough in great cities are awkwardly observed in an obscure country settlement. The cause of death in this case was apparent although the doctor disguised it in a learned phrase. Save for the fatal spring the man might still be living, an object of indifference to right-minded people; but a worn-out body must keep itself to even paces, there are delicate blood-vessels which will not bear the pressure when the heart fails; if a doctor had been on the spot—but there was no doctor. Such was in brief the verdict. The flagman had a faint notion that some reflection upon himself was intended, but he said nothing; his dazed faculties had hardly yet recovered their composure.

As the act and article of death afforded small room for conjecture curious questionings arose as to the man's belongings. The tragedy of his life was evident enough. It was declared in the wasted but heavily lined face, in the worn-out garments, in the utter absence of everything that bespeaks self-care and the pride of life; yet there were not wanting evidences of a high estate, the hands were long and slender and the face, marred as it was and with the seal of death upon it, showed still the signs of elevation which the comrades whom he had greeted on his way instinctively recognized. Exposure and excess had not destroyed the firm outline of youth. It was the face of a young man, thirty years at most, had made up the measure of his days. So much was plain but beyond this nothing excepting a paltry two dollars in the pocket of the old coat—nothing else, absolutely nothing to connect him with the respectable current of human life. This as a tangible somewhat afforded scope for question. Why with even that trifle in his possession had he starved on the last stretch? To the uninitiated this was inexplicable, but the answer was forthcoming and it came undoubtedly from knowledge, the speaker being one of the two who were resting under the elm tree as the stranger passed on to his death.

"You see," said he, in the matter-of-fact way in which we speak of customary experiences, "he were a hankering for a drink, and if he could ha' reached the city by the train as he missed he would a' had the money's worth."

A woman ventured to remind the speaker that the man had intended to ride, to which he rejoined in a tone of undisguised admiration, but more as a reminiscence than a reply:

"Lord bless us, he were that powerful o' tongue he could beat his way with the pick of the land!" Whence he came, what were his antecedents, of these the speaker was as ignorant as the villagers.

Curiosity could suggest nothing farther, and it remained only to bury the body out of sight. Here, however, a difficulty arose. Custom forbids us to bury a human being in a trench outside of consecrated ground, and yet where there is no pauper cemetery, there are scruples and prejudices to be encountered in placing the wayfaring man in his last sleep beside worthy citizens. The dilemma had never before been encountered in this village, and all looked to the minister for advice. He was silent; there was really no precedent in all his experience that applied to the case, and while he pondered and waited for the word that never came a strange scene was enacted around the dead.

Among the summer sojourners at the village hotel who had gathered at this impromptu inquest was a woman who had attracted much attention by her distant air and distinguished appearance; she was dressed in mourning, the plainness of her dress serving to emphasize her natural elegance. She had drawn near to the body, and stood through all the discussion with her eyes riveted upon the impassive face as it lay upturned under the brilliant light of the July sun, which concealed nothing and revealed everything. The face seemed to fascinate her, and there was indeed something in it which touched the imagination. The mouth, which was without beard, was exquisite in its repose. Suddenly, while the minister hesitated for the words that did not come, the woman, moved by an irresistible impulse, stooped down and kissed the face of the dead man; then drawing herself up proudly, she said, in a clear, full voice:

"Bury him in your cemetery decently as his mother would were she here. I will bear the expense." Then coming nearer to the minister, and speaking in the same voice she added: "Give him pious burial and pray for the felicity of his soul; pray or I will. The curse of his death is upon us." She spoke with intense feeling, and still her gaze was riveted upon the impassive face as if she would forever retain the impress of those features. In the wonderment which she caused some fancied a relation between the two, but as if divining their thoughts she exclaimed:

"I do not know this man, but I know his destroyers. Their name is legion, they kill under the sanction of our laws." Then she passed on. They thought her a stately fanatic. No one knew that she went to and fro seeking her own son who was wandering in the madness of drink; no one knew that she kissed the victim for the mother, who should not know where her son fell, because their griefs were the same; no one knew that she kissed him and buried him praying that Heaven might graciously send like ministration to her own first-born. No one knew —alas! alas! too many of us do know the anguish of love out of which are born mysterious sympathies which shall yet swell into a raging passion of Divine indignation to sweep down and cast out and obliterate traffic in the souls of men.

Washington, D. C.

AN HONORED WOMAN.

The University of Wooster, at its recent commencement, conferred the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) upon Mrs. A. E. W. Robertson, of Muscogee, Ind. Ter. This title was granted in recognition of high scholarly attainments and literary productions. Mrs. Robertson has recently completed the translation of the New Testament from the original Greek, into the Muscogee or Creek language. Some of the books of the New Testament had been previously translated by others, but she revised and re-translated all, and the complete volume has been published by the American Bible Society of New York. She has likewise translated some of the historical books of the Old Testament from the original and has compiled a Muscogee Glossary, a vocabulary of the Chickasaw, and an English and Creek Vocabulary. She is universally recognized as the highest authority in the Muscogee tongue, to which she has given the ardent study of a lifetime.

This interesting and learned woman is the daughter of the late Samuel A. Worcester, D. D., missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. among the Cherokees where his daughter was born at the Brainard mission. She was educated in the East and was sent out as a missionary by the American Board. For forty-two years, after she had married Rev. W. S. Robertson, she has labored among the Creeks, assisting in the conduct of the Tallahassee Boarding School, in missionary labor, and in editing a Creek magazine, a Creek hymn-book and catechisms, writing much and translating into Muscogee a collection of Creek songs for public worship, with other literature. Although past sixty-five years of age and greatly debilitated, this devoted woman persistently pursues her literary toil, constantly calling in the natives to her aid, consulting with them and examining them as to their vocabulary. She is a most interesting figure and the University of Wooster evidently thinks that learning and authorship should be recognized among women as among men.

PREMIUM ON CRIME.

BY MRS. OBED NICKERSON.

I speak not now of the liquor traffic which, supported by government, is above and beyond all others in its extent and terrible consequences. My subject has more to do with social relations, and perhaps could be explained better by a fact given in The Woman's Journal of June 11.

A shiftless husband had a wife who was a bright and enterprising woman, and kept boarders to support herself, her baby boy, and her husband. He became jealous of her, or pretended to be, and sued for divorce. In consultation with lawyers she asked if there was no way by which she could retain her child; they said, "None at all. It was only illegitimate children that could be kept by their mother." She said nothing, but her mind was made up. When the case was being tried, to the surprise and consternation of her friends, she declared that her husband was not the father of her child. It seemed a terrible thing that she should thus perjure herself, and sacrifice her own reputation. But let us not judge her too harshly. Whose was the responsibility? What a strain it must have been between her conscience, and her agony at the prospect of having the child of her bosom torn from her! Her love for her child outweighed every other consideration.

The husband knew her statement was false, else why did he withdraw his suit for divorce, and continue to live with her as he now does? We are glad he was foiled in his attempt to torture her by robbing her of her child; but could such occurrences be if women had a voice in the making of the laws by which they are to be governed? Would there be such inadequate penalties throughout Christendom, for crimes committed against women?

Oh, that people would cry aloud, so that our legislators would heed the voice and proclaim equal liberty, protection and justice for all.

South Harwich, Mass.

IT IS BETTER TO HAVE BEEN BORN.

On the afternoon of July 21, while "our" Anna Gordon was fluttering around the Northwestern depot in search of an express package, a crowd of white-ribboners, in their Sunday clothes, boarded a train. En route the busy Anna did much protest that it was not Miss Willard's reception day. Just the same the group made a bee-line for Rest Cottage, and joined other good looking folk in their Sunday clothes, and then the World's and Nat'l Asst. Juvenile superintendent learned that for one brief hour or two she must cease from her labor of making everybody else happy and comfortable, and endure the honor of having been born to a useful life, and the retribution for sixteen years of devoted service to the child-life of the nation.

About fifty guests had gathered and said very definitely: "Anna, you are going to have a birthday; go into the parlor and sit down and behave yourself, like the little lady that you surely are, while we make speeches to you." After a hymn led by Miss Katharine Willard, and a prayer by Rev. Dr. Delano, Miss Frances E. Willard read the following memorial which was signed by the hosts of friends who "neighbor" with her in the widest sense, and the list of which every woman who reads this would like to swell:

TO ANNA A. GORDON, JULY 21, 1892, ON HER BIRTHDAY.

BELOVED SISTER AND FRIEND:—Well-nigh sixteen years of faithful and devoted toil in the white-ribbon harvest field have endeared you to a constituency wide as the world. "Marching Songs" are sung in every corner of Christendom and to their melodies the feet of our young recruits "keep time." Your book of "Questions Answered," covering all departments of the juvenile work, is our guide through the tanglewood of difficulties and condenses the experience of hundreds of expert workers. Your "Y" song book is one of the daintiest and most tuneful collections ever laid as a laurel on the shrine of a great reform. Your "White Ribbon Hymnal," soon to appear, will be the standard of that marshaled host which long ago set the key-note of "Give to the winds thy fears," and still "keeps time to the company's music" of "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord."

As World's W. C. T. U. superintendent of the work among the children you have the widest and most winsome parish that ever fell to woman's lot, while your mingled wit and wisdom—are they not published in The New York Independent and that other great weekly newspaper, THE UNION SIGNAL! Who that is well read in literature does not know "The 'Skeeters" and the "Heavenly stars shine out as soon as it is dark enough!"

But it is not in your public capacity that we greet you to-day. We are here on the pretty little lawn behind Rest Cottage as those to whom you are sacredly dear as a friend and helper, a counselor and neighbor, a sister honored and beloved. If you had half the self-assertion of most folks you would be perhaps more famed and more admired, but you could not be more trusted or more beloved! The modesty and meekness of your nature are to us, who stand so near you, among the choicest and most precious qualities with which God has endowed you. Rare as your reputation is, your character outruns it and we all know that character is a pillar of white marble and reputation but the shadow that it casts. We have long known that you had "a heart at leisure from itself to soothe and sympathize." We have long said of you in our hearts:

"The blessings of her quiet life,
Fell on us like the dew,
And good thoughts where her footsteps passed
Like fairy blossoms grew."

Our daily lives have been brightened by your

"Deeds of week-day holiness."

"Nor have you ever chanced to know
That aught were easier than to bless."

We agree teetotally with Lady Henry Somerset in the inscription from our dear poet Whittier that she caused to be traced on the pretty watch she gave you just before she sailed for England:

"Keeping with many a light disguise
The secret of self-sacrifice."

We are grateful and glad to be able to speak these things into your ear rather than trace them later on in your obituary and upon your monument. Some people would be hurt or spoiled by such praise as we delight to give you, but you have proved through a long apprenticeship that you are made of better stuff. The good-will and good word of your associates has had no other effect than to make you more meek and mild, more mellow-hearted and desirous to be molded into the image of Him who was holy, harmless, undefiled and who went about doing good.

Reverently and gratefully we speak these words in token of our tender remembrance of this your natal day—never before celebrated without the loving kiss or message of that best of fathers whom you miss and mourn and who, as we believe, knows of this pleasant hour and gracious recognition of the daughter to whom he was so earnestly devoted.

Two years ago we had a little lawn fête in your honor and gave to you a rocking chair decked with white ribbons. We have very seldom seen you occupy that chair but you are always handing it to whoever may enter the pretty office where you devote yourself to the service of the white ribbon army.

This time we sought to find your symbol and it is here in this beautiful kamaret, of which it has so often been said by the gay advertiser, "you press the button—we do the rest." Like unto this versatility of power is the ingenious mind, the ready hand and the unfailing sympathy that have made our Anna Gordon a sort of human kamaret, doing unto others what she will not allow them to do for herself, according to a new version of the Golden Rule.

But the side-lights on this manifold symbol, its lights and shades, its slides and plates, its focus and lenses—all of them analogous to traits in your many-sided character, varied career and all-aroundedness of capability, will be set forth by our publishing house laureate, Miss Alice M. Guernsey, with an ingenuity and amplitude of which we, the undersigned, are not capable, but we, however,—and hereby,—indorse everything she says, without having heard it, as the consensus of opinion in this court concerning the guest of the occasion and with every loving and grateful wish for long life, prosperity and happiness we greet you with the oriental salutation:

"Health, peace, perfection," and hereunto set our hands and the seal of our profound and unchanging approbation.

A valuable kamaret, a gift from many friends, was presented by Miss Alice Guernsey, with some brilliant, original verses. Other gifts were piled before her, and then Miss Frances Griffin, of Alabama, read a poem by Miss Mary Henry, "Thou Shalt be Loved for thy sweet Ways, Always." Being called on for a speech Miss Griffin had the following to say:

At the opening of this century there was a famous birthday celebrated by amiable France with great rejoicing. Napoleon I, called by them the Great, had been presented to the world by his mother, on 15th August, near the close of the previous century, and now he stood full of genius and energy, holding in his grasp nations deluged by the blood of their most valued manhood, rejoicing to call himself the maker and unmaker of kings; boasting of his ability to destroy the boundary lines of all written geography, and furnishing the strange spectacle to the world of a nation which had risen up to resist tyranny sinking back, delighted to caress a tyrant who pressed his heel upon their neck. A few years later saw the close of this wonderful man's career of unmitigated evil and the oscillating sphere whose orbit he had disturbed, swung again into line, not without wounds to heal of such magnitude that even the present moment can bear witness of their evil influences.

This mightiest monarch of the age holds now no vestige of his power, and the memory of him is fast slipping from the minds of men. But the century at its close, more fortunate than at its beginning, makes amends for the errors of youth, by recording upon its time-table the arrival of another birthday, 21st July. At this period a frail girl was presented to this sorrowful earth, that had needed her long before she came. To-day she, too, stands holding nations in her grasp, deluging the world, changing the boundary lines of the earth and desiring to set up a kingdom. But she furnishes the spectacle to the nations of power in the midst of weakness, of calmness amid perplexities. She rallies the nations to her call, not by the shrill clarion of war, but by the magic notes of her marching songs of peace, the matchless grace of her sweet words to children, and the thousand sweet influences from a character modeled by Him whose follower she is. By these she has bound the hearts of all Christendom; by these she changes the boundary lines of sections, until the lady in her castle, the Indian in his wigwam, the humble dwellers upon the islands of the sea and the myriads of children of her native land, between the broad oceans, obeying her power through her teachings have forgotten boundary lines and have claimed kinship as of one family. The kingdom to be set up comes nigh to their transported vision, while the spheres, not disturbed in their orbits, sing the song of the morning stars, and the grand hallelujahs of the good time coming are entangled with the sweet strains, begun when the 21st of July became the birthday of the leader of the children of the earth, known to the sons and daughters of men as Miss Willard's Anna Gordon.

After this the guests gathered on the spacious back lawn—refreshments being served under a grape arbor. On an upper balcony sat Madame Willard, for the first time in her sixty years as head of her household not strong enough to mingle with her guests.

There was a flutter of white in the air as everybody recognized the venerable and venerated presence of "Saint Courageous;" then the crowd followed somebody's lead in the happy inspiration to sing:

"E'en down to old age all my people shall prove,
My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne."

As Madame Willard rose to thank her friends, her presence formed in the mold of her noble life was the sweetest souvenir carried off in every heart from the day's fête, and the departing guests, coming to Rest Cottage to honor the younger life so blessed in its purpose and its scope, felt that they had themselves been doubly blessed in the saintly vision of one about to enter "within the veil."

It is said Miss Irene Fockler, Madame Willard's great-niece, and a member of Rest Cottage household, conceived and carried out the birthday festival that bespangled the work-a-day lives of so many white-ribboners. H. B. K.

THE WHITE LIFE FOR TWO.

The great leader in the world in purity work is Mrs. Josephine E. Butler and what she has to say invariably attracts the attention of all good people. We, therefore, give to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL the advantage of her wise and earnest words in a letter to the World's W. C. T. U. meeting in St. James Hall, London, last May.

DEAR FRIENDS:—I have fought a long battle in my day, which was, as you probably know, against the scandalous indorsement by our legislature of the idea of the necessity of vice, involving the legal enslavement of a portion of female society. This conflict of the past is, I imagine, very much forgotten at the present day, and our younger workers may never even have heard of it. It was on a long night of March, 1883, in which a discussion of our subject was going on in the House of Commons. We had arranged—we women—to hold a devotional meeting during the whole of the time that Parliament sat, and to continue it even through the night if the debate continued so long. I came and went during that night from the House of Commons to the room of our meeting, which was near. In that room I observed women of all ranks, from elegantly dressed women, some few even of our aristocracy, to some of the most ragged and miserable outcasts of the purlieus of Westminster. I was glad to see them kneeling side by side. There were earnest prayers, born of that deep sorrow of heart which all good women felt then on account of the injustice and cruelty of which Parliament had been guilty towards us. There were many tears shed and prayers offered. Then a venerable American lady rose and said: "Our tears are good, our prayers are better, but it would be better still if behind every tear and every prayer we had a vote at the ballot box." We all said "Amen" to this sentiment. Now this question of the women's vote is to the front again, and it is so much on my mind that it is impossible for me not to refer to it. Purity and temperance have been promoted greatly by the efforts of women, and will be so, I hope, more and more. The results of these efforts are felt already to some extent in the home, the school, the university, the workshop, the drawing-room, etc.; but what about Parliament? What about the personal character of our legislators? About the prevention of evil laws, and the enactment of good laws for the furtherance of morality, social justice and purity in society?

We may pray and we may preach about these things, and we may raise our voices to some little extent during the excitement of a contested election; but that is not enough. My friends, we must have the suffrage. It is our right,—and it is cruel and a continued injustice to withhold it from us. It has lately been said that the women generally of the country have not shown any desire for the suffrage. Some years ago I can assert that the women of the country showed a very great desire for it. Men do not know that at the bottom of that desire, underneath many other good motives, there lies a bitterness of woe which is the most powerful stimulus towards the desire for representation in the legislature. I am sometimes afraid that one of these days some other terrible injustice may be enacted in Parliament through which women will again suffer as they did under those laws I have alluded to. Perhaps it might not be an altogether bad thing, if it caused women to utter once more the bitter cry to which none of our legislators could pretend to be deaf. But have we not, as it is, sufficient trouble, and misery, and degradation among our own sex to make us utter even now the bitter cry,—a cry, however, at the same time of hope, courage and confidence?

I look upon the right of representation as one of the most powerful means towards the attainment of that purifying of the moral atmosphere, and that correction of evil traditions among us at which we all aim. Think for a moment of the state of London, of New York, and other great cities peopled by the Anglo-Saxon race!

Is it not a perpetual, enduring disgrace to us that even at this day thousands of women walk the streets of London who are given up to a life of vice—to a cruel enslavement—often induced by extreme poverty and friendlessness? Now I am not aiming at this moment at stimulating rescue work. That is a very needful and a very Christlike work; but I regard as far more important our influence upon our fellow men. We should aim at prevention in the widest and highest sense. We must prevent evil by changing public opinion, by bringing all the forces of heaven and earth to bear on this awful question of the great social vice, which has been truly called by the late M. de Pressense "the typical crime of the universe, including in itself all other crimes." Ambulance work is no doubt good and necessary; but it would be far better to put a stop to war, than that we should merely continue to bind up the shattered limbs of soldiers ruined by war; and rescue work is only ambulance work in the moral world. We must go more to the root of the matter. But until we women have a voice as citizens, our influence in the efforts to change and purify public opinion will not be so powerful as it ought to be. Men will not regard our words nor understand our actions as they ought to do. I am very sorry for those good men who deny us the vote; for in denying us our just rights they are standing in their own light and retarding human progress.

The Law of God rests its eternal throne upon the basis of human equality. It is strengthened and not disturbed by diversity of sex; but it is both weakened and disturbed by the attempts of men to interfere with and arrest its just progress. No doubt most of you are aware of the fact which I have seen published in a New York paper, that a bill has been brought before the legislature of New York this session to regulate the business of public prostitution in the several cities and towns of the state of New York. The bill licenses houses of ill-fame, registers all women known to obtain a livelihood by immorality, and places them under police and medical superintendence and espionage. The editor of the Philanthropist, of New York, says:

"This revival of Regulation propagandism here at a time when in European countries, as in Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, and even in France (its stronghold), influential and already partially successful efforts are in progress for its abolition, is indeed astonishing and much to be deplored. . . . Unremitting vigilance will be required to prevent the consummation of these immoral legislative schemes, which are fraught with untold degradation to both sexes, and with grave peril to the individual, to the home and to society."

We are all looking forward to next year's great World's Fair at Chicago, and I feel personally deeply anxious that this question of social purity, and of the perpetually renewed attempts in America to degrade and enslave women for purposes of vice, should be seriously taken up and worked at by us women, previous to the date of that great gathering in America.

I ask myself—why should we be content with a mere watching against and prevention of one attempt after another? Might we not aim at some movement of so powerful and prevalent a kind as would prevent these materialistic agitators for state regulation of vice from ever again venturing to bring forward their horrible schemes in any part of our respective countries?

I cannot at this moment clearly point out to you any more practical steps than those you are taking to this end; but I know that Christ has said, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth," and that that power is at our disposal if we have the faith and resolution to take hold of it. Why should we not? These are days of great spiritual miracles, and I trust that these miracles will not be wanting in the region in which you and I are working and striving. I remain, yours loyally and affectionately,

JOSEPHINE E. BUTLER,
President of the Purity Branch of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

IN your occupations, try to possess your soul in peace. It is not a good plan to be in haste to perform any action that it may be the sooner over. On the contrary, you should accustom yourself to do whatever you have to do with tranquillity, in order that you may retain the possession of yourself and of settled peace.—Madame Guyon.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.—Phil. 4:19.

BUILD THE TEMPLE.

BY A. Y. FINDLAY.

Build the Temple! Build the Temple!
Raise its towering walls on high;
Let it be the grand ensample
Of our country's purity.

Build the Temple! Build the Temple!
Let no doubts the work impede;
Loving hearts their gifts are sending,
Help will come for every need.

Build the Temple! Build the Temple!
Do not fear the task to dare;
For God's cause is its foundation,
And each stone, a woman's prayer.

Build the Temple! Build the Temple!
Through all ages may it stand!
Till the nations learn our motto:
"God and Home and Every Land!"

Franklin, Pa.

***

Mrs. Ann G. Randolph, of Carthage, Ill., sends a beautiful incident of a self-denial dollar tea held by her union for the benefit of the Temple. She says: "A farmer's wife made her dollar by gathering and putting into commercial form the comb found in a hive when all the bees were dead. She sent a letter with her money, which I pass on to help you in your great work, by the knowledge of how your Temple is rising by just such littles: 'In my great joy to bring my dollar I forgot "to point a moral and adorn a tale" by telling you the moral of my beeswax offering. As I lay upon my bed it came to me how hundreds upon hundreds of busy workers had toiled day after day through the long, beautiful summer to collect and construct this comb and to fill it with precious sweets. As the cold, dark winter wore away these hoarded stores were consumed, and only the blackened cells were left. But in these combs was inwrought a value which I have been permitted to utilize. So these little toilers builded better than they knew, for they have helped to rear the great Temple, which shall stand through generations, and have helped to usher in the coming glory. So, dear sisters, may there be left something enduring amid the temporary work of our lives, and somewhat helpful toward the dawning glory of the everlasting kingdom of our Lord.' At our last meeting a mother, with a new baby girl, was appointed to organize baby bands."

***

An old lady of Wyoming, O., Mrs. Matilda Booth, sends a marvelous piece of handiwork in a yard of double-edged fine lace, to be sold for the benefit of the Temple. It has a market value of not less than ten dollars; yet as one examines its cobweb meshes, the vision of the aged fingers carrying the shuttle in and out recalls the "wise-hearted" who wrought the holy garments for the Temple in the wilderness, and the lace upon the mitre of Aaron on which was graven "Holiness to the Lord." There is a sacred value in the offerings of those on whose heads already rest glintings through the golden gates; who "about to die, salute" us with the quiet majesty of sacrifice that truth may live.

***

Anna E. Galvorson, Ossian, Ia., sends $1 for the Whittier clock. She writes: "I am glad his name will be on the Temple walls, because he is not only a great poet, but a grand and noble man." Mrs. G. T. Valentine, Argyle, Minn., sends $7, three of which is to be applied on the Whittier memorial. One hundred dollars has been sent by Mrs. M. B. Reynolds, of Peoria, Ill., to place the name of her beloved sister, Mrs. Lucie B. Tyng, on a tablet. Mrs. Tyng is one of the great leaders in temperance and every good work in Illinois, and we are sure no name more beloved will appear upon the tablet of this great state than hers.

***

Adda Burch writes a brief business letter from Chautauqua, N. Y., that has the promise in it of all the Temple can want if "the others" will do likewise. It speaks thus: "If Mrs. Carse wants to put in a mite-box I will keep it on the table, and if I had a sample of the Temple inkstand I might sell some."

***

Mrs. Anna M. Frailey states that the George Institute, Ohio, W. C. T. U., with the Y's, have had a Temple Tea, in the home of Mrs. Justice, for the purpose of opening the mite-boxes. The hostess read some instructive facts touching the needs of the Temple, showing a large picture of it. While music and tea and wafers were served twenty-two boxes were opened which aggregated $30. Many took their boxes to refill, hoping larger things for the second engorgement.

***

The Temple trust bonds are being sought by those who desire a safe investment. They are selling rapidly. The bonds are for sale by our financial agent, Mr. H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle Street, Chicago, and 412 Exchange Building, Boston, Mass.

***

A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite box ($3.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

"WILL GOD TAKE ME IN HIS ARMS SOME DAY?"

BY MRS. M. WINTERMUTE.

I have been thinking—and I quit my play
To ask if heaven is very far away?
And will God take me in His arms some day?
When children die does a bright angel come
To take them up to visit in God's home,
And does He say, "Come in," and love them some?

Oh! will God take me in His arms some day,
And call me His sweet darling? I would say
I left my papa back a little way.
He'd let me come and lead you by the hand,
And show you how to reach the blessed land.
And then before the Saviour's door we'd stand.

And I would bid you knock—perhaps you'd say
"Oh, knock for me, child, for you know the way."
And then we'd enter through the gates of day.
And He would smile and bid you welcome there,
And wipe away your tears of grief and care,
And let you hold me, in His home so fair.

Then clasp me, papa, to your breast to-night,
And tell me if you think it would be right,
If I should one day vanish from your sight
And go up into heaven first—alone,
So darling papa could be better known,
Then come and call you to the Saviour's throne?

Newark, Ohio.

MISSION OF A FLOWER.

BY FANNY HOWLAND.

Delia Cox and her little sister Gracie lived in one little upstairs room. Delia was clerk in a large drygoods store, and earned three dollars a week. It had been just six months since Delia had been left alone to take care of herself and her seven-year-old sister.

As Gracie was coming home from school one Friday evening she was stopped by a little girl about her own age.

"Can't you come in?" said the child.

"No, I guess not," Gracie replied.

"Oh, why?"

"'Cause I didn't ask Delia."

"Who's Delia?"

"She's my big sister. My papa and mamma are both dead, and Delia and I live around the corner, not quite two blocks from here. What is your name?"

"Mary Binney. My pa is dead, too, but mother cews down town. Laura and I have to stay at home."

"Why don't you go to school?"

"Laura can't walk, and I have to stay close around home all the time with her. She gives me lessons and makes pictures and paper dolls, and we have good times, but I wish you would come and see us."

"I'll ask Delia if I can't come to-morrow afternoon. I get lonesome staying home Saturdays. I must go now. Good-bye."

Delia gave the desired permission. The girls enjoyed themselves very much, and the afternoon passed all too quickly.

At Sunday-school the next day Gracie's teacher talked to them about the verse, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." She talked of how Jesus loved the children when He was here on the earth, and asked them if they wouldn't have loved Him and wanted to do something for Him if they had been living at that time. She showed them that Jesus loves them now just as much as He did the children so long ago, and in this verse He has told them how they may do nice things for Him yet.

Gracie thought about it a great deal. Delia wondered why she was so quiet. Finally she told Delia about the talk, and that she did wish she could get some flowers for Laura Binney, for that would be just the same as giving them to Jesus.

Delia was thoughtful a few minutes, and then she said, "Gracie, I thought I could get you a hair-ribbon next Saturday evening, but if you would rather, I'll give you a dime to get a plant with."

Gracie loved pretty ribbons, and she had no nice one, so this was quite a temptation. But she said, "All right. A plant will be so much better than a bouquet, for it will last a long time. Laura hasn't been out of that room nor seen anything growing for I don't know how long."

At the first opportunity Gracie went to a greenhouse, expecting to buy the very prettiest plant there with her dime. She picked out a beautiful white lily as just the thing. But she was dismayed when told that the price was fifty cents.

"But I have only ten cents," she said.

"I do not sell any of these nice blooming plants for less than twenty-five cents," he said, "but back here are some that I am just starting and that will be as nice as those by the first of May. I can sell you one of these for ten cents."

A sudden thought came to Gracie. "I'll get one of these, and not say anything to Mary and Laura about it, but keep it until May-day and leave it at their door for a May basket."

She took her geranium home, and carefully cared for it all winter. They could not afford to keep up fire at night, but Gracie lined a wooden box with several thicknesses of paper, and every night her treasure was put to bed and carefully covered up. It stood in the south window during the day, and was lovingly watched and cared for. It was a great deal of pleasure to the two sisters to watch its development. When the little bunches of buds began to appear, Gracie's joy was unbounded. Several days before the first of May it had seven large beautiful pink clusters on it, besides others not so far developed.

Giving up the plant was harder than giving up the ribbon, but Gracie had no intention of keeping it. It was left at the door so slyly that no one suspected who the donor was. It was Delia's thoughtfulness that wrote on the card with the name, the text, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

Gracie often visited her friends around the corner, and occasionally she and Delia would both spend an evening with them. We wonder at Gracie's giving them no hint as to where the plant came from. "But," she told Delia, "I gave it to Jesus, and He knows."

Not very long after it was settled in its new home, a clergyman passing along the street noticed the beautiful pink clusters. He was a great lover of plants and seemed irresistibly drawn to that home Laura had thought much about the text that came with the plant. She had known what it was to have a loving, earthly father's care, and what it was to be without it, and the text filled her with intense longing. So she was easily led to feel her need of salvation, as she had only lacked some one to show her the way. So clearly did the minister point it out, that she was able then and there to enter the straight and narrow way that leadeth unto life eternal.

The geranium received no less loving and careful attention here than Grace had given it. It continued to grow and was even more beautiful, when one day it attracted another caller, who proved to be the owner of a greenhouse. In the course of the conversation, he told her that his mother, who was quite old and infirm, had sent for himself and family to come and make her a long visit; he had engaged the best man he could find to take charge of things in his absence, but could not get an experienced florist, and feared for the success of his young plants; he had been attracted by the beautiful blooming plant in the window, and felt that its owner must be a lover of plants, and must know something of how to care for them. He questioned her as to her experience and knowledge of flower culture, and learned that, although she had not raised this plant, she had never been without a beautiful collection in her old home. The result of the conversation was that he agreed to let her take two hundred of his young plants, and to give her seven cents for each one she succeeded in raising in good condition.

With the help of her mother and Mary she took the best of care of them. When spring came their windows were the wonder of the neighborhood. She had successfully raised one hundred and ninety out of the two hundred. When the florist returned she received $13.30 for her trouble. Not only that, but he was so pleased with her success, and became so much interested in her, that he encouraged her to try to do more. He would leave for her the rearing of certain kinds of plants, with which she should keep him constantly supplied. She carefully saved enough out of her earnings to get a wheeled chair, so that she was able to get about among her plants much better.

. . . . . .

Five years from that spring the Binney family are living in a little cottage of their own, bought with Mrs. Binney's pension, which had been granted after several years' delay. On the south side of the house is a small conservatory, and Laura and Mary have their hands full of business. Often they hire a boy to help with the harder parts of the work. They are not rich, but with the help of the pension, they get along very comfortably, and mother doesn't have to sew down town. Through Laura's influence, her mother and Mary have been led to accept the Saviour. Delia and Gracie Cox are very intimate with Laura and Mary. Plants grown from the original pink geranium are special pets in each home. Gracie has known of all that has grown out of her gift, and feels that what is given to the Lord yields large dividends.

Indianapolis, Ind.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I think of you all these hot August days, and wonder how you are. Those of you in cool, shady homes in country or quiet village, on the mountains, or at the seashore, know little of the suffering of those within the heated walls of the crowded cities. The Fresh Air funds of the great newspapers are doing much good by sending thousands of poor children into the country for a change of air, but these and all the other missions can only reach a portion of those who work and live in the hot hearts of the great cities. While enjoying our vacation days, let us remember those for whom there is no vacation, and do what we can for them.

The following refreshing letter is from a little niece who thinks of others, I know:

Dear Aunt Jane and all of your Family:

We take THE UNION SIGNAL and all of us think a good deal of it, and I especially of our corner. I thought I could not write anything you would like better than to have me send you a recipe for

A NICE TEMPERANCE DRINK.

Mix one half cup of flour with a little water and stir it into three pints of boiling water with 2½ pounds of sugar and two lemons; boil five minutes. When cool add the whites of two eggs well beaten, and two ounces of tartaric acid; strain and bottle. Keep cool, add three spoonfuls to a glass of cold water and soda to foam.

I remain your loving niece, BERTHA F. THURSTON.
Sharon, Vt.

Try this refreshing drink, boys and girls, and let me know how you like it. Do you know of any other?

Your affectionate,

Aunt Jane

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

Will you please welcome a Southerner? I enjoy reading the poems, letters and stories on the Children's page. I can write stories, and I will send you one if you wish it.

Would some of the temperance boys and girls whose ages are between eleven and fourteen please write to me?

Your temperance namesake,

Centreville, La. JENNIE GERTRUDE FOOTE.

Yes, indeed, we welcome you warmly, and here's a place for all the temperance children, for we know no difference between North and South.

I am twelve years old. I belong to the Loyal Temperance Legion, and have signed the pledge. I have two brothers and four sisters, and all belong to the Legion except the youngest, who is only a year old. My oldest sister is secretary of our Legion. Inclosed find puzzle that I made, also answers to those published.

Newtown, Pa. BERTHA STOVER.

You will all enjoy this nice letter from a member of an "L. T. L. family" as much as I did, I am sure.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

74.

COMPARATIVES.

(Example: Positive, a few; comparative, the hottest season of the year. Answer: some, summer.)

Positive, a winged insect; comp., a fermented liquor.
Pos., a harbor; comp., an intoxicating drink.
Pos., a kind of fuel; comp., one of the apostles.
Pos., a long stick; comp., suggests a cold region.
Pos., to reward: comp., a couple.
Pos., a stroke; comp., alcoholic fluid.
Pos., to permit; comp., a written message.

75.

WORD SQUARE.

1. A flower.
2. Not closed.
3. That from which flowers grow.
4. The last parts.

E. C. A.

76.

CROSS WORD ENIGMA.

In tree not in shrub,
In barrel not in tub,
In me not in my,
In push not in try,
In he not in thy,
In run not in fly,
In ant not in bee,
In nine not in three,
In child not in man,
In red not in tan.

My whole is something we all should fight for.

BLANCHE SHERMAN.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JULY 14.

65. G-old; O-range; D-ell; I-ram; S-hip; L-ark; O-live; V-ale; E-den. God is love.
66. White Ribbon.
67. Every cloud has a silver lining.

Correct answers: Viola Scomp; Royal J. Davis; Ray Wall; Minnie C. VanGilder; Marion Odell; Mysie Adams; Anna Chambers; Florence Kemp; Buttercup; Margaret H. Folger; Philip W. Davis; Earle C. Anderson.

TWO VOTES INSTEAD OF ONE.

BY ELIZABETH HOLBROOK.

Two votes for the home!
Will the time
Ever come?
And sacredness of home be guarded,
When two votes will be recorded
Instead of one?

Two votes for the home!
Will the time
Ever come?
Gold in treasury is hoarded,
Where but one is now recorded—
And that for rum.

Dear mother of the home,
Hasten the time
To come!
Arise and crush the base and sordid
That will not let two be recorded
For the Home!

Chester, Ill.

"HE THAT RULETH HIS SPIRIT."

BY JULIA MILLS DUNN.

"There's no use, Dorothy," said John Thaxter to his wife; "a little cider is as harmless as so much water. It's my belief that 'the earth was created for man and the fullness thereof,' as the parson said in his sermon yesterday. And what would my old comrade, Jack Cray, say to such fanaticism? Now with you women, there's a difference. You dear souls get together and pass all sorts of wild resolutions not to touch, taste or handle, when not a mother's daughter of you could tell sherry from claret. You amuse yourselves and each other by it, but you harm nobody and accomplish nothing. It pleases you, and furnishes harmless recreation, of which we wouldn't deprive you for the world. But we men see things differently, my dear Dorothy."

There was a moment's pause. Bob, the canary, swinging in his cage among the green vines that overran the shining window panes, chirruped loudly in defiance of the old cat that lay before the grate purring lazily, watching Bob the while with greedy, half-shut eyes.

"Just now," pleaded Dorothy, in her soft, persuasive accents, "there seems to be such an awakening on the subject of temperance, and then we have to consider Tim, too."

Hersey, the black cook, standing just inside the kitchen door, which was slightly ajar, busy concocting a mysterious and wonderful dish, known in her repertoire as "plum pud'n," listening attentively, as was her wont, had the full benefit of Mr. Thaxter's reply.

"The regimental reunion occurs here to-day; my old friend, Captain Cray, will be here to dinner, and I have ordered his favorite dessert, plum pudding with brandy sauce and walnuts and cider. And Dorothy, dear, don't take occasion to air any of your hobbies. You are welcome to all the Bibles and temperance mottoes and badges you like, and you are quite at liberty to adopt the whole 'waifs' mission,' if it pleases you, but I must have my privileges, too. It's only fair, Dorothy."

Hersey grinned. Mrs. Thaxter was a kind mistress, but Hersey had been obliged to submit, most unwillingly, to her authority on more than one occasion, and human nature is very human, indeed, in the relation that subsists between mistress and maid. She now tasted to the full the sweetness of seeing her mistress' will subordinated to higher authority.

"'Pears like she cayn't allers be boss," she chuckled. "Dat ar man, he mighty heady when he git agwine, and pud'n's a poor, no 'count stuff widout brandy. What am you-uns a doin' now, you young limb?"

It was Tim, the waif, to whom she spoke; Tim, recently installed as a member of the household by Mrs. Thaxter, whose tender heart had been touched with compassion for the poor, forlorn creature, on a recent visit to the "Waifs' Mission."

"Nuffin," replied Tim, laconically, as Hersey, having poured out a sufficient quantity of the brandy set the bottle down on the kitchen table; "can't ye let a feller look on, Hersey?"

He took up the brandy bottle and eyed it covetously. "Hookey! What a stunner for bait when I go a-fishin'." He felt of it delightedly. It was flat, covered with wicker, and Tim's greedy glance took in its proportions.

Hersey's back was toward him as she tried the heat of the oven with her hand. "I'll borrer it," whispered Tim, tampering with conscience. A large glass pitcher of cider stood near, a bar of sunlight fell across it turning it should turn and detect him in the act, Tim poured the brandy into the pitcher and slipped softly away, just in time to escape the keen glance of Hersey's eyes.

Captain Cray was jolly and talkative, and Mrs. Thaxter enjoyed almost as much as the two old comrades, the rehearsal of old time adventures in camp and field. She began to feel a new pride in her husband's record as a soldier, and listened with delighted interest while the captain told anew the stories which she had heard dozens of times before.

"If you would like a quiet place to see the drill and marching," said Captain Cray, "there is a window opening from my sitting room at the hotel on to a private balcony, and you can have it all to yourself if you choose."

All the town had turned out to do honor to the event. On a platform attached to the "band stand" were the town dignitaries, mayor and aldermen, the survivors of the Mexican War, the ministers who were to assist in the civic ceremonies, the principal lawyer of the town, carelessly tilted back in his chair, envied of his younger brethren in the profession as occupying a position which would excuse a little carelessness as to cuffs and finger-nails.

Dr. Crane, Mrs. Thaxter's father, a fine old man with white locks, sat beside him, feeling a thrill of patriotism as he watched the flags that floated from awnings, and roofs and balconies, and heard the distant sound of martial music, for he, too, had been a surgeon in the service, and felt all a soldier's pride in the occasion.

"Mr. Forbush," he said, leaning forward to his student, a tall, gawky youth with spectacles, "will you drive the carriage around from the office and wait a few minutes for me, till the regiment has passed?"

Mr. Forbush acquiesced cheerfully. He liked to push his way as a person of importance through the crowd that had already begun to block up the streets and corners. Country youths, mounted on untrained, fiery colts, sat their caracoling animals like young Centaurs. Farmers' wagons, crowded with occupants, were drawn up beside the street through which the column was to pass, small boys, filled with rapture at the sound of the fife and drum, and a prospect of unlimited noise and confusion, filled the interstices of the crowd where it was thickest, and when the clear, shrill clamor of the fife and rolling of the drum told that the line was moving, a tumultuous excitement filled every urchin's breast.

Two triumphal arches had been erected, one at the corner of the park near the band stand, the other farther down the street. From her post on the balcony, Mrs. Thaxter saw her husband and the captain take their places at the head of their men, and marked with pride the still firm step and soldierly bearing of her husband.

But what was the sudden illness that had apparently seized him?

Reeling to and fro, a silly leer upon his face as he struggled unsteadily with his feet to keep them under control, he staggered on, while Captain Cray, steady enough on his legs, but wholly demoralized in mind, began to sing a silly love song, beating time to the tune with his drawn sword, which he flourished wildly in the air. When they reached the triumphal arch wreathed with evergreen and decorated with flags, bearing the motto, "Our country's brave defenders," they both fell flat on the ground.

There was a scene of wild confusion, as men struggled forward to lift them up, but Dr. Crane who had gazed on the spectacle with keen eyes, reached the spot first and adroitly conveyed them, with the help of his student, to his carriage and took them home to Mr. Thaxter's.

"It's too hot for men like them to go marching about the streets," was his gruff reply when questioned eagerly as to the cause of their sudden attack. "They forget that they are no longer boys." And with this somewhat vague reply they were obliged to content themselves.

Captain Cray took the early train for home the next day, but before he went there was a long and confidential talk between the two comrades, who had braved death together on many a well fought field.

"I believe Tim is at the bottom of the whole miserable business," groaned Lieutenant Thaxter, leaning disconsolately on the mantel in the sitting-room. "He cowers in such guilty fashion whenever I look at him. I'd thrash the whole story out of him, if he were not such a forlorn little fellow."

"Thrash Tim? Look here, Thaxter, if anybody deserves thrashing it's ourselves for setting such an example before that little chap and the whole town besides. I believe I've read somewhere that 'he that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city.' Let's sign the pledge. The best possible contribution to society is a good example."

"But it costs a good deal," sighed Thaxter ruefully, contemplating from a marital point of view the effect of such wholesale surrender of all his fixed opinions.

But they shook hands on a mutual promise when they parted, a promise that has never been broken, and neither of them knows to this day, that Mrs. Thaxter, while seeming to be wholly innocent of any suspicion as to the cause of their sudden illness, is in possession of all the facts in the case.

LIVE IN THE TOP STORY.

Professor Henry Drummond in a talk before a boy's club recently, gave this admirable suggestion:

I want you to try a practical experiment. I don't know whether it will succeed or not, but I want you to try it, as it is getting late, and you will have difficulty in keeping up the military attention you have kept up. I want you to try and knock off your cap without moving your hand, merely by moving the muscles of your head. Perhaps only two boys out of this company will be able to do it. Yes, there is a boy does it first-rate. Now I want you to try and move your ears without touching them with your hands. There are two or three boys have the power to move their ears. Now, how in the world do you get that power? There are only two or three boys out of a hundred can twitch their ears without touching them, and move the muscles of the scalp. That muscle is the very same muscle you find inside a lion's head. It is the muscle with which a lion raises its mane, when it wants to look very dignified and fierce. It is the same kind of muscle a cat uses when it wants to blow itself out when fighting with another cat, and the same muscle as the bubbly-jock uses when it wants to make you frightened at it. Now, how do a few people have it? Scientific people tell us that long, long ago our forefathers were animals, and these muscles are the survival of those old days. The muscle that cocks the ear is the same muscle the rabbit, and hare and deer have for cocking their ears, and it still survives in a number of people, and if you run your finger round the inside of the outside of your ear, you will find a little hard tip, which they tell us was the tip of the ear before it began to fold up. If I took you to see a skeleton you would find that we have also a number of bones peculiar to animals. For instance, every boy or girl has a very distinct tail, quite defined, made up of seven or eight bones. I suppose you know how a man got these two buttons on the back of his coat? In old days when a man went out to dinner, he usually went on horseback, and in crossing rivers he looped the tail of his coat with these buttons, and so saved them getting splashed. The use of these buttons has long since been forgotten, but still a man would as soon go out without his shoes as without these buttons. Well, this muscle that works the scalp, and this muscle that cocks the ear, are like these two buttons—they are relics of things that once had a meaning. Very well, that means that we have in ourselves part of the bodies of these animals, but that means a great deal more. It means that you and I have in us something of the dispositions of these animals. There is a tiger, for instance, in half of the boys even of this company, and a bear in three or four more, and a snake in another. Well, when you are tempted to be fierce like a tiger, or to be sulky or surly like a bear, or to do a sneaking thing like a serpent, you at once know where that comes from. It is not you at all, it is the other fellow who lived long, long ago and you are not to think it is all over with you when the bear begins to growl and the serpent begins to hiss. What you are responsible for is not these things being there, but for not allowing them to have any say in your life and conduct, and the more you study the temptations that come into your mind, the more you are able to trace them to the lower creation, out of which we are gradually developing. The scientific people tell us that we were animals for millions of years. We then became savages, and everybody here has more or less of the savage in him. So, in fact, boys are built in three stories; the bottom story is a den of wild beasts, a perfect Noah's ark of evil practices and bad habits. And above that story is a den of savages, and they send all kinds of cruel and heartless and selfish thoughts into our minds; and above that, in the top story, there lives the real boy.

I tell you that for two reasons—that you may not be afraid of temptation, as if it were sin. Instead of being sin, it is a good thing, as many of you know. It is the opportunity of virtue, and it is just when we have temptations to fight against that we are able to become strong. And I tell you that for another reason—to keep you humble, in spite of the magnificent position you have earned for yourselves as soldiers, to remember, though the boy is having his innings while you have this meeting, the tiger and savage are still in your nature, and will be to the end of the chapter. So let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. And it may be an unmanly thing to say, but I think the best thing to do when the bear begins to growl and the savage begins to suggest and the lower nature begins to try to gain the upper hand, is not to close your fist and try to fight them openly—it is perhaps a cowardly thing to say, but there is no need to face them—simply to turn your back and fly. These things are stronger than you are, because the boy is young. He has only been living in the world perhaps a few thousand years, and the savage first began a hundred thousand years before that, so that is the position of a boy in charge of a savage and an animal, and the best way is just to turn our backs on them and fly. An open fight is very little use, because we are almost sure to come off worst when we try that plan. But by far the best way is not to live in the lower part of our nature at all. Paul put that splendidly in one sentence when he said: "Walk in the spirit"—that is, walk, live in the top story. Live all your life there, and then the evil suggestions will never come to you.—North

The Union Signal
AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—MISS ESTHER PUGH, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

I will say unto the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God, in Him will I trust.—Ps. 91:2.

OUR BILL OF FARE

opens this week with a timely poem, "Concerning Mosquitoes," by Anna A. Gordon. Mrs. J. C. Bateham utters a song of praise for the act of Congress which closes the Exposition gates on Sunday. Dr. Felix L. Oswald gives another installment of his valuable Temperance Notes from Foreign Lands. The position of women in the Psychical Congress is outlined by a member. A pathetic story founded on true life bears the title, "Not Identified." One of "ye editors" tells how Anna Gordon's birthday was celebrated under the caption, "It is better to have been born." Mrs. Josephine Butler, of England, occupies the Correspondence department with an able letter on Social Purity. The Children are well provided for by Aunt Jane and the Household is, as usual, attractive and instructive. Vermont's honored president leads the Field's news, and the editorial matter covers vital current news.

"AND HAVING DONE ALL, STAND!"

Nothing that we can present to our readers will interest them more than the rôle of Lady Henry Somerset in the pitiful drama enacted recently in the Forest of Dean. This is the name of a constituency made up chiefly of miners, and situated about twelve miles from Eastnor Castle. While she was with us in America, Lady Henry Somerset learned that Sir Charles Dilke would stand as a candidate for Parliament from this place, at which she was greatly surprised, knowing that he had been twice adjudged guilty of violating the seventh commandment, his partner in evil-doing having been divorced from her husband on his account. There are features of his case darker if possible than this dark fact, but into the details we could not go in a paper like ours. The whole subject has been thoroughly canvassed by the press, both English and American, and white-ribboners have read the miserable recital.

Lady Henry Somerset at once drafted a petition and sent it to England to be circulated praying Mr. Gladstone who, when Mr. Parnell's case was before him, had taken such strong ground against that transgressor, to do the same in the case of Sir Charles Dilke. On her return to England, she, with other ladies of prominence, the Countess of Aberdeen, Lady Carlisle, and many leaders in all good works, circulated such a petition and sent it to the great Liberal leader. He seems to have regarded the cases of Parnell and Dilke as coming under different categories, and took the position that while a man was a candidate the moral and all other aspects of his case were to be passed upon by his constituents. Mr. Gladstone, however, caused it to be clearly known, and his wife still more clearly, that he had no connection whatever with the candidature and had given it not the slightest support, although, as we understand it, Dilke has claimed the contrary.

Among the urgent requests coming to Lady Henry Somerset to speak for different candidates, her voice being acknowledged as the most potent among English women on the platform, was an urgent and repeated invitation from Mr. Wemyss, the Conservative candidate, to oppose Sir Charles Dilke. She agreed to speak for him, and when this was known, friends of Dilke circulated the statement that the miners, who in large part compose the constituency of the Forest of Dean, would make her visit most uncomfortable. We all know from press accounts recently received, how outrageous is the conduct of British electors at political meetings. There is nothing in our country to be compared with it, and it is, perhaps, the most disgraceful feature of English politics.

Meanwhile, it should be remembered, that for a period of considerable length, William T. Stead, the brilliant editor of The Review of Reviews (who has done more to stir the people of England to the work of purity reform than any other man who ever lived upon the soil), has been massing evidence against Dilke, and using all of his great influence to antagonize Dilke's parliamentary ambition.

With these facts in mind let white ribboners contemplate the events of July 13th in Lidney town hall, Forest of Dean, filled to overflowing by the announcement that Lady Henry Somerset and others would speak. She was most reluctant to do this, but, as she recently wrote us, "It was so terrible that among all the women who professed so much devotion to the purity reform, not one could be found to stand up in this place and speak for women's cause." So she went by special train from Eastnor Castle with Miss Hood as her escort, and Mr. Stead came on board at Gloucester, where he had been publishing a special edition of a paper devoted to setting forth the facts concerning Dilke, and answering the false statements which that individual and his adherents had been making on every hand. When they arrived, a group of men was waiting at the train, but Lady Henry and Miss Hood walked quietly to the hotel, Mr. Stead going straight to the hall and sitting among the crowd. Soon the two ladies sought the hall and went directly to the platform. They found an audience that had been, many of them, imported for the occasion, decked with the yellow bow, which was Dilke's emblem, and with Dilke tickets stuck in their hat-bands. They were noisy, brawling fellows with plenty of alcoholics on board, and it was evident there was to be a row. Presently the candidate, Mr. Wemyss, came to Lady Henry and said, "They have organized this because you were coming; there is no one they dread but you; they are in terror lest you should speak, and determined that you shall not have the opportunity." The crowd yelled, hooted and hissed. The chairman tried to speak, but they would not listen and howled him down. A Member of Parliament then tried to talk but, finding that it was useless, refused to stand there to be simply bellowed at, and said that he hoped when any of them came to London they would receive greater civility. Sir John Dorington, another Member of Parliament, then rose and expressed his regret, as a resident of the place, that so distinguished an orator as Mr Darling had been refused a hearing; but Sir John was not able to get far with his speech when he, too, was compelled to sit down, being utterly unable to withstand the torrent of interruption. The chairman then appealed once more for silence, and Lady Henry Somerset was introduced to the meeting. It had already been suggested by the men on the platform that she make no effort to speak, but she replied, "I came by your invitation, and I shall stand up in the name of womanhood, even if I am not allowed to utter a word!" Then the candidate asked her if she spoke to say nothing about the moral aspects of the question! But she replied: "I came for that, and for that only. You must surely know that I, a Liberal and a white-ribboner, am not on this platform among Conservatives to speak for you who are a brewer, except that you are a candidate of pure life as against a Liberal of notoriously impure life. If I cannot say a word to these people I shall stand here for women, as a silent witness for those who cannot speak for themselves." This was, of course, not acceptable to the candidate, who went forward and made a speech saying that "he did not fight on moral grounds," and exhibiting a most unheroic aspect in the face of a splendid opportunity.

It is something for us white-ribboners to think about,—our beautiful leader standing there facing "the beasts at Ephesus" as truly as ever Saint Paul did. She who had everything at her command for a sheltered and luxurious life, had turned squarely away from it all in the name of God and of humanity and consecrated herself to the great needy cause of woman and childhood and the home! That she could so have stood looking out upon her audience with that melting tenderness and pathetic strength known so well and loved so much by us in America, and that they could have met her mild approach with yells and gibes and curses, tells the story of what they stood for as clearly as it tells for what the gracious woman stood who braved their insults for our holy cause. The English papers say that "after thus bravely waiting five minutes for the uproar to cease her ladyship bowed to the mob and retired from the platform, whereupon a resolution in favor of Dilke was carried with great applause." The papers also state that "the streets were filled by an excited crowd that followed Lady Henry Somerset with howls and curses to the station. The disorder had now become so great that the meeting was broken up. Lady Henry and Miss Hood went out by themselves at a side door and when they reached the hotel the great mob had assembled there. They left by the rear door and stood behind a wall till a carriage came for them but the mob broke through and came yelling after them. They drove off, however, but had not gone many yards when crashing through the glass door came a heavy beer mug thrown from a pot house which struck Miss Hood on the arm and showered glass into the carriage. Then came the worst. The howling mob was at the station and greeted them with a low, ominous growl. The ladies remained in the station but soon the special train that Lady Henry Somerset had provided came up and she stepped out upon the platform with Miss Hood by her side. The mob began closing in but the leaders saw that a crisis was inevitable and would harm Dilke's interests so they hustled Mr. Stead down the track and into the baggage van whereupon the ladies stepped on board, the train pulled out and away went our reformers barely escaping from the clutches of these "British freemen."

Not a woman was anywhere to be seen, but a great soul had that day been loyal to the cause of those who had neither voice nor courage to speak for themselves and it strikes us that in all the illustrious annals of Lady Henry's ancestors who fought under Marlborough and Wellington and who were counselors of kings, no act has been noted by the historian of a loftier heroism or a nobler devotion than the one that we have chronicled. Here are her simple words in speaking of it: "We were thankful to be safe and yet all the while, above the howling of the mob, I heard a voice saying, 'He shall give his angels charge over thee.' I have done what I could—I have stood up for women and their cause, literally and in the face of hopeless odds, and I am glad."

AN INTERVIEW WITH LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

BY WILLIAM T. STEAD.

We print this from an English paper to illustrate in full the situation. Dilke was elected—alas! by a large majority. The woman he wronged repented long ago and leads a humble, quiet life, devoted to charities among the poor. We think the purity workers should "take her up," inasmuch as the electors have "purged"—so the press hath it—that immaculate personage, Sir Charles.

Lady Henry Somerset is a Liberal, a home ruler, and the most brilliant and popular leader of the Temperance party in the United Kingdom. As president of the British Women's Temperance Association, her opinion of the duty of temperance electors in the Forest at the present election would in any case have been most useful, but as she happens also to live in the neighborhood, her advice is exceptionally valuable.

The Union Jack was flying from Eastnor Castle as an intimation that Lady Henry was at home, and before long I had the privilege of an interview with her on the terrace.

It was worth while making a much longer journey merely to stand on that terrace and look down upon the enchanting beauty of the scene. No lovelier landscape can be found, even in wooded Herefordshire. The castle itself is a treasure house of art, a palace of delights, stored with precious trophies of by-gone ages, the arms of heroes, the chef-d'œuvres of cunning artificers, and the more recent spoils of hunting forays in the Rockies. But the supreme charm of the place is the lake that lies deep down at the foot of the crag on which the castle is built. A more perfect gem more beautifully set was surely never chased by the Spirit which in the roaring loom of time fashions for the invisible the garment by which alone He is seen by mortal eyes. In the distance the Malvern Hills, up the wooded slopes of which strayed herds of deer, in the valley the silent lake with its water lilies and its swans—behind us the turrets of the castle, with the swallows' nests below its eaves, the air tingling with the rippling music of the fountain, and rich with the scent of flowers,—it was a place in which to forget even the Forest of Dean for awhile, and to bask like the roses in the summer sun.

"Are you really going to recommend the Foresters to vote for Mr. Colchester-Wemyss?" was my first query.

"Certainly. If I had a hundred votes he should have them all, every one. It would be a sin to keep back even a single vote."

"But, Lady Henry," I objected, "Mr. Colchester-Wemyss, they say, has shares in a brewery."

"I am sorry that Mr. Wemyss has anything to do with the making or selling of beer, but if I were to hold back on that account from giving him whatever support I could give him, be it little or much, I should be a traitor to the temperance cause."

"These are strong words—not to support a brewer to betray the cause of temperance! Is it not the other way?"

"I am no supporter of brewers as brewers. I heartily approve of the opposition to Captain Fenwick in Durham, where the Liberal leaders need to be taught that it will not do to foist brewers as candidates upon the Liberal party. But here in the Forest it is another matter. No one, with the least eye to what may be called the moral perspective, can mistake his duty to support Mr. Wemyss, brewer though he be."

"What do you mean by moral perspective?"

"Why, a sense of the comparative importance and proportionate urgency of moral issues. The temperance cause depends firstly, secondly and lastly upon the growing moral sense of the community. Anything that outrages that moral sense retards temperance reform. And it is difficult to imagine a more fatal outrage to the moral sense of the community than the return of Sir Charles Dilke to Parliament."

"Then you are quite convinced that Sir Charles Dilke is guilty?"

"Absolutely. But even if I doubted the justice of the verdict I would still say the same thing, until Sir Charles proved his innocence in the courts. The public in these matters must act on public grounds. It would be as wrong to vote for a man who is judicially declared to be guilty because of private belief in his innocence as it would be to oppose a man of whose guilt you had no legal or judicial proof, merely because of private gossip."

"But when was Sir Charles judicially proved to be guilty?"

"When the court divorced the Crawfords because it had been proved that Mrs. Crawford had committed adultery with Sir Charles Dilke. If Sir Charles has further evidence it is his duty to let the public test it in the usual way. To hold back such evidence, supposing it to exist, is in itself an offence against the conscience of the people."

"Well, then, taking it for granted that Sir Charles is guilty, at least is judicially declared to have been guilty, would not it be a fair compromise if temperance voters simply abstained from voting?"

"Certainly not. What every decent man or woman must desire is not so much to minister to the selfish satisfaction of his own conscience as to prevent an outrage upon the moral sense of the nation. His duty to the state is the first thing, and it is a poor way of discharging that duty to stay at home and refuse to give your vote to the man who is standing in the breach."

"But Mr. Wemyss will not vote for the direct local veto."

"I regret that Mr. Wemyss should stand where the Liberal leader stood a very short time since, but that is not the main issue at this election. The main issue—for most of us, the only issue—is whether a man who stands judicially proved to have done the cruelest of wrongs to the wife of his friend and colleague is to be declared by the Foresters a fit and proper person to make laws for English men and English women."

"Then you can, with a clear conscience, support Mr. Wemyss?"

"I should have a very guilty conscience if I did not. The temperance question, the purity question, the labor question, all these are part and parcel of the great moral question. The enemy attacks in force first one and then another of our advanced posts, and if we are not to rally to the defense of the threatened outpost, unless its commander agrees with us in all things, we shall be cut up piecemeal, and never make any progress. It is this kind of obstinate, irrational sectarianism that has paralyzed the temperance cause so many years."

"I take it, then, that you would urge all the temperance voters in the Forest to vote for Mr. Colchester-Wemyss?"

"Certainly; and he might be a much worse candidate from the temperance point of view than he is, for he favors trusting the people, and would hand over the whole control of the licensing question to the Councils which are the direct outcome of popular election. It is only the other day that we got even Mr. Gladstone a step further than that, and it would be impracticable and impolitic to insist upon every candidate stepping to the top of the ladder at a single stride."

"Why are you so opposed to Sir Charles Dilke's return?"

"Entirely on public grounds. If Sir Charles Dilke is defeated on the moral issue, the standard of what is permissible in a public man will be improved all along the line. Whether Liberal or Conservative, the wire-pullers would see that it was no use putting forward a candidate of scandalous character. In America they are lax enough in some things, but a candidate with a divorce record like Sir Charles Dilke's would be scouted everywhere."

"But if he is returned?"

"If he is returned the standard will be lowered irremediably. The party politicians will say: 'It does not matter what wrongs a man may have inflicted upon women, if Dilke is elected, the moral party may safely henceforth be left out of the reckoning.' After swallowing such a camel we need not strain at a gnat. The gates which we have been trying to close would be burst open, and evil would come in as a flood."

"You are very earnest about it, Lady Henry, and you a Liberal, too!"

"Yes, I am a Liberal, and a member of the Executive of the Woman's Liberal Federation. But I would be proud to stand on Mr. Wemyss' platform on this question for the sake of all the causes for which the Liberal women of England and America are so earnestly at work. Remember, we women are denied any direct share in electing the men who have to make laws for us and for our children. All unrepresented classes are neglected. All those who are excluded from citizenship are liable to be treated with injustice, because they are denied the means of protecting themselves which all other householders need. When a man tramples upon a woman as Sir Charles Dilke has done, his election is a direct encouragement to him, and to others like him, to do it again. You think you are only satisfying your conscience, do you, in refusing to vote for a brewer and an opponent of the direct veto when that brewer is the only man in the field against Sir Charles Dilke? Have you ever reflected at what price you are satisfying your conscience? The price is the destruction, so far as you are able to effect it, of the moral security which we have been all these years trying to build up for the protection of the weakest and the most helpless, and the most tempted of the human race."

As I listened to the glowing words of Lady Henry Somerset I began to understand somewhat of the enthusiasm which she has excited in America—where Miss Willard declares no one born on this side of the Atlantic has ever been so loved and admired since the days of Lafayette.

THE WAY OUT.

We should be exceedingly sorry to set ourselves up for experts on the labor question, when we are not; but we believe that he who runs may read some of the signs of these times, and that as the questions involved are so new there is nothing more helpful than for every one to contribute such thoughts as come to his or her mind from such study of the question as the daily press enables us to make; for nothing is truer than that it takes all of us to remember everything, and that the splendid everybody who knows so much more than everybody is the only philosopher who has survived. Let us then humbly throw our contribution into the witches' caldron of the great argument, humbly hoping that it may be a sweet and not a bitter twig of purpose and reflection.

In the first place we hardly think that the great strike at Homestead could have been handled much worse than it has been. Nothing is easier than to find fault, but we believe that the general opinion is, that a knowledge of human nature has not been illustrated in the methods of the management. To bring the Pinkertons was to flourish, at the start, a red flag in the face of a bovine. We do not defend the strikers. We lament the loss of life, as much in the case of the Pinkertons as of themselves; for the former were but the tools of those who sent them, and they have paid the dearest forfeit known to this world. We believe the bringing in of so many troops was not required, and that the cruelties inflicted upon Private Iams were unjust, and should cause the Colonel to be tried for malfeasance in office. Furthermore we think that instead of insinuating that arbitration is desirable, the nation should adopt a law to this effect: that when there is a disagreement between employers and employés, each of the parties in interest shall choose one person to represent them, and these two persons chosen shall choose a third, both the parties in conflict being obliged to accept the decision rendered by these three arbitrators. We believe that if Congress should adopt a resolution calling upon the Carnegie Steel Works and the strikers to do this in the interests of labor and of capital throughout the country, it would be a master stroke; for while it would not have a compelling effect, its moral effect, taken up and caught in the great whispering gallery of the press, would have well nigh the force of law. In short, we would recommend arbitration throughout this nation in all cases of strikes, lockouts, and disagreements in general. We fully believe this will be done ere long, and that it will eventually become the method of settling the disputes of nations as well as of corporations.

Profit-sharing is so reasonable and just that its domestication in our great labor centers is but a question of time. If the government should fix a percentage of profits beyond which capital should not go without sharing its profits with labor, it would be a help.

We believe in the eight hour law by means of which a much greater number of hands could be employed. It is easy enough to say that the law of supply and demand must regulate this matter; but in Australia the eight hour law has become the rule and works admirably, in spite of the theory that every man ought to be able to get as many hours' work out of the man he employs as he and that man can agree upon.

The larger outcome of all these more humane and Christian methods will minimize the friction and antagonism that now make millions miserable. We shall be obliged to change our system to that philanthropic momentum which results from identity of interest and the constant exchange of offices worthy the great name of brotherhood.

It is evident that labor has as good a right to organize as capital; but if labor is to organize, it will not do for its objects to be defeated by the coming in of other laborers to take its place. There must be a solidarity among the laboring people. If not, we should have the steadily increasing barbarism of non-union men working for capitalists, protected by troops against their brother workingmen. Of course no workman can be compelled to join a labor organization, but we must say we should think more highly of him for so joining, although we should be among the first to shoulder a musket (if we were Amazons!) against the workmen who would maltreat one another if they did not join the union. This is the greatest difficulty, so far as we have seen: the fact that the laboring people have not confidence in their leaders, or the heroism and the intelligence to become solid for their own interests. The everlasting friction that results from rivalry in leadership—and which seems to be the constant factor in all human undertakings—often groups the laboring people around forcible chiefs who hate one another as cordially as they hate the capitalist. What a deplorable weakness is this, and how it puts the men of brawn at the mercy of the shrewd labor leaders and the men with the bank accounts!

Then there is the growing evil of the non-admission of boys to learn trades, because the captains of industry will not allow their special line of occupation to be overcrowded lest wages be depressed.

We find that these last two questions trouble us more than all the rest, and the only remedy we have thus far heard suggested is, that human nature be revamped; but this is a good deal of a contract to undertake, especially in this hot weather. Seriously, the whole situation gives thoughts too deep for tears, and is the one problem above all others that should concentrate the studious care of steady-headed statesmen and enfranchised women; for we believe the temperance reform and the ballot for the gentler sex will prove to be the fulcrum and the lever over which the labor Archimedes must move the world.

THE following resolution was offered by the editor-in-chief of THE UNION SIGNAL at the conference of Reformers in Cincinnati, June 28, and is here entered as a matter of record:

WHEREAS, the Prohibition party in all its platform utterances has been much broader than its name implies regarding all the economic and moral reforms now demanded; therefore,

Resolved, that we recommend the change of the name of the Prohibition party to that of the National Reform party to take effect after the next presidential election.

ONE of our white-ribbon brothers puts the following conundrum: Is not woman a working-mate, to use an English term, and thus an equal rather than a ship-mate under a captain, possessing only delegated power? THE UNION SIGNAL answers this question with no uncertain sound from week to week, and we are glad to have our voice backed up in this stalwart fashion by a representative of the regnant portion of the genus homo.

"What is the beginning? Love. What is the course? Love still.
What is the goal? The goal is love on the happy hill.
Is there nothing then but love, search we sky or earth?
There is nothing out of love that hath perpetual worth;
All things flag but only love; all things fail or flee;
There is nothing left but love worthy you and me."

***

Seventeen churches are built every day in the United States. Two-thirds of the members of these churches are women.

***

The first voice raised in prayer and praise within the walls of Willard Hall was that of Mrs. Amanda M. Smith, the famous African evangelist, who, entering a few days since, and rejoicing her great heart in the beauty of the place, lifted up her tuneful voice and sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name!"

***

The value of publicity to any good enterprise is illustrated on a great scale by the committee that undertook to make the world know that we were to have a Fair in the city by the lake. Travelers report that throughout Europe one finds scarcely a city or town, a hotel or railway station that is not decorated by the beautiful pictures of the Fair buildings, or by the announcement of what is to be done, while the newspapers of Great Britain and the Continent give ample space to articles illustrative of what it is to be, and the general impression is that no other has ever approached this Fair in greatness.

***

The recent remark of an English clergyman concerning our country is believed to express the general sentiment. He said: "The old countries regard America as a father regards the son who has outstripped him in the race."

***

Rev. Anna Shaw made an admirable point in debating with the leaders of the People's party in Omaha, when she pointed out the inconsistency of a party organized to destroy monopolies, and yet building itself upon the two greatest and cruelest monopolies in the world—that of sex and the saloon. It is believed that the utterances in the preamble resulted from their final perception of the enormous wrong they would perpetrate did they take any other position than one of antagonism to the saloon and friendliness to woman's ballot, though we are sorry that unlike the stalwart Prohibitionists they adjourn these questions for some more convenient season.

***

"Death is that first breath which our souls draw when we enter life, which is of all life center."

***

When hansom cabs were first introduced into New York there was a tremendous discussion on all sides concerning the weighty question of propriety. This was whether or not it was proper for two women to ride in a hansom cab, or for one woman to appear in that particular variety of hack without a male escort! Despite the fact that the women employed hansoms quite as frequently as men in Europe, it was claimed that they showed a certain amount of indelicacy when they appeared in a public vehicle that had two wheels instead of four. But no one ever thinks of opening this question now, it having been recognized at last that women know where they should go better than men. This is a good conclusion to tie up to, and if faithfully followed will solve the "woman question."

***

Mr. Gladstone has well said: "The American constitution is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

***

The University of Virginia has decided to give women an opportunity to study the course prescribed for men and to stand the regular examinations upon those studies. This is a long step forward in a most conservative environment. Tuft's College, Boston, the leading educational center of the Universalist church, has opened its under-graduate department to women on the same terms and conditions as to men. The educational conquests of women this year are greater than at any previous time. The National Association of Principals of Seminaries has just held a session at Round Lake, N. Y. In regard to the co education of the sexes, the association was unanimous in the belief that where proper supervision was exercised co-education was the safest, most homelike and most morally healthful method of associating young people during their school days. The importance of athletic training was strongly urged. ON DUTY.

GREEN MOUNTAIN CONVENTIONS.

"Woman is a convention animal," said Mrs. Nichols at one of our meetings last year. Possibly the fact that woman is finding her true place in society, reform and philanthropy accounts for the numerous conventions that crowd the calendar of the year. Vermont is behind no state in organizations and consequent annual meetings.

In the W. C. T. U. it is thought best for each county to have one meeting, generally two days and evenings, and make a great occasion of it, having all or nearly all unions represented, and considering all the lines of state or National work adopted.

Our Lake Champlain county—Chittenden—was the first to order "the gathering of the clans," the 19th and 20th of May, at Jericho Corners. Most of the delegates came near the opening morning hour, and were surprised and delighted to find a juvenile escort at the station, thirty six in number, with banners flying and faces beaming, and voices singing sweet and clear, "Marching Songs" up the hill and into the church. The children also had part in the afternoon and evening, the older young people supplementing with a "medal contest." Prominent among the good things was the address of Mrs. E. B. Lund, county president, the earnest words of Mrs. H. H. Read on "Higher Education," and her vivid account of the "National"; Mrs. Wilbur's appeal for more evangelistic work; Mrs. Hart's eloquent presentation of what might be done for the world through the Sunday-school; and the beautiful welcomes. "Alcohol as a medicine" was ably presented on the pro side by Mrs. Galusha and sustained by Dr. Styles. We had stirring talks from ministers on personal responsibility, Rev. Mr. Woodruff emphasizing the need of woman's ballot in temperance work.

Orange county met May 24 and 25 at Chelsea, the home of their kindly and devoted president, Mrs. Corwin. The Y's were hostesses, and from all reports they even exceeded all record of former meetings. Mrs. Read was in attendance as helper and speaker, "an inspiration and joy." The report speaks of her as in charge of "The Temple Hour" devotional services, evangelistic and Sunday-school work and evening address. Rev. Mr. Howard and Mr. Hatch were strong aids throughout. The Y's held a "model meeting," charming all with their variety and efficiency. The few brave girls who have held the fort at Chelsea deserve our gratitude and affection. Mrs. Corwin declined reëlection, and her place is supplied by Mrs. L. T. Standish, of West Randolph.

Windham county had been invited to Wilmington, twenty miles over the mountains from Brattleboro. A perfect day, when the freshness of May was turning into the fullness of June. Oh, that matchless scenery of hill and vale, of countless shades of green on field and tree, of bursting blooms by waysido and unfurling ferns! Our little Marion, in company, was so pleased with the story of how Mother Nature makes hoods for baby ferns that she was continually shouting out about some belated group that "hadn't their heads out yet." The apple boughs bent down with their pink-white cups, and the fragrance and beauty stole into our senses so pervadingly that nothing of convention routine could weary us. Every bit of it was a delight, crowded as the program was. So much method was used by president and secretary, that all moved along like clock-work,—a musical welcome in spoken words, a rhythmic response in song, a president's address, most excellent, a secretary's report of the condition of the county, then a parliamentary drill by Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Kenyon. In addition to the department reports and discussions there were papers on "Physical Culture," "European Drinking Customs," "Prohibition," "Temperance Temple," "The Nickel Savings Stamp System," and others. There were two most unique features: The different young people's church societies sent a greeting each, that grew into glad welcomes, and the fine singing by the white-ribbon quartette, and the four church choirs of the village. The children occupied part of the first evening. Two young ladies, home missionaries in the county, helped us each day.

June 7 and 8 were the days of Addison county meeting at Lincoln, days of spiritual growth and coinage of courage in the midst of consecration. The Y's and L. T. L. had one evening; Mrs. Read, the other. Miss Phelps, of Middlebury, gave an admirable address on physical culture, and Mrs. Holden, of Burlington, helped in devotional meetings and discussions. Absorbing interest filled the church throughout the convention with sympathetic listeners.

Washington county, at Barre, held their "annual" June 8 and 9, with a profitable meeting. Mrs. Dr. Nichols, in a tender, impromptu verse, bade us welcome, Mrs. Denny, of Montpelier, responding. Here, as in almost every convention, there was a parliamentary drill, special attention given to the juvenile department and the plan of securing pledges for "total abstinence chain," and "non-alcoholics in medicine." Four pastors occupied the hour set apart for them, and the principal of the academy strongly emphasized early temperance education. One called attention to the fact that although a strike was in progress, and fifteen hundred men were out of employment, there were no drunkards to be seen, a tribute to the Law and Order League of Barre, that had enforced the prohibitory law. A paper of marked excellence was read by Mrs. J. F. Whitney, on "Conscience in Temperance Work," and Miss Irene Hubbard defined "A Young Woman's Duty" in choice words. Miss Chamberlain, our youngest county president, has the grace and tact of youth combined with maturer wisdom. Miss Yates gave the address the second evening on "Woman's Sphere," widening it out to equal size with man's, its circumference to be determined only by its diameter of improved opportunity.

In Caledonia county, the birthplace of our honored Madame Willard, we convened at South Ryegate, among the Scotch Presbyterians. Mr. Mills, an exponent of that faith, gave his entire time to our entertainment and his own edification as a sympathetic listener. A deep spirituality began with the opening service and continued to the close. Miss Shields, of West Barnet, in response, spoke of the sturdy character of the people, descendants of martyrs, and that their principles of devotion to truth were born in them. Rev. Mr. Hall, who lived at Berlin several years and who greatly helped us there in one of our first conventions, was constant in attendance and very helpful. Rev. Mr. Jackson, with his bright wife, brought us much encouragement. The address of Mrs. Nelson was timely and earnest, full of counsel and devotion. Mrs. F. A. Wright, of Maine, gave an excellent paper on "Social Purity," and also a Bible reading. Miss Yates spoke on "Woman's Sphere," creating much discussion among the gentlemen, and delighting all with her grace and varied gifts. Mrs. J. R. Drew, of Hardwick, is the new president.

Orleans preceded this meeting with an enthusiastic convention at Coventry, June 14 and 15. The White Ribbon Quartette furnished music in abundance, solos, duets, quartette and leading in choruses. The L. T. L. had charge of the opening the second evening. Mrs. Niles puts her whole heart into the juvenile work, and receives a rich return from the children and parents. Would every union had a Mrs. Niles. Each union furnished some part of the program, and thus much variety was secured. There were able papers by Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Sawyer, Mrs. Owen, Mrs. Spaulding, and Mrs. Hopkinson, in addition to departments. All the good people of Coventry came to the convention, and dined with the W. C. T. U., and ministers miles away were there with wives and children. An entire success was this convention. Mrs. Nelson and Miss Williams were unanimously reëlected.

Our eighth convention was at Rupert, in Bennington county, one day, but such a day! The 29th of June among the Green Mountains! A church gay with flowers and banners, tempered sunshine through stained windows, a dining hall shut off with folding doors, with tables set for over one hundred: dear, blessed Marthas with their white aprons placing the silver and glass, young girls tying bouquets for each plate, this is what our eyes beheld on entering. Mrs. A. F. Smith and Mrs. Blackmer kept the program moving rapidly. The Temple had a place "from conception to completion"; there were discussions on plans of work, papers, speeches, addresses, a "pastor's hour," in which five took part, and a medal contest to close with, the admission fee of ten cents paying all expenses. The visiting ladies from Granville, N. Y., were of much cheer to us.

Rutland county met at Proctor, June 30 and July 1, the most romantic place in our state. From the home of Fletcher Proctor, Mrs. Rice and myself looked out over the hills and wondered if the marvelous Creator had fashioned such another home for His children. The young people gave a fine contest in the evening, and the afternoon and morning convention hours were well filled. The second afternoon, from one until three, we visited the marble quarries and factories, saw the falls and crossed the suspension bridge, climbed the hill, and feasted our eyes while we refreshed our minds with the beautiful lessons of pure marble hid away by God, and by man's ingenuity and skill taken out of the heart of the mountains and shaped into form for use. An escort of the company's best men guided us around, so that the time was profitably spent. Then we gathered in the cool church with the children, who had badges of red, white and blue, to hear them recite and sing, and Mrs. Rice talk in her inimitable way. Could one photograph those children's faces as they sang with her, talked with her, and grew up to her thought, it would be praise enough. The children's convention was treated to ice cream and cake on the hillside at the close. It was my own privilege to spend one night with Miss Blakeley, our state Y superintendent, and take dinner with Mrs. Humphrey, who has the L. T. L. in charge.

Windsor held sway at Springfield, July 6 and 7, with Mrs. Rice as helper. A Demorest contest the first evening, Mrs. Rice the second. "The Needs of the Hour, and How to Meet them," and "Methods of Work and Difficulties," were among important themes discussed. Miss Joy remains in charge, to the satisfaction of all. Miss Yates had twelve or more appointments, and Mrs. Rice four in addition to the two conventions. A special helpful feature, not mentioned, was "A Model W. C. T. U. Meeting," conducted at Wilmington, by Mrs. A. A. Wyman, and at Coventry and South Ryegate, by the state president. It was my privilege to attend seven of the ten conventions, and to rejoice in the prosperity of Vermont W. C. T. U.

ESTHER T. HOUSH,
State President.

ALABAMA.

TEMPERANCE WORK IN DIXIE.

We are so far away from you down here in Alabama that I am afraid you will forget about us unless somebody writes now and then to keep you posted as to what is going on in temperance work in Dixie. This letter will tell you of a work originated and carried on by the W. C. T. U. of Birmingham.

From time to time during the past two years some of our members would report at meetings the finding of homeless girls and children, and ways and means for their relief would be discussed. In some instances they were sent to different orphan asylums in the state, but many cases were of such a character that these institutions could not receive them, and having no state institution for the care of such, we were obliged to send them to homes and convents in other states. At last, in February, of this year, after an earnest and prayerful meeting, it was decided that the Birmingham union should establish a home for friendless women and children.

We had no money but were rich in faith. Committees were appointed by our president to secure a house and solicit furnishings for it, and money contributions to defray expenses. So successful were they, that on the 1st of March the "Mercy Home" was opened with a matron and one girl as an inmate. Up to this time (July 14) we have sheltered, fed and clothed twenty-five women and children, and have now beneath its kindly roof, six little boys and girls, two babies and four young women. Others who have come to us have been provided with good homes.

Our Home was furnished almost entirely by donations from merchants and housekeepers, and is as yet dependent for its support upon monthly contributions in money. Perhaps some of the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, sheltered within comfortable and luxurious homes, may find it in their hearts to help us in this rescue work for the sake of Him who went about doing good. A postal note or money order addressed to our secretary, Mrs. W. L. Murdock, will find its way into our treasury, and help to care for one of God's little ones.

A board of managers, selected from among our W. C. T. U. women, plan and regulate all matters pertaining to the Home and its inmates, admit applicants, and solicit contributions for its support. Mother Marks, the matron, is a lovely, consecrated, Christian woman, with fair hair and clear, deep blue eyes that look directly into one's soul, winning the heart of the most obdurate. She is admirably fitted for the work, having received her training in New Orleans, in Mrs. Wolfe's home for young women and children.

As week after week goes by and we hear the reports from our admission committee of young lives that are rescued from influences that corrupt the body and destroy the soul, we thank our Heavenly Father that He put it into our hearts to do this work for Him, and pray that He will bless it more abundantly from day to day.

MRS. ANNIE T. BROOKS,
Birmingham.

MICHIGAN.

ETCHINGS.

Word comes from the tenth district of a unique medal contest, held at West Branch. The competing parties were all adults, and although the pieces were taken from the Demorest books, the prize was a year's subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL (what a bright idea, pass it along, sisters!), and was won by Mrs. Lottie Polhemus.

From Miss L. J. Newcomb comes word of the many demands upon her time and services, but she will be in Michigan part of August, September and October. Her efficient department secretary, Miss May Owen, of Lapeer, was drowned at Orion Lake last week. This is a sad loss to us, and a bright young life gone out.

Benton Harbor is the place to which we are invited for our next annual meeting. The Evart union, in giving account of the year's work, tells of sermons by all the clergymen, a series of lectures and the distribution of 175 copies of THE UNION SIGNAL. Their union sewing circle makes many garments for the needy.

From Cadillac comes account of the sixth annual convention, every union in the county being represented. Mrs. A. S Benjamin was present, and gave a very helpful parliamentary drill; the evening lecture was also well attended, her subject being, "Then and Now." Much of the energy and push in this county is due to the president, Mrs. Mary Gilbert.

Shiawassee county convention was also one of the best, there being over fifty visiting members, besides the delegates. Some came from curiosity, desiring to see, for the first time, a woman's convention, and how it was run. And the president writes, "We are ready for an onward and Godward move another year."

There were several little "asides" at our state convention. The executive committee was invited to a five o'clock tea at the home of the president of the Detroit central union, Mrs. Hollister, and afterward tendered a reception there, and presented with badges emblematic and handsomely painted by her corresponding secretary. The Indian children of the Catholic mission in the Upper Peninsula sent a box of arbutus to Mrs. Law whom they have learned to love. Miss Willard received a generous bunch, telling the story and holding it lovingly at the opening of her lecture—to the analytical mind a chain of reasoning, indeed. The presents given our beloved corresponding secretary were souvenir spoons, including the W. T. P. A. spoon, and an Oxford Bible. At one of our evening meetings Mrs. E. N. Law, the newly elected president of the twelfth district, recited with fine effect Mrs. Lathrap's poem, "Woman's Hour." A very fine Bible reading was given by Mrs. B. B. Hudson, our former state president, on "Enduring and Overcoming." Would you see it? Send for June Michigan Union.

Our state superintendent of unfermented wine, Mrs. M. E. Pengelly, Elm street, Kalamazoo, has published a little leaflet that is the argument in a nutshell. Mrs. H. N. P. Blodgett, Detroit, is president of the Willard union. For their summer work they have planned a series of weekly meetings. Their work is in jails, hospitals and the McGregor mission. Among their speakers of national reputation has been Miss Frances Griffin, of Alabama.

All the rural unions of the first district united in observing flower mission day at Wayne county house; the flowers were abundant, and the exercises were held in the chapel and listened to with interest. They showed that the work of both state and National superintendent had been constant.

The Detroit central union writes that the recent convention awakened much interest, and speaking of the different superintendents, who are all aggressive workers, notes this of Dr. Mary Willard in the missionary work: "They have engaged a man as her assistant, and the needed work is being well done." Dr. Agnew, of the Monroe Gold Cure, will treat, free, any patient sent there by this union. Mrs. Boutelle, the active superintendent of franchise, has a new plan, the very thing needed for the advanced ideas.

From the ninth district, Mecosta county convention is reported as a success, the president has organized three unions, one Y and three L. T. L's. The Jennie Casseday Y of Clio, sixth district, held a lawn social, flower mission day, giving a bouquet with our card to each of the band boys, who showed them the courtesy of refraining from smoking while on the lawn.

Yesterday your correspondent went to a reception at Rev. A. J. Covell, our Congregational minister's home, given to Rev. W. H. Walker, of Flint, who has just finished his studies at Andover, and out of a class of six competitors has taken a scholarship and goes to the German universities next month with his bride. The thing I note with joy was that he so proudly spoke of the time when he was a delegate to our state W. C. T. U. convention from the then Band of Hope of which he was an active, earnest member. His mother was one of our loyal, helpful workers for ten years. The successful contestant at the Cincinnati medal contest received her first three medals in this district under the tutelage of Mrs. T. B. Knapp, of Howell, where she then lived. Her gift is wonderful.

Mrs. Bowerman, county president of Ingham, writes of successful union meetings in which the young people were helpful. Agitation leaflets were read, and the singing was of a high order. Many new names of members were secured. The good work done by Mrs. Rounds last year is bearing abundant fruit. In their Baptist Sunday-school they take fifty copies of The Young Crusader. This faithful worker has recently obtained nearly one hundred signatures to the triple pledge.

The Lathrap W. C. T. U., of North Lansing, visited the county house, thirty-seven in number; after a bountiful lunch they held gospel service, and Mrs. Wood, the popular president of the union, spoke of the blessings of the gospel, free for all others, and added a word as the bouquets were distributed, the inmates earnestly asking the good ladies to come again. They found a home for a young mother and child, and this is to be one of the cares of this union hereafter. Mrs. Green, our L. T. L. superintendent, forwards the encouraging word of nine new L. T. L's since convention; others have been revived.

Mrs. Mann, of Albion, writes that early last year, through the department of higher education, the Michigan W. C. T. U. offered a prize of $25 for the best essay on the subject, "The Destruction of the Liquor Traffic Necessary to the Permanency of our Government." The contestants were limited to undergraduates of Michigan colleges. Olivet College has the honor of winning the prize through Mr. Dellmore A. Teller, from Olds. We congratulate Mr. Teller on his success, and hope this is only the beginning of his work in the cause of temperance.

Our gifted president, just home from the South, goes to Bay View for a few days, then in August to Prohibition Park, having charge of the school of methods there; her month of rest had many urgent calls and they were all heeded.

Our new editor of The Michigan Union takes charge this month; such is the literary ability of Mrs. Parish that it can be only a success. Our state treasurer begins a "financial catechism." I would recommend this to all state papers—thought on money matters seems a little confusing to some of us—this "Question and Answer" makes it very plain.

The summer is here with all its beauty, all its sorrow for the temptations upon our streets in cooling, tempting drinks that only bring fever and discontent to the tempted ones. No time for us who do His work to pause, but let us each prayerfully, steadily, hopefully, daily keep step onward, "without haste, without rest."

"The conflict raged, the flag was like to fall
As forth into the battle rushed the Lord;
No jeweled scabbard from His palace wall
Was that He took; He grasped the trusty sword
Girt to His thigh, the nearest to His hand,
Then I put up a prayer that I might be
Just such a weapon by a golden band
Held near His reach, that He might honor me."

MRS. C. H. JOHNSON,
State Reporter, Flint.

KANSAS LETTER.

"God bless our native land!
Firm may she ever stand,
Through storm and night,
When the wild tempests rave,
Ruler of wind and wave,
Do thou our country save
By thy great might!"

The annual explosion of the patriotic firecracker and the quadrennial gathering of the four national political parties—each of whom expects to elect its candidates—are all now things of the past, and the country has settled down again to its normal condition. I am glad to be able to report that both the Republican and People's party of Kansas have placed a plank in their respective platforms, favoring a submission to the people of an amendment to our constitution, granting full suffrage to women, and the state Prohibition party, from its past record, will follow suit when it convenes. The Democrats recently met and indorsed the People's party ticket. If this places them on the platform of that party, they, too, are pledged in favor of equal rights, regardless of sex. If the amendment is submitted it will no doubt carry. The "G. O. P." reaffirms its allegiance to our prohibitory law, and recommends a more vigorous enforcement of the same.

The columns of THE UNION SIGNAL have already noted the recent sad bereavement of our state president, Mrs. Grubb, in the loss in one day of a loving and trusted son and a darling little grandson. The hearts of all her white-ribbon constituency go out to her in her sorrow, and our prayers ascend for her that she may be sustained and comforted, as He alone can comfort.

In reply to the many letters received from other states, and according to promise made in my last letter, I give below a very full explanation of the "Baby Show" and "Lullaby Entertainment," as given so successfully by the Americus union, and reported by its president, Mrs. M. M. Coman. Verily it seems that there is something "new under the sun" even at this distance from the days of Solomon: "For the 'Baby Show' a medium sized first floor hall is wanted. Decorations, all the pictures of babies and children procurable and plenty of flowers. Have low, easy rocking chairs for the use of mothers with babies. In one corner one or two old-fashioned cradles, and a baby hammock for sleepy little ones. Entrance free. Special invitation to all mothers with babies. Money made from a sale table at one end of the hall. Candy, popcorn in various forms, cookies and small cakes, home-made children's toys, balls, rattles, paper windmills and kid glove dollies, little hand-made articles for babies' use, bibs, caps, sacks, etc. Each baby present was presented a white satin ribbon badge lettered in gold paint, 'Baby Show,' with date. Prizes might be offered. What is left on sale table to be sold at auction before dispersing. For the 'Lullaby' a larger hall is necessary, well lighted, and having a good stage. Decorate room with plants, flowers and pictures of babies. From various sources, such as 'Childhood, Its Care and Culture,' back numbers of Babyhood and Babyland, poems and songs relating to lullabies of different nations were selected, and given in costume, using an old-fashioned cradle draped in various ways appropriate to the nation represented, in which rested a large doll in long clothes. One of the sweetest of these was the Puritan lullaby. The mother plainly dressed in gray with white cap and kerchief, singing Watts' 'Hush my Child,' etc. Five nationalities were represented, with suitable recitations between. A good-night prayer was sung by two little girls in white gowns, kneeling by a trundle-bed, and was a very touching little scene. Their prayer was the common one, 'Jesus, tender Shepherd, hear me.' After this came an original but 'taking' feature, namely, six scenes from a child's life: 1. Baby's first outing; 2. First step; 3. First picture; 4. First top-boots and trousers; 5. Good-night story; 6. First going to school. A little thought makes these, part tableaux and part dialogues, very interesting and pretty. Songs, a mock baby-show with leather medals for prizes, and grown boys and girls for the babies, some recitations and a burlesque on 'Rock-a-bye, baby' closed the evening program. In the burlesque, the ladies quartette sang the pretty poem, while, in full sight of the audience, on a cot, lay a six-foot boy baby in a white gown, asleep, snoring audibly between the verses. At the beginning of the last chorus he began to kick, baby-like, and wave his arms, and just as the ladies behind the curtain sang, 'Down comes rock-a-bye, baby and all,' the cot 'doctored' beforehand, came down sure enough, and the big baby crawled off the stage crying lustily. Some one in the audience sent up a bottle of 'soothing syrup' instead of a bouquet."

To this might be added a "doll drill" such as I saw executed the Fourth, in LeRoy, in which the soldiers were little misses, with dolls in long clothes instead of weapons of warfare. The military drill was excellent; when the command to "load" was given, the dollies were all fed with a spoon hanging from the girdle. At "reverse arms" the dolls were stood upon their heads and in "grounding arms" were laid upon the floor. Other laughable and amusing orders were executed, making the drill a very interesting part of the day's program. The dollies and the little girls were uniformed alike, with white dresses, red caps and blue sashes. A motion song from "Mother Goose," "Baby, baby, oh, my darling baby," was a fitting close to the exercise.

The sixth district held its semi-annual convention in the M. E. church at Norton. The church was beautifully decorated and the presence of the stars and stripes proclaimed the loyalty of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. M. L. Berry is the efficient district president. Mrs. Goldsmith, of Athol, gave an excellent report of the department of narcotics. The following superintendents also gave good reports of work done in their several departments: Young woman's work, Miss Ruth Haynes; Sunday schools, Mrs. Keizer; press work, Mrs. Stanley; petition and franchise, Mrs. Welch; peace, Mrs. Hester; juvenile and contest work, Mrs. Carson. Jewell county was awarded the prize for greatest increase in membership for the past six months.

A pleasant incident, breaking the monotony of the regular business, was the presentation to the convention of the baby granddaughter of the president. The evening addresses were by Colonel Jones, of Norton, J. Howard Moore and the district president. Dinner was served at the church each day of the convention, which was highly appreciated and enjoyed by all. Among the visitors were the Revs. Allen, King, Christian and Calhoun, each giving timely talks, thus aiding in the good work by "helping those women."

The convention held at Burr Oak was the largest and best ever held in Jewell county. All the sessions were full of interest and great earnestness was manifested. Much good work done was reported all along the line. Legislative and petition work, Sabbath observance, non-alcoholic medication, soldiers, railroad and the peace department had each been especially aggressive. A contest was the feature of the evening, on the medal plan. There were seven contestants, Mrs. Abbie Flood, of Burr Oak, securing the prize, which was a fine copy of Talmage's work, "From the Manger to the Throne."

Anderson county W. C. T. U. met at Glenlock, Mrs. Julia Westein, county president. The welcome address was given by Miss Jennie Henry, and the response by Mrs. Burrows. The meeting was composed of intelligent delegates, who worked with systematic dispatch. Three of the five unions were reported. Garnett union is especially active. Evangelistic work was reported by Mrs. Palmer, and prison work by Mrs. Hiatt. A plan was adopted to raise money for county fair work. The treat of the evening was the eloquent temperance address of Rev. Paxton, pastor of the U. P. church, of Glenlock. Dinner for the convention was served in the dining-room of Mrs. J. M. Caldwell. The discussions during the convention were full of interest. Among the good resolutions adopted were these: "That we would discourage the movement for a constitutional convention." "That we hold in grateful remembrance those men who bravely advocate a just political recognition for all, irrespective of sex." "That we express our sympathy for our sister workers in the suffrage reform movement, and pray that their work may meet with the reward of a glorious fulfillment."

As a fitting sequel to the tribute paid our nation's dead on Decoration day, on the day following the Coffey county union met at Burlington, to discuss the best weal for the living. Every session was filled with good things. Lovely flowers were in profusion everywhere, and the earnest, pleading prayers and quiet, determined faces spoke forcibly of the power pertaining to this work for God and humanity, and that the dawn of a better day is at hand. The pastors of the different churches gave "aid and comfort," and cheered us not a little. The welcome address by Mrs. Michal was worthy of the woman and the union, and the impromptu response by Mrs. Minnie Evans, voiced the feelings of the delegates present. There are four unions in the county, and each was well represented. Members of the colored union took part in the exercises, and an encouraging feature was the presence at the evening meetings of a large number of colored men and boys. The first evening home talent was brought to the front, and the second we had the pleasure of listening to Miss Amanda Way, a veteran worker in the I. O. G. T's. One session was devoted to memorial service for two deceased sisters, when touching tribute was paid to their memory, and short biographical sketches were read. The table was beautifully decorated with flower-pieces, pure and white while the white ribbon was tastefully intertwined. At the close of the service a contest was held on the medal plan, and two prizes were awarded, one, a picture of Miss Willard in a handsome frame, to Mrs. Carpenter, the second, same picture unframed, to Mrs. Kimball. The ladies acquitted themselves with credit, and at the close of the contest a picture was also voted to Mrs. Kate Bryan. All did so well it was difficult for the judges to decide. Good resolutions were passed, and it was decided to hold a county mass convention in October.

Little River sends a report of the work done by Rev. C. H. St. John at that place, lecturing to men and boys, and circulating the triple and White Cross pledges. He organized a White Cross League with twenty-nine members; twenty-nine signed the liquor pledge, and twenty-seven the tobacco pledge. The topic of one address was, "Sound the Alarm," and at its close the W. C. T. U. pledge was circulated, also one against gum chewing. Ten new names were added to the union and eighteen honoraries, and thirty-six decided to give up the pleasure of chewing gum.

The W. C. T. U. school of methods at the Ottawa Assembly was well attended, but a full report has not been sent me. A grand gold medal contest was a part of the program on "Temperance Day," seven counties being represented. Miss Genie Chenoweth won the coveted prize.

MRS. S. S. WEATHERBY,
State Reporter, Le Roy.

RHODE ISLAND.

JUNE BLOSSOMINGS.

"In Eastern lands they talk in flowers,
And they tell in a garland their loves and cares;
Each blossom that blooms in their garden bowers,
On its leaves a mystic language bears."

And our W. C. T. U. speaks the same language. On the 9th of June, clusters of beautiful flowers tied with knots of white ribbon, were scattered all over our state, bearing to the inmates of prisons, almshouses and hospitals their messages of love and care, tokens of our common brotherhood as children of the All-Father, repeating the precious thought, "If God so clothe the grass of the field, shall He not much more clothe you?"

But we must speak in many tongues for there are Parthians and Medes and Elamites to-day who do not yet understand the language of our W. C. T. U., and we would reach them all with our message of warning and hope. So this has been a month of meetings, indoors meetings and out-of-doors meetings; formal and informal; grown up meetings and juvenile meetings, always with the one thought, "that we might by all means save some."

June 1 the Y conference met in Westerly. Eleven unions were represented. Encouraging reports were given of work accomplished during the past, and plans laid for future doing and giving in many directions. A common purpose brings the nations near, and in grateful recognition of the work undertaken by Miss Isabel Gibson for the young women of France, the Y's recommended that the unions give fifty cents each to aid this work. One unique feature of the conference was the giving of antidotes for discouragements. There were so many and all "warranted sure cure," that it seemed as though no one who knew of them need ever have the "blues" again.

Four county conventions in one month in a state that numbers but five counties all told, show that white-ribboners realize that the summer time has its special opportunities for work as well as for recreation.

Newport county met in convention on the island of Jamestown, where clear skies and salt breezes with earnest, stirring words, and "spirits attuned to all beautiful things," combined to make the day one to be long remembered.

West Greenwich drew large delegations from Kent county. Schools were closed and farmers left their crops, some of them driving long distances and coming again after supper to attend the evening session. There was the largest attendance of men that a temperance meeting has ever called together in that place.

At the Providence meeting the superintendents of two new departments in our state work were introduced. With a growing sense of the importance of parlor meetings to bring our work before some who would go to the house of a friend when they would not go to a public lecture, we have made this a special department with Mrs. L. W. Brinton at its head. Railroad work has also been introduced, with Mrs. Charles Peckham as superintendent. Miss Edith Larry, daughter of Rev. J. H. Larry, editor of the Independent Citizen, has just been appointed superintendent of franchise, and read a spicy paper on the subject. Our ex-president, Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, was also with us, and spoke a few earnest words. On July 5th she was united in marriage with President Cheney, of Bates College, Maine. The best wishes of her white ribbon sisters go with her.

Providence union is doing good work in the line of parlor meetings under the charge of Mrs. Winship. Evangelistic meetings are held regularly in various places, and the union is rejoicing in the fact that the temperance educational law is removed from the present possibility of becoming a dead letter, for the superintendent of Providence schools has asserted that books shall be placed in the hands of scholars, and teachers shall be required to teach temperance physiology the same as other lessons.

Carolina has held an interesting and entertaining experience meeting. At a previous meeting it was voted that each member should try to raise a certain amount to give toward the Outlook fund, and their different methods of earning the money showed pluck and ingenuity. One woman tended the mill gate, one carried a picture, another raked the garden, and still another took in washing. Two women, one blind and the other having but one arm, entered into partnership. The blind one shelled corn for the other to pop, and also assisted in pulling candy. The wife of a councilman chopped wood, but the friends of her husband were so shocked that he should oblige his wife to do such work, she had to explain that she requested him to hire her, and to give the reason therefor. Every one had something to tell, and after the sale of doughnuts made by the president from the Madame Willard recipe, and tied with a white ribbon, the total receipts counted up to over twenty-five dollars.

North Scituate always has something to tell. On election day, despite many discouragements, they put up their booth right next to the voting place, and sold refreshments to the voters as they came and went. They were told that there would be rough language at least, but not an uncivil word was spoken, and the literature was courteously received, with the promise that it should be carefully read. They made ten dollars for temperance work, and a larger supply of food could have been readily sold. Miss Eliza Mowry, one of the leading spirits, has obtained over four hundred signatures to the pledge. She was pleasantly surprised a few days since by the arrival of a company of W. C. T. U. friends from the surrounding unions, who, after a short stay within doors, adjourned to the shore of the lake to enjoy the lunch which they had brought and to discuss ways and means of work. Miss Alice Cargill has also had a pleasant gathering of city workers at her country home. The union at Cumberland, of which she is president, had a grand rally day for the children, with recitations, songs and speeches. Wood River union had a clam-bake on the Fourth of July, with speeches morning and afternoon.

Out of door meetings are held regularly at Pawtucket, Olneyville Square and other places.

The L. T. L's are doing good work under their efficient leader, Mrs. J. H. Pay. Westerly Legion says it will have to move into a larger room if the children keep coming in. The attendance has been 135.

Middletown Legion gave an entertainment and netted eight dollars for the Temple fund. Mt. Pleasant has an Isabel Somerset Legion of forty members. A Sunday service conducted by Mrs. Pay, at Branch Avenue, called out 135 children. This makes nine addresses that she has given besides regular Legion work.

The Band of Hope at Central Falls held a grand rally before the summer vacation. Mrs. William Newell, who has been their faithful leader for nine years, resigned. The children presented her with a birthday book as a token of their appreciation of her work for them, but her best reward will be the boys and girls who are growing up to be strong temperance men and women as the result of her instruction.

"The path of a good woman is strewn with flowers; but they rise behind her footsteps, not before them." This is the message that the season brings to each earnest worker in our W. C. T. U. How many a woman, pressing bravely on in barren ways, sowing as best she may, when the pause comes, will rejoice as she looks back over the pathway, to see the fadeless flowers springing from her sowing, and blossoming for the King's garden.

MIRIAM EARLE,
State Reporter, Valley Falls.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

"WOMAN AND REFORMS" was the subject of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap's masterly address at Damascus, O., July 6.

THE address of Mrs. Helen M. Stoddard, president Texas W. C. T. U., is changed from Fort Worth to Dallas, Texas.

MRS. JOSEPHINE C. BATEHAM, National superintendent of Sabbath observance, gave five addresses at the Southern Assembly, Waynesville, N. C., last month.

AUGUST 1 was a grand rallying day at Island Park, Rome City, Ind. The program included an address by Mrs. J. R. Nichols, state president, and a tri-state gold medal contest.

THE net proceeds of the trade carnival held by the Chattanooga, Tenn., W. C. T. U., were $1,350, and not $350 as misprinted in these columns recently. Would that more W. C. T. U. treasuries could be enriched in like manner.

THE second annual convention of W. C. T. U. No. 2 (colored) was held in Statesville, N. C., June 29, 30 and July 1. The chair was ably filled by Mrs. M. J. O'Connell. Twenty-five lines of work were adopted and superintendents were elected. Consecration meetings and other services were duly observed and a fresh impetus given to the earnest workers.

MRS. MARY READE GOODALE was elected president of the Louisiana W. C. T. U. at its recent annual convention. Mrs. Goodale has long served the cause as a most successful organizer, and her state could not have made a better choice. She is now endeavoring to secure a state industrial school for girls, and to have the age of consent raised by the legislature; also to have two women placed on the Louisiana state board of education. Mrs. Caroline E. Merrick, for ten years active president, was made honorary president.

MRS. FRANCES J. BARNES, National superintendent of the Y. W. C. T. U., unable to be present in person, sent a message of greeting to the kindred society, the Y. P. S. C. E., at its great convention held in Madison Square Garden, New York City, last month. She received in reply the following:

Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, Skaneateles, N. Y.

DEAR MADAM:—Your letter of greeting to the Eleventh International Convention of Y. P. S. C. E., was read and received with great applause. We voted you our heartiest greetings. The Endeavor societies are solid for temperance. Yours cordially,

RALPH W. BROKAW,
For the Convention.

ALTHOUGH there is no local union at present in the neighborhood of Riddles, Douglas county, Oregon, there are a few intelligent and determined white-ribboners who can and do try to enforce the prohibitory laws. The development of the nickel mines in that region has drawn a crowd of workmen with the would-be liquor-sellers in its wake. The first saloon-keeper was brought before the grand jury and fined; an attempt to procure license by petition was overcome by aid of the mining company, which would employ no man found intoxicated or who would sign such a petition. A saloon drug-store is the latest attempt at evasion of the law which the temperance loving dwellers in this beautiful valley of southwestern Oregon must oppose.

Official Communications.

THE SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS DEPARTMENT.

It is the aim of this department to establish school savings banks in public and private schools and homes; to introduce practical economy, individual thought and self-responsibility to the whole people; to lift the population, through systematic saving, above penury, idleness, and their resultant debauchery and crime; by inculcating thrift to equalize the distribution of money, giving the girl as well as the boy, the woman as well as the man, the security of business knowledge and personal independence. MRS. S. L. OBERHOLTZER, Nat'l Supt.

Norristown, Pa.

CHINESE LITERATURE.

You all wish to become intimately acquainted with the W. C. T. U. Chinese literature. It is excellent. There are three leaflets purposely translated for the department, others by missionaries, in all twenty-six, five of which are on narcotics and alcohol, the others, gospel leaflets. Send for price list and see that each Chinaman is provided.

Address MRS. M. S. CAREY.
506 S. Second St., San Francisco, Cal.

FRANCHISE DEPARTMENT.

Mrs. Mary E. Haggart, of Indianapolis, Ind., has been added to the list of lecturers in the franchise department. Mrs. Haggart has a wide reputation as a speaker upon temperance, suffrage and other subjects. The addition of her name adds strength to the already attractive list of the National W. C. T. U. State and county superintendents are urged to press this subject by calling these able exponents into the field; also by literature supplements in state and county papers, discussion at public meetings, etc. It will soon be time to gather in the fruit for the meeting at Denver. Let us hear of special progress during the summer assemblies.

LOUISE C. PURINGTON, Nat. Supt.,
ALICE STONE BLACKWELL, Asso. Supt.

3 Park Street, Boston.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL NOTES.

The Board of the National Temperance Hospital has nobly planned to carry on the work that temperance principles of these days demand for the upbuilding of human strength. It was with pleasure that friends were greeted and introduced to the hospital in its new location, July 11. "Oh, how nice!" "What a delightful place!" "To be sick in such a pleasant place as this does not seem so dreadful." "What lovely, airy rooms," and other exclamations of like import came from friends as they were shown over the building. When all were assembled in the parlors and listened to the words of encouragement that were spoken by friends of the cause, the hearts of all were in accord with Miss Willard when she said she was glad for the songs that had been sung, for the prayer in behalf of the work of the hospital that had been sent heavenward to be recorded on the angel's book, and for the true, strong words of President Blanchard, the ring of whose words was clear and strong, as he spoke of the educational work to be done by the hospital, and the hope of the time coming in the not far off future, when no physician would dare prescribe beer to the mother nursing an infant. The thousands of workingmen as they go to and from their work, day in and day out, must be dealt with as they are found, and strengthened physically as well as morally. He hoped and believed that some philanthropic man or woman would come forward and purchase a home for the hospital. Miss Willard was glad for the encouraging words of Rev. Martin, as he said he believed in big undertakings, and that success would be met if the hospital had branched out to larger undertakings still. All were glad for Miss Willard's words of wisdom as she spoke of the unity that gave strength to women and allowed them to carry on this great work. She referred to the hospital as a temple of pain, and yet from that pain comes an awakening that the soul would never know were it not compelled to pass through these hours of suffering. The physical suffering is akin to the mental that breaks this heart of stone. A temperance hospital was organized twenty years ago in England by men. Thank God that there were men who would organize such an institution. But in this nation there was breadth enough for women to take hold of so grand a work.

We owe many thanks to these kind friends who spoke so many words of encouragement and cheer, and hope the time is not far distant when the work shall have so increased that a still larger building will be needed to meet the demands made upon it. Then we hope these friends will again be with us and help us with words of wisdom.

One by one friends are lending a helping hand to the hospital. Mrs. Carl Saler has furnished one of the rooms.

We read the following letter with interest: "Inclosed find $9.67 which our little union sends for the Temperance Hospital building fund. I wrote you in April, sending $3 then, stating that we were planning for an entertainment. The inclosed is the result of our efforts in that line, and though we met with many discouragements and some opposition, still we were well supported and feel that our proceeds are reasonably large. Yours for temperance, Mrs. V. M. Cronkhite, president W. C. T. U., La Grange, N. Y."

The above words tell us of efforts in our behalf. The wave of usefulness resulting from these entertainments does not break on the shore when the money has been sent to us, but it has a more far reaching circle of influence, for these waves of thought will wash along the shore of men's beliefs and arrest many a stone of error that has been deposited there by the custom of ages. The educational work of entertainments in behalf of the hospital will lead to thought and investigation, which in time will tend to an increased demand for the temperance physician as well as the temperance law maker.

ELLEN SNYDER, Sec.

Publisher's Notes.

A SUCCESS.

One of the W. C. T. U. Automatic Fountains was put in place at the post-office in Chicago last week, and on Thursday afternoon, July 28, was used for the first time. An immense crowd gathered around it at once—three or four deep—and nine hundred and ninety-six persons drank of the wild cherry phosphate it furnished. It was a great success. One should be placed in every post-office and other public place without delay. For particulars send to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE BEST YET.

The fair number of THE UNION SIGNAL, which will be issued under date of August 11, will be the finest number ever printed. Distinguished agriculturists will give their views of the situation, while such writers as Mary A. Livermore, Emily Huntington Miller, Dr. Bessie V. Cushman, Mrs. Josephine Nichols, Mrs. M. C. Campfield and others will aid Miss Willard in furnishing material for the most attractive sheet ever prepared for the clans who gather at state and county fairs. In addition to this, a World's Fair supplement will be added. This will be illustrated, many of the designs being prepared by our own artist. Now is the time to advertise the W. C. T. U., by circulating a paper which will be read with interest and cherished for its attractive appearance.

We appeal to unions everywhere to see that it is scattered generously at every fair held this fall.

Let all the unions in a county unite in providing a generous supply for the county fair.

Let state unions appropriate generously to scatter this UNION SIGNAL at the state fair.

Send single copies to rural homes whose inmates do not attend the fair.

Price for fair number, with supplement, if ordered before August 5, $1.50 per 100; after August 5, $1.57 per 100.

No time should be lost. Order without delay.

Send all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DO NOT FORGET,

In planning decorations for your booth at the fair, that we still have some of the aquarelle-tint pictures of Miss Frances E. Willard. You should introduce her to all newcomers. So send for one or more copies. A letter recently received says of it:

"The picture of Miss Willard was duly received. It is very beautiful and far surpasses my expectation in every respect."

Price 50 cts. each.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Send for Campaign package. Price 10 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

The Advance Guard is gaining favor everywhere. It fills a "long felt want." Send for sample copy and see. Price 5 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

EVERY W. C. T. U. should secure a copy of the "Young Woman Journalist." Price $1.50. Send for it.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

Investments.

Ten-Year First Mortgage 6 Per Cent Gold Bonds of the Lakota Company, Chicago, Ill., owning the Lakota Apartment Hotel, corner of Michigan Avenue and 30th Street. Date, April 1st, 1892. Due, April 1st, 1902. Denomination, $1,000, Coupons, payable April and October. Amount of Issue, $200,000. Northern Trust Company, Chicago, Trustee. Insurance, 300,000, in favor of Northern Trust Company, for the benefit of bondholders.

$500,000 Topeka Railway Company's 4 1-2 per cent First Mortgage, 30-Year Gold Bonds. Price to net investors, 5 1-4 per cent, namely, 88 3-4 and interest.

$75,000 Temple Trust Bonds. These are the W. C. T. U. Bonds, secured dollar for dollar by a collateral deposit of stock of THE TEMPLE.

Address

H. C. SPEER, Banker,
237 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

See full particulars of these Standard Investment Bonds on first page of THE UNION SIGNAL, next week's issue.

THREE HARVEST EXCURSIONS.

Half Rates via the Illinois Central.

Aug. 30th, Sept. 27th and Oct. 25, 1892.

The Central Route will sell Excursion tickets to the Agricultural Regions of the West, Southwest and South, at one fare for the Round Trip, from stations on its lines north of Cairo, on August 30th, and September 27th. A third excursion will be run to the South and Southwest on October 25th. Your Local Ticket Agent will give you full particulars in regard to these Harvest Excursions; arrangements can also be made in this connection to visit the desirable Railroad Lands for sale by the Illinois Central in Southern Illinois on obtaining special permission to do so by addressing the Company's Land Commissioner at Chicago, Mr. E. P. Skene. In addition, a few weeks before the first Excursion date, your Local Ticket Agent will be able to furnish you with a special Folder, issued by the Illinois Central, which will give you particulars of these Harvest Excursions in such form as will enable you to plan your journey at home. Should you not be within call of a railroad ticket agent, address A. H. Hanson, G. P. A., Illinois Central R. R., Chicago, Ill.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad.

Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

TWO HARVEST EXCURSIONS — HALF RATES TO THE WEST.

August 30th and September 28th.

On these dates the BURLINGTON ROUTE will sell tickets from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis to the farming districts of Nebraska, Colorado and Northern Kansas. Half rates will apply, and tickets will be good for twenty days. Nebraska in one year produced three hundred million bushels of corn, besides other grain, fruit and live stock. Write for free pamphlets, maps, etc., to P. S. Eustis, G. P. A., Burlington Route, Chicago, Ill.

ASWESEEIT.

This novel title has been given by Messrs. Frank I. Bennett & Co. and Dunlap, Smith & Co., of Chicago, Ill., to a little book which they have gotten out in regard to the advantages of South Waukegan, Ill., as a manufacturing town. The book is really very interesting indeed, and every subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL should have one in his possession, particularly as it can be gotten free by addressing either of the abovementioned firms. These concerns are among the most reliable real estate firms of Chicago, and can be depended upon to give good advice to any prospective investor who corresponds with them.

CHAUTAUQUA LAKE

can be reached in the most comfortable manner over the Erie Lines. This is the only route from the West which does not require a change of cars from Chicago. If you are thinking of visiting Chautauqua, write to F. W. Buskirk, A. G. P. A., Erie Lines, Chicago, Ill., for full information as to route, rates, etc.

REMEMBER

That on September 22, THE UNION SIGNAL will be devoted to the interests of the World's W. C. T. U.

The special number of THE UNION SIGNAL now being prepared for this memorial day, will excel all previous "special numbers."

Order early!

Order it to show outsiders what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is doing in all nations!

Order it because strength at home will be increased by the knowledge of respect and admiration abroad!

HARVEST HOME.

The supplement of The Young Crusader for August contains the program for the celebration of Miss Willard's birthday, September 28. It is entitled "Fairy Folk," and is a happy picturing of the work of the Seed-fairies, Blossom-fairies, etc., and the mischief done by the evil spirits that spoil the grape juice and the grains. It closes with a fine recitation entitled, "The Fairies in the Grain-field." The September number of The Young Crusader will have other exercises for the day.

Children's Harvest Home

EDUCATE! EDUCATE!!

The effort to educate along the line of the principles of the W. C. T. U. should never relax, yet, if possible, special attention should be paid to it during campaign periods. Now note. To help do this we can furnish a variety of leaflets and papers, and that you may see what these are, we have arranged a campaign package which contains 20 Timely Talks.

6 Song Leaflets.
2 Voters' Leaflets.
12 Signal Lights.

We will send this package for 10 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

FINAL NOTICE.

This is the last time that attention will be called to the Fair number of THE UNION SIGNAL, which will excel all others in many particulars. It will be well adapted for the use of our superintendents of fair work, and worthy of preservation in the homes it will enter for the first time. The

World's Fair Supplement

will be a unique feature of this number, and an added attraction of great value, one which will be appreciated by all. This will be illustrated, many features of the Exposition being outlined with accuracy. This twenty-four page paper will be sent to all who order by August 5, at $1.50 per 100 copies; after that date, $1.75 per 100 copies.

Save Money

by sending now, before you lay down this paper, to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

PROUD OF IT.

Our readers may always be assured that they have reason to feel proud to place so valuable a paper as THE UNION SIGNAL in the hands of those who have not had the privilege of seeing it regularly, and that they are accumulating proof testifies. Space for a few testimonials is here taken:

"Praise God for all the good your UNION SIGNAL is doing. There should be 400,000 a year circulation. Educate those women voters."

"THE UNION SIGNAL visiting regularly in many of our homes has accomplished great things. The Baptist convention held this week in our city, Winnipeg, passed very strong resolutions in favor of prohibition unanimously."

"July 21st is a grand number of SIGNAL. You cannot get up a better for all of us."

"I want to tell you just what a help the Watch Tower column of THE UNION SIGNAL is. So many times have I found sweet counsel there; so much that enables us to see and prepare for the enemy before his attack. These are helps that I appreciate so much, that I felt I wanted you to know it. 'Why should good words ne'er be said of a friend, 'till he is dead.'

"With an earnest prayer for God's blessing on you."

IF YOU DESIRE TO BUY A LOT IN . . .

South Waukegan

We can assure you that the

WOODBRIDGE PROPERTY IS IN THE CENTER

AND IS THE BEST.

It is a good business maxim, if one is buying in a growing town, to BUY THE BEST.

See our advertisement in The Union Signal, dated July 21st (last month).

J. B. MESNY,
CHARLES WEINLAND,
SOLE AGENTS, Room 26,
94 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

CLARENCE E. SMITH, Agent, WAUKEGAN, ILL.

TOKOLOGY A COMPLETE LADIES' GUIDE IN HEALTH AND DISEASE.

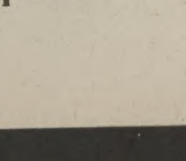
A mother writes: "We have a TOKOLOGY baby two months old. She came before the nurse could got in from the next room. We did not have a doctor in the house. I never get along so well before, and this is our tenth baby." Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago

HO! HERE WE HAVE IT!

An Automatic Syringe, better than any bulb pump syringe, and also better than any with bag fountain Something new. Carefully notice above statement Easiest, quickest, Gives satisfaction everywhere Sent, postpaid for only $1. Circulars free.
W. R. HAMILTON,
Marshalltown, Iowa.

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

DON'T YOU THINK



Your baby would look pretty in a carriage like that?

We have prettier ones.
Also cheaper ones.

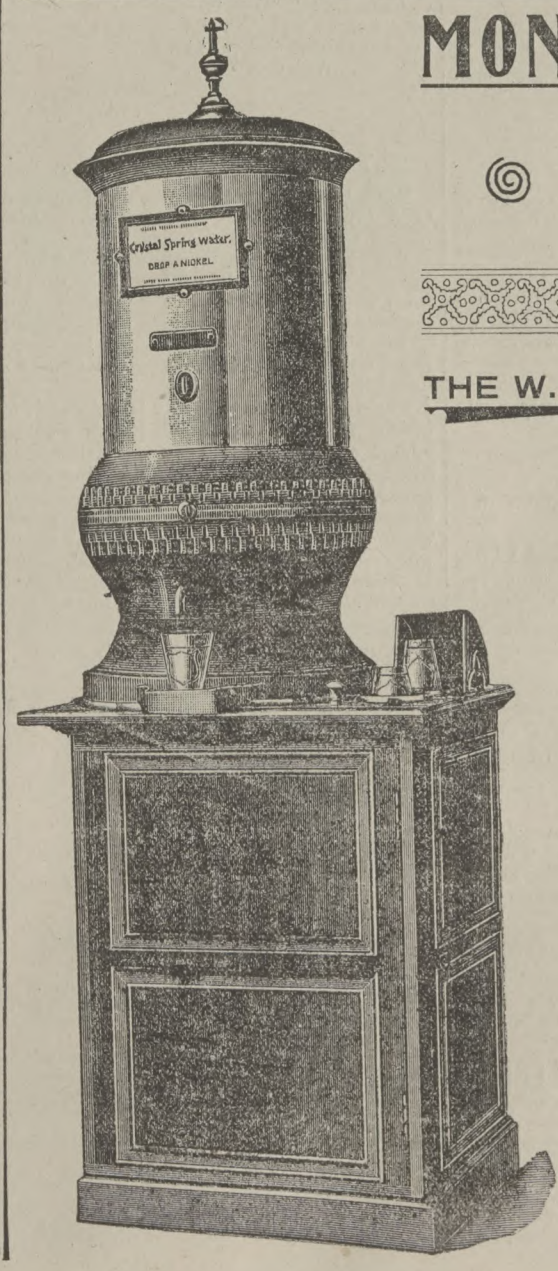
All shown in our catalogue, which we will mail FREE if you write for it.

FREIGHT PAID BY
WALTER HILL CO., 218 Wabash Av., CHICAGO.

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS SANATORIUM.

For the cure of Cancer in all its forms, without the use of the knife. Book with complete information mailed free. Dr. W. E. Brown & Son No. Adams, Mass

READERS can have PAPERS and MAGAZINES sent them from Publishers all over the country, by sending 25 cts. to the CENTRAL SUPPLY CO Chicago. Mention this paper.



MONEY FOR W. C. T. U WORK....

Now is Your Chance

THE W. C. T. U.

Automatic Fountain

WILL SOLVE THE PROBLEM

A FRESH DRINK AND A NEW CUP FOR EVERYBODY

If You desire to furnish a cool drink to the thirsty multitudes; if you desire to secure money honestly earned for your work, send for circulars and terms upon which they can be secured, to the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n

THE TEMPLE
LA SALLE AND MONROE STREETS
CHICAGO

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

There seems no better way to aid the cause of temperance than by placing Drinking Fountains on the streets of our cities and towns.

Special prices given to readers of this paper.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue and full particulars.

J. W. FISKE,
21 and 23 Barclay Street,
NEW YORK.

"My Baby Weighed"

8 lbs. at birth.
15 " " 3 mos.
12 " " 4 "

I think we were starving it, for no food agreed with it. Dr. Hodgdon, of Dedham, was called in as a last resort, when the child was four months old. He recommended Lactated Food and

In 2 Months it Gained 9 lbs. } All by Using
And Now Weighs 21 " } Lactated Food.

Before using Lactated Food it had little life or activity, but now is as lively as a cricket." Geo. K. Dennett, 23 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

Lactated Food saves babies' lives. It is the perfect substitute for mother's milk. Regular-sized package free to any mother who will agree to give it a careful trial.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF
Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.
We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.
GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.
For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

EDUCATIONAL.

FARMINGTON COLLEGE, West Farmington, Ohio. 62 years. Both sexes. Expenses very low. Four College Courses. Seven Departments. The Normal a specialty. Inducements to agents to secure students. Address REV. E. B. WEBSTER, A. M., President.

ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE of Philadelphia offers to pay board, tuition, and all necessary expenses in above college one year to the Boy or Girl who secures the largest club this year. 1 year's tuition (not board) to any Boy or Girl sending 100 new subs'rs.

STUDENTS IN JENNINGS SEMINARY
will have special privileges at the
WORLD'S FAIR.
For information address
REV. C. C. LOVEJOY, A. M., Pres., Aurora, Ill.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE.
(Formerly Morgan Park) removed to Auburn Park. 18th year begins September 14th. New building. All departments. Ornamental branches taught by artists. Send for catalogue to JULIA H. THAYER, Auburn Park, Chicago, or 247 State Street, Chicago.

SHORTHAND Typewriting, Book-keeping & Penmanship thoroughly taught. Twelve teachers, 700 students, cheap board, and the finest Commercial College building in America. Graduates readily secure situations. Beautiful Illus. Catalogue free. Address D. L. MUSSELMAN, Principal. Gem City Business College, Quincy, Illinois.

MONTICELLO Opens September 24th. Full and superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal, Godfrey, Ill.

Lake Erie Seminary
FOR WOMEN.
PAINESVILLE, OHIO.
Early application necessary for September, 1892.

THE CLAVERACK COLLEGE
And HUDSON RIVER INSTITUTE
For Boys and Girls, will open its 39th year September 19th. For catalogues, address
REV A. H. FLACK, A. M., Prest., Claverack, N. Y

TODD SEMINARY, a delightful home school for boys. 44th year. Send for circular to NOBLE HILL, Woodstock, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

HOW DELICIOUS!

When properly prepared for the table, nearly every variety of fruit is indeed delicious.

For best methods and greatest variety, we refer you to

Fruits and How to Use Them.

It tells how in healthful ways fruits can minister to human comfort and health.

Price, $1.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Will our friends who send in clubs for The Young Crusader please note the following rules:

1. All subscriptions sent to single addresses must be at the regular rate—fifteen cents per year.

2. An extra copy may be ordered free for each club of ten subscribers at the full fifteen cent rate.

3. The twelve cent rate is offered only for clubs of twenty-five or over, with the papers sent to one address.

W. C. T. U. FOUNTAIN.

Local presidents and secretaries, and especially local treasurers, superintendents of departments—especially the fair department; county officers, state officers and superintendents, together with all W. C. T. U. workers and helpers should at once investigate what can be done with our W. C. T. U. fountains. Two points we emphasize here:

1. They will furnish refreshing and healthful drink to the thirsty multitude, and at the same time

2. They will earn money for the W. C. T. U., and thus enable the organization to carry on a much broader work.

Do you want to know particulars? Send for circulars to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Send orders immediately if you desire the lowest rate for the fair number of THE UNION SIGNAL, to be issued August 11th. Notify us at once. We will hold them for you until you need them, but let us know at once. Remember all orders received before August will be filled at $1.50 per 100; after that date they will be $1.75.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE ADVANCE GUARD,

Read the following testimonial, and then send for a sample copy of The Advance Guard, to which it refers:

What a dainty looking magazine you have for our young people. I have shown it to four, who are pleased with its general appearance and are to write me their opinion of it. Hope I can roll up a good subscription list, so it may increase in size and frequency.

The reading on "Snares" is just what is needed in these days of euchre and other games of chance. Every selection seems fitted to the wants of our seniors; the good paper, clear type and bright appearance of the magazine will surely win for it a place, where it is so much needed among those who,

"Standing, with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet," are glad to welcome anything particularly their own.

VOTERS' LEAFLETS.

A new Series!

V-aluable,
O-pportune,
T-elling,
E-arnest,
R-inging,
S-ound.

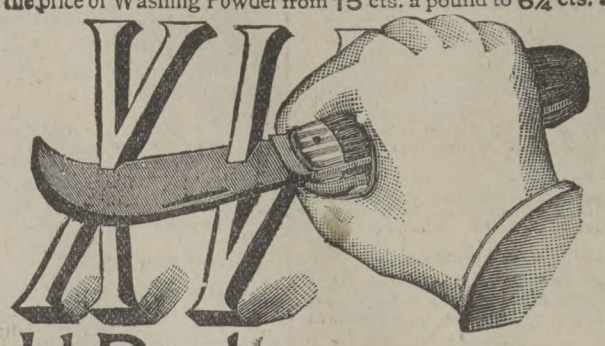
Two Numbers Now Ready.

1. THY BATTLE. By John G. Woolley. An appeal to Christian voters to consult conscience before party.

2. CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM. By John G. Woolley. The full text of the address of Mr. Woolley at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, July 4, 1892. Printed from advance sheets revised by the author.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

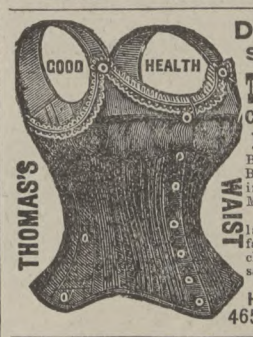
We Cut Down
the price of Washing Powder from 15 cts. a pound to 6¼ cts. a pound.



Gold Dust
Washing Powder
Has Done It. The daily cleaning and weekly washing can be BETTER done by Gold Dust Washing Powder than with ANY Soap or other Washing Powder, and at less than One Half the Cost.
Your grocer will sell you a package—4 pounds—for 25 cents.
N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!
NO ODOR COLD BLAST CHICAGO NO DUST NO QUILLS
The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address
THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

RAMBLER BICYCLES
SPRING FRAME.
C. & J. PNEUMATIC or CUSHION TIRES.
"Bicycling for Girls From a Medical Standpoint," and Catalogue "F" free.
GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO
85 Madison St., Chicago.
174 Columbus Av. BOSTON. 1325 14th-st., N. W. WASHINGTON. Broadway & 57th. NEW YORK.



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.
Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50, Misses 1.25, Children, 60
Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.
Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.
Agents wanted everywhere.
H. A. Thomas & Co., Manf'rs
465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

DON'T CHEW TOBACCO.

Beeman's Pepsin Gum
Helps to overcome the Habit.
CAUTION—See that the name Beeman is on each wrapper.
Each tablet contains one grain pure pepsin, sufficient to digest 1,000 grains of food. If it cannot be obtained from dealers, send five cents in stamps for sample package to
BEEMAN CHEMICAL CO., 64 Lake St., Cleveland, O.
ORIGINATORS OF PEPSIN CHEWING GUM.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION.

A SAMPLE BOX of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S
Tissue Builder
for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romans was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N. J.

MISS BEACH'S
Curling Fluid.
Keeps the hair in curl for days Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.
30,000 Ladies Have Endorsed It
At druggists, or prepaid, 50c.
LADY AGENTS wanted.
DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

ROASTER & BAKER
HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES.
Agents Wanted. Catalogue free.
Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

THE COBLENTZ CURE
Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
FREE
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New Articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SON, 28 Bond St., N Y

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N. Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

SPECIALTIES for AGENTS Ladies and Gents.
Rubber Gloves & Dress Shields, Convertible Wire Baskets, Self Threading Needles, Handy Button, and many others. Catg. free. CHICAGO SPECIALTY CO. 134 VanBuren St. Chicago

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

BAKER'S COCOA. ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used.

BEATTY Piano. Organ. $23 up. Want agents. Cat. free. Dan'l F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N. J.

"Cloud-Brewed Nectar"

some one poetically called the famous

Manitou

Mineral Spring

WATER,

because it came rom the mountains in Colorado, which continually kiss the clouds of heaven.
The Indians for centuries have called it
"The Water of the Gods."

Effervescent,
Sparkling,
Delightful,
Pungent.

An Elegant Table Water

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use.
Packed in cases of

50	24	100	48
Quarts.	Quarts.	Pints.	Pints.

Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer.
Address
MANITOU MINERAL WATER CO.,
Manitou Springs, Colo.
Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use.
Packed in cases of

50	24
Quarts.	Quarts.

Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer.
Address
Manitou Mineral Water Co., Manitou Springs, Colo.
Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA
PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

YOSE & SONS
ESTABLISHED IN 1851.
PIANOS.

Celebrated for their Pure Tone, Elegant Designs, Superior Workmanship, and Great Durability. Old instruments taken in exchange. Write for catalogue.
170 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.,
OR
LYON, POTTER & CO.,
176 WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILL.

SAFEST OF ALL INVESTMENTS
CITY AND COUNTY BONDS
Secured by tax lien on all property within their limits.
Descriptive Bond Lists furnished on application.
N. W. HARRIS & CO., BANKERS,
163-165 DEARBORN ST. • CHICAGO, ILL.
New York. Boston.

Good Designs
in wall paper are as plentiful as bad. Just as cheap, too. Selection by mail is easy. We will send you 100 samples for 8 cents. Prices, 5 to 50c. a roll.
A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Phila.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.
Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

YOUNG LADIES SHOULD WEAR GOOD SENSE
CORSET WAISTS. Permit full breathing.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL.

Subscription Rates for 1892.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " not in advance	1.50
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15
Per 100 copies	1.00

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

FRUITS, AND HOW TO USE THEM.

This valuable book should be in every home at this season of the year when fruit is becoming so abundant. It is by one of our best white-ribbon workers, Mrs. Hester M. Poole. It is a book of 242 pages of exceedingly valuable suggestions and recipes for the use and care of fruits, showing the best results to be obtained from the use of the same. The opening chapter is on Fruit as Food, followed by one on the Hygienic Value of Fruit, on the Increase of the Use of Fruit, and on the Relation of Fruit and Temperance. One dollar could not be invested to better advantage, especially at this season of the year. It should be in every home in the country. From the preface we quote:

"It is frequently the case that the housekeeper who is blessed with a superabundance of apples, peaches, pears or dates finds her household cloying upon two or three modes in which they are usually served. Recipes for a dozen new dishes to be made out of the same fruit are then an acquisition, the value of which only a housekeeper can justly estimate."

The object of the compilation is to supply recipes for "a greater variety of dishes in which fruit enters as an ingredient, that are at once easily made, appetizing and wholesome."

As before stated it contains 242 pages and is bound in cloth. Price, $1. Secure a copy at once. Send to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

A DEFENSE OF THE JERICHO ROBBERS.

Do you want a pleasing satire?

Do you want an argument which is not in the form of an argument against high license?

Do you want the attitude of license men toward the liquor traffic portrayed with power?

Then send for

A Defense of the Jericho Robbers

and learn how the types of the saloon men of to-day were defended before the court of the Sanhedrim. How the parties to the cause, Achan Sneakthief, Ishmael Bacchus, Cain Adam, Haman Hangman, Demetrius Silversmith, Herman Gambrinus, Isaac Longface, Simon Barabbas, Democritus Balaam, Ahab Dives, Esau Sodom, Simon Magus, and Levi Priest argued the case, and a committee was appointed to report a plan of action and a bill was framed entitled:

An Act to legalize and regulate the business of stealing, robbing and murdering between Jerusalem and Jericho.

It will do much good wherever read.

Price 20 cents.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

YOU NEED.

To be equipped for work you need the following supplies—so Miss Willard says:

Questions Answered	25c.
School of Methods Manual	25c.
Y Manual	25c.
Helping Hand	10c.

Send for these to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE HANDY MANUAL.

This little book of 440 pages is a perfect encyclopedia of information. It answers almost every question that you might ask, whether of law, history or concerning mercantile business or farm interests. Social matters have due attention. It also contains fifty maps. The price of this manual has been 50c. We will send it to any address for 25c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE
JACKSON CORSET CO.,
The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.
RETAIL PRICE $1.00.

The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.

Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.

Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.

The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.

Metal Tipped. EVER READY DRESS STAY Will Not Cut Through.

See Name "EVER READY" on Back of Each Stay.

Acknowledged the BEST DRESS STAY On the Market

Made with Gutta Percha on both sides of steel and warranted water-proof. All other stays are made differently and will rust. Beware of Imitations. Take none but the "Ever Ready."

Manufactured by the YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

FOR SALE BY ALL JOBBERS AND RETAILERS.

SPECIAL DEPOTS. { MODEL DRESS STEEL CO., 74 Grand St., New York. BROWN & METZNER, 535 Market Street, San Francisco.

Hay-Fever Sufferers

Should read our new 112-page book on the treatment and cure of Hay-Fever and Asthma. Sent free on application.

"I have been a sufferer from Hay-Fever and Asthma from birth—26 years. I have tried all remedies that came to my notice without permanent relief. I am pleased to say that your medicines certainly cured me to stay cured.
W. L. WEDGER, Roslindale, Boston, Mass."

P. Harold Hayes, M. D.,
716 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

HAY-FEVER
A GIBBS'
ORONASAL RESPIRATOR
used at home, will afford absolute relief throughout the season. A wonderful invention, Convenient, Scientific, Infallible; thoroughly tested for many years. Costs but little—relief obtained is beyond estimate. Equally good for Catarrh. Sent postpaid. Pamphlet with testimonials free.
GIBBS RESPIRATOR CO., La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

"AUGITE"
The Women's Friend
Stove Mat.
Food of any kind can be cooked on this mat without stirring, and cannot scorch or burn. Can be placed on the blaze or on top of cook or gasoline stoves. Price 35 c. each.
Agents Wanted.
KEESTER & CO.,
81 S. Clark St., Chicago.

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
TAKE A COURSE IN THE
SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW, (Incorporated.)
Send ten cents (stamps) for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y,
DETROIT, MICH.
WHITNEY BLOCK.

Do you want to buy a
PIANO OR ORGAN?
If so you will save money by addressing
BEETHOVEN CO., P. O. Box 501, WASHINGTON,
Warren Co., New Jersey. Information FREE.

Wherever the Rocker Washer is used the washboard becomes a relic of barbarism. It is warranted to do an ordinary family washing of 100 pieces in an hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for description and price. Rocker Washer Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind. Agts. wanted

DIAMOND DYES give the fastest, brightest, handsomest colors, and make the old clothes look like new. They are the original and only reliable package dyes. Sample card free. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

GIRLS!
Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings? If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. T. M. Association,
269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR
DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT
or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE
A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.
A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. No Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All, Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY.
$12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEP'T 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

IMPROVED HALL TYPEWRITER.
The best and most simple machine made. Interchangeable Type into all languages. Durable, easiest running, rapid as any. Endorsed by the Clergy and literary people. Send for Illustrated Catalogue. Agents wanted. Address N. Typewriter Co., 611 Wash. St., Boston, Mass.

AGENTS Coin Money selling Beveridge's Automatic Cooker. Every woman buys. Best and cheapest cooker sold. Big Profits to good workers, male or female. Sample's weight 12 oz. Adv'g matter furnished
For circulars address W. E. BEVERIDGE, Baltimore, Md.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

$7.50 FOR A DAYS' WORK.
GOOD PAY! STEADY WORK IF DESIRED. Address
JAMES LEE & CO., 215 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation.
Send for Free Sample to 219 West 40th Street, New York City.

AGENTS wanted throughout New Jersey for those wonderful Christy Knives (Bread, Cake and Paring), ready sellers; large commissions. For particulars write New Jersey Agency Christy Knife Co., Room 514, Prudential Building, Newark, N. J.

HOME BAKERIES EVERYWHERE
Do you want one in your town? Address
MACHINERY DEPT.,
THE WOMAN'S BAKING CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

WALL PAPER. Good Paper, 3c. Gold Paper, 5c. Large package of beautiful samples and guide, "How to Paper," sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

Signal Notes.

RUM in tea is another fashion which amounts to criminal folly.

LENOX BROWNE, a noted English vocalist, says that stimulants do not promote good work of any kind.

IT is said that one-tenth of the men who die in Switzerland die prematurely from alcohol poisoning.

THE Fourth of July oration at the Elmira, N. Y., reformatory was delivered by one of the inmates.

THE Egyptians believed boiled cabbage to be a cure for intoxication. Let us have cabbage cure institutes.

A NEW society has been organized in Berlin to oppose the sale of immoral and indelicate prints and photographs.

SOME one asked George Muller if he did not have giant faith when he began his work, to which he replied, "No, I had a giant God."

OVER sixteen first prizes for rare scholarship have been awarded women in various American institutions within the last two months.

A NATIONAL temperance fête at the Crystal Palace, London, will be given in September, by the National Temperance Choral Union. No intoxicants can be bought at the refreshment bars on that occasion.

THE Open Hearth Mission in Hartford, Conn., is interested in a lodging house, a wood yard, a home for women, besides sustaining a work among children, open air meetings, and mission services every night.

TEN thousand young Englishmen are sent out to India every year as fresh recruits for the British army. After five years training in government vice as well as military tactics, they are returned to be scattered through the shops and factories of Great Britain.

THE Pall Mall Gazette is authority for the statement that fifty-six per cent of all the money coined in the world, exclusive of the U. S. A., is coined in the British Empire, and still they accept a paltry three million and a half revenue from the sale of opium.

MISS STIRLING'S Homes for Children now established in Nova Scotia had their beginning in Edinburgh, where she opened a day nursery, a home for motherless children and one for the wretched inmates of baby farms. These charities laid the foundation for a Scottish National society for the prevention of cruelty to children.

THE Northfield conference for Bible study and Christian work still leads as the world's summer school for students. Although Mr. Moody is absent this year, the list of speakers is a strong one. Representatives from almost every state and delegates from Cambridge, Oxford, Edinburgh, Glasgow and London are present.

Sickness Among Children,

Especially infants, is prevalent at all times, but is largely avoided by giving proper nourishment and wholesome food. The most successful and reliable is the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk, Your grocer and druggist keep it.

Does any person suppose that Ivory Soap is expensive and therefore only suitable for cleansing the more delicate household articles and garments?

Those who have tested it have found that there is a double economy in its general use. A cake of Ivory Soap will do more work than a cake of the ordinary, poorly made, highly chemicalled soaps, and it will save five times the difference in price.

COPYRIGHT 1892, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

None genuine unless stamped

Shawknit

on the toe.

THE SHAWKNIT HALF-HOSE

ARE UNEQUALED IN NICENESS OF FIT, PERMANENCE OF DYE, AND QUALITY OF YARN.

THE EXTRA-FINE COTTON

ARE

NOW SEASONABLE.

THE MOST POPULAR OF THESE ARE THE

FAST BLACK (Snowblack) 3s 4

MOTTLED SLATE 3s 10

AND THE

DRAB VARIETIES 6s 3.

Sold by the trade generally.

DESCRIPTIVE PRICE-LIST TO ANY APPLICANT.

SHAW STOCKING CO., LOWELL, MASS.

$4.95 GOLD PLATED

WARRANTED GENUINE.

BOX JOINTS.

Don't buy a common looking silver watch when you can now obtain for the small sum of $4.95 a handsome genuine 14 karat gold plated hunting case, full engraved watch with a first-class full jeweled movement, a perfect time keeper, genuine full plate handsomely damaskeened and ornamented, fully equal in appearance to the watches regularly sold by jewelers at from $25 to $35. In carrying this watch you have the credit of carrying a solid gold watch, as the plating process is got down so fine now-a-days that it is almost impossible to detect the difference. The engraving on the case is just the same as on the high priced watches, and is in the very loveliest and latest patterns. Some will doubt our ability to be able to supply such a watch at this price, and to convince you that we mean just what we say, we make the following most extraordinary offer for next 30 days.

READ!

Cut this out and send it with your order, and we will promptly ship the watch to you by express C. O. D. with instructions to the express agent to allow you to examine it at the express office. If on examination you are convinced that it is a bargain, pay the agent $4.95 and the express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. We could not afford to make such an offer as this unless we were confident that the watch will not only please you, but be a surprise to you. Bear in mind this price will be for 30 days only.

THE NATIONAL M'F'G AND IMPORTING CO.,
334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00

Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores.

1,000 Other Articles at Half Price.

A $45.00 Sewing Machine	$10.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale	15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy	50.00
A 3 1-4 Ton Wagon Scale	40.00
A $25.00 Road Cart	9.00
A $15.00 Single Harness	4.95
A 240-lb. Platform Scale	3.00

Farmers, do your own Blacksmithing. Any tools less than Wholesale Prices. Send for Lists Free. Chicago Scale Co., Chicago.

BABY CARRIAGES

Shipped anywhere to any one at WHOLESALE PRICES.

Latest Styles.

A $5.50 carriage for $2.95
A $12.50 " " $6.95
A $18.50 " " $9.75

Send for 40-page illustrated catalogue free.

CASH BUYERS' UNION. 362 Dearborn St., B 27 Chicago, Ill.

$5 to $15 per day, at home, selling LIGHTNING PLATER and plating jewelry, watches tableware, &c. Plates the finest of jewelry good as new, on all kinds of metal with gold, silver or nickel. No experience. No capital. Every house has goods needing plating. Wholesale to agents $5. Write for circulars. H. E. DELNO & Co., Columbus, O.

A complete garment, worn under the corset or flannels, protecting the clothing from perspiration. Cheaper than dress shields, 1 pair doing the work of 6. Misses' bust measure, 28-33, 80c; Ladies' bust measure, 34-39, $1; Ladies,' bust measure, 40-46, $1.25

AGENTS WANTED.

M. DEWEY, Man'fr,
1397 West Monroe Street, Chicago.
Send money by Post Office Order. Catalogue Free.

TO EXCHANGE IN HARVEY

Central and well-improved lots, $450; new eight-roomed houses, $1,500; half in any good property, time on balance. An old-established mortgage banking house of Chicago will give appraisals of any property upon receipt of $3.00. Write us for plats and printed matter.

M. M. BROWN, Chamber of Commerce, Room 1111. CHICAGO, ILL.

THE WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE HEADQUARTERS AT HARVEY, ILL.

CORNER STONE LAID AND IS NOW BEING RAPIDLY BUILT.

$ ONE DOLLAR $

FRANCES E. WILLARD says—In a UNION SIGNAL editorial, July 28—"We should be glad if every Hotel on the planet were of the same wholesome variety."

Esther Pugh says—CHICAGO, JULY 26, 1892. I have investigated the claims of the Harvey World's Fair Hotel as carefully as I know how and I consider it the very best solution of the problem which faces us, of obtaining inexpensive, comfortable accommodations for the best class of people during that season of immense crowds. The terms are in the reach of almost any person who will come to the Exposition. The fact that Harvey is in the opposite direction from Chicago to the Fair, with excellent facilities for reaching it, yet not in the line of the multitude, the promises of good, new rooms with new furnishings and sufficient for comfort, are advantages past computation to me.

Yours truly, ESTHER PUGH.

This is the only TEMPERANCE HEADQUARTERS. It has the approval and support of the Temperance people everywhere. Its most remarkable feature is the large number of families among the guests. Rooms are engaged in Suites—for Father, Mother and all the Children. It is in every way a HOME.

THE WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE CLUB. Mary A. Woodbridge, President; B. F. Parker, Secretary; Mary T. Lathrap, Vice-President; George B. Woodbridge and Clara Hoffman, National Organizers. The Federal Suffrage and Temperance organizations of more than a dozen states, several church conferences, and local churches without number, have decided to make headquarters with us during the World's Fair.

How to Act. Those who order and pay for rooms now get their lodgings at present rates, 4 in a room, 50c. each per day; 2 in a room, $1 each per day; 1 only in a room, $1.50 per day; and moreover among them will be distributed ONE-HALF OF ALL THE PROFITS of the enterprise during the WORLD'S FAIR. Meals need not now be paid for, they can be gotten on the European plan at from 15 cents to 75 cents as you may elect. Send only money to pay for lodgings. The way this is arranged is GUARANTEED PROFIT-SHARING STOCK CERTIFICATES are sold in $10 Shares. This stock entitles one to rooms at above rates, if taken now, to the full face value of the stock, either for themselves or their friends.

SPECIAL OFFER.

We will accept subscriptions, until further notice, on the following plan: Send us ONE DOLLAR or more for each share of TEN DOLLARS each which you may wish to take and we will enter your name and reserve for you rooms to the full amount of the shares subscribed for. You can send the balance in monthly payments of ONE DOLLAR or more for each share taken, until fully paid. Use the form at the right in sending order.

SEND FOR YOURS BEFORE You Lay Down This PAPER.

THE HARVEY WORLD'S FAIR HOTEL AND ENTERTAINMENT CO.,
All orders for stock should be addressed to
WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.,
OUR EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR SALE OF STOCK,
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A CUT THIS OUT OR COPY IT,

Fill the blanks, SIGN IT, and pin it to a ONE DOLLAR BILL or ONE DOLLAR postal note for each share ordered, and mail it at once to Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

..... 1892.

Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.:

I hereby subscribe for and agree to take and pay for rooms in The World's Fair Temperance Hotel at Harvey, Ill., on the Guaranteed Profit-Sharing plan, amounting to —— shares of Ten Dollars each, total $——. It is specially understood that these certificates are when fully paid, non-assessable, without liability, and receivable at their full face value, and at the regular rates, in payment for rooms at the above Hotel during the World's Fair, besides entitled to pro rata share of one-half the profits of the enterprise. Inclosed find $—— cash payment on this subscription, the balance to be paid in installments of not less than One Dollar per share each calendar month until fully paid, but in the event of the default of any of these payments, or in the further event of grossly immoral or improper conduct on my part at any time prior to or during the World's Fair, all rights or claims hereunder are forfeited to and at the option of the said World's Fair Hotel and Entertainment Co.

Signed.....

Address.....

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

FOR GOD AND HOME — WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION FOUNDED 1883 — AND EVERY LAND

Vol. XVIII.—No. 32. CHICAGO, August 11, 1892. Price, $1.00 per year in advance.

H. C. SPEER, Banker, 237 La Salle St., CHICAGO

Offers this Week Standard Investment Bonds as Follows:

$200,000 Ten-Year First Mortgage 6 per cent Gold Bonds OF THE Lakota Company.....

CHICAGO, ILL.

Owning the LAKOTA APARTMENT HOTEL, corner of Michigan Avenue and 30th St., Chicago, Ill.

Date, April 1st, 1892. - Due, April 1st, 1902.

DENOMINATION, $1,000.

Coupons, Payable April 1 and October 1, at Commercial National Bank, Chicago, Ill. Amount of Issue, $200,000.

NORTHERN TRUST COMPANY, CHICAGO, TRUSTEE.

Insurance, $300,000, of which $200,000 is in favor of Northern Trust Company, for the benefit of Bondholders.

PRICE, 102¾ and INTEREST, NETTING 5⅝% ON MONEY.

THE LAKOTA.

INCOME AND EXPENSE ACCOUNT.

Net Annual Income,*	$46,500
Expense	19,500
Lease Charges $ 7,500
Int. on $200,000 Bonds, 12,000
Annual Surplus	$27,000
Cost of Building	$500,000
Capital Stock, fully paid	300,000
Gold Bonds, first mortgage,	200,000

*THE LAKOTA is leased as a whole to one responsible tenant for ten years, at $46,500 per annum, taxes, insurance and repairs, yielding, as shown above, $270,000 net surplus for the term the bonds run, or $70,000 above the principal thereof, after paying the interest twice a year.

☞ I am unusually fortunate in being able to offer my customers the above issue of bonds. Please consider all questions as to my sincere personal recommendations, answered YES. They are the best demonstrated security ever named at a price netting 5⅝ per cent interest.

REMARKS.

..... THE LAKOTA BUILDING is of cut stone, pressed brick, and terra-cotta, ten stories, thoroughly fire-proof, modern in every detail, with best hardwood finish throughout, and has 261 rooms, besides corner Drug Store, Reception Room, Cafe and Restaurant, occupying entire first floor, and a Basement for whole building. THE LAKOTA is being rapidly and elaborately finished for occupancy in October, as the finest Family Hotel in Chicago, located in the heart of the best residence portion of the city.

$500,000 Topeka Railway Company's 4½ per cent. First Mortgage, 30-Year Gold Bonds

At a Price to net investor, 5¼ per cent., Namely 88¾ and Interest.

Many buyers like to take advantage of the discount offered on the bonds bearing the lower rates of interest, as the history of such bonds is that after a few years they reach par and even premium values. Of a total issue of $1,100,000 purchased I have sold $600,000 to banks. Individual purchasers have a satisfaction in investing their money in bonds which are a legal investment for New England Savings Banks—a fact which makes them no better, but is helpful in re-selling when desired.

Send for Special Circular No. 109...

DESCRIPTION

Denomination, - - $1,000

Date, May 2, 1892 Mature, May 1, 1922

Payable in Gold Coin, in New York City

Coupons Due March and Sept. 1 Manhattan Trust Co. Trustee

The Topeka Railway Company owns and operates 33½ miles of consolidated street railway lines under exclusive franchises, constituting one of the best equipped electrical plants in any city of under 100,000 population.

FINANCIAL EXHIBIT

Number of Passengers, - - - 3,322,779

This is an average of over three years traffic ending June 1, 1892, a large part of the present consolidated system being then operated by horse-cars. The increased traffic due to running the entire system under electrical traction, indicates:

Annual Passengers, 3,742,820

Making Income Account @ 5c, - - -	$187,141.00
Less Expense Account, - - - - -	82,321.00
NET EARNINGS, - - - - - -	$104,920.00
Interest on Bonds, - - - - - -	49,500.00
SURPLUS, - - - - - - -	$54,420.00

$75,000

Temple Trust Bonds....

Denominations, $100 and $500 Interest payment

January and July Payments Bonds Due July

Payable, New York or Chicago, as presented

Ursula D Herrick
2419 19th st

☞ These are the W. C. T. U. bonds secured dollar for dollar by a collateral deposit of Stock of the Temple, with the American Trust and Savings Bank, of Chicago, Trustee, to be held for the benefit of bondholders, till all the interest and principal shall be paid as promised. There remain unsold about $75,000 of the total $300,000.

THE TEMPLE.

My judgment in recommending these bonds prior to the opening of The Temple has been more than confirmed. There is no longer an estimate necessary.

The Temple...

has earned from the day it was opened for occupancy a net profit for the stock securing these bonds

Over 50 per cent--IN EXCESS OF THE INTEREST CHARGES...

Price: Par and Interest

REMITTANCES SHOULD BE MADE BY BANK DRAFT ON NEW YORK, CHICAGO OR BOSTON. BONDS WILL BE DELIVERED FREE TO ANY ADDRESS, WITH DRAFT ATTACHED, IF DESIRED

H. C. SPEER, Banker, 237 La Salle Street, Chicago

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES.
- Our Bill of Fare ... 8
- White-Ribboners at State and County Fairs ... 8
- Farmers' Wives and the White Ribbon ... 8
- Old-Fashioned 'Harvest Drinks." ... 8
- Strong Drink at the World's Fair ... 9
- Columbus Day ... 9

THE WATCH TOWER ... 9
CONTRIBUTED:
- Poem, The Farmer's Wife, by Mather Dean Kimball ... 2
- Some Passages in the Practice of Dr. Martha Scarborough. By Helen Campbell. Chap. I ... 2
- Taxation and the Poor. By Rev. C. H. Zimmerman ... 2
- John Bidwell, the Farmer, Prohibition Nominee for President. By Mary Wood Allen ... 3
- An Agricultural Fair in Ireland. By Mary A. Livermore ... 3
- A Tale of a Cider Press. By Elizabeth Cumings ... 4
- Practical Thoughts about Fairs and Expositions. By Josephine R. Nichols ... 5

CORRESPONDENCE:
- Iowa ... 6
- How to Reach the Farmer's Wife ... 6
- Oatmeal Water as a Drink ... 6

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS ... 6
THE HOUSEHOLD:
- Poem, If Mother would Listen ... 7
- Mrs. Carrington's Delegate ... 7

QUEEN'S GARDEN:
- What the Y's did at the Fair. By Eva Kinney Griffith ... 10

NEWS FROM THE FIELD:
- New York State News—Ohio—Nevada—West Virginia.
- News in a Nutshell ... 10, 11, 12

OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS:
- State and County Fair Department ... 12
- Columbian Exposition Department ... 12
- Take Notice ... 12

OUR CHILDREN:
- Poem, The World's Fair ... 14
- Seeing the Elephant ... 14

AUNT JANE'S COZY CORNER:
- Soft-Shelled Nuts ... 14

PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT ... 13-16

Our Library Table.

THE HEART OF THE GOSPEL, by Arthur T. Pierson. This is a volume of twelve sermons that were delivered at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, Eng., by the author, during an enforced absence of C. H. Spurgeon from his pulpit. The sermons are characterized by a simple directness of appeal to the heart, what some would ter "solid gospel," and cannot fail to be of decided helpfulness in spiritual things.

The Baker & Taylor Company, 740 and 742 Broadway, New York City.

THE CROWNING SIN OF THE AGE, by Brevard D. Sinclair, pastor "Old South" church, Newburyport, Mass. Published by the Spiritual Tract Repository, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass. Price, 50 cents.

A brave, faithful utterance by a minister of the Gospel, that ought to be reiterated from press and pulpit throughout the world. When God's chosen servants stand before the people, face to face and eye to eye, and speak the truth as it is in Him, as it is spoken in the above sermon, unflinchingly and without "gloves," then will devils turn and flee, not before.

ALONE AND NOT ALONE, by Mrs. Zillah Dugdale.

A touching story of one of England's poor, showing in its simple narrative how the promises of God are fulfilled to them that trust and obey Him.

National Temperance Publication Depot, 33 Paternoster Row, London, E. C.

HYGIENIC TREATMENT OF CONSUMPTION. This work, by M. L. Holbrook, M. D., professor of hygiene in the New York Medical College and Hospital for women, and editor of The Herald of Health, is well worth reading. Throughout its pages is a strong undertone of cheer for those in whose interests it is written, said cheer arising from the sound, common-sense consideration of this insidious disease.

M. L. Holbrook & Co., 46 E. 21st street, New York City. Price by mail, $2.

THE LIFE OF CHARLES SUMNER, THE SCHOLAR IN POLITICS, by Archibald H. Grimke, is one of the delightful books in the series of American Reformers, edited by Carlos Martin. The author had a deep and rich mine to explore when he delved into history for the materials for this book, and he has put into a worthy setting the gems that lay ready to his hand. The volume must arouse the patriotic zeal of every one who reads it, and it is especially of value to the boys and young men, who must one day stand where our laws are made, and stand there for or against issues as mighty as those for which Sumner heroically cried, "Nothing, sir, can be settled which is not right!" It is the well-written biographies of men like these that must crowd out of notice the hurtful mental food that un-Christian venders are sending out for our young people.

Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York, $1.50.

A pamphlet publication of The American Academy of Political and Social Science presents a readable and valuable article by Sara Louisa Oberholtzer, on "School Savings Banks." Mrs. Oberholtzer is National superintendent in the W. C. T. U. of a distinct department that has for its consideration the establishment of a system of saving that must work out grand results for the children of the "common people." Mrs. Oberholtzer knows whereof she speaks and has handled the subject logically and attractively. The pamphlet should have a wide circulation.

American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia. Price 15 cents.

LILY PEARL AND THE MISTRESS OF ROSEDALE, is a story written by Ida Glenwood, who is known as "The Blind Bard of Michigan." Joseph Kirkland, the editor, pays high tribute to the mechanical work of the author in her manuscript, written, as seen by the frontispiece, on a typewriter.

Dibble Publishing Company, Chicago.

A CLUSTER OF PEARLS for Christian Endeavor workers, compiled and arranged by W. A. Newman Dorland, M. D. Published by D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

If an accurate statistical table could be compiled it would be found that the organizations of young people within the churches are largely made up of individuals who are hard-working and self-supporting, many of them employed from morning till evening six days in the week. It is for these, who rarely can indulge in the luxury of a "good read," that books like the one here named are particularly fitted. Detached, wholesome, helpful thoughts that can be read while one waits a few moments for a breakfast bell, or in the interim between twilight and dark, and between the busiest spells, do much to rest and nourish the heart and brain. The Pearls herein referred to are of Prayer, Humility, Love, Faith, Thanksgiving, and are pure and rare.

OLA CATO is a book whose hero and "author" is a dog—one of the canines who belongs to the upper-tendom of the dog-world, by reason of his size, strength and intelligence. Cato discourses wisely about his fellow creatures, and naturally speaks authoritatively. His own history is replete with interest, but he blows his trumpet with modesty and due propriety. Interspersed among the chapters distinctively his own, are others that are devoted to dog-life in all its phases, the care of the animal, his varied traits, with illustrations and descriptions of the numerous breeds from the noble St. Bernard to the most minute specimen that ever reposed in a fair maiden's arms.

The Republic Publishing Company. Chicago and Cincinnati.

A KANSAS FARM, OR THE PROMISED LAND, by Fannie McCormick, President National Women's Alliance.

This book is a description of farm life in Kansas, giving a portrayal of the grasshopper visitation of 1874, and outlining some of the results that are an outgrowth of mortgages and loans, with a brief account of the organization and growth of the Farmers' Alliance.

John B. Alden, publisher, New York.

MARK HOPKINS, by Franklin Carter, president of Williams College. This is a beautifully written history of one whose life was beautifully lived, in that by its power for good it helped so many forward in the highway of truth and righteousness. President Carter, who is the author of this valuable work, succeeded Mark Hopkins to the presidential chair, which the latter had so grandly filled for forty-seven years, and as the pupil and colleague of the illustrious teacher, has been the one best fitted to write of his life and work. The book belongs to the series of "American Religious Leaders" published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Price, $1.25.

THE LIFE OF JOSHUA R. GIDDING, by George W. Julian. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price, $2.50.

The name of Joshua R. Giddings comes down to us associated with that of John Quincy Adams, the two having been congenial spirits and fearless actors in the stirring events of the days in which they lived. The author of the book in question is the son-in-law of Mr. Giddings, and writes from a standpoint of authority. Besides this, he has been prominent in American politics, and speaks as one in entire sympathy with the anti-slavery tenets of his hero. The book being both historical and biographical, will prove valuable for preservation in reference libraries, as well as for a volume of wide and lasting interest.

MAGAZINES.

The August number of SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE has an illustrated article by N. S. Shaler on "Icebergs," that aside from its interest and instructiveness, is very pleasingly suggestive of coolness these hot days. H. C. Bunner contributes an odd and touching story entitled, "As One Having Authority." Kate Douglas Wiggin discourses in her own happy way, out of her deep and keen intuitions of child nature, on "Children's Rights." Edgar Mayhew Bacon has an exquisite poem, "After the Battle," beginning:

"Where the tawny tiger-lilies in the marshy meadow bloom,
And the tangled rushes wither by the red and sluggish rill,
There is silence all unbroken; there are secrets all unspoken
That the trembling grass is hiding from the hill."

The further table of contents is, as always, rich and varied, nearly every other page beautified by illustrations that in themselves are a rare treat.

Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City. $3 a year.

THE SUNNY HOUR. This is the bright name of a sixteen page, monthly magazine, bearing on its cover the statement, "Published by a Boy for Boys and Girls." The boy is Tello d'Apery, a fifteen year old lad, who so truly loves his little brothers and sisters that he has established a Barefoot Fund, by means of which hundreds of little feet are clothed against the inclement weather and the stones and thorns of the wayside. THE SUNNY HOUR is a bright, interesting paper through which the young editor talks to benevolent hearts, telling them about his poor children, and asking help for them in a manly, frank fashion that is commendable and winning. The Sunny Hour Club has for its members all who "promise to give one hour each week to a good action. Kindness to parents and brothers and sisters count, as well as kindness to animals, and the poor." God speed the boy editor and his noble mission!

Address Tello d'Apery, 18 W. 14th street, New York City. One year $1.

The midsummer (August) number of CURRENT LITERATURE appears in a handsome white cover. Its contents are particularly rich and appetizing. Whether it is science or philosophy, that which the average man ought to know about is set forth in pleasing array. One is surprised at the wealth of material presented, and that the 160 pages of CURRENT LITERATURE are sufficient in number to admit of all that it contains.

Current Literature Publishing Co., 52-54 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE ARENA for this month continues the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy, presenting an able argument in favor of Lord Bacon. Symposiums are the "thing" for journals of the day, and the magazine in question is not out of the fashion, having one of a political nature, to which Gail Hamilton, United States Senator James H. Kyle, Congressmen Geo. Fred Williams and Wm. T. Ellis contribute. Another symposium on woman's clubs is made up of words from May Wright Sewall, Kate Gannett Wells, Hester M. Poole, Mary E. Mumford, Louise Chandler Moulton and others. The strong and genial features of Mary A. Livermore are well pictured as the frontispiece of this issue, and accompany an article from her able pen, entitled, "Twenty-five years on the Lecture Platform." Frances E. Willard has one of her ever-readable productions, having chosen for her consideration, "The Coming Brotherhood." B. O. Flower takes his readers with him through a restful consideration of the works of "An Idealistic Dreamer who Sings in a Minor Key"—Louise Chandler Moulton. Of no little interest are the pages included under "Books of the Day," the reviews being real glimpses into the best acquisitions to the literary wealth of the world.

The Arena, Boston, Mass. $5 per annum.

The August number of THE FORUM completes the thirteenth volume of this valuable magazine. Its topics are characterized throughout the months by their timeliness and strength. "Shall the Southern Question be Revived?" includes two articles—"The Unparalleled Industrial Progress of the South," by Richard H. Edmonds, the late editor of the Manufacturer's Record of Baltimore, and "The Disastrous Effects of a Force Bill," by Hoke Smith, chairman of the school board of Atlanta, Ga., and chief owner of the Atlanta Journal. Other articles of a political kind are: "The Folly of the Free-Coinage Agitation," and "The Necessity of the Repeal of the Sherman Silver Act of 1890," by Louis Windmüller, a widely known merchant of New York. "The Advantage of the Repeal of the Tax on State Banks," by David M. Stone, editor of the New York Journal of Commerce—an article in the line of the Democratic financial plank and of the bill recently introduced in the House of Representatives, and "Municipal Government, a Corporate, not a Political Problem," by Mr. Frank Morison, of Boston (the first of a series of discussions of Municipal Government, which will contain the results of much original investigation). In this number is begun a series of articles on the scope and present opportunity of the learned professions, the first article being on "Literature as a Career," by Walter Besant. Mr. Richard H. Dana writes "An American View of the Irish Question," a parallel between Great Britain's treatment of the American colonies and her treatment of Ireland.

The Forum Publishing Company, Union Square, New York. Five dollars a year.

The world gives ready and kindly recognition to the religion that finds expression in practical helpfulness, and it has given prompt and friendly indorsement to the work of the order of Deaconesses. Those who are conversant with their mission, and those who are desirous of becoming so, will tender a friendly reception to THE DEACONESS AT WORK, a sixteen-page magazine of high standard, which is the national monthly organ devoted to the interests of this organized effort of devoted women, who "go about doing good."

Editors: Mrs. Jane Bancroft-Robinson, Ph. D., Rev. Isaac N. Dalby, M. D. 1140 N. Capitol street, Washington, D. C.

With the midsummer number the ANNALS OF THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE begins its third volume. The first article in the current number is entitled "Cabinet Government in the United States." It is by Professor Freeman Snow, of Harvard, and is an answer to the many pleas for the adoption in the United States of cabinet government as known abroad. The next contribution is by Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, of Norristown, Penn. Mrs. Oberholtzer is the National superintendent for the W. C. T. U. of the department known as School Savings Banks, and has contributed a valuable article on this subject which is attracting growing attention. Prof. J. B. Clark, of Smith College, has a paper on "Patten's Dynamic Economics," in which he explains the latest system of political economy, taking up Prof. S. N. Patten's recent book as a basis for his remarks. Prof. Léon Walras, of Lausanne, contributes an article on the "Geometrical Theory of the Distribution of Prices," in which he presents a geometric picture of the causation of the prices of all commodities. Besides these there are articles by Mr. B. F. Hughes on "Bases of Interest," by Leo S. Rowe, on the "Conference of the Central Bureau for the Promotion of the Welfare of the Laboring Classes," by Takekuma Okacla on "Taxation in Japan," and the usual valuable book reviews and personal notes.

American Academy of Political and Social Science, Philadelphia.

THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION, ILLUSTRATED, is keeping pace with rapid strides as the gigantic plans for the Exposition of '93 are being daily materialized, and furnishes once in a month most valuable information respecting the great event. A recent number contains photographs of several pieces of beautiful statuary, of buildings completed and in progress, and many portraits of men and women who are leaders in the work, with interesting historical facts regarding them. The magazine is, without doubt, unexcelled, and it is greatly to be regretted that with the fine reputation it is making for itself, it is placing its name on record as opposed to the Sunday closing of the gates of the Exhibit. Were the five columns of clear, clean print and perfect typographical work lent to a strong expression in favor of the Sabbath closing, the periodical would have scored a higher mark for itself than it can otherwise do.

159-161 Adams street, Chicago.

SPECIAL FAIR NUMBER.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, August 11, 1892. Number 32.

DEATH OF MADAME WILLARD.

At twelve minutes past twelve on Saturday night, or rather twelve minutes after the dawn of the Sabbath day, August 7, 1892, Mrs. Mary T. Hill Willard, known among white ribboners as Madame Willard, the honored mother of the editor-in-chief of this paper, entered into rest. Her age was eighty-seven years, seven months and four days, her character, best understood by the name "Saint Courageous," and her death, triumphant. The funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Evanston, at two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, in the presence of a vast concourse of friends, and the burial was in the family lot at Rose Hill Cemetery, nine miles from Chicago. A special memorial number of this paper will be issued soon, giving a full sketch, with portrait of this revered saint, also many of her remarkable utterances during the last days of her life. Miss Willard wishes to express her gratitude for the warm sympathy of thousands of friends.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The Fifty-second Congress adjourned sine die at eleven p. m. Friday.

President Harrison is at Loon Lake where his wife is convalescing.

The British Parliament opened on July 4, the new members being sworn in.

An appropriation of $2,500,000 for the World's Fair passed the House August 5.

It is said that two hundred thousand visitors are in Denver this week, as a result of the low railroad rates to the Knights Templar Convention.

The American Federation of Labor with its membership of 700,000 will lend its aid to the striking workmen at Homestead, Pa. A part of the militia, on guard at the mills, has been recalled.

It is announced that President Diaz, of Mexico, has resolved to lessen by one-fourth the terms of imprisonment of all criminals in Mexican prisons in honor of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America.

Mr. Charles E. Buell, chief of the division of church statistics in the United States census bureau, announces that the aggregate of actual membership of all denominations will exceed twenty millions.

OUR Fair number has become an established institution of the white-ribboners. It aims to reach the thought and sentiment of those who live in country neighborhoods, and in the isolation of prairie and hill. We take notice that out of the four candidates for the presidency, three were born and brought up on farms and the fourth had the good fortune of a country rearing. We also notice that the men who keep their hands on the levers of power are the ones who had them on hoe and plow handle. We remember, as a teacher, we always found that the girls who came from the country had the knack of carrying off the prizes for conduct and for scholarship. Somehow, they seemed to have more iron in the blood; perhaps it was the outdoor air; the ozone of the hills; the face of God walking in the cool of the day, that they had heard and heeded. Anyhow, we believe in the farm folk. If this country is to be saved, they have it to save, and the crusade in which we take the most interest is not in the palaces of the cities but in the country kitchens. The posies whose fragrance we like best grow in the homely garden where mother and the girls tend them with loving care and coax father and the boys to work a bit after the work of the field is over. So we send THE UNION SIGNAL, which we would dearly love to be to their minds what the garden with its simple sweetness and wholesome rest is to their homes. If they like it, we wish they would write us and tell us so; and if they do not, just let us know how we may suit them better.

THE official announcement of his nomination was made to General Bidwell in Metropolitan Hall, San Francisco, August 5 by Col. Eli. F. Ritter, of Indiana, chairman of the Cincinnati Convention. The most attractive feature of the great occasion was the enthusiasm evoked when Mrs. Bidwell, by invitation, took her place beside her husband and shared in the rejoicings of those representatives of reform in politics.

EIGHTEEN stateso nly, in 1891, reported their work at State and County Fairs. Nine of these have laws prohibiting the sale of liquors at Fairs: Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kansas, Maine, New York, Vermont, Wisconsin. Headquarters were established on 330 Fair grounds, at which three-quarters of a million pages of literature were distributed and about $5,000 cleared in restaurants. Some states reporting give no items, so these figures probably fall far below the real sums. There is no broader field for educative work than agricultural and mechanical Fairs, and accurate accounts should be kept by the unions who have the far reaching wisdom to make use of this great gateway to better life for the people.

WE all appreciate a good orange, pear, or peach as a luxurious piecemeal, but seldom use them enough in their proper place as food. This comes largely from ignorance of the many delightful methods of their preparation, as well as their nutritive and curative properties, consequently a book which tells of these various methods is a necessity in every household. The apple is a favorite with most people, and many housekeepers know of a dozen ways of cooking it, but the author of "Fruits and How to Use Them," who is none other than Hester M. Poole, a well-known contributor to THE UNION SIGNAL, describes eighty recipes. Our Association is handling this book this season, and the Publisher's Columns tell all about it.

A VERY pleasant evening was that spent in Lady Henry Somerset's drawing-room, 57 Gordon Square, London, July 7, by a number of the World's W. C. T. U. workers. Besides the gracious hostess there were Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, president of Spain, returning to that country from America, Miss Alice Palmer, World's organizer for South Africa, Miss Pash, an English woman, who has recently been appointed by Lady Henry Somerset for the World's work in India, and Miss Helen Hood, of America, who is now associated with Lady Henry Somerset. Miss Campbell, of South Africa, who was present at the Boston convention, could not be at this little reunion, as she was obliged to leave the day before to attend to the final preparations for the long voyage to Africa. A pleasant hour was spent in talking over the work and planning for the future. Handsome offices have been secured for the World's W. C. T. U. at 47 Victoria Street, Westminster, where the general work for the British Empire will be carried on.

IN many of the County and some of the State Fairs Demorest medal contests have been held with excellent results. At these, brass bands employed by the managers of the Fair have furnished music. The money for premiums has been given by this management, and the participants in the contests have been admitted free. We suggest that this be made a general custom. Beautiful cottages have been built on the Fair grounds in many localities, and at some, mothers' meetings have been held. Sometimes arrangements have been made to issue a paper daily, entitled The Fair White Ribbon. This is, perhaps, one of the best forms of circulating temperance literature. In many instances local unions have helped themselves financially by serving dinner. In fact, the ingenuity of our women far outruns the space which we can devote to a rehearsal of their achievements in this line. Suffice it that more and more they are promoting these great holidays in the interest of the good, the true and the beautiful

"A BILL has passed both branches of Congress making it a violation of the prohibitory law to sell malt liquors in the Indian country. For months the foamy beverage has been openly sold, and all the attempts to suppress the nuisance were unavailing until this law was passed." This is the statement we have from the Associated Press, which is certainly not enthusiastic on the temperance reform. It seems then that a law can do something, at least once in a while.

THE Convention in Denver, October 28th to November 3d, promises to be one of rare interest. We have reason to expect that William T. Stead, editor of that greatest philanthropic magazine that the world has ever known—The Review of Reviews—with his wife and son, will be in attendance. We shall also have addresses by phonograph from Lady Henry Somerset and other distinguished leaders. We are informed that the very large and beautiful church in which we are to convene has had addresses by phonograph already with entire success, the whole audience being able to hear to its entire satisfaction. The governor of the state will welcome the Convention, also the mayor of Denver and Judge Elbert, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Dr. McIntyre, the pastor of Trinity church, besides our own white-ribboners. These speeches are not to exceed five minutes each. Excursions to the famous canyons, parks and mountains of Colorado are being planned, and reduced rates will be furnished, such as are sure to make this a rare opportunity for our temperance friends, men and women, who desire to make the Colorado trip. The autumn is long and bright in that country, and we are assured that we have every reason to expect delightful weather up to the close of the Convention and for some days thereafter, so we hope that plans will be formed by members of our guild to invite friends and neighbors who desire to make such a trip to postpone it until they can have the "Pike's Peak of a convention," as well as the sight of Pike's Peak itself.

AMONG the many noble charities of the great city and the green country none are more Christlike than that known as the "Country Week," or "Fresh Air Fund." For this generous thought, or at least for its successful execution, we are indebted to the newspapers of such cities as Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, and doubtless many lesser ones. The object of this beautiful mission is to provide the poor of the city with the pure air, the natural scenery and the wholesome food of the country. These the farmer and villager have in abundance, and the first two at no cost to them. In Chicago The Daily News has charge of the Fresh Air Fund, with a part of which a large sanitarium has been erected on the lake front, far enough from the city's center to escape the polluting odors and large enough to accommodate six hundred babies with their mothers or attendants. This is only for the day time, and the little ones must be removed to their stifling homes in the evening. During the hot weather of July hundreds of baby lives were saved in this way. As a rule city people pay the expenses and country people furnish the homes. This summer, homes are not as abundant as usual. The plan is to place two children, or two working girls, or a mother and child in every home or farm-house that will kindly open to them. The persons thus receiving these needy ones as their guests have no expense above their food, as the entire cost of traveling is met by The Daily News through its friends. There are thousands of children in Chicago who have never walked on a country road, dabbled in a running brook, or tasted fresh milk and eggs. These seem small privileges to the farmer's boy, but they are delectable delights to the city urchin, who spends his summer nights in an ash barrel or under the cellar stairs. Open your hearts and your homes, even though they be already well filled, oh, ye honest husbandman, and take in these neglected little ones and these "prisoners of poverty," "In His Name."

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

BY MATHER DEAN KIMBALL.

(Loquitur.)

COUSIN JOE was here from Boston, came to spend a week or so.
Run my legs off servin' on him—
nothin' wa'nt too good for Joe!
Help? He never done a stitch, 'cept to lounge around 'nd rest,
Guzzlin' cream 'nd munchin' pie—seemed to like my rhubarb best.

Joe is smart enough, I reckon. Aunt Cornelia useter say
He could set 'nd scratch off portry by the column any day.
But them varses 'bout our farm, printed in that Boston sheet,
Hed more stuff 'nd nonsense to 'em than a hick'ry nut has meat.

Stuff about the "restful quietude" of livin' on a farm,
And the "pretty things of Natur makin' drudgery a charm."
'Bout the fields of new-mowed clover and "the air with odors rife
Makin' glad the busy hours of the happy farmer's wife."

John, he fetched it in the kitchen (I was gettin' things for tea),
Read it to hisself a-grinnin', then he read it out to me.
Didn't usual take much stock, he said, in portry and sich,
But he 'lowed that in these varses Cousin Joe hed struck it rich.

Yes, the rhymes was kind o' pretty; but the busy farmer's wife
(And ye know that's jest what I have been for all of half my life
'Nd more)—the busy farmer's wife, I say, ain't near so apt to see
The portry in drudgery, as her lazy cousins be.

I hain't no hand to grumble,—wives of farmers never air,
'Nd I've borne ('nd borne 'em willin') all the loads I've hed to bear.
But it wa'nt the easiest burden, John, that ever come to me,
To hear you praisin' that air stuff, 'nd me a-sweatin' over tea.

Chicago, Ill.

SOME PASSAGES IN THE PRACTICE OF DR. MARTHA SCARBOROUGH.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

CHAPTER I.

It began in the graveyard, where, it is sometimes whispered, the practice of the average doctor is tolerably certain to bring its patients more speedily than nature would have ordained. But, as surely as Tenterden steeple still counts to all Englishmen who respect old traditions, as sole cause of Godwin Sands, so surely Linborough graveyard was the beginning not the end of Dr. Martha's practice.

Linborough itself lay in a dip of the valley, blue hills rising in soft slopes from the broad, still meadows, and Greylock with its wisp of cloud always floating about its bare head, in the distance. Great farms were on the hillsides, and herds of cows fed in the meadows where they stood knee-deep in grass warranted to produce such butter as made the village notable even among many others hardly less so. There had been a day when Linborough had been famous for something besides butter; a day in which the governor chosen year after year, had still kept his place in the great house, now great only in the space it covered. The governor and the judge, the old colonel of the War of 1812, the minister who had stood up before his people every Sunday for forty years, and the old doctor, who had begun his practice among his own townspeople, each and all were gone, and in most of the great houses reigned alien the first emigrants who had penetrated New England, and whose children swarmed now in every nook and corner of these homes, before which tall poplar trees seemed like monuments to the vanished day to which their stateliness belonged.

The governor's house and the doctors were side by side, happily separated by a high hedge of arbor-vitæ, planted by the governor himself, to the surprise of the entire township, which regarded it as an innovation likely to bring discredit upon the rail fence no less than the stone wall which no reputable farm should be without. Miss Malvina, however, nodded her satisfaction whenever her eyes turned in that direction, for in process of years, the arbor-vitæ had grown into a mat so closely interwoven that even the most determined young Culligan could by no means make his way through. There were nine of them living in, and, if Miss Malvina were to be believed, turning the governor's house into pandemonium. Long ago, under the administration which, beginning in a cabin in an Irish bog, saw no reason why bog methods should not continue, the picket fence had come down, picket by picket, serving to boil the family kettle. Rail by rail the back fences had shared the samo fate, and then the tumbling porch and such portions of barn and outbuildings as could be spared, till the old house, denuded of all save frame and clapboards, looked desolately from its many windows toward the graveyard from which Miss Malvina felt the governor owed it to himself and family to rise and appear in person to protest against such sacrilege. Even Dr. Scarborough, second, shook his head at times, though to his sister he never admitted full cause for the indignation always simmering, and at stated intervals boiling over against all interlopers.

"What would you have?" he said with that easy tolerance that Miss Malvina affirmed to be more exasperating than the temper of any fiend could have been. "We were interlopers some two hundred years or so ago, and I dare say all the well-regulated aborigines had an even worse opinion of us and our manners and customs. Culligan himself would swing a shillelah, or dance a jig, or howl at a wake, with the same enthusiasm he brought over here, but Jim may be governor himself for all I know, and it behooves us to mind our p's and q's and show proper respect to the future rulers."

"Rulers!" gasped Miss Malvina, but at this point Dr. Martha turned about and looked seriously at her excitable aunt.

"You'll have to have lavender or something," she said, "if you will puff and sputter so. Shall I get it?"

"You're older than your aunt this minute," said Dr. Scarborough with a twinkle. "Come. I want you to hold Dolly."

"And another day gone out of school," said Miss Malvina, with a groan. "What you are thinking of, Nathan, I'm sure I don't know! Going on nine, and can't bound a state or tell whether she was born in Africa or America, and playing with bones that make your blood run cold even when you're used to them, which I never will be, no matter how you leave 'em round and me falling over 'em in the dark; and if their ghosts could walk and had any sense of what was due them, they'd be here every night of their lives, and who's to know whether it's man or woman, and legs and arms on the floor promiscuous."

"I'll tell you which is which," Dr. Martha began. "Don't you know they're not the same shape at all?" but Miss Malvina had escaped to the kitchen, and still shaking her head, entered into consultation with old Dilly as to the proper number of biscuit for the sewing-society tea.

"There are two letters to write before the stage comes," Dr. Scarborough said, turning back suddenly from the barn, toward which he had moved. "Play about for half an hour or so, little one, and I'll whistle when I am ready."

His hand laid for a moment on the child's head as he passed her, and she caught it and pressed her cheek against it, looking up at him with a curious good fellowship. Why not, since they had been comrades from the very day on which she began to "take notice," and smiled her first wavering and evanescent baby smile into the deep-set eyes that studied the tiny face for some trace of the young wife who had known only a year under the old roof, and died, leaving this little life in hands that grief made helpless and even indifferent? Day after day he locked himself in the great library, where his father's books still stood, flanked by newer ones in more languages than one, and day after day Miss Malvina wept over the baby and wondered if it would live and if its father would ever care if it lived or not. He watched it, it is true, with the care required, but with a look almost of indignation and astonishment that anything so frail had held to life, when another so dear and essential had gone out; but with that first smile and the clutch of tiny fingers in his beard there had come a change, and Miss Malvina soon began to protest against his absorption even more actively than she had done against his indifference.

The village watched with wonder and curiosity as to what might happen next, for Linborough fathers, as a rule, had small knowledge of baby life, and small interest in childhood. The doctor fitted a broad strap in his deep seated, covered buggy, made after a plan of his own, and at two, Dr. Martha looked out over it as her father drove over long stretches of country, talking to the baby, or silent at her side, as she snuggled against him and took little naps or chattered back in her small language.

The pale little cheeks filled out and grew rosy and dimpled. The serious gray eyes smiled at the father, though not often at the train of admirers, anxious women looking into the buggy to assure themselves that the child was not pining, and turning away only half convinced of the righteousness of such methods; but still she grew, and knew none of the ills that belong to babyhood, half of her life at least in the open air.

To-day, Dr. Martha, for so the whole neighborhood had come to call her, turned to her favorite waiting place at times like this. Half way up the hill lay the old graveyard, an obelisk in the center for the judge; a stone table on shaky legs for the governor. On this table, shadowed by two tall pines, with a growth below of ground myrtle creeping far beyond the two graves on which it had been planted, Dr. Martha often took her place and considered the curious figures on the old stones about. There were two in particular, tall and narrow, with cherubs' heads carved on them, blurred now, and indistinct. Dr. Martha looked at them to-day, spelling out the names with difficulty, since they were also blurred; "Sacred to the memory" each began; on the one stone, "Daniel," on the other, "Dorcas." Beyond this Dr. Martha never got, for at once she began to wonder who they were and when they had lived, and if they were little children or big people, the dates being as yet beyond her power. She looked at them to-day, lost in the sort of dream that seemed to be part of the old graveyard, till her father's whistle sounded and she ran and climbed into the buggy.

"Daniel and Dorcas," she said, after a long silence, in which they had climbed a hill and begun the slow descent into the valley beyond. "They are always together. What did they die of, father?"

"Intemperance," came the prompt reply, and Dr. Martha pondered for a moment over the new word.

"What is it?" she said at last, deciding it would not explain itself.

"A great many things, child; sometimes one and sometimes another. In this case it was pie and strong tea. I'll tell you how when I come out from Bunker's," and throwing down the reins which Dr. Martha caught, he jumped from the buggy, and went up the sweep of grass before the door of the little red house.

Lanesborough, Mass.

(To be continued.)

TAXATION AND THE POOR.

CHAPTER IV.

BY REV. C. H. ZIMMERMAN.

"THE SINGLE TAX."

Previous articles of this series have brought to me many letters urging that the single tax upon land to the extent of its full rental value is the only equitable tax, and expressing surprise that in seeking the best tax I ignore that scheme. The writers assume that I am unacquainted with Henry George's writings on the single tax, and kindly send me several of his tracts on that subject, together with copies of the single tax platform. One writer, referring to my statement that unimproved land, held for the unearned increment that comes from the increase of population near it, should be taxed so heavily that its owners cannot afford to keep it out of the market, says: "You come very near to stating the only true and perfect remedy (the single tax on land) without seeing it."

I have given considerable attention to the writings of Mr. George, for whom I have a very profound respect, and of other advocates of the single tax, but am not ready to adopt it as the best and only tax. Its advocates claim that the land belongs to God alone, quoting His declaration: "The land shall not be sold forever: for it is mine"; that He has given the use of it to all the people, and that individuals and corporations, and even governments have not now, and never had any just right to acquire and give titles to exclusive ownership of land. Therefore, their main object is to secure to all the people the use of the land as a natural, God given right. To accomplish this object they propose that government shall destroy and prevent all ownership of land by taking the whole of its rental value for public purposes.

The desire of single taxers to prevent large holdings of land by non-users for speculative purposes, and to open it to the use of all the people, commends itself to all who appreciate the evils of land monopoly. But without entering into a consideration of the equities involved, it is not probable that a majority of the people who have acquired legal titles to land by purchase or otherwise, will ever consent to have those titles taken away from them by taxation. If land were taxed to its full rental value, all titles to it which men now hold would be worthless. Under existing circumstances it is more than doubtful whether such a measure would be right. Nor do I believe that a tax so heavy as to destroy ownership in unimproved land is necessary to put it within reach of the people who want to use it. The greater part of the valuable vacant land now held for the unearned increment in cities, or sufficiently near them for tenement and market purposes, would be forced to sale in lots suitable for the use of comparatively poor people, at prices much lower than it is now held for, by a tax considerably above what it is now paying, but much below its full rental value. To illustrate: Near Chicago is much valuable vacant land held at prices so high that only wealthy or quite well-to do people can afford to buy it for homes. The same land rents at four per cent of its appraised value. If that four per cent were taken in tax its owners could not sell it at any price. The tax would amount to a confiscation of their titles. But if it were taxed one, or even two per cent of its rental value, it would still have a sale price, but at a proportionately lower rate. Its owners could not afford to hold it out of use, and would be forced to put it on the market at rates so low that people living in poor city tenements could afford to buy lots for homes.

This is what I had in mind in saying that such land "should be taxed so heavily that its owners cannot afford to keep it out of the market." My proposition did not involve the single tax principle, or contemplate a tax so high as to confiscate all or any titles in land, but one high enough to force the sale of valuable, unused land at rates within the reach of the industrious poor.

The tax feature of the single tax scheme is a secondary consideration with its advocates. It was not devised for purposes of revenue; but the gross injustice of our present methods of taxation, and the fact that the appropriation of the full rental value of land by the government would furnish more than enough revenue for its support, suggested the idea of a single tax as a substitute for all other forms of taxation.

Considered as a mode of taxation, for purposes of revenue, it does not seem that the single tax would be just. It proposes that only those who use land shall pay all the taxes for the support of government, and would, therefore, violate Adam Smith's just maxim of taxation, viz., that "the citizens of every state ought to contribute toward the support of the government, as nearly as possible in proportion to their respective abilities; that is, in proportion to the revenue which they respectively enjoy under the protection of the state. Now the revenues of citizens are not in proportion to the amount of land they use. For example: bankers and dealers in diamonds and in very costly fabrics enjoy the revenue of millionaires, yet their places of business occupy only a few square feet of land. More than half the wealth of the country is owned by persons who make comparatively little use of the land. A single tax on land would exempt these persons from taxation in proportion to their revenues and from their just share of the burden of government, and would impose the most of that burden upon small farmers and lot holders. Because the single tax would lay most of the burden of taxation upon people who are least able to bear it, and exempt a majority of those who are best able to bear it from their just share of taxation, it seems to me that it would be unjust. Because an income tax, properly assessed and collected would reach those who are best able to bear the burdens of government, I believe it to be the most equitable tax for revenue. I advocate a special tax on unimproved land held for the unearned increment only for the purpose of forcing its sale to those who need it for use. Such a land tax would also add greatly to the revenue of government and lessen the amount of income tax needed, which would make the just assessment and the collection of the latter less difficult.

Evanston, Ill.

JOHN BIDWELL, THE FARMER, PROHIBITION NOMINEE FOR PRESIDENT.

BY MARY WOOD ALLEN.

The personelle of each presidential candidate is of interest to us all, even though he may not represent the party to which we adhere. A week spent in the home of Gen. John Bidwell, of Chico, Cal., the nominee of the Prohibition party, will enable me to speak of him with some degree of accuracy, and I hope to do it without violating that sense of honor which makes the home of the host sacred to the guest. General Bidwell has been from his early life connected with the history of California, and has represented her at the nation's capital. To know him as a courteous gentleman one has but to be a recipient of his generous hospitality; to recognize him as a scholar one needs but to talk with him, and to scan the books in his library; to be assured that he is a philanthropist it is only necessary to observe the conduct of his business; and to feel that he is a Christian one needs but to have opportunity to know his interest in the souls of those who are in any way associated with him.

His elegant home is located in the beautiful town of Chico, which is built on land once owned by him, and his temperance principles are embodied in a clause in each original deed which prohibits using property in any way in the interest of the saloon. His public spirit is shown by contributions to the churches of all denominations, and his gift of land for the site of one of the three normal schools of California, located in Chico. While many landowners of this section raise grain and give employment to laborers only in the seed time and the harvest, General Bidwell's vast estate is managed so as to give employment the year round. Twelve thousand acres are kept under the finest cultivation. Acres upon acres of orchards are without a weed or a wandering blade of grass, and in the fruit picking season multitudes of women, girls and boys are added to the small army of constant laborers.

A number of years ago General Bidwell accepted the popular idea that homemade wine, if purely made, would tend to diminish drunkenness. Acting upon this hypothesis, and in the spirit of a philanthropist, he employed a competent man to manufacture wine, and devoted a large part of his domain to the raising of wine grapes. He went to Congress and to Europe, leaving this man in charge, supposing that because he had instructed the man to make pure wine it would not be intoxicating. On his return home he discovered that alcohol was added to the wine, "to keep it," and he soon observed that his wine-maker had hosts of friendly visitors at the wine cellar who came sober and went away intoxicated; "and so," said the General, "I became aware that I was making drunkards." His first purpose was to destroy every drop of wine, but being told by a clergyman that the hospitals would be glad of it as a medicine, he donated his whole stock to hospitals in San Francisco, and followed this deed by grubbing up every root of wine-grape vines. He now raises grapes for table use, or raisin grapes, which are manufactured into raisins on the premises. He grows apples and makes them into a standard article of pure vinegar. Olives are raised and manufactured into olive oil. Peaches, pears, plums, cherries, apricots, nectarines, almonds, English walnuts and prunes are among the fruits produced on his domain, which he calls Rancho Chico. He grows wheat and makes it into flour, having a grist-mill, with a capacity of two hundred barrels a day. He keeps three hundred cows and makes butter, and one hundred and fifty horses find pasture in his fields. I noticed that in all his explanations in regard to his business he said, "We do this, or we do that," and I said:

JOHN BIDWELL, PROHIBITION CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

"You always say 'we.' Have you a partner?"

"Oh, yes," he replied with an air of pride, "my wife is my partner." And a worthy partner indeed is Mrs. Bidwell. Considerably younger than her husband, Mrs. Bidwell supplements him, and works in sympathy with him. Seventy Indians are in their employ, and Mrs. Bidwell takes a deep personal interest in their welfare. They live in comfortable cottages on the estate, and a little chapel has been built for them wherein Mrs. Bidwell holds service every Sabbath. They recognize the kindness of their employers and sometimes lovingly refer to Mrs. Bidwell as "Annie." The same personal interest is manifested in the deepest welfare of the house servants, not only as to their temporal, but also as to their spiritual needs. Mrs. Bidwell is a recognized power in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in all church work, and in fact in every society that is trying to elevate humanity, no matter what its name, nor what church fosters it, though both General and Mrs. Bidwell are Presbyterians.

The Chico valley is especially interesting to an Eastern person because of its trees, grass and large streams. From the porch of the Bidwell mansion fifty varieties of trees can be counted, representing all climates from the ultra south to the extreme north. Along the winding mountain brook that sings through Rancho Chico we drove on a beautiful April day, past orchards laden with fruit, under the drooping festoons of wild grape vines, through the woodlands and the scene of pastoral loveliness which the owners have named Val Ambrosa, through fields glowing with the brilliant banners of the yellow California poppy, past the wide-spreading oak. Joseph Hooker, under whose broad, far-reaching branches several thousand men can stand, by the little Indian village and chapel, through the well-kept vineyards and orchards, back to the hospitable mansion, impressed, not only with the beauty of the scene, but with the executive ability of the man, whom, since that day, the Prohibition party has chosen to represent its principles as a presidential candidate, and have honored themselves by their selection.

Toledo, O.

AN AGRICULTURAL FAIR IN IRELAND.

BY MARY A. LIVERMORE.

In the early spring of 1882 my husband and myself found ourselves, for the second time, in Europe. Our first visit, a few years before, had been given up entirely to sight-seeing. For we had been anticipating the trip for years, and for a quarter of a century had each recorded in a note-book, as we learned of their existence, by reading or conversation, the names of the wonderful sights we would some day behold in that realm of enchantment that to every American lies beyond the sea. On the eve of sailing we condensed and unified our memoranda, and started with a forty-page list of historic buildings, celebrated cathedrals, masterpieces of art, prehistoric antiquities, and wonders of natural scenery—all of which we were determined to visit, or die in the attempt.

We accomplished all that we had planned, and much more. For in our study of Druidism, we went to Stonehenge and the Isle of Anglesea. We explored Fingal's Cave and the Giant's Causeway; went in a boat through the sewers of Paris, and followed a guide through the Catacombs of Rome; slept in Harriet Martineau's house, and attended divine service in the thousand year old church, adjoining which is the rural cemetery where rest the remains of Wordsworth and Coleridge; traveled leisurely through the Black Forest, whose somber name belies the wild grandeur and picturesque beauty delightfully mingled on every side; sailed up the castled and storied Rhine; bought rare curios of decorated and tinted glass at the bazaars of Piazza san Marco in Venice, where, eleven centuries ago, blind old Dandolo received the Crusader chiefs of France; shopped for mosaics in the stores of Florence, and for corals in the shops of Naples. We returned to America satiated with six months of travel and sight-seeing.

But by and by the itinerant blood in our veins got again at fever heat, and travel to the Pacific coast, over the great lakes, through Canada and the Northwest, down to the Gulf and through the Sunny South, failed to cool it. We would go again to Europe and we knew not where else. But our hunger for cathedrals and works of art, for historic places and buildings, and for natural scenery was appeased—we would now see the institutions of the various nations.

Our own government smacks of yesterday, with its legislative assemblies and courts of judicature; what of those whose roots stretched down to pre-historic times? Our schools, colleges and universities are new and young, and somewhat impertinent in their pretensions. We wished to see something of the ancient colleges of Cambridge and Oxford, to compare Girton and Newnham with Vassar and Wellesley, to visit Bonn and Heidelberg if we might be permitted. Our holidays are carnivals of noise and sulphurous smoke, when Young America transforms himself into a veritable Ætna of lurid fire and deafening explosion. Do the people of Europe know how to make better use of their fête days? Have the philanthropists on the other side learned to conduct their jails, prisons, penitentiaries and reformatories, so that a majority of their criminals, when released, "cease to do evil and learn to do well"? For, alas! in our country the "jail-bird," in most instances, comes from imprisonment hardened and desperate, and thenceforth takes his rank with the foes of social order.

And so it happened that the early months of 1882 found us again in Europe. There is neither time nor space for even the briefest record of that interesting trip of ten months. We visited schools, colleges, hospitals, prisons, reformatories, work houses, asylums, attended conferences and conventions—sat through the closing scenes of a divorce trial in the court room in Westminster Hall—and persistently maintained our sittings in the galleries of the House of Commons, from six at night until five in the morning, that we might hear Gladstone make a speech which the Honorable (?) filibusters present were determined should not be delivered. "Nous sommes Americains!" was the open sesame that unlocked to us all doors on the continent closed to the general public. We found human nature the same on both sides the water, and recognized that America is dealing with social problems common to Europe, under circumstances that are sometimes more favorable and sometimes less so.

In the fall we went to Dublin, to meet Hon. William Parsons, the eloquent Irish lecturer, who for twenty years crossed the ocean every season to fill lecture engagements in the popular Lyceum courses of our country. He knew all lands, for he had traveled the world over again and again, and yet he was an enthusiastic Irishman. One day he came rushing to our rooms in the Shelborne House in a little tempest of excitement. "You are in luck," he said, "in great luck. To-morrow is the grand day of the Agricultural Fair, when the Lord-Lieutenant will visit the grounds and bestow the premiums as they are awarded. All the landed gentry will be present, and there will be horse-racing in the afternoon for prizes and a grand ball in the city in the evening, to be opened by the Lord-Lieutenant and the Duchess of ——, and I have tickets for 'the whole business,' as you Americans say. Oh, to-morrow I will show you here, in old Ireland, such magnificent horses, such splendid bulls, such superb cows, such beautiful sheep and such handsome, captivating, entrancing women as the world elsewhere does not produce!" And holding aloft his pasteboard cards, he bowed and pirouetted about the room like a Frenchman.

The next day we set off for the Fair grounds, a few miles away, in a jaunting-car, which enabled us to see the charming country. The moist climate had covered every rock and stone with verdure, even the miserable thatched cabins of the peasantry were draped with ivy, as were the trunks of trees, and the old stone walls. Nature seemed desirous to mantle with beauty the poverty and squalor that disfigure the land. The peasants were at work in the fields, gathering the late crops, women by the hundreds working with the men, and quite as hard, or they were digging the peat bogs for turf, which they cut into brick-shaped pieces, and piled up to dry. Every inch of available ground was carefully cultivated, and every field seemed to be provided with underground drainage, showing the expensiveness of farming in this moist country.

I watched the toiling men and women with sympathetic interest. "Poor toiling brothers and sisters!" I said to myself; "the soil you are working is not yours, and never can be. You create wealth for absentee landlords, who mostly 'spend their substance in riotous living' on the continent, or elsewhere, and you do not receive a fair share of the bounty you win from the earth. Your pleasures are derived from the fiery whisky, of which Ireland distils tens of millions of gallons yearly, or from the 'brown stout' which is brewed in Dublin, at the rate of two hundred and fifty thousands gallons a day. I will see you at the Fair and talk it over, for I care more for you than for the Lord Lieutenant, the landed gentry, or the entrancing women."

We reached the beautiful Fair grounds, which spread out before us like a picture. The greensward rolled away in luxuriant waves to the foot of the ivy-clad trees; marquees, flying gay flags and streamers, dotted the landscape; groups of Her Majesty's soldiers clad in short-tailed scarlet coats almost dazzled the eyes; while there was a perfect riot of color on the racing ground, as the brilliantly costumed jockeys trotted out their horses, and the showy equipages, radiant with beautiful occupants, defiled slowly to better positions. The grand stand was a colossal flower garden, in which every moment a new blossom unfolded itself as some lady, bedecked with corruscating gems, mounted to her high seat, or some officer, resplendent in gold lace and nodding plumes, whose jeweled decorations flashed in the sunlight, rose to assist her.

As we rode along the brilliant scene, chaperoned by Mr. Parsons, he pointed out the distinguished persons in the crowd, and gave a brief, graphic résumé of their history, lifting his hat to one, and bowing to another.

"But where are the people?" I inquired. "These ladies and gentlemen did not raise the splendid vegetables on display in the booths yonder; they do not use the agricultural machinery that attracts so much curiosity; they have not reared these magnificent horses and bulls, these almost human cows and sheep. Where are the people whose work is here on exhibition, and is receiving awards and prizes?"

"Oh, this is an affair of the gentry, and the peasantry do not come here. They have their Fairs, which are unlike this, and better suited to them. You have nothing like it in America, for you have no hereditary nobility, and know nothing of the caste which it creates. In your country the people rule."

"Thank God for that!" was my reply.

The whole brilliant scene lost its attraction. My pulses ceased to thrill with pleasurable excitement, and when the brilliant assemblage rose to their feet to greet the winning horse with shouts and cheers and blare of trumpets, my thoughts were busy with the horny-handed workingmen and women without who were shut away from the inspiring spectacle. Their toil had provided the means for this gay occasion, but they might not share it. They sowed and others reaped, and I remembered Byron's accusation, nearly a century before, that "the union of England with Ireland was that of the shark to its prey." Here was an object lesson in illustration. Impoverished by five centuries of oppression, ruled by aliens who have taken from them every acre of their native land, abdicating government of themselves in favor of the potent whisky that steals the brain, here they were, still grinding in their prison-house, like another blind Samson. And when their "lords of the Philistines gathered them together to make merry and rejoice," the part of this modern Samson, like that of the giant of old, was to "make sport for them."

Oh, farmers of the mighty West, rejoice that your agricultural Fairs are made and shared by the people! That they own and till the soil, gather its fruits and rejoice together over the bounty of the common earth. And that you may maintain your right to an inviolable home and the fruit of your toil with your share of the wealth you help create, revise the preamble of your political platform, and make it morally invulnerable. It reads thus:

While our sympathies, as a party of reform, are naturally upon the side of every proposition which will tend to make men intelligent, virtuous and temperate, we nevertheless regard these questions—important as they are—as secondary to the great issues now pending for solution.

No! a thousand times no! Intelligence, virtue and temperance can never be secondary matters. They are always and everywhere primary, fundamental and basic. No political party can win in America that avowedly puts these in the second place. They are first and foremost, and the party that disregards them counts out God as a factor in human efforts.

Melrose, Mass.

A TALE OF A CIDER PRESS.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

"I haven't felt very well since strawberry pickin'," admitted little Mrs. Edgett, pausing in her labor of measuring out butter and sugar to draw down her spectacles from her forehead and look carefully at her receipt book. "It's a busy time and I was up every morning by three, and of course I had to be up till all the fruit was looked after for the night and pa and the rest had supper. And your father is real hearty, and with so much to eat around, it does seem as if it ought to be cooked. But it takes strength, and the spring o' the year is tryin', an' I guess I got kind o' beat out. But I didn't know as I was lookin' low-spirited. I don't know but I feel as cheerful as common. I try to be. I feel my blessings, and I've allus tried to take all the comfort I could. My mother used to say, if we don't take a little comfort every day we never get any."

Mary Ellen, the oldest daughter, and the strong staff of her mother's heart, was up from Zoar to spend the day. It being the Fourth of July, the "salesladies" of Hipkinson's bazaar had a holiday. Mary Ellen sold hose at Hipkinson's for six dollars a week. A very plain room, from which she looked upon a blank, brick wall, and very plain food cost her four dollars and a half a week. A dollar and a half is a small sum on which to dress one's self, after laundry bills have been paid, and Hipkinson wanted his salesladies to look neat, and even smart. Mary Ellen was not now, however, working for herself, but was sewing upon her mother's best dress as fast as her fingers could fly. The age of the cashmere and the different tints its various parts began to suggest vexed her. So too did the bright red spots on her mother's cheeks. But just now her mouth was full of pins, and her mother continued: "I don't want you to think Emmeline and Tilly haven't helped me. Emmeline has got to be a good cook, and Tilly sweeps and makes beds as well as I do, but they've been in school, and they start early, for when your father has been extra busy he couldn't take 'em."

"I'd ought to be home to lift things off from you, ma," said Mary Ellen, who had deposited the pins upon the windowsill in a lump. "But it don't seem to me I could stand it to come home and have pa begin again about 'three good-for-nothing girls around'; I don't believe three boys would do as much for him as we have. It isn't in boys to work as we have."

"Don't lay up what your father says, don't, Mary Ellen," coaxed the mother. "I know he has his ways, and they're not what a body could wish, always, but he means right. I've heard him bragging of you to Mr. Scrann, and how plucky you were to start out to get your own living."

"I don't think it looks well for the man who owns the best farm in Oswego county to brag that his daughter works ten hours a day for a dollar and a half a week," said the girl, tartly. "What I eat he'd never feel here at home, nor yet the price of my bed. But I pay four dollars and a half for my food and shelter in the city. It seems a pity I wasn't worth a dollar and a half at home to father. But I wouldn't mind if he was kinder to you since one of his lazy girls is out of his way. But it hasn't made a mite of difference, I can see by this dress."

"Oh, that dress does very well for me," said the mother, deprecatingly; "it isn't as if I was in a city."

"It has been made over three times, and then only when the elbows were through," said Mary Ellen in a quiet, historical voice. "The stuff you bought the last time to piece out with has faded green, and the old stuff is brown. It's a shame to the nation! Perhaps you'd like to know," the girl hesitated a minute, "I didn't mean to tell you, but I believe you'd rather I would; I had enough money to buy you a Henrietta cloth last winter just when I fell sick with the grip. I didn't write you, but I had to have the doctor, and he charged two dollars a visit. I couldn't send to father, as long as I could pay him. If I hadn't caught that unlucky cold, you'd have something better than this."

A rosy-cheeked boy of about twelve had come in unobserved, and had heard all that Mary Ellen had said. He had always thought his mother looked pretty as a pink, for she had the rare knack of always being neat and attractive when about her household tasks. But if Mary Ellen said mother ought to have a new gown, he believed her.

"You just look here," he broke in, "Jim and me'll ask father to give mother the egg money till she has enough to buy her just the kind of a dress she wants. I'll tell him we'll tend up to the hens all vacation, and I'll sell fish in the village—if I get a chance to catch any, and berries. There's going to be sloughs up in the hillside pasture."

Twenty years ago Mrs. Edgett had been an uncommonly pretty woman. Now her form was bent, her complexion was faded, and her face was etched over with those wrinkles that unremitting toil, in which no element of self-gratulation or reward mingles, causes. To have been occasionally told how sweet her bread was, how dainty her pies, to have heard her husband say, "Jane, there isn't such a housekeeper on the Mile Strip," and it would have been simple history if he had said it, would have been manna to her hungry, affection-craving soul. But she had never heard anything but the ceaseless grumbling drive of a man whose nerves were tough as chilled iron, and who looked upon the graces of life as "gammon." There were many white threads in her brown hair. Her blue eyes had taken on the patient, non-expectant look of age, and her rose-leaf tints had given place to waxen pallor, though she was only forty-two. Solomon Edgett could have bought his wife any sort of gown her fancy craved had he been so minded, and his wife knew it. The hill farm on which the family lived was one of the best in the region, and then there was the valley farm, the income from which was always put in the bank. But to part with money for anything save land, animals, or tools which would make his own work less difficult, was a physical pain to him. So when little Jack spoke up, so generously interested in his mother's having a suitable dress, and so sure of his twin brother's assistance, his sister clapped her hands. "Oh," cried she, "you'll be able to have the money by Fair time. I'll take my vacation the two middle weeks in August, and I can help, so we needn't have Miss Snyder more than two days."

Now of the twins, Jack was the Moses and Jim the Aaron, and Jack put his brother forward to conduct the negotiations regarding the egg money, prudently choosing the time after his father's after-dinner nap, and when he was well out of hearing of the house.

"Your mother wants a new dress, does she?" was the reply. "Well, why didn't she say so?"

"Why, you see it's Mary Ellen thinks her old one is awful old and shabby," said Jim quietly. "It stands to reason Mary Ellen knows what is what, and ma says the dress was bought eight years ago."

"Well," growled the father, "do what you're a mind to. I don't care."

On the second week in August with what the boys had earned, Mrs. Edgett had eleven dollars and eighty cents, and after much deliberation it was planned that she was to go to New Smyrna with her husband the second day of the Fair, and select the cloth in the afternoon. Miss Snyder, the mantua-maker, was engaged to come for two days, and Mary Ellen was to bring the buttons and trimmings from the city. She wrote her mother she could easily furnish them. She did it by going without her luncheon of tea and bread and butter.

The eventful day came at last as all days will. They started a little late, for Silas Upham came from the valley farm and stayed an hour. He paid the semi annual rent, and Mr. Edgett had it well pinned up in the inside pocket of his vest. Jack and Jim talked confidentially on the back steps while they waited. "I'm awful glad ma is going to the Fair," said Jim under his hand, "and I wish she had her new dress to wear. Deacon Scrann's wife was up here to call yesterday from Smyrna Center, and I noticed her dress. My! It was as slick down as if she'd been run through a knot-hole, and ma's is all bunched up in the back."

"I wonder ma don't let hers down," said the unimaginative Jack.

"I s'pect she can't," said Jim. "Mary Ellen would a' made it over, if it could 'a been done."

"Well, she'll see the fixin's in Floral Hall just the same," said Jack, "and any way, maybe she'd rather save the newness for meetin'. Mrs. Scrann said there's a bed-quilt of silk bein' put up for primium, that's got seven thousand pieces in it."

"Mur-der-ation!" ejaculated Jim, who from his fourth to his sixth year had been compelled with his brother to do a daily stint of sewing, their mother believing that it would be for their future happiness, and especially for the happiness of the women they might live with, for her boys to know something about a needle.

The cinnamon ferns held up brown plumes of seed. The clematis clinging along the stone walls was full of milk-white stars, and in the damp places the cardinal flower swayed its crimson blooms. Even tired Mrs. Edgett forgot the work that would heap itself up against the morrow in her absence, while Emmeline, Tilly and the boys were so full of gay chatter their father felt himself a very indulgent parent. "'Taint every family as can ride to the Fair to day," he said as they neared the gate of the Fair ground and he fumbled in his pockets for his tickets (a present from the association), "and there ain't many as have such a team," and he glanced pridefully at Nick and Neezer (short for Ebenezer).

"There's one thing you mustn't forget," said Mrs. Edgett as she stepped into Floral Hall, "and that is I must go over to the village directly after dinner. I want a good light. I may get a poor black if I don't have a good light."

"Well," said Mr. Edgett coldly.

With the curiosities in feather and wool flowers, the frames made of beans and corn, the complicated bed quilts, and the landscapes in evidence of latent home talent, we have nothing to do, so we will leave Mrs. Edgett and the girls and follow the twins and their father, who went directly to the cattle pens. Peter Scrann, who was near the prize ram, pounced upon the boys. "Say," he whispered, "there's a man over here from Siloam Center with a patent cider press, and he gives away all you want. Some is sweet and some is snappy. Come on and have some." Mr. Edgett was deep in talk with Mr. Scrann and the man in charge. The boys went off together. There was a great crowd about the press, and after much elbowing the boys found themselves near a huge hogshead on the edge of which was hung a tin cup held by a chain. "This," explained Peter, "is the snappy cider. The sweet cider is there where they are at work."

(To be continued.)

Terre Haute, Ind.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS ABOUT FAIRS AND EXPOSITIONS.

BY JOSEPHINE R. NICHOLS.

Superintendent Exposition Department World's W. C. T. U.

How shall we reach the masses? How shall we enlighten them in regard to better and purer methods of living? How can we convert them to those principles that will establish a better condition of things, both as regards legislation for the state and a higher standard of morality for society and the individual by the overthrow of gigantic evils that are antagonistic to the happiness and best welfare of both the one and the other? These are problems that constantly face us as reformers; and their solution is certainly an object greatly to be desired. To the Woman's Christian Temperance Union that way is the most desirable that reaches the most people in the most effective manner with the least outlay of money. Not of time or labor, for those are always being used in the most lavish manner, and yet even these may be economized in some ways more than others.

One field of work that presents itself as a remunerative one in results for the outlay expended upon it, is the Fair grounds. These are the great meeting places where the masses from the rural districts gather for social converse, and for information in regard to the advance in agricultural matters. That is, these were originally supposed to be the object of the Fairs, although in many places they have degenerated into mere horse races with the attendant gambling and pool selling. The advantages of being present upon these fair grounds—located in nearly every state and territory and in almost every county as special institutions, as well as in many districts and towns—need not be presented here, as they are fully recognized by temperance workers who are using them more and more for the advancement of the work.

In trying to secure entrance to such places certain steps are necessary, and sometimes it is a difficult matter to accomplish, but once having gained such a vantage ground the reward is a sure one. Agricultural boards generally meet in January, for the assignment of space, and applications for a place should come before them at this meeting. The reason many unions do not secure space is because they apply too late in the season. Having secured place there should be a thorough preparation in regard to details. If the spot can be decorated, it should be made as attractive as possible in this way. Flags are always available, and produce a bright effect; small bunches of grain, especially wheat, tied with colored ribbons, or strips of cloth are beautiful for covering pillars, or unsightly places, and rice, sea-oats, millet, and bunches of colored grasses add much to the effect. Some of the bunches should have long stems, and others short ones. If signs are used, very handsome and inexpensive ones can be made also with grains of corn or rice or other kinds that are firm in texture. The letters can be cut or sawed out of thick pasteboard or a thin board, and then with the aid of glue covered with the grains laid on flat. By using both red and white corn the effect is varied. If the board to which these letters have been fastened before being covered is painted blue or red the effect will be enhanced. A convenient paint pot will also help in beautifying some of the letters after they are covered, especially those of rice. These signs are much more durable than those painted on muslin, as they can be freshened up year after year.

If possible, devote part of the space to a reception room where some easy chairs will invite weary mothers from the country, for the most grateful part of the work will be the reaching out to and influencing this class of visitors. If there is wall space have hung upon it pictures of prominent leaders. These are now so cheap and so easily obtained that such decorations can always be used, and will prove to be of great interest. Flowers should always be an adjunct not only for decoration, but as a special exhibit and for sale.

If a lunch stand or dining hall is arranged, decorations consisting of bannerettes with statistics relating to the movement upon them, and mottoes appropriate for temperance work should hang all about. These can be made by having some one who is an expert in such things paint them upon sheets of cardboard, putting alternate white and red letters upon white cardboard, or blue if preferred, or white letters upon yellow or blue cardboard, making as brilliant a show as possible. Japanese paper napkins can be used for the table, as they are now so cheap, and these can be made into pretty souvenirs that many women will gladly carry away with them, by having printed in the center or across one corner some fact in regard to temperance work, some of the figures which prove the power and extent of the liquor traffic, or a sentiment or verse for temperance.

How to provide for lunches and dinners so as to make them profitable, is also a question to be considered. First, there should be a canvass (personal) made by the Fair superintendent or members of a committee of the country side as well as calls made on local unions in towns and cities for supplies and help to carry on the work. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has already secured such a reputation in this way as makes it greatly sought after as a caterer. Already many Fair Boards are gladly welcoming it to their grounds, because its service in this way tends to increase the attendance there of the better elements of society, and raise the moral tone of such gatherings.

Second, all arrangements should be made for the comfort of guests and their cordial reception, rather than simply for gain. The effect most sought after should be the winning of people to the cause, and if the making of money follows the efforts in this respect, it is a pleasant but secondary effect. One way to commend the work to the people is to furnish plenty of good drinking water free, however it may interfere with the opportunity of selling temperance drinks which should form part of the refreshments offered. Not greed, but good will and the purest philanthropy should be the foundation motive for work at Fairs.

Whatever else may be undertaken, the distribution of literature is the one thing needful for accomplishing the object for which this line of work was established. What to give and how to give it are questions that are answered more satisfactorily every year. The great opportunities attending the work for enlightening the people by the printed page have been recognized by our own publishing house and others who give their attention to these matters, so that ample provision is made by the presentation of the temperance question from every standpoint that can be used in reaching all classes.

Beer and cider are the most popular and insidious antagonistic forces we meet at such places, so the "Handbills on Beer and on Cider" are convenient to give to both men and women, old and young, to show them the demoralizing influences of indulgence in these things that are harmful. The men who really control the country by their votes, inasmuch as the voters in the rural districts constitute four-fifths of the voting power in the country, may be convinced by "Signal Lights" and "Prohibition Bombs," not thrust upon them in their nakedness and so liable to repulse them at first sight, and perhaps cause them to be discarded, but appropriately clothed by being enfolded in some agricultural or temperance paper, neatly rolled up and tied with a ribbon, that will make a package easily thrust into the pocket and carried home for a careful perusal.

For women, let there be always our own papers, a "Gospel Temperance" leaflet, one on "Suffrage" and a "Bible Reading." Then, let every child have its pretty card with its temperance sentiment or verse. Make the place so attractive to all, and their reception so bountiful and gracious, that it will be sought after as a delight and a joy. Let not the distribution of literature be confined only to those who come as visitors or patrons, but have the little packages carried all about among exhibitors and employes, placed in lunch baskets, in the check rooms, thrown into vehicles as they pass out on the way home, and handed to those who are standing idly about, waiting for the next attraction to present itself.

As to the influence in controlling the nature of exhibits and the items on the program, it has been fully demonstrated that the W. C. T. U. can use this to an immense extent if rightly and eagerly sought after For the past few years Demorest medal and other oratorical contests have taken the place of those things that were lowering to the taste. Parades of Loyal Temperance Legions, with the awarding of prizes, have superseded "sack races" and climbing greased poles. Musical contests, both vocal and instrumental, have drawn the crowds away from the shooting galleries and games of fortune, so as to make them unprofitable, and by the aid of grangers, Fairs have been established and run, from which all horse racing was entirely excluded and the premium money was devoted to those things that are of real profit to rural communities. With this beginning, it is not an impossibility to secure the return of agricultural Fairs to their legitimate object, namely, the instruction and entertainment of the people in the best and highest sense, and the prevention of turning the County or State Fair into a school of vice, where the youth may learn his first lessons in evil.

In special work, relating to other outdoor meetings, locality and the occasion must largely determine what is best, but none should be passed by as unworthy of attention. Instead of this, occasions should be multiplied, by arranging for Harvest Homes, in which the whole people in a county should be invited to participate, and for which a program of music, declamation and addresses should be carefully prepared in connection with the festival and sale of fruit and vegetable contributions which are part of such meetings. Above all, should we take possession of the 4th of July and celebrate it in such a way as will constantly rekindle the pure fires of patriotism in American hearts. The day is no longer a time for the rehearsal of glorious deeds in our history, with all the attendant "pomp and circumstance" which once accompanied its celebration. It has been given over largely to ignoble things, and is not the great civic holiday it once was. May it not be the province of patriotic women to rescue the day from becoming a thing of the past, even as the Jewish women, during the captivity, by their faithfulness, preserved the records which constitute the Old Testament and which the men in their despair had neglected and forgotten? W. C. T. U. Fourth of July celebrations have increased largely in number in the past two years, and have proved great successes in every respect.

The most prominent feature of the general work is the securing and the enforcement of laws for the regulating of matters connected with Fairs especially for the exclusion of those things that tend to vice, especially gambling devices and liquor selling. Many such laws have been already passed, but their stringent enforcement is still an unsolved problem in many cases. Where there are no prohibitory laws for such occasions, the board of managers must be appealed to and influenced in every way possible. If the law exists its enforcement can be secured largely by vigilant observance of the refreshment stands upon the grounds. If no law exists prohibiting the sale of liquors on State and County Fair grounds, it is a possible and simple remedy to have their charters amended in the legislature by inserting a prohibitory clause. It is a good step in the right direction if the Fair superintendent should write to the secretary of each Fair board as soon as the list of Fairs is published for the season, asking for facts in regard to this matter during the past season, so as to ascertain, if possible, where there is likely to be danger of infringement of the law. In all such cases, circulars should be freely distributed containing a copy of the law and the facts of the infringement, with an appeal to all good citizens to join in securing better enforcement of it. If agricultural boards have connived at the breaking of the law, bring such a pressure to bear upon them as will warn them that their position is a dangerous one. "For ways that are dark," the liquor dealer is peculiar, and as he knows no law but his own greed of gain, his devices for evading the law are numerous, but so soon as the people are informed in regard to them, and an interest is aroused, the work of defeating them will be effective.

The mode at Expositions differs from that of Fairs only in extent and duration. Greater preparations need to be made, and a larger expenditure of money upon them, as they are for a continuance of the work for weeks and months. In all countries where the W. C. T. U. has been established, and Expositions, National and International have been held, their opportunities for temperance work, and the importance of using such opportunities has been recognized. The exhibit varies in nature with the locality, but the distribution of literature is always the chief feature.

There is not room in such an article to tell of all the good results that have followed these efforts to reach the masses in so many nationalities, but attention must be directed to the great World's Fair that is to be held here in the United States next year, in which will be presented opportunities that are unprecedented in the history of Expositions. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will take its place in the great Woman's Building along with other women's societies. Whether its exhibit will prove its claims to recognition as the largest and most powerful organization of women in the world, depends upon the aid and coöperation of all its branches, both in the World's Union and the National in this country. The space will necessarily be limited in a general building, but it is proposed to make the exhibit as choice and representative as possible.

As there is to be no separate building devoted entirely to the W. C. T. Union, different countries and states will not have such a separate exhibit as was planned for them when such building was considered a certainty, so it is recommended that in addition to the special features of this general exhibit, a fuller exhibit be made in connection with each national exhibit of the country, and with each state exhibit wherever space can be secured in such connection. In this way, the influences which cannot be congregated in one grand whole, may be brought to bear in all parts of the Exposition. Especially should the distribution of drinking water and temperance literature be considered as of paramount importance. Let the power of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union be felt in its beneficence, and in its thoughtfulness for the comfort of the people, if in no other way.

The highest legislative authority in the land, the United States Senate, after rising to the greatness of its power and responsibility by declaring that the gates should be closed and God's Sabbath respected, and the people should be free from the temptations of drink, by their reversion of the action upon the latter question have joined with the local management in declaring that it is willing that "the bottle shall be put to its neighbors' lips." Let us not forget in this crisis that God hath spoken and has said : "The Earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof," and of that fullness silver and gold are as naught in His eyes compared with the precious souls of men. In faith believing that His arm is not shortened, that He cannot claim His own, we may rise to a recognition of this opportunity of reaching men and convincing them of a better way of living and thinking by the seed-sowing done among the masses congregated there.

Note.—The United States Senate at this writing had voted to make the appropriation of $5,000,000 for the Columbian Exposition only on condition that the gates be closed on Sunday. The vote that liquors should not be allowed sold on the grounds was reversed, thus allowing their sale.

IOWA.

Dear Union Signal:—Now that the Republican leaders have thrown overboard prohibition and openly chosen the saloon vote many of our women are ready for active service against the party. So long as it was true to our cause, hundreds who were party Prohibitionists felt it their duty to lend prayers and influence for the election to office of Republicans who would maintain our law.

The noble action of the executive committee of the State Temperance Alliance, in issuing the circular referred to on first page of The Union Signal of July 28, has brought upon the heads of the brave seven who signed the circular the most vehement abuse from many of the high license Republican papers.

These papers do not give the facts in the case. It is almost impossible for the voter who merely takes his own party paper to get at the truth, hence the great importance of getting campaign documents into every house in the state.

Individuals and unions should freely purchase literature, calculated to lay before the minds of sincere and honest men the real facts in the case. There are thousands of conscientious men and women in Iowa who have been mislen by the non-partisan myth. Many are getting their eyes open to the real situation and are coming into our ranks.

I urge our women to make this their chief work for the present—the circulation of campaign documents. Fair time will present splendid opportunities for those who have a mind for this work.

Men who two months ago were unwilling to sign the million voters' agreement, are now ready and willing to do it. Let these pledges be circulated.

Let us be up and doing for the sake of our lovely, temperate youths, who are the pride of our hearts and the joy of our homes. Clara P. White.

Volga, Ia.

HOW TO REACH THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Dear Union Signal:—The letter from "A Farmer's Wife" in your issue of June 30 has been read with wide interest. That appeal was a happy thought, for I have been trying for two years to open this untried field to the W. C. T. U.

One difficulty is the obtaining of names of women and their postoffice addresses. If any in the country are interested in W. C. T. U. work they should write to the nearest union and let it be known. Most of the unions are in town and the women have no conveyance to take them to the country or they would be there. Why may not the local union open a reception room, employ a matron and invite the country women to rest there, leave their children, eat their lunch, etc., when they come to town trading—all with the hope of introducing our literature and inspiring them with our thought "For God and Home and Native Land."

As county president I had an organizer go to six school districts and lecture in school rooms and churches where arrangements had been made for her. She found the field "white to harvest" but no means to continue her work. Appointments ahead of her should have been secured, giving due notice that an audience would be gathered. I could give one woman employment for a year.

There are 116 school districts in my county (114 rural districts, two in cities). If she could serve me every Sunday in the year at some country church or school-house she would not get over the county. I say Sunday because farmers' wives cannot often be away from home during the week. They cannot drive the team, or have no team to spare from work. On Sunday some male member of the family will accompany them.

I obtained the names of the district school clerks, wrote to them about scientific temperance instruction in their schools, sent one hundred copies of "Dying at the Top," Union Signals, leaflets, tracts and other papers. Have written to teachers and asked them to give me the name of some lady in her district that was, or might become, interested in the work of the W. C. T. U. Our county convention last week decided to offer two prizes to the district schools for the best essays on the evil effects of tobacco and other narcotics on the human system. Honorary members are sought earnestly.

We find that women and girls in the country do not like to organize and sustain a separate union. The slogan is one hundred members in the country this year, and if they will put their dues in the county treasury, literature will be sent them and correspondence sustained by the county officers.

It was our desire last year to have each union take charge of ten schools, write to teachers and clerks, send literature and books for the library our state superintendent of public schools was trying to provide in each district. Here was our opportunity for temperance books. Some country teachers wrote me they were glad some one thought enough of lonely "schoolmarms" to come to them.

Somebody may suggest a better way to reach these farmers' wives, and of having them reach us. We need each other. Josephine V. Kelly,

Ex-president county W. C. T. U.

Independence, Mo.

OATMEAL WATER AS A DRINK.

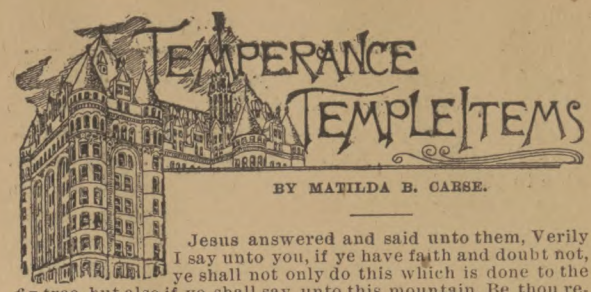
Dear Union Signal:—To the busy housekeeper who has the care of serving field lunches to gangs of hay-makers or harvesters the question of drink is often puzzling. Some men like cold tea and coffee, but others do not. Raspberry and blackberry shrub are delicious, but often not available, because of the cost of the materials and the labor of preparing. On my father's farm we used sweetened vinegar water, sometimes flavored with ginger, until the superintendent of a neighboring iron mine mentioned something better. Stir oatmeal in water and let it settle; enough of the finer particles remain suspended in the liquid to make it both food and drink. This is the beverages allowed in the mine, and it is well liked by the men and keeps up their strength. It is being successfully introduced in places where stimulants used to be considered indispensable.

It is especially healthful for men exposed to great heat. Once it was thought that the stokers on board of steamers could not endure the terrible heat of the engine fires without liquor, but oatmeal water is now being extensively substituted, with marked advantage.

The Christian Union has just published an instance of its use, which is well worth repeating: A Western railroad had to change two hundred miles of broad gauge track to narrow gauge in the shortest possible time. Five thousand men were engaged to work seventeen hours a day. In order to conserve their strength the company supplied them with oatmeal water instead of their usual beer. They drank it freely, with results so good that both managers and men agreed that its sustaining qualities were much greater than those of beer, and the employers are trying to get all the men on the road to use it instead.

So on the principle of conquering by substitution let white-ribboners spread the knowledge of the virtues of oatmeal water as a sustaining drink, and introduce it where we may. Ellen B. Bradley.

Castleton Corners, Staten Island, N. Y.



BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, if ye have faith and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea, it shall be done.—Matt. 21 :21.

At one time it looked as though the Bartholdi Statue of Liberty, which adorns the entrance to New York harbor, would fail on account of lack of means to complete it. A happy thought, however, came to its projectors; they made casts of the statue in all sizes and sold them from fifty cents to five dollars. Thousands of them were purchased, and sufficient money was made in this way to complete the erection of the statue. It is hoped that models of the Temple will in like manner prove a source of large revenue with which to help complete paying for the Temple. All white ribboners who can afford it should get one of these lovely models of "our House Beautiful." They are made of a metal resembling britannia ware, double plated in silver. They come in three forms but all the same size. One is a bank, price $1.75; ink-stand, $2.25; jewel-case lined with light blue, purple or yellow velvet, $2.25. Mrs. Mary A. Hitchcock, president of Nebraska W. C. T. U., writes: "The silver model of the W. C. T. U. Temple in Chicago is one of the most beautiful as well as useful ornaments that I have seen for many a day. Every white-ribboner should try and possess one as a souvenir of the most beautiful building in Chicago, and one which reflects so much credit upon our organization."

***

The following is taken from the Central City, Nebraska Courier: "The W. C. T. U. of this place gathered at the pleasant home of Mrs. Ruth Jones last Thursday afternoon for a social on the occasion of opening their Temperance Temple mite-boxes. After a short but interesting program was over, a season of social intercourse and a dainty lunch was enjoyed. A large number of boxes was distributed for the coming year. The contents of the boxes opened, with the offerings of those present, amounted to $25.92. This may seem," says the writer, "an insignificant sum compared to the $1,100,000 which the Temple is to cost, but the ocean is composed of drops of water and the continents of grains of sand, so we gladly send our mite to swell the grand total that is to build this monument to woman's efforts to rid the world of the drink curse. The union expects to increase the sum during the year by enough to make it $100, which will entitle them to have their names inscribed with others on a memorial tablet in the Temple." As the writer in the Courier says, this sum may seem insignificant in comparison with the amount needed to pay for the building, but if all unions who have a membership of twenty-five or thirty would follow the example of the union above referred to, the aggregation would be a tremendous sum. Out of our ten thousand unions at least five thousand should be able to "lend a hand" and raise $100 each towards paying for the National building; this would net $500,000.

***

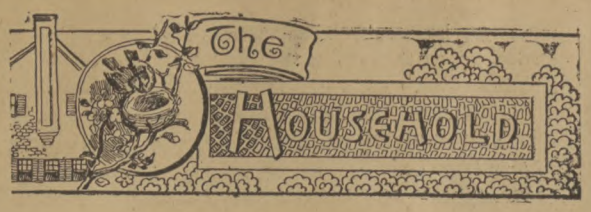
Mrs. Sadette Harrington, superintendent of Temple work for Iowa, says in regard to the completion of a $100 gift from a very small local union of which she is a member: "I have paid the remaining $40 to Miss Pugh on the $100 pledge, from Rock Valley, Iowa, union. Oh, if all the small unions would only arouse and raise that amount they would find their work greatly benefited, rather than crippled, as so many fear, besides it increases outside interest so much." The balance of Mrs. Harrington's letter is so good we are going to give it in full; who knows but it may be an incentive to some good temperance brother to follow Mr. Pingrey's noble example: "I have also paid Miss Pugh $35, sent me on a $100 pledge from Cherokee, by J. S. Pingrey, county surveyor (a good Republican brother) who is interested in temperance and in 'our House Beautiful.' He is raising the money by means of Demorest medal contests. We have so few such men to help us that I desire to give him a little of the credit which is his due." No doubt many unions have backslidden in regard to work for the Temple. They have sent for mite-boxes and started in the work, but after a time the cares of the world came in and they "grew weary in well-doing"; for the benefit of such we give place to the following admirable letter. Let each union remember the work the Master has set apart for it to do for His Temple, no other union can do. "I am so happy, I must send you just a line or two," writes Mrs. S. M. De Laittre, president Aitkin, Minn., W. C. T. U.: "Our union nearly two years ago started to raise $100 for the Temple; we got less than twenty dollars, lost courage, and finally, with the exception of a mite-box or two stopped giving. For more than a year no meetings have been held. But the dear Lord has not forsaken us; He helped me to see that I must give more. We called a meeting and found many members ready. The Temple work was mentioned, they were ready for that too. One member has offered to give $50 if the union will raise the rest, and it will be done. Before 1893 I trust to see the name of Aitkin W. C. T. U. in Willard Hall. This is but a drop in the bucket, but such a refreshing one at the time when the work lags a little that I had to pass it along."

***

The Temple trust bonds are for sale by our financial agent, Mr. H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle street, Chicago, and 412 Exchange Building, Boston, Mass.

***

A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite box ($3.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.



IF MOTHER WOULD LISTEN.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

IF mother would listen to me, dears,
She would freshen that faded gown,
She would sometimes take an hour's rest,
And sometimes a trip to town.
And it shouldn't be all for the children,
The fun, and the cheer, and the play;
With the patient droop on the tired mouth,
And the "Mother has had her day."

True, mother has had her day, dears,
When you were her babies three,
And she stepped about the farm and the house,
As busy as a bee.
When she rocked you all to sleep, dears,
And sent you all to school,
And wore herself out, and did without,
And lived by the Golden Rule.

And so your turn has come, dears,
Her hair is growing white;
And her eyes are gaining that far-away look
That peers beyond the night.
One of these days in the morning,
Mother will not be here,
She will fade away into silence—
The mother so true and dear.

Then what will you do in the daylight,
And what in the gloaming dim?
And father, tired and lonesome then,
Pray, what will you do for him?
If you want to keep your mother,
You must make her rest to day;
Must give her a share in the frolic,
And draw her into the play.

And if mother would listen to me, dears,
She'd buy her a gown of silk,
With buttons of royal velvet
And ruffles as white as milk;
And she'd let you do the trotting,
While she sat still in her chair.
That mother should have it hard all through,
It strikes me isn't fair.

—Selected.

MRS. CARRINGTON'S DELEGATE.

BY EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER.

I.

Dell was sprinkling the clothes, and her mother, with a tired, discouraged face, was rocking back and forth by the window. The great, clean kitchen was immaculate in its neatness, and the snowy drift of freshly washed garments which Dell was rapidly reducing to snug rolls gave out a delicate perfume of green grass and fresh air. In through the window came rural sounds of cowbells tinkling with the restless movements of the cattle in the barn-yard, the creak of the pump handle, the plash of water in the trough, and the anxious whinny of old Peg as she lifted her dripping nose from the water to call back her frisky colt. The men finished their chores and strolled away towards the village, fire-flies began to flash about over the meadow and the crickets toned up their pipes to a shrill cree, cree.

Dell finished her clothes and sat down in the door, her chin in her hands, and her eyes fixed on the west, waiting for her mother to speak. She had something to tell her, and she was unwilling to begin while her mother was so plainly absorbed in some trouble, some thought, but presently she spoke.

"Mother, you remember that notice about the convention last Sunday."

"The temperance convention? Yes, I remember. I just wonder how a woman feels that's got time to run round the country getting up conventions."

"Well, I saw the minister's wife in the store to-day when I went for the sugar, and she wants us to take one—"

"Take a convention—"

"Well, no," said Dell, with a little, nervous laugh; "take one of the delegates. They're having a hard time to get places, and she said she thought it would be a real treat to somebody from the city to come out here, and Mrs. Purdy's going to take one, so she could drive 'em back and forth."

The rocking chair stopped swaying and Mrs. Carrington's face seemed to grow thinner and sharper as she said:

"Mrs. Purdy may do what she likes, but I've got enough to do without waiting on city folks, delegates or what not. There's the harvest hands coming, and blackberry jam to make, and your dress—"

"Never mind about my dress—"

"It's very well to say never mind, but I don't know when I can touch that dress after this week, and you want it for the Fair."

"I don't care," said Dell, "I'll wear my old cambric, and we can make the jam Saturday; it's only two days." She hesitated a minute and then went on vehemently: "I'm just tired to death of the way we go on, just baking things and eating 'em up, and scrubbing, and washing, and working and never getting to the end, or finding any place to stop. Seems as if most any kind of a change would be a relief; if we could even go down to the store evenings, as Tom and the hired men do, and hear the stage driver tell what he heard down at the Junction, it would be something new to think about."

"Della Carrington, are you crazy?" said her mother.

"Not yet, but sometimes I feel as if I should be if I don't get out of the rut I've got into. Of course I don't want to go down to the store evenings—I wish Tom didn't go—"

"So do I. I'm afraid he's learning mischief down there, but he's so set he won't listen to me, and you can't tell a boy of his age to go to bed."

"No. But mother, don't you think if there was something here to interest him—if we did anything but just work and eat and go to bed, we could keep Tom at home? If you and I took time to find out what was going on, maybe we could have something to talk about as interesting as Nat Tyler's jokes."

Dell was almost frightened at herself, but her heart was full, and thoughts she had been nursing in silence for days and weeks came crowding up for expression. Why should their lives be so bare and hard and selfish? Here was the farm, getting every day more valuable, as the village grew in importance and stretched out towards them. It was a beautiful home; the great, old-fashioned house under the elms, the orchards, and pastures, and meadows, all in the highest cultivation, not a neglected field, a badly kept fence, or an unsightly corner, and yet Dell sometimes felt that she almost hated it. There was plenty of money for improving the farm, and adding to its resources, but nothing for books and papers and magazines. She herself, through the persistence of an aunt, had had two years in the nearest high school, but Tom was nineteen and there never had been a time when he could be spared from the farm, and he had been obliged to content himself with the village school in winter. There used to be stormy, rebellious talk, but lately Tom had seemed not to care, only instead of going sullenly to bed, he had taken to going over to the store with the men, coming back tainted with a vile smell of tobacco, gathered where Dell guessed he might easily get a more serious taint.

Her father seemed to have no anxiety, but Dell knew her mother worried about Tom, and lately she had begun to ask herself if she could not do something to help matters. She wondered what the minister's wife meant when she said:

"I've set my heart on sending you a delegate. I know she'll bring you a blessing. The Lord has given you work to do, dear child, and the day is passing. What you need is somebody to show you the way."

Mrs. Carrington had fallen asleep in her chair, but now she started up saying:

"Well, I s'pose we'll have to take one, but I hope she'll have the sense to attend to her own business and not expect us to be trotting off to her meetings, or rile your father up by talking third party to him. You better set sponge so's we can make raised doughnuts, and if Tom gets back any sort of time have him kill four of the brown chickens. One thing we can give folks, and that's plenty to eat."

* * * * * *

A night's rest restored Mrs. Carrington's good nature, and being fairly committed to hospitality, she meant there should be no stint about it. The carefully darkened parlor was opened and aired, the spare room put in immaculate order, and in the afternoon she even proposed that Dell should take old Peg and go to town to bring out her own delegate.

"You can take in that last churning, and get the lining for your sleeves and a pint of brandy; there won't be enough to put up the jelly. If I had to be a delegate it would be some comfort to have folks come after me as if they wanted me, though goodness knows I don't want her, and if you have a chance to choose, Dell, do pick out a nice one; one that appears to have some common sense."

An hour later Dell stood in silent astonishment looking into the parlors of the church where were gathered a company of girls with clear, strong faces, pretty attire and quiet, lady-like ways, talking with each other and with the little group of ladies who were assigning them places of entertainment.

"Oh, here comes Dell Carrington," said the minister's wife, "and here's your delegate; I saved you one of my own girls from Newton; I wouldn't let everybody have her—Miss Warner, Miss Carrington."

Dell blushed and bowed and looked so embarrassed that Miss Warner fancied she had set her heart upon some other guest, and she said:

"If there's any one else you would rather have—perhaps you know some of the girls—"

"No, oh, no," said Dell, "only—well, you see I never thought it would be a girl."

"Oh, didn't you know this was a convention of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union? the Y's we call ourselves for short."

"Why," said Dell, feeling rather foolish, "Mrs. Seabury did say something about the Y's, but do you know, I thought she meant wise."

"Well, I hope that's right, too," said Miss Warner, and then they looked at each other and laughed and went out in the friendliest fashion to the old rockaway, Dell taking note in girl fashion of her friend's lovely face and graceful manner and imagining Tom's dismay at sight of their guest.

But old Peg had scarcely struck into her homeward jog before she was pulled up sharply.

"There," said Dell, "I've forgotten the brandy. We shall have to go back."

"I hope it is not on my account," said Miss Warner. "I assure you I do not care for it."

"I should hope not; it's for the brandy papers to cover the jelly, you know."

"Oh, I can tell you a great deal easier way, and better, too. Did you ever try paraffine? It's a kind of white wax you buy at the drug stores. You melt it in a cup and pour a little over the top of your jelly, and it cools in a minute and makes it air tight. When you want to use a glass of jelly it comes off in a cake, and you can use it over and over."

"I wonder if mother would like it," said Dell, doubtfully.

"Of course she would; it isn't half the trouble, and it's cheaper. Just get a little to try, and you'll never be without it."

So the brandy bottle went back empty, and Mrs. Carrington watching for her delegate, was astonished to see the two girls, chatting and laughing like old neighbors, drive unceremoniously to the trough where old Peg always insisted upon stopping. She was more astonished still, when after supper the guest insisted upon wiping the dishes for Dell, and was as deft and rapid in seeing and doing little helpful things as if she had grown up in that particular kitchen, and Mrs. Carrington confided to Dell: "I kind of hoped they might send us one of their big women, just to see how they acted, but, pshaw, this girl is just like your own folks. I declare if your father ain't taking her out to see the prize pigs. Well, there's one comfort, she can't talk politics to him."

"I shouldn't wonder a mite if she did. She's the president of this society, and she's going to preside at the hall to-night."

"That girl? My goodness, I'd like to see her do it. I don't s'pose your father would have the colts hitched up, not if the Queen was going to preside."

"I mean to ask him. It's only once in a lifetime, and I'm going if I have to walk."

"Well, he seems to feel pretty good, you might try it, but I don't s'pose he will."

But wit and wisdom won the day, and though Mr. Carrington would not condescend to go himself to the meeting he proposed Tom as driver, and that young gentleman, in high feather, shook out the lines over the hand some span, the pretty guest by his side and his mother and sister on the back seat.

"Seems too bad to leave father all alone," said Mrs. Carrington; but Dell laughed and whispered:

"Maybe he'll come with Mrs. Purdy; he can take Miss Warner's place."

"Don't talk so flighty," said her mother reprovingly.

Dell certainly was excited. Her cheeks glowed, and her eyes shone, and she felt as if something new and wonderful were coming to them all, but especially to her and to Tom; and deep down in her fervent heart she prayed for help and light and wisdom to take her opportunity at its best. And how the world opened to her that night. Her new friend upon the platform, quiet and serene, because with no thought of herself she was wholly absorbed in the great interest of the convention—other girls, one after another, from Newton, from Dunham, from Danbury, each one with her story of the home work her union had done in establishing kitchen-gardens, gathering literature for prisons and camps, furnishing flowers and delicacies for the sick, organizing children's bands, opening reading rooms, sustaining reading circles, social circles, clubs for scientific study and hygienic cookery—why, Dell had never dreamed of so many ways for helping and being helped, and all within the reach of young people. And when Miss Warner, calling another girl to the chair, told in a simple, impressive way of the work of one union whose members were scattered over miles of farms, where the young women called to their aid the young men that were their brothers and friends, and made the long winter evenings a delight and a blessing to the whole community, Dell's eyes, full of tears, flashed a glorious determination.

"I'll have something for Tom besides the corner grocery," was what her heart was saying; and for the rest of the meeting she was almost incapable of listening, so many plans went whirling through her brain.

She did know that her mother gave her hand a nervous grip and said: "Dell, there's your pa sitting over by that post. He must have come with the Purdys. I do hope there won't be anything said to stir him up."

"I don't," said Dell; "we need stirring up, all of us, so that we'll never settle down again, long's we live."

And Dell never has settled down, for the next day they organized two unions at Middlefield and Dell was made president of the Y's.

"It's a misnomer," said Dell, "for I'm not wise, but if anybody will tell me what to do—"

"The main thing is to do," said Miss Warner, "find out what is wanted most and set yourselves about it; one thing always leads to another, and it's just a chain of links that strengthen each other."

That was not the only journey the colts made to the convention, and on the last evening Mr. Carrington himself sat holding the lines and talking with a neighbor as the crowd slowly dispersed.

"I'm waiting for my folks," he explained. "That little girl that led off is our delegate, and I tell you she's a smart one; got some pretty sensible ideas, too, for a woman. Tell ye what, Steve, you and me better go to reading up or the women folks are going to leave us in the ditch."

"I can't bear to have you go," said Dell, clinging to her new friend; "I feel as if I had known you always—or rather as if I had wanted you always, and just found you. You have filled my life with new light."

"Oh, no, dear," her friend whispered, "only opened a window to let the old light shine in; the light that is always there, and that 'shineth more and more unto the perfect day'—it's a little window and it is called 'the window of opportunity.'"

"Well, I declare," said Mrs. Carrington the next day, rolling up her sleeves in a vigorous fashion, "the work is kind of set back, but I feel about ten years younger, and whenever there's any more of that kind of delegates 'round I'm going to have all I can get, if we don't have quite so much jam."

Evanston, Ill.

The Union Signal AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, President Board of Directors.
MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Treasurer. MARY ALLEN WEST, Secretary.
The Temple, Cor. Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

DEPT. BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President.—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary.—MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.
Recording Secretary.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer.—MISS ESTHER PUGH, Office: The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you.—1 Peter 4: 14.

OUR BILL OF FARE

is prepared for good times out-of-doors this week. This is our Fair number and into it we have introduced reading matter of peculiar interest to farmers, as they will receive it gratuitously from the hands of white-ribboners at County Fairs. "The Farmer's Wife" speaks her mind through the poet, Mather Dean Kimball. The well-known author, Mrs. Helen Campbell, begins her attractive serial story, "Some Passages in the Practice of Dr. Martha Scarborough." "The Single Tax" is clearly presented by Mr. Zimmerman. The handsome face of Mr. Bidwell, Prohibition nominee for President, greets us on the third page, and his beautiful home is described by Dr. Mary Wood Allen, the W. C. T. U. lecturer on health and hygiene. Mrs. Mary A. Livermore tells of "An Agricultural Fair in Ireland," which was not a "Fair," because the people who made it were not there. "A Tale of a Cider Press" is a story of uncommon interest and pathos even for its gifted white-ribbon author, Elizabeth Cumings. Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, whose name is always associated with, because always found in our Fair number, presents exceedingly "Practical Thoughts about Expositions." The Correspondence department contains three interesting letters, and the Temperance Temple Items are most encouraging. The Y's are fortunate enough to have two stories to their credit—"Mrs. Carrington's Delegate," by the graceful writer, Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, and "What the Y's Did at the County Fair," by our regular contributor, Mrs. Eva Kinney Griffith. The News from the Field occupies its usual pages, and the editorial columns are filled with matter pertinent to the occasion.

WHITE-RIBBONERS AT STATE AND COUNTY FAIRS.

Many years ago it occurred to leaders of the W. C. T. U. that it was a thousand pities to let saloons, horse races and gambling have their own sweet will at Fairs and other great holiday gatherings of the people. We felt that the conserving influences of our society should be brought to bear for the protection of the young and unwary when they went forth to have what they call a "good time," for the foundation principle of our movement has been from the beginning that since the world cannot come into the home the home must go out into the world, until the world itself becomes a larger home, full of the safety, serenity and wholesomeness that the home was founded to conserve. In short, we believed that the Fairs needed mothering by the fair!

We began in a small way, counseling the state unions to establish booths on the grounds, at which temperance drinks should be sold or given away, temperance literature distributed and an effort made to have some of our temperance speakers included on the program. This worked well, and as we gained experience we went before the legislatures, asking that laws should be enacted to prevent the sale of intoxicants and the practice of gambling on Fair grounds. In this we have been successful in several of the states, and we are still working to secure this end.

When the two great Expositions were held at New Orleans, Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, who has developed into the leader of leaders in this speciaity, was present throughout, and had handsome booths fitted up, bringing to bear her ingenious mind and genial ways to help forward temperance ideas to the utmost. Later on, Mrs. Nichols went to Paris, and the only waft of temperance or hint of women in that wonderful show was what she and her helpers furnished. The café they established was the rendezvous of good people from all parts of the world, and the exhibits collected by Mrs. Nichols, the beautiful banners from all the states and territories and from different countries, were greatly admired. Among the few who gained a grand prize was the National W. C. T. U. We are to have an exhibit in the Woman's Building at the Columbian Exposition, in conjunction with the World's W. C. T. U., and to hold a great convention in the hall of the Art Building on the lake shore front.

A fascinating article could be written on the experiences of our white-ribboners at the hundreds of Fairs where they have worked for God and Home and Every Land in county, state, nation and world. Time would fail them to tell of the tempted men rescued and helped, the hungry fed, the needy comforted, the cruelties to animals ameliorated and prevented, the good, sound gospel set forth in winsome, womanly phrase to attentive listeners, the heartless deceivers balked in their purposes of destroying the youthful and unbefriended. Many a mother's boy from the country, fleeced by some gambler, has come to a white-ribboner for food and shelter, many a drunken man has by them been conveyed to some friendly abode, many a tormented animal has been rescued from pain or death, and words of help and healing enough to save a planet have fallen from their kindly lips or been circulated by their willing hands.

The work is as yet but in its infancy and we ask every one who reads these lines to think whether help cannot be rendered in a form of gospel mission that is so practical and so beneficent.

FARMERS' WIVES AND THE WHITE RIBBON.

If THE UNION SIGNAL were read on every farm in America for just one year, we believe the "arrest of thought" would come thoroughly to the best-hearted and hardest worked class that can be named. The trouble with city people is that they have so many things to think about and papers are such a drug in the market they almost dread to see them come into the house. But on the farm the arrival of anything from the postoffice, that fascinating telegraph station connecting the isolated homestead with the great central office of the world, is the most impressive event of the day.

"This paper comes from that palace of delights—the city," muses the farmer. "It was printed off a huge press without the touch of any human hand. It was carted along beautiful streets with smooth pavements, electric cars, swift carriages, and ingeniously guided bicycles. This paper knows; it has been there; it is a cosmopolitan. We will read it and then we, too, shall know."

The faith of the rural resident in the newspaper reminds one of the Indian who began to eat the missionary's little book that he might grow strong and wise. Great good as well as great harm comes from the faith cherished by those who at a distance read things said at the center. As a man readeth in his newspaper so is he, and the trouble is that, as Josh Billings said, "It would be better not to know so much than to know so much that ain't true." We refer here, however, especially to papers that make politics their stock in trade, and we have been thinking, as we wrote, about our own faith in the dozen or so newspapers that came to the lonesome farmhouse once a week when we were young and credulous. Anyhow, it was a blessed and happy time, and we would not take millions for it now that we have grown way-wise and have learned to trust the papers less than we did once.

But to return: If THE UNION SIGNAL, a paper that can be trusted (for we feel sure no set of editors ever had so many good friends to take them in hand and tell them how to make it what it ought to be!) were in all the prairie homes and upland homes and mountain homes, where live our honest farmer-folk, we should soon see every woman among them wearing the white ribbon. For if they did nothing more they would "by that sign conquer." The very sight of the modest little bow, whose color is emblematic of peace, purity, philanthropy and prohibition, would set many tongues wagging and evolve no end of ideas true and good. Then, the children would be enlisted by means of the paper, the young folks would find in it, illustrated by story and song and the sayings of the great and genuine, those high and beautiful ideals that are essential to the generous heart of youth. The boys and girls would see so much about the Loyal Temperance Legion that they would want one in their country schoolhouses and would soon be marching to the tune, "Saloons Must Go."

We have received so many letters this last year from those who felt that our work does not plan specifically enough to enlist the country homes, that we have thought much on the subject and we hope that the next National convention will resolve to have a "Somerset Union" in honor of Lady Henry Somerset, that noble philanthropist of England whose visit to America endeared her so greatly to all classes of our people. Such an union could consist of isolated members who cannot band together for specific work, but who will, with us, be pledged abstainers, wear the white ribbon and take THE UNION SIGNAL; or, if they cannot take it alone, will club together with a few neighboring families to do this.

The "Somerset W. C. T. U." will have its center everywhere and its circumference nowhere. It will stretch out its strong, kind hand to every country of the globe so that no woman will be so distant that she cannot, if devoted and devout, be counted in as "one who belongs." We should not feel that this basis of membership was satisfactory if THE UNION SIGNAL were in any sense a private venture, but it is controlled by directors all of whom are white-ribboners, and no one of whom receives one penny for her work, or has any other interest in building up the paper than to make its beauty greater and its blessing wider. To help THE UNION SIGNAL is to extend the influence of the largest paper ever conducted and controlled wholly by women. It is read now by well nigh half a million readers, in every country under the sun, and where it goes light springs up and good-will works its miracle of blessing.

We should like a quantity of postal cards from farmers' wives telling us what they think of this plan, and helping us to perfect its details. We should also be grateful for suggestions as to how we can make the paper better, more helpful and inspiring. We mean to have a question-box when this Somerset union is formed, for we know by our own remembrance how many ideas came to us in the quiet of our country life, and concerning which we would gladly have had enlightenment and counsel.

We earnestly ask every farmer's wife and daughter who read these lines—yes, and every farmer and his son—to ponder on what we have here set forth and see if they do not wish to have this paper as a sort of genial, helpful elder sister in their homes. Let the postal cards be sent to editors of THE UNION SIGNAL, and let those who decide to do themselves and us the good of becoming subscribers send their names and one dollar to Mrs. F. H. Rastall, the W. C. T. U. Temple, Chicago, whereupon our alert business manager will see that you receive the paper without loss of time.

OLD-FASHIONED "HARVEST DRINKS."

Eleven o'clock on a hot harvest day. Sweet and cool is the valley where the smooth-flowing Rock River reflects the shade of sturdy oaks, bright elms and fragrant cedars. Our canoe is drawn up on the beach and we have been fishing under the pleasant shelter of the alders, aspens and the brilliant red-bush. Swiftly the black skater-bugs cut their angles in the water; softly the lapping wavelets wash the pebbly shore. Two farmer girls are having happy times and dreaming dreams sacred and sweet. Blown by the strong lungs of Irish Maggie we hear the tin horn from Forest Home, five minutes walk up the bank and the pasture to

"Where the woodland and the prairie
Forming a double charm,
Stands a cottage neat and airy,
On our northern farm."

That homely tocsin means, "Come, girls, your mother wants you, it's time to take the harvest drink out to the field." So we put on the little blue sunbonnets that we had hung upon a hazel bush, lead our goat Jennie, who has been tethered in the tender grass, her panniers carrying our books and drawing materials (there are seldom any fish to add to her encumbrances!) and whistling to old Ranger, we shoulder our fishing tackle with the air of experts, and soon appear on the vine-covered porch where mother stands, shading her eyes to watch for her two girls. Then we slip an old broomstick through the jug-handle and walk half a mile to where the musical click of the McCormick reaper, drawn by those cherished pets, old "Jack and Gray," will turn the next corner of the great golden, billowy field. Father is driving, and our brother "rakes off,"—for the famous automatic "Deering" was unknown away back in 1850.

Father sees us coming, calls a halt, gathers "the hands," and under the shade of a friendly pile of sheaves they crowd to "take a drink." "Mother made it," says the mild voice of sister Mary as she passes the tin cup from the gurgling mouth of the garrulous old jug, tipped to the proper angle by her elder sister's hand. "That's good!" says Mike, smacking his lips; "Das was very gut," echoes Swedish Knute, content to miss his beer; "Ja wohl," assents good-natured Hans; and so the word goes round. They know "the Squire" would never tolerate intoxicating liquors in his harvest field; they know the Squire's wife's dinners "can't be beat," though she was a school teacher till she was twenty-seven, and did not learn to make bread until after her marriage, when she mixed brains with all her cooking and household management. They like "the folks" so well, and are treated with so much good will that though there's not another harvest field all "down the river" where whisky is not to be had, they don't complain, but smile a bit among themselves about "the Yankee ways." Twice every day all through the harvest the Squire's daughters carry them drink, and usually somebody follows with a basket of "mother's doughnuts," and creamy cottage cheese.

Those were simple, beautiful old days, and the drink was primitive enough. Mother gives us her recipe, more than forty years thereafter; it is this: Cold water, fresh from the spring; best molasses, about one gill to two quarts of water; ginger enough to give it flavor; "two forest nymphs who dwell in the depths of the woodland shade" to carry it afield.

Look on that picture, then on this: Chicago has just passed through a terrible "heated term." It is most encouraging to note that the daily press stands up for temperance drinks. Scientific ideas are evidently getting about! The papers squarely state that "the soda-water fountain had a bigger patronage than the saloon. More lemon and egg phosphates were sold than beers. One fountain sold over 6,000 drinks, another claimed 8,000, another 6,500, and so on. Soda, lemonade, lemon phosphate, egg phosphate, in fact all the phosphates were unusual sellers. The women, however, clung to crushed raspberries and crushed pineapple, with ice-cream accompaniment. Vanilla and chocolate were still strong favorites, and buttermilk is climbing toward the top. Meanwhile, plain Lake Michigan, wrigglers and all, went down parched throats unceasingly. Soda water, beer, milk, wine, lemonade, ginger ale, pop, iced tea and claret punch, all combined, did not come within sight of the figures established by the cold water. It was the favorite drink." The health commissioner says: "Use ice, not whisky, in case of persons overcome by the heat. Crack it in small pieces and with a towel or handkerchief as a cap, pack the ice around the head under the ears and neck. Do not use whisky or other stimulants. Wear loose flannel or woolen, nothing tight. Take a sponge bath in the morning, eat very little meat or anything else that will produce heat. Put yourself on a fruit or vegetable diet. Wear wet leaves and grass in the hat." The health commissioner thinks there are better hot weather drinks than ice water. Lemonade is not only a refreshing but a healthful beverage. For men who work in the sun or hot mills or factories the best mixture in the world is oatmeal water. It is refreshing and healthful. Above all things beware of spirituous liquors.

STRONG DRINK AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The liquor men were sufficiently influential with the United States Senate to secure a reversal of the vote by which that august body had declared against the sale of intoxicants at the World's Fair. But the great agricultural state of Illinois has a law that if enforced would exclude gaming and the sale of all spirituous liquors from every Fair ground and exposition in the state. We give the language of its penalty:

"Whoever shall keep any shop, booth, tent, wagon, vessel, boat or other place for the sale of spirituous liquor, or expose for sale, or sell, or give away, or otherwise dispose of any spirituous liquors, or whoever engages in gaming at or within two miles of the place where any agricultural, horticultural or mechanical Fair is being held, shall for each offense be fined not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars."

It is proposed by the directory of the Columbian Exposition to secure the abrogation of this law at next winter's session of the Illinois legislature, but the W. C. T. U. of the state will no doubt be early in the field, and will unite with other temperance societies and the churches to bring to bear upon the legislature a counter influence. There is also a state law which if enforced would close every saloon in Chicago on Sunday. If the leaders of the city churches will unite to secure the enforcement of this law and the one relating to Fairs and expositions, they will prove to be the upper and nether millstones between which the alcohol venders may be reduced to their lowest dimensions. A thousand and a thousand times the temperance people have repeated what is so sadly true, that we have now law enough to well-nigh destroy the liquor traffic if the Christian element in this country were active to secure the enforcement of the same. Why is not the said Christian element active? If good people think we Prohibitionists go too far, why do they not go just far enough? Why are not our high license friends busy securing the enforcement of "such laws as we have"? The answer is not far to seek.

COLUMBUS DAY.

That will be a great day on the farms and in the country school-houses—the morning celebration of Friday, October 21, 1892. It will unify the thoughts and enthusiasm of our Republic. Twelve million children are to celebrate after a fashion unknown to our history in the past. The pupils will gather on Columbus Day at the usual hour in their school-houses, and instead of the regular exercises the morning is to be devoted to exercises befitting the anniversary. These will of course be simple or elaborate according to the resources of the school, as many will be unable to do more than use the official program, have the old familiar national songs and a few speeches by leading citizens. We do hope that for once in the world the mothers as well as the fathers, the young women as well as the young men, will be included in this "speechifying." Too long have the people of this country forgotten that they were long ago endowed with foremothers as well as forefathers, and that they have to-day mothers as well as fathers.

The following is the official program:

1. Raising and saluting the American flag, under the direction, wherever possible, of a detail of veterans of the war.

2. The song of "Columbus Day" to a well known tune.

3. Address, to be declaimed by the best speaker among the boys.

4. The Ode, to be recited by a young lady.

5. "America," which will in all cases be the closing song.

The song, the address and the ode are all to be original, prepared especially for the celebration by some of the best American writers. They will be published throughout the country by the first of September, and sent to all applicants who address the chairman of the executive committee, Francis Bellamy, The Youth's Companion building, Boston, Mass.

In the country, the day ought to be made a real holiday. The parents and friends of the pupils should be brought together. Farm and household work might well be relinquished and the families of the district assemble at the school-house with their picnic lunches, prepared to make a memorable day of it. Following the commemoration of the morning, the afternoon might be devoted to games and social reunions.

In villages and cities it is urged that Columbus Day be celebrated by the "grown-ups." A public school review in the afternoon; the pupils marching by classes and with banners, led by their teachers, is suggested. Then should march the army veterans, north and south, blue and gray alike. As they pass the reviewing stand, where the leading men and women of the community are assembled, let each division of the procession salute the flag with cheers and with waving of handkerchiefs. It should then march to the hall or church where a mass-meeting should be held, unless it were thought best to extend the exercises into the evening.

A strong local committee should be appointed at once, including men and women. In many places, the W. C. T. U. will do well to set this program to the key of action. The committee sending it out wisely state that as this 400th anniversary of America belongs to all America, it is fitting that the public schools should take the lead because they are the organization closest to the people, most characteristic of the people, and fullest of hope for the people. It is to be remembered that this celebration is suggested by the President of the United States.

A pretty badge has been devised for all to wear on this day. We give it in fac simile. These badges are furnished as far as possible to the public school children without charge. In some cities, enterprising newspapers and merchants will give them to the schools. Those wishing to secure a badge should address Charles Pettibone, United States Public Service Company, Public School Department, Chicago, Ill.

One of our city papers has been giving careful attention to the collection of statistics and informs us that sixty-three to forty-three denotes the ratio of increase of the saloon over the church during five years, in Chicago. The writer also says that there are nine hundred and fifty thousand visitations to the saloons of Chicago every day. The Protestant churches in Chicago have a constituency composed in large part of women, numbering 110,000 persons, with an attendance somewhat larger. The Sunday theater has become a mighty institution and it is claimed that half as many attend the theaters on Sunday as churches; indeed, almost any form of entertainment is liberally patronized on Sunday, while in their churches ministers deliver their discourses to almost empty pews. The eighth ward, with a population of 35,000 souls, in round numbers, has about 200 communicants in the Protestant churches. The ninth ward, with a population of 41,000 souls, in round numbers, has about 650 communicants. One of our leading pastors says that Chicago has less than one-half the average of the American percentage of evangelical church members; he says that we are about seventy-five years behind the rest of the country in this respect, and the worst feature of the case is, that it is an almost invariable rule that Protestant churches are found in proportion to the wealth in the midst of which they are located. Once more the question recurs: What are we going to do about it? For our part, we would put about one hundred women into the field as evangelists. We would open small mission halls for them all throughout the city. We believe that, above all things, Chicago needs mothering, indeed, no city in the world needs such emphatic mothering as Chicago.

A People's Prohibition Church is being erected at Newburgh, N. Y. Bricks are contributed from every state.

"God is not running this universe on business principles."—Dr. A. B. Leonard.

***

One of our leaders writes: "I am bound here at my work by the bonds of that which I know to be the will of God; those invisible golden cords that hold us fast and yet in whose unyielding clasp we are most free."

***

The core of the question is this:

Who can give to the saloon-keeper his guarantee to sell?

No one but the people.

How do the people do this?

Through the political machinery that grinds out their officers—legislative, judicial and executive.

What is the motor that makes the wheels go round in this machinery?

The ballot in the hand of the individual man.

***

I was much impressed with an incident that recently occurred in a notable High School in the suburbs of Boston, where a vote was taken just before election as to who was each pupil's candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. There were two rooms in which were two nephews of Miss Anna Gordon. In each of the rooms one boy stood up for the Prohibition candidate, and they were these two young nephews. When I thanked young James Gulick for doing this he said: "There was another boy in my room who would have stood up, he told me, if he had not thought that he should be all alone." Whereupon I thanked young James again and said, "Yes, my lad, but you stood up for your principles without looking around to see whether anybody else did so or not." That was true manliness and those are "On Duty's" sentiments concerning Bidwell votes and voters in the presidential campaign of 1892.

***

"Soon the last field is gleaned, safe harvested
The tardiest ripening grain, and all the dale
Made glad with far seen stacks; barn floors are spread
With golden sheaves, sport of the clanging flail;
In sunny orchards the mossed apple trees
Bend with their ruddy load, and wasp-gnawn pears
Tumble at every gust; the berried lanes
Blush with their bright increase."

***

That was a bright saying of Rev. William Denman, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who declared, "I am soothed without the 'weed,' intoxicated without the 'cups,' and spirited without the 'whip' when I mount my wheel." I thoroughly believe the bicycle has been an instrument of immeasurable value in keeping young men out of the saloon and in the invigorating world of the open air. It comes the nearest to a winged creature of anything that man has thus far materialized, and nothing remains to be desired except to give the wheel to the realms of air and water which have already conquered the realm of earth, and to give its splendid benefits equally to women as to men.

***

I find in a leading organ a department headed "candidates' cards," followed by such statements as the following:

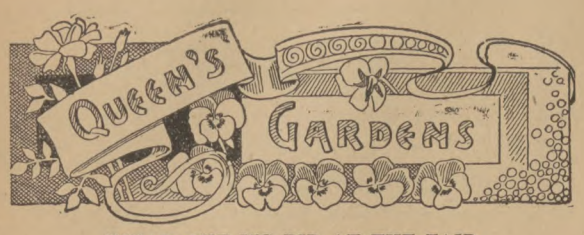
"I announce myself as a candidate for the office of county recorder, subject to the decision of the Republicans of —— County."

Surely politics has become a trade before any one would thus publicly set his seal to the degradation of such public office seeking, and Washington's motto, "Let the post stand candidate for thee" is trodden in the dust by his degenerate descendants.

***

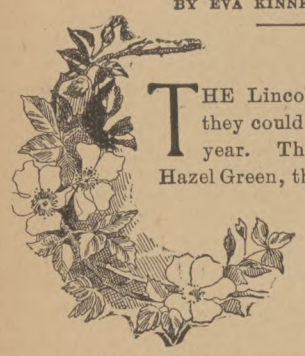
Faith has been defined as "Fidelity of will to a matter of moral insight." "Curses and arsenic will kill a flock of sheep," said the cunning Voltaire, but in dealing with the saloon we are afraid that too many depend upon the curses only. How would it do to put a little more sulphur in the ballot-box and keep the sweetness for the pulpit and press? Talk of "separation of church and state," as we will, yet the church is the mainstay of the state, and the state cannot afford to brush away her sacred institutions, her Sunday and her quiet worship, until she is prepared to accept the results. Nothing is more illiberal than the nothingness of agnosticism. What a change in the church since the "aged and godly women" were recognized as entitled to recognition for support, and deacons appointed to see to it. And this is the strange to-day, when, in almost all our churches women are doing so much to support everybody else. "The proper nurse for Moses is Moses' mother." And wouldn't it be a great gain if the saloon could be taken away from between the child and its mother? It stands to day between thousands of them.

On Duty.



WHAT THE Y'S DID AT THE FAIR.

BY EVA KINNEY GRIFFITH.



THE Lincoln county W's decided that they could not do any Fair work this year. The members who lived near Hazel Green, the county seat where the Fair was to be held, all belonged to some church that served dinners at the Fair and so needed their help. The members who lived at a distance were not sure of coming and felt that they could not do the work satisfactorily at such long range. So the W's gave up the matter and voted at their county convention to drop the department of Fair work.

But there were some young women delegates who listened to these proceedings with anything but an acquiescent spirit. What, not have the W. C. T. U. represented at the County Fair at all? Not one word to the hundreds of young men and thousands of people who would be there and perhaps never be met with again? Indeed, such an opportunity must not be lost, something should be done at once. But the girls were quite too modest to say anything in convention against the action of the mother society, so they just put their bright young heads together to see what they could do all by themselves.

These girls were most of them typical western farmers' daughters. They lived in large houses on large farms with rolling acres of wheat and corn, and herds of cattle and flocks of sheep almost as large as Abraham's all around them. The majority of them were graduates of some neighboring college, and all were bright and intelligent. As soon as the convention was over the three young women who had heard the decision of the W's with regret, got together and had a little private council.

"It's too bad, isn't it?" said Connie Davis; "I like to help at Fairs, but of course I could not offer to go ahead when the older women backed out."

"No, nor I either," remarked Laura Campbell; "yet I'm real sorry it's given up. It's such a splendid opportunity to reach young men."

"I wonder if we girls couldn't do something all by ourselves," suggested Mary Kern; "we couldn't do as much as the W's would, but we might do something."

"I wish we could," responded Connie Davis with brightening eyes; "let's ask Mrs. Hinman."

Mrs. Hinman was the superintendent of the Lincoln county Y. W. C. T. U., and to her the girls went. She invited them to meet at her home in Hazel Green, one week from that day and they would consider the matter. In the meantime each was to count herself a committee of one to invite others to join them.

At the appointed time ten young women met in Mrs. Hinman's cozy parlor. Some of them had come many miles across the country to be there, but they were on time, and full of eager enthusiasm for the work. They laughed and chatted gayly together until Mrs. Hinman called them to order.

"Now, girls," said that lady, "I have a beautiful plan for you but it will require a great deal of work and energy to carry it through. Are you ready for business?"

"Oh, yes, we are dying to know what it is."

"Well, what do you say to our publishing a daily paper during the week of the Fair? You see we must do something different from what the W's always do. We can't serve meals because the churches are all going to do that. We can't sell fancy work because we haven't time to make it. What do you say to our having a neat little table of literature and the distributing and publishing of the Daily Fair News, or the Daily Indicator?"

"I think it would be splendid," said Connie Davis, entering heartily into the plan; "we could have lots of temperance in it, and also nice hits about people."

"People would read it for fun at first, and then they'd get the temperance, too," put in Laura Campbell; "but how could we pay expenses?"

"I think we could do that by getting advertisements," said Mrs. Hinman; "I have been to the printer's to find out what it would cost to print the paper and they offer to get us up a nice little folio sheet for ten dollars per two thousand copies. I think we should want two thousand copies per day, and ten advertisements at five dollars apiece would cover that expense. Surely you girls could get that many and if you could get more we could perhaps make a little money out of the venture. Our subscription price could be five cents for the five numbers and single copies could be sold from the stand at one cent apiece. If we get advertisements enough to pay the printer's bill then the subscription money could go toward the rent for table space."

"Why, I do believe we could do it, girls," said Laura Campbell, following the calculations quickly.

The girls plunged into the discussion of the details of the plan, and finally decided to undertake it. Connie Davis was appointed editor, Laura Campbell publisher, while all of the other girls were formed into committees for soliciting advertisements and subscriptions in advance.

The W's opened their eyes at the audacity of the girls' plan, and at first could hardly believe it practicable. But the girls worked with such untiring enthusiasm that the scheme soon began to promise success, and the W's volunteered to furnish five hundred copies of THE UNION SIGNAL Fair number to be given away at the literature table. Fathers, brothers, cousins and sweethearts were besieged to subscribe for the paper in advance, and of course could not refuse when it was only five cents. The business men of all the neighboring towns were asked to give advertisements, and as two thousand copies of a paper to be distributed daily among people from all the surrounding country was considered an excellent advertising medium, not many of them refused, and several unsolicited advertisements were sent them by large firms who were exhibiting some special article to which they wished to call attention. The girls soon had contracts enough to insure expenses.

The day came for the Fair to open and the girls were there on time. They had obtained space for their table near the wide entrance door to Floral Hall, which was soon prettily decorated. The mystic letters, "Y. W. C. T. U." hung over the top in white, and underneath it was the motto, "For God and Home and Native Land." The table was festooned with red, white and blue bunting, while evergreens were twined in an arch overhead.

Behind the table gentle Mary Kern was placed, the other girls alternating with her when she wished to leave. Tracts, leaflets, and newspapers, with pretty pictures and books for the children, were arranged on the table and dealt out to the passers-by with a helpful word to each by Mary. The Lincoln County Fair News (for that was the name finally accepted) was conspicuously piled on one corner of the table and sold for one cent. A few young boy friends of the girls volunteered their services as newsboys and hawked the paper about the grounds, and as fast as they sold out came to Mary for more.

The front page of the paper contained local news concerning the Fair, and abounded in clever hits on the managers and prominent people connected with it. Connie's bright pen was not alone responsible for all of these. She had enlisted several of her young gentlemen acquaintances in the enterprise and they did duty as reporters, gathering up items of information in different parts of the grounds and writing out many a bright joke for her use. The second and third pages of the paper contained temperance news items and incidents, with a clarion call for helpers in the noble cause. The rest of the paper was filled up with advertisements. Much of the work had been done beforehand. The little paper became popular with its first issue, and the two big days of the Fair there was such a constant call for it that by night there was not a single copy left. Everybody praised it.

They were a tired set of girls when the Fair was over and they met to recount experiences and sum up results.

"Well, Miss Publisher," Connie said to Laura, "render an account. What are our entire expenses?"

"Sixty dollars, including room rent and all," answered Laura with a half rueful glance at the rest. She had been so busy with expenses she had not had time to notice how the sales were going. "How much have we taken in, in all, Mary?"

"Fannie Smith has the bag, let's count it."

A little table was moved into the center of the room and Fannie poured the contents of the bag upon it. Four of the girls counted while the rest looked on.

"Seventy-five dollars!" exclaimed Mary, when at last the four piles were added together; "and we've cleared fifteen dollars. How is that, girls?"

There was a merry shout and applause that went round the room as the girls congratulated themselves upon their success.

"It was a successful adventure," remarked Mrs. Hinman; "you have paid expenses and a little more and you have scattered temperance news and arguments over a wide area of country. Then you have enlisted your gentlemen friends in your work and have gained self-confidence yourselves. Has it paid?"

"Yes, indeed," answered a chorus of voices. But the best reward of all was six months later, when in the county convention three new unions were reported by the secretary as the direct result of the literature distributed at the County Fair by the plucky girls of the Lincoln county Y. W. C. T. U.

NEW YORK STATE NEWS.

New York state will hold its annual meeting at Newburgh, October 4, 5, 6, and in preparation for that event our counties are, many of them, holding their annual meetings, and most excellent reports come from them. All lines of work are being advanced, and no "little busy bee" ever "improved the shining hours" any better than do our busy W. C. T. U's.

Washington county reports a fine convention, held at Granville. This county has fifteen local unions, with a membership of 386. Fourteen departments of work reported, and two new ones were taken up. Excellent resolutions were adopted; prominent among them was one protesting against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday and against the sale of all intoxicating beverages within the territory controlled by the Columbian Exposition authorities.

Although the weather was unfavorable, yet the attendance was good, and the program unusually so. A very full report of all the proceedings, including the address of welcome and the president's annual address in full, was printed in The Granville Sentinel, and one hundred copies were distributed among the unions, so that those at home might share the benefit of the good convention. A history of the Granville W. C. T. U. was prepared and read by Mrs. Nellie Parker Race. This was also printed in full. Mrs. Marion B. Baxter delivered a fine address, and also spoke in one of the churches on the following Sabbath evening, upon invitation of the pastor. Excellent papers, music, recitations, and everything that goes toward making a successful meeting was enjoyed by those present.

Monroe county held its convention at Penfield. Delegates were met at the station a mile and a half from the church and enjoyed a beautiful drive. After the opening devotional exercises, they received a most cordial welcome from Mrs. Lake, on behalf of Penfield union, but as "actions speak louder than words," they had all felt assured of their welcome in the many arrangements which had been made for their comfort and convenience.

The president, Mrs. F. N. Parish, receives high commendation for the excellent manner in which she conducted the meetings and carried the work forward. Encouraging words from the pastors and visiting delegates cheered the hearts of the workers. Reports of superintendents, two minute verbal reports from unions, and addresses from Dr. Chamberlain, of Rochester, and Dr. Gillett, of Elmira, filled the first day. Mrs. Jenett Teleford was the speaker of the evening, and in addition to her lecture the audience was delightfully entertained by the Loyal Temperance Legion of Penfield.

The hour from eleven to twelve, of the second day, was devoted to a Bible reading and devotional exercises, in response to the request of our National superintendent of evangelistic work, and the hour will be thus observed in all future meetings. The county corresponding secretary was made a life member of the state, and presented with a certificate of membership. The general feeling at the close of the convention was that a fresh inspiration had been received, and all felt more than ever ready for whatever work is in store for them.

I regret to say that I overlooked the report of the Richmond county convention when making up my last letter. I will make all the amends possible by sending it even at this late day. The meeting was held in April at Castleton Corners and is reported as the finest convention ever held in the county. Thirty-nine delegates were present, departments well represented and a fine address by Mrs. Blonda B. Colburn, formerly of Chemung county in this state, but recently removed to Lyon's Farms, N. J. She delighted her audience in her handling of the question, "Does It Pay?" The question box and a discussion on mothers' meetings were in charge of the county president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, who also conducted a parliamentary drill in a most entertaining manner. The work in this county is widening, and they have a strong working force.

A splendid letter comes to me from the corresponding secretary of Sullivan county, telling of the progress of the work there. A recent convention has been of great benefit to all in giving them a great uplift,—not merely in numbers, but in placing the cause on a firmer basis. Mrs. Weaver, our state superintendent of evangelistic work, gave them a grand discourse which roused the interest of the Christian people.

There are some energetic unions in the county that do grand work. The W. C. T. U. ladies of Narrowsburg turned out last year to school meeting, and voting out a saloon-keeper, elected the husband of a white-ribboner. This year they have scientific temperance instruction in the public school. They have also been instrumental in organizing a new union in an adjoining village, and driving forty miles across country to attend convention, brought a delegate with them from that new union. In Rockland the ladies went to the polls on town meeting day and succeeded in electing a no-license excise commissioner, so that their town has no license this year. Juvenile work is a prominent feature in the county, and much effort is being made to secure the enforcement of the temperance school law.

The Loyal Temperance Legion of Grahamsville held a Demorest medal contest this past spring, and sent two dollars and a half of the proceeds to the Russian sufferers. They have recently held a picnic as well. Liberty union is preparing for a Demorest contest.

The local union of Grahamsville, organized last October by the faithful and efficient county president, Mrs. McKoon, started with ten members and now has forty active, sixteen honorary, and a Loyal Temperance Legion numbering forty. They have done "whatsoever their hands have found to do." Since January last they have been able at every meeting to report one or more new members, and now have in their keeping the beautiful state banner which the county received last fall.

Flower mission work is receiving a goodly share of attention, and it has been found that the L. T. L. can be greatly interested in this department. The local superintendent sent five boxes last October, five Christmas week and one for Easter. They have now commenced to send weekly contributions for the summer, jellies, marmalade, ripe fruit, bags of popcorn, clothing, toys, dolls, books, and flowers, with Scripture texts attached to the bouquets.

An adjourned convention of Chemung county was held recently in Centenary church, Elmira, after which a new union was organized, to be known as the Fifth Ward W. C. T. U. Elmira Central union has moved its coffee house into the former Wyckoff House on West Water street, and are conducting in a very satisfactory manner a W. C. T. U. house. This hotel has a very nice dining room, about fifty sleeping rooms, a public hall for temperance meetings, and a public reading-room.

The seventh ward union has recently placed Bibles and temperance literature in ten of the trains of the D. L. & W. R. R.

Millport W. C. T. U., situated in a no-license town, has waged a successful warfare against an offending hotel keeper, and has secured an indictment, while the Southport union has succeeded in preventing the proprietor of the "Bulk Head Hotel" from securing a license, thus closing one of the cess-pools of vice in Chemung county. Over one thousand triple pledge and autograph cards have been secured for the chain to be sent to the Columbian Exposition, and 1,000 more have been printed and sent out through the county.

The program of Wayne county convention, held June 15 and 16, has been sent me, and seems to be crowded full of good things. The meeting was held at Wolcott, the ladies of the union there doing everything in their power to make the gathering a successful one. The welcome and response were both of a high order, while the music, papers and recitations were most excellent.

The annual address of the president, Mrs. E. A. Clark, was a review of the work done in the county during her four years of service, and contained many practical suggestions. In closing, she felt obliged to say that she could serve them no longer as president, which was very unwelcome news. Mrs. Dr. Smith, of Savannah, was elected in her place.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, our state vice-president, was at her best in her address on the subject, "The Drink Traffic, the Arch Deceiver." She was present during all the sessions, and conducted a question box to the interest of all. The convention adopted a fine set of resolutions.

Jefferson county held its annual meeting at Carthage in June. The program was faithfully carried out. A large delegation was present, whose interest never flagged during the entire two days. Fifteen departments reported faithful work done. The local press sent reporters to the convention and they gave very satisfactory reports. A Demorest gold medal contest occupied the first evening, and attracted much interest. The medal was awarded to Miss Mabel Lenox, of Watertown. Papers on narcotics and juvenile work were full of useful hints and were enjoyed by all, while the reports from local unions were most encouraging. The county president, Mrs. E. L. Wood, having moved to Omaha, Mrs. E. Gurney, of Clayton, was elected to fill the position. All the other officers were reëlected. The convention as a whole was thoroughly successful, and the white-ribboners felt strengthened and encouraged by it.

The tenth annual convention of Chautauqua county was held at Brocton late in June. The Baptist church was the scene of the gathering, and the paper from which I glean my report says: "No more earnest, devoted, and intelligent body of ladies could have come together in this vicinity, to exchange greetings, report success and failure, and gain enthusiasm for future endeavors. One very noticeable feature of the entire session of the convention was the parliamentary excellence of nearly all of the delegates. The deliberations were characterized by a nicety of action that would have reflected credit upon a session of Congress or a political gathering." Mrs. Mead, of Jamestown, is the efficient county president, and the delegates showed their appreciation of her efforts in the county by unanimously electing her for another term. Mrs. Almy, the corresponding secretary, was also reëlected, as was the treasurer, Miss Martha Stevens, of Fredonia. A Demorest contest occupied the evening session, Mr. Frank H. Mott, of Jamestown, being the successful contestant.

The W. C. T. U., of Lakewood, in this county, although not yet a year old, is advancing rapidly in the work. It has already more than trebled its original membership. It recently held a most enjoyable entertainment consisting of music, elocutionary talent and a fine address from Mrs. Martha Almy, her subject being, "The True Republic." A splendid report of the lecture was given in The Jamestown Evening Journal.

The Y's of western New York held a school of methods in Rochester in June, which, judging from the enthusiasm manifested, was a success. About fifty delegates were present, and every number on the program was carried out with one exception. Mrs. Jump, state superintendent of Y work, gave a grand, practical talk. Every moment of the time was well filled, and the general expression was that we must hold two schools of methods each year, and give two full days to each. An effort will be made to hold a state conference for the Y's in August. Among the many resolutions adopted were these: "That we require the young men to abstain from the use of tobacco, and that we, as members of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will not wear trained dresses on the street."

Fairport Y's have already felt the benefit of this gathering. For the past year they have done almost nothing, but they were urged to send delegates to the conference and, as a result, have been thoroughly aroused, are holding interesting meetings, and have secured fourteen new members. Mrs. Jump has reason to feel encouraged in this work.

The Brooklyn Juvenile Temperance union, of which the L. T. L's of Kings county form a part, held their fourth annual "rally" at Prospect Park June 11. The day was perfect, and the juveniles were out in large numbers; companies A, B, C, E, F, G, H, K, M and N, marching in line to the music of three bands, presented a fine appearance. Each company carried a banner. The county banner attracted much attention, with its white silk front and tricolored back, bearing the state motto, "All New York for Temperance." There was good speaking and singing in the park, after which the children enjoyed games. Each Legion treated its children to ice cream and cake, and some to strawberries and milk as well. The temperance cause is marching on to victory and our hope is in the children, who say, "Tremble, King Alcohol, we shall grow up."

Dansville W. C. T. U. has just held an "experience meeting" in the home of Mrs. D. W. Noyes. Twenty-six ladies contributed to the pleasure of the large company of guests by humorously relating their experiences as workers in all sorts of trades, including barbers, bootblacks, as well as artistic painting and needlework. "Woman's sphere" was clearly demonstrated at this meeting, the testimonies proving beyond doubt that all avenues of business had been tested, that success had attended the efforts, and that woman can earn an honest dollar as readily as she can invest the same. A bountiful repast was served, and the handsome sum of forty-seven dollars was added to the treasury.

Mrs. P. J. Adams is doing organizing work in Tompkins county, with excellent results and hopes to have a county organization perfected before our state convention. The president of Orleans county writes that Mrs. Anna Williams, of Kenyonville, is giving a paper on "Political Equality" throughout the county. In Gaines, she had a large and appreciative audience. The paper is of a practical nature, and public sentiment on this line is being strengthened.

On June 30, Mrs. Ruggles, the president, held a "rally" at Knowlesville. It was a rainy day, but the attendance was very good. Recitations and music helped to make the meeting enjoyable, and a short talk from the president was all that could be desired. The effect of the rally was to strengthen and help all who attended.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM,
State Reporter, Lockport.

OHIO.

MOVING RIGHT ON.

"Faith shares the future's promise; love's
Self-offering is a triumph won;
And each good thought or action moves
The dark world nearer to the sun."

Thus far the summer has been crowded with W. C. T. U. conventions, each so full of good thoughts and deeds that if Whittier is right, we are somewhat nearer God's warmth and light than ever before. A few notes from each will fill the space allotted me.

The nineteenth district met in the Presbyterian church, Greenville, Mrs. M. P. Robb, presiding. Very interesting papers were presented on "Women and Y's; shall we help or hinder?" and "District Organization." The latter paper was discussed at length, after which the convention, by a unanimous vote, decided in favor of retaining district organizations. As this question will be a live one at our coming state convention, it is being closely considered by our best workers. Fifty ladies were present from a distance in spite of the intense heat, ten hailing from the new union at Versailles, fourteen miles away, driving home after the evening lecture, by Dr. Work, of Dayton, which was so good it paid them to remain. Nine ministers were in attendance and their strong, brotherly utterances greatly encouraged all.

"Because right is right, to follow right,
Were wisdom in the scorn of consequence."

This district has lost by death eleven of its workers during the year. A brief but impressive memorial service was held. A good corps of officers with Mrs. M. P. Robb, president, was elected. Reports were the best in the history of the organization—county, district and state dues all paid. They adjourned to meet next year at Mechanicsburg.

The annual convention of the twenty-fourth district, composed of Brown, Clermont and Hamilton counties, was held in the Methodist church at Ripley. Sixty delegates were present, representing eighteen unions and a membership of hundreds. The rapid growth of the work in this district is largely due to the zeal and efficiency of the president, Miss Charlotte Boyer, just reëlected for her seventh term, having held the office continuously since the organization of the district. Splendid addresses were given by Mrs. Clara Hoffman, and Rev. Forest, of Ripley, who spoke in favor of the ballot for women. The ministers of the town and vicinity were in attendance during the entire session, and were helpful in every way. Reports showed a noted increase in membership and unions. Inspiring solos were rendered by Mrs. Clara Witham, Ripley, and Miss Wickerman, of the College of Music, Cincinnati. Strong resolutions were adopted. Ripley W. C. T. U., has two state superintendents among its members—Mrs. Bell, the devoted president, whose tact disarms criticism, and whose zeal and discretion make even failure seem success, and Miss Boyer, the ideal treasurer. The convention adjourned to meet one year hence at Cincinnati.

The twenty-fifth district comprising Cuyahoga county with Summit and Medina recently added, convened for its three days' session in Scoville Avenue Methodist church, Cleveland. Great efforts had been made to secure distinguished speakers and call together large numbers of workers and friends, but the "strike was on" among street-car employés and very many were unable to reach the place of meeting. It takes more than strikes, however, to spoil a W. C. T. U. convention! Miss R. Anna Morris gave an admirable address on physical culture, Miss Florence Savage, of Akron, spoke on the mission of the white ribbon, and Mrs. J. T. Foote presented a fine paper on constitutional and parliamentary law. Mrs. Henry Hill, a wide-awake West Side Y, very ably presented young woman's work. "We keep our members irritated on the tobacco habit," she said, which means they are not exactly satisfied till their honoraries pledge themselves to abstain from the use of tobacco. But the inspiration of the convention was the presence of our round-the-world missionary, Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, whose soulful face, strong, sweet utterances and gracious manner won for her a loving place in our hearts. As she stood upon the platform drawing those vivid pictures of the world's great need, and, all unpretentious, told how she had sought to do one woman's part towards the betterment of humanity, I could but feel

"A healthful hunger for the great idea
The beauty and the blessedness of such a life."

"It was so sweet," she said, "to know that little children closed their evening prayer with, 'God bless papa and mamma and dear Mrs. Leavitt.'" Surely prayer was answered—she has returned in safety. The district is well officered by leading workers chosen from the various counties, and we look forward with hope and courage.

Geauga county held its annual meeting in the Methodist church at Burton, Mrs. H. A. Carlton in the chair. Interesting introductory exercises were followed by papers "Shall Women Vote?" "Character Building," and "Franchise." One hundred dollars were pledged by this convention for the Temperance Temple. Miss C. S. Burnett was present and lent a hand, as is her wont, to the delight of her co workers. In the evening Miss Emily Hale conducted a gold medal contest, Miss Mary McNash, of Claridon, bore off the prize. A fine book of poems was presented each of the other contestants. An orchestra, duets and solos enhanced the pleasure of the evening. The solo by Master Russell Alden, of Hiram, was heartily encored. Mrs. Hattie A. Carlton, of Burton, was reëlected president; Mrs. Sarah Beals, Welchfield, secretary, and Mrs. Lois Batchelder, Middlefield, treasurer.

The semi-annual meeting of Morrow county, which took place at South Woodbury, was most satisfactory in results. Mrs. Bethel, of Columbus, assisted in the business, conducted a parliamentary drill, and gave an address in the evening. Several excellent papers were read. Reports were encouraging, showing advancement in most of the departments. The Demorest contest work in charge of Mrs. Mary B. Wood received marked attention. Young people of Morrow county now hold twenty-three medals—twenty-one silver, two gold.

Peru entertained the Huron county annual meeting which proved both pleasant and profitable. Officers were all reëlected. It was decided to bring the matter of physical culture before the Teachers' Institute next fall. Good papers were presented on the following themes: "God Reigns"; "Our Girls"; "An Early Temperance Movement." Old-fashioned temperance songs, recitations, resolutions, and the telling address of Mrs. Harriman, president of Erie county W. C. T. U., were some of the good things of the session. The unions of the county are doing well. Special interest is being developed in Demorest contest work.

Infirmary work in Trumbull county was taken up at the May convention under the leadership of Mrs. L. M. Davis, district president. On June 11, a perfect day, thirty-two members of the various unions met at the infirmary, together with fifteen L. T. L's from Courtland, with their superintendent, Mrs. Hattie Langley. The children picnicked on the beautiful grounds. The infirmary superintendent and his estimable wife were very courteous. After services, consisting of Scripture reading, prayer, songs by the L. T. L. and several fine recitations were over, the children presented each inmate with the white ribbon bouquet and Scripture text card attached. Literature was also freely distributed. Canned fruits and jellies were left for the still more desolate who could not attend the service, also flowers and reading matter. It is so sweet to be remembered. "When you pray don't forget us poor people, and come again, won't you?" said one. With tremulous lips all sung that sweet good-bye, "God be with you till we meet again," and turned away, leaving many a poor, forlorn one brushing away the falling tear, and looking lovingly upon the little bouquet. Oh, this blessed work!

"Our flower mission bears noble fruit," writes a dear sister from Ripley. It is touching to see the look of glad surprise in the pallid faces of those unused to manifestations of kindness. The texts in many cases have afforded solid comfort. In one case, when death was near, a lady called for her Scripture card, and told of the great comfort the text had been to her, leading her to cast all her burdens on the Lord.

Mrs. Harriet L. Adams, of Cleveland, has returned from her town to town lecturing tour through the states and territories of the far West, having traveled over nine thousand miles, given two hundred and thirty public addresses, organized forty unions, besides visiting and building up many L. T. L's and unions. Her notes of travel—what she has seen, heard and experienced, are now gathered into an attractive book called, "A Woman's Journeyings in the New Northwest," a book which all white-ribboners and lovers of the bright and pure in literature will be glad to read.

Delaware county W. C. T. U. celebrated the Fourth in the right way. Dr. Bashford delivered a grand temperance address to over two thousand people, one thousand copies of THE UNION SIGNAL, purchased for the occasion, were distributed. Berea also had a temperance picnic under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U. and Y's. The address by Rev. Smith, of Lorain, was one of the best ever delivered in the classic town of Berea. Light refreshments were served and quite a sum left in the treasury of the union.

BUCKEYE BITS.

Missionaries can do nothing in Africa unless they get in ahead of the drink.—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt.

Resolved, That we second all attempts of the pastors in favor of municipal reform in Cleveland and other cities in this district.—Twenty-fifth district W. C. T. U. convention.

The New London W. C. T. U. held a grand gold medal contest, July 13. Miss Ethel Henderson, of Canton, was the successful competitor. Nine medals have been won in this place, seven silver, one gold and one grand gold. "It is a work that pays" is the testimony of all. Nothing helps W. C. T. U. work so much.

Mrs. Lida Romick, who was so seriously injured by being thrown from her carriage several weeks ago, is still in a critical condition in Huron street hospital, Cleveland. Many and fervent are the prayers going up to the Father for her recovery. Ah! well we know,

"The perfect day
Of God is shadowless, and love is love alway."

HANNA A. FOSTER,
State Reporter, Berea.

NEVADA.

THE RECENT STATE CONVENTION.

The seventh annual session of the Nevada W. C. T. U. was held in the Presbyterian church in the pretty little city of Carson; the church was beautifully decorated with the national colors and flowers.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens. Mrs. Lucy Van Deventer, our beloved state president, called the convention to order; the secretary called the roll of officers and superintendents; nearly all responded, showing an increase of interest over its preceding years. Mrs. E. P. Stevens' presence lent a charm to the convention by her timely advice and kind assistance. The following new departments were adopted and willing workers found to fill them: miners, lumbermen (two much needed departments in Nevada—Mrs. Captain Pitt, of Lovelocks, for one, and Mrs. P. Folsom, of Carson, for the other); Oak and Ivy Leaf. The Young Crusader, National Temperance Temple, peace and arbitration, purity in literature and art, railroad work, school of methods, school savings banks and parlor meetings.

The noble work done in Nevada by Mrs. E. P. Stevens was appreciated by all. She labored faithfully infusing new life into old unions, organizing new ones, and encouraging the weak and despondent. We need more of just such work as Mrs. Stevens can do, done here in Nevada. God bless her in her work.

The sisters of the W. C. T. U. in prosperous states have no idea whatever as to what we in Nevada have to contend with. Open saloons with music; gilded bars with obscene pictures and glittering array of brightly polished glasses to tempt our boys on every hand. Our baby boys are no sooner out of the cradle and mothers' arms than they are learning their lessons of vice at the open door of the saloon and gambling room. The licensed gambling hell is removed up a flight of stairs, but our little boys have learned the way and stand with open eyes looking on. Then at nightfall the gaily lighted bagnio, with its painted beauty standing in the door or at the gate, lures our young men. Oh! mothers of the W. C. T. U., pray for us mothers of Nevada; we need all your prayers. There are only about 200 white-ribboners here in Nevada, half that number of Good Templars and of Prohibitionists. We need your prayers.

The most of our work here is done on our knees. If it were not so, we should have given up in despair long ago. It is a notable fact that a conviction is almost impossible in our courts, as the recent lynching proved, with no investigation. May the good Lord hasten the day when beautiful Nevada will be liberated from the dreadful slavery of the drink habit. We feel there is a better future awaiting our beautiful state. We are trying to raise the $100 for the temperance tablet, and hope to do so yet. It is hard work, as there are so many ways for the temperance dollar.

There were many expressions of regret at the resignation of our dearly-loved state president, but her health being such and other duties pressing so hard, she felt, after five years active, earnest labor, she must have a rest. We hope the Giver of all good will restore her physically, so that she may take up the work again and go marching on with the hosts of God's loyal workers.

The following vote of thanks was brought into the convention and received by the chairman of its resolution and plan of work committee and adopted:

Resolved, That this committee, acting in behalf of the Nevada W. C. T. U., tender our sincere regrets in losing so valuable a presiding officer as our beloved state president, Mrs. Lucy M. Van Deventer, and wish to extend our grateful thanks and heartiest appreciation of her devotion to the cause and pray God's choicest blessings to rest upon her. Also Resolved, That the thanks of the convention be hereby extended to our beloved sister, Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, for the great help and inspiration which all our unions have received from her timely visits and wise counsels.

I have made this, my first letter or report too long, so will close, hoping you will give Nevada, the state of silver, a warm place in your heart and remember her in your prayers.

MRS. L. M. WESTLAKE,
State Reporter, Reno.

WEST VIRGINIA.

PROHIBITION MEETINGS.

The Prohibition meetings at the Moundsville camp grounds closed July 13. The average attendance was larger than any previous year. The interest manifested was very encouraging to the managers. The principal speakers were ex-Gov. St. John, Colonel Bain, Colonel Copeland, Mrs. Mary Lathrap, Miss Vandelia Varnum, Mr. M. V. Bennett, and Rev. W. G. Hubbard. Our W. C. T. U. held services every morning, following Miss Lydia Newcomb's class in Delsarte gymnastics. Mrs. Jennie Engle, of Fairmont, W. Va.; Mrs. Jennie McClurpin, of Fair View, Mich.; Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, of Wheeling; Mrs. J. C. Jackson, of Moundsville; Dr. Harriet B. Jones, of Wheeling, and others conducted morning meetings.

W. C. T. U. Day was one of the best. Mrs. Jennie P. Sisson, state president, was in attendance during every session. July 12 the state Prohibition convention was held. A splendid ticket was placed in the field, with Capt. Frank Burt, of Mannington, candidate for governor, heading it. When his name was presented to the convention, it was warmly seconded on behalf of the W. C. T. U., by Mrs. Jennie Sisson. Captain Burt has been an inspiration to the W. C. T. U. for a long time, aiding by voice and pocketbook whenever help was needed. The managers have offered the W. C. T. U. the forenoons of the ten days' meetings to be held next year, an offer which was gladly accepted.

MRS. MARY CARTWRIGHT,
State Reporter, Wheeling.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. M. J. WILSON, a faithful member of the Dayton, Pa., W. C. T. U. was "called from labor to reward" June 23.

THE annual meeting of the New Mexico W. C. T. U. will be held in Socorro, August 31, and September 1 and 2.

THE Knox county Prohibitionists hold their annual camp-meeting at Vincennes, Ind., from August 26 to September 4.

THE Industrial School of Kansas started in Beloit, by Mrs. F. H. Rastall, with one girl, now has an enrollment of eighty three.

MRS. LUCY A. SWITZER, honorary president of Washington, has recently spent some time at Puget Sound, and has done some effective work among the unions on her route home.

SUCCESSFUL Demorest medal contests have been recently held in Medical Lake and Spokane, Washington. The latter under the auspices of Miss Eva Halstead, state superintendent of contests.

MRS. JULIA B. COLE, formerly of New Orleans, and connected with the "Memorial Home" for young women in that city, is now a resident of Walla Walla, Washington, and acting as state superintendent of social purity.

MRS. EMMA BOONE, New Jersey's active president, has visited sixteen county conventions in her state this spring. Three new unions have been organized in addition to those formed by Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, Mrs. Washington and Mrs. Jump of New York.

THE Lynn, Mass., W. C. T. U. "experience tea" materialized beautifully both in dollars and numbers, in spite of the weather. There was an attractive program and the members were brightened and refreshed. They now advise others to do likewise.

MRS. S. F. GRUBB, president of the Kansas W. C. T. U., has spoken eighty-eight times in her own state and held ten conventions since she was made president last year, and has never omitted to treat the special subject of temperance work by farmers' wives.

EVERY Sabbath afternoon the W. C. T. U., of Atlantic City, N. J., hold a beach meeting in the merry-go-round building which is kindly offered them for the purpose. Different speakers address the meetings, and in this way many are reached who would not attend services elsewhere.

AT the West Washington W. C. T. U. convention, held at Fairhaven, there were present Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, first National vice-president for the whole territory; Mrs. Margaret La Sourd, Mrs. Winnie Thomas, Miss Carrie M. White and Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, all successive presidents of West Washington W. C. T. U.

FROM Mrs. Jane Stapler, president Indian Territory W. C. T. U., comes the cheering tidings that a bill has just passed, the result of which is to be "No more beer or other intoxicants sold in Indian Territory." Tahlequah W. C. T. U. caused all the church bells to be rung in rejoicing. Fourteen new unions means a relentless stand for "home protection" on the part of the territorial W. C. T. U.

MRS. SARAH A. MCCLEES, National superintendent of work among soldiers and sailors, will make an address at the summer meeting of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., August 6. She will be open to engagements in that vicinity from that date until September when she begins a two weeks lecturing tour in Maine. Her address is Cottage City, Mass., or care of Mrs. K. L. Stevenson, 171 Tremont St., Boston.

MRS. M. J. GUTHRIE, Apollo, Pa., writes of a new way (her own idea) to secure a good attendance at regular W. C. T. U. meetings. It consists in organizing a white ribbon band of little children of the members, who attend with their mothers, reciting pieces and joining in the exercises. The Y's who act as superintendents of the Loyal Temperance Legions are also present. The meetings are in this way well attended and interesting.

Official Communications.

STATE AND COUNTY FAIR DEPARTMENT.

The aim of this department is to secure prohibitory legislation relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors on or near State or County Fair grounds. More and more important grows this department and world-wide will its influence spread with an organized corps of workers, state, county and local.

In the first years of the temperance work large numbers of people could be reached through our public meetings, but the novelty has worn away and they must be reached some other way. When the gates of the Fair ground were first opened to the W. C. T. U. it was a great victory, and it is to-day to have the opportunity to put our literature in the hands of those that come from rural districts and may not know anything about the great work that two hundred thousand women are doing "For God, Home and Every Land."

I pray you, dear sisters, not to underrate this great work, to take advantage of such large gatherings of the people, to sow the good seed in all ways. Give out literature, get honorary and active members for the W. C. T. U. Have the pledge in sight so if there are any who would like to sign, they may, man, woman or child. Have your white ribbon at hand. Get subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL, Oak and Ivy Leaf, The Young Crusader and your state paper. Have something attractive for the children, picture cards with Scripture texts and temperance mottoes, that will be an object lesson to them. Do not be afraid to spend money to purchase something to please the children. Decorate. There is so much in decorating and making your tents and booths attractive. There should be no more attractive place on the grounds. Use plenty of mottoes, they attract. Have permanent headquarters on the grounds where you can distribute literature and where the tired and weary ones can rest. Have plenty of ice water.

Last year I heard a report of Y work at a Fair. They had a tent and sold peanuts and lemonade, clearing $250 at their first attempt. They distributed a large amount of literature with this, and how much good their bright young faces must have done, and what an object lesson for temperance. Use the best women you have and draw in outside help.

Ask donations from the farmers. Do personal work Now is the time. The influence of the W. C. T. U. must be felt in the agricultural society. Work to get members in the society. Arrange for good speakers when practicable. Have medal contests, the L. T. L. drill. Use all methods that will bring the cause before the people, sowing seed and trusting to the Heavenly Father to reap.

MARGARETTA C. CAMPFIELD,
Nat'l Supt. Fair Dept.

Newark, N. J.

COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION DEPARTMENT.

To the State Presidents:

Space for the exhibit in the Woman's Building, at the Columbian Exposition, has not yet been allotted to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. However, there is no doubt that the amount of space applied for, one hundred feet by forty feet, with as much wall space adjoining as possible, will be given us. Although the delay in allotting space has prevented earlier communication with you, requesting suggestions regarding the exhibit, it is hoped that you have given the matter some thought, aud that plans have been laid, and preparatory work done toward it. With such limited space at our command, you will appreciate that the exhibit must necessarily be such as will present in the most forcible manner the magnitude of our work, and tend to advance the cause we have at heart; and to accomplish these aims, the displays from the individual states should consist principally of concise statements of what has been accomplished under W. C. T. U. inspiration and management. For example: Give the number of local unions in your state, and their membership; the number of Young Women's Unions, and their membership; the number of Loyal Temperance Legions and their membership; tell what has been accomplished in your state by legislation against the sale of tobacco, and in behalf of social purity, etc.; to what extent scientific temperance instruction is given in your public schools; and so on, to include all the successes in the W. C. T. U. work. Do not abbreviate titles of organization when giving statistics, except to a limited extent, for the reason that initials and abbreviations are as unintelligible as Greek to the great mass of people. These statistics will attract attention if distinctly lettered and effectively displayed on a card, shield, or banneret; and to facilitate harmonious arrangement of the general exhibit, the display from each state should be in sets, or of uniform size.

Your coöperation in the matter of advice and suggestions is heartily desired, as it will give greater variety to our display if the ideas adopted are not all from a few people, or from one section. Plans and suggestions are especially desirable regarding texts applicable to our cause, and the best arrangement of statistics, to make most attractive these silent but persuasive and convincing monitors. All practical suggestions and advice from W. C. T. U. presidents, or from other experienced persons, will be sent out, that all may have the benefit. It is not possible at this date to say how much space can be given to each state; but the mere statement of what space will be allotted to the "National" should help to crystallize and stimulate thought on the best practical use that can be made of the little we shall have. To a great extent, high framework will have to be built, in order to obtain from height what we lack in floor and wall space.

Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, Commissioner for the World's W. C. T. U. Exposition Department, who is able and experienced, estimates that from $50 to $100 will be required from each state to meet the expense of arranging and caring for the exhibit at Chicago. This is, of course, in addition to the original expense of preparing the exhibit of each state.

Literature for circulation should be carefully selected and compiled with the view of awakening interest in special lines of reform, and to meet the needs of special people, and for the special days of the Exposition; such as "Value of Total Abstinence," "Necessity of Prohibition of the Public Sale of Intoxicants as a Beverage," "Anti-Tobacco Leaflets," "Social Purity Leaflets," etc., to any extent that superintendents of departments are willing to prepare. Cordially yours,

MME. E. LOUISE DEMOREST,
W. C. T. U. Commissioner.
21 East 57th Street, New York.

TAKE NOTICE.

Will state superintendents of literature inform me at once how many blanks for annual reports they need in their respective states, and the same will be furnished without delay free of cost. The state reports should reach the National superintendent not later than October 1.

FANNY H. RASTALL,
Nat'l Supt. Temperance Literature.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all leavening strength.—Latest United States Government Food Report.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

GUARANTEED CURE
OR NO PAY.
Nothing Fairer Than This.
When we say cure, we do not mean simply to stop it for the time being, but a
PERMANENT AND POSITIVE CURE
for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Impure Blood, and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver. Write for Treatise, Testimonials and Free Sample Bottle of
DR. ROC'S LIVER, RHEUMATIC and NEURALGIA CURE, to CULLEN & NEWMAN,
143 GAY ST., Knoxville, Tenn.

SOCIAL PURITY TRUE ... MANHOOD.
A Physician writes: 'The value of TRUE MANHOOD as a guide book to young men can hardly be overestimated." The Independent: "We cannot conceive of a book on such a subject, written in a more reverent and cleanly spirit." Housekeeper: "A new and valuable book, especially adapted to form a high type of manly character." Prepaid, $1.65. Best terms to Agents.
A. B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago, Ill.

THE HISTORY OF HARVEY. Unique, interesting, illustrated, free. The story of the most successful manufacturing town in America.
819 buildings, 4,500 inhabitants, 13 factories, 2,000 operatives, all in two years. Growing fast as ever. Lots at original prices. Close to the World's Fair. Good place to live or invest. Send your address to The Harvey Land Association, The Rookery, Chicago; mention this paper.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

Van Houten's Cocoa, once tried, always used.

CHAUTAUQUA

Lake and Assembly Grounds are reached in the most comfortable manner by the Erie Lines. All the through trains between Chicago, Cincinnati, and New York and Boston over the Erie run via the Lake; consequently no changes of cars from those points.

LOW RATE HARVEST EXCURSIONS.

The announcement that the North-Western Line, comprising over 8,000 miles of thoroughly equipped railway, has arranged to run two low rate Harvest Excursions during the months of August and September, will be gladly received by those who are interested in the development of the great West and Northwest, as well as by those who desire to visit this wonderfully productive region at a season of the year when exact demonstration can be made of the merits and advantages it offers to home-seekers and those in search of safe and profitable investments.

These excursions will leave Chicago on August 30th and September 27th, and tickets can be purchased at the very low rate of one fare for the round trip to points in Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho and Montana. They will be strictly first-class in every particular and will be good for return passage at any time within twenty days from date of purchase. Full information concerning rates and arrangements for these excursions can be obtained upon application to any coupon ticket agent, or to W. A. Thrall, G. P. T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago.

STUDYING LAW BY MAIL.

Twenty-five years ago the idea of giving a man a legal education by mail would have seemed preposterous. To-day it is not only possible for a person to acquire an extensive knowledge of law at home, but it is possible for him to become a highly capable lawyer by this unique and yet most practical method of study. The idea of teaching law by mail was first conceived by the well known attorney, W. C. Sprague, the eventual result being the Sprague Correspondence School of Law, of Detroit, Mich., having as its purpose the legal instruction of business men who find a knowledge of commercial law of great value in their business and the rapid advancement of the student who has not the opportunity of attending a law college. The course of instruction, while perfect in detail, is so arranged that it will not interfere with other business pursuits. The ever-increasing success of the school is a convincing proof of its efficiency and value to those desiring to study law.

Publisher's Notes.

THIS IS FOR YOU.

We mean by this "Augite," or The Woman's Friend. It is a Mat, bound in metal, to be used in preparing all kinds of food that are likely to burn. The manufacturers claim that food of any kind, when cooked on this Mat, does not require stirring, and will not scorch or burn.

Will be found most useful and economical in cooking Oat Meal, Cracked Wheat, and other breakfast dishes, being a positive guarantee against burning or scorching, and loss and waste of food.

No stirring required for Cereals, Milk, Rice, Custards, Blanc Mange, Jellies, Catsup, Preserves, Apple-Sauce, etc., etc., etc. In fact nothing will burn on it, Coffee will not boil over; Bread toasts brown and crisp.

For Infants and Invalids it is invaluable for preparing a variety of the most perfect tempting dishes. For heating Milk and keeping Food Hot for Infants, it is indispensable.

It is also indestructible.

Having tested it in making toast over a gasoline blaze, we can endorse to that extent all that is claimed for it, and know it to be an article of great value.

Get it now, to use when you make your jelly, your fruit butter, etc.

We will send it to new subscribers and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for the exceedingly low price of $1.10.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

A GREETING

To our friends who read these columns for the first time:

This number of THE UNION SIGNAL is one which we are sure will interest you and we ask your careful perusal of its columns. It is in no wise better in character than the regular issue, except that it carries this time a supplement.

Would you not like it to visit you every week? Rest, refreshment, instruction and inspiration are in its columns. It will come every week for a year with its cheer and its healthful reading for old and young if you desire it enough to send one dollar with a request for the same. And we have now a decided inducement to offer. Read it on page—where "Augite," or the Woman's Friend, is described. An article that will prevent jellies, fruits, etc., burning and upon which toast can be made over gasoline is a valuable article in any home. We will send THE UNION SIGNAL one year, and one "Augite" on receipt of $1.10.

Cut this blank from the paper, fill out and send without delay;

.....1892.

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association:

Enclosed find $——, for which send THE UNION SIGNAL to my address, and one "Augite."

Name.....
P. O.....
State.....

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER.

It is time to begin to think about the next quarterly Sunday-school lesson. It is now ready. Its theme will be Unfermented Wine.

Full particulars next week.

The Woman's Friend and THE UNION SIGNAL one year to new subscribers for only

One Dollar and Ten Cents.

Send at once to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

EVERY W. C. T. U. should secure a copy of the "Young Woman Journalist." Price $1.50. Send for it.
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Harvest Excursions—Half Rates.

August 30th and September 27th.

The Burlington Route will sell round trip tickets at half rates, good 20 days, to the cities and farming regions of the West, Northwest and Southwest. Eastern Ticket Agents will sell through tickets on the same plan. See that they read over the Burlington Route, the best line from Chicago, Peoria, Quincy and St. Louis. For further information write P. S. EUSTIS, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

South Waukegan

Offers an UNUSUAL Combination.

THE... 1st. BIG FACTORIES.
2d. LAND OF RARE BEAUTY.

WOODBRIDGE PROPERTY IS IN THE CENTER

J. B. MESNY,
CHARLES WEINLAND,
SALES AGENTS, Room 26,
94 WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

CLARENCE E. SMITH, Agent, WAUKEGAN, ILL.
P. S.—See our advertisement in The Union Signal of July 21st, and write us for plats.

A MODERN BATH.
The Latest and Best.
Quick Self-Heating, or Toilet Cabinet in place of Heater. No bath-room required. Ornamental, Inexpensive, Complete, Practical. Desirable for either city or town. Send for Catalogue.
THE MOSELY FOLDING BATH TUB Co.
180 S. Canal St. Chicago.

GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation. Send for Free Sample to 319 West 45th Street, New York City.

200% PROFIT guaranteed ladies willing to devote spare time distributing our elegant goods. Address, with stamped envelope, Joliet Toilet Co., Joliet, Ill.

NEW W. C. T. U. SONG BOOK.
"Silver Tones," by the Silver Lake Quartet and W. A. Williams, 35c; $3.60 per doz., prepaid. Selling fast; best out. Address W. A. Williams, Warnock, O.

HOTEL FREDONIA WASHINGTON, D. C. H Street, between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET, HOMELIKE AND STRICTLY TEMPERANCE.
G. H. LA FETRA, Prop.

Save Money By Buying BICYCLES WINTER PRICES.
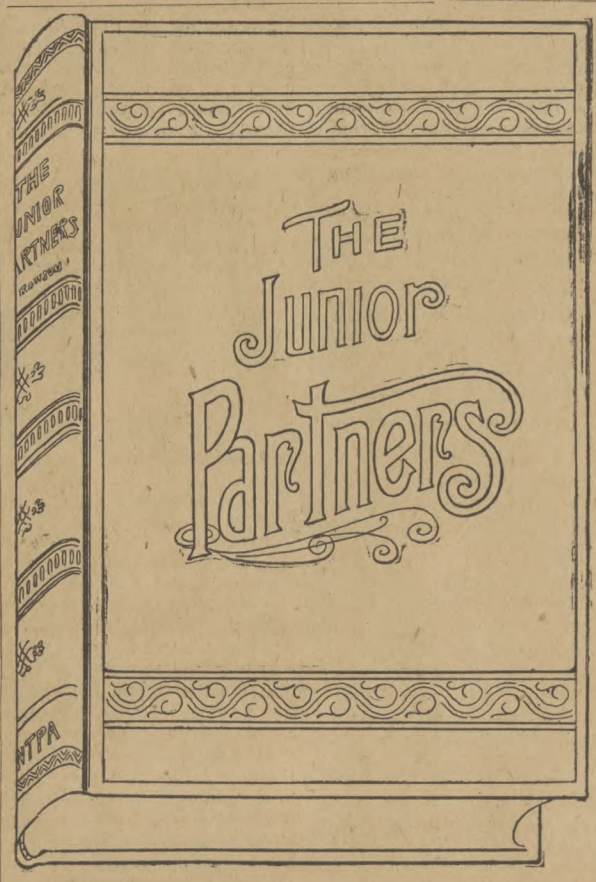
To reduce '91 stock we offer | FORMERLY | NOW
Ormonde Safety 1¼ cushion tires | $140 | $90
'90 Juno, (91 make) lady or man, all ball.... | 75 | 42
Mercury Diamond Safety, all steel " .... | 100 | 57
40 in. Victor Jr. ball bgs. tangent [also other sizes] | 37 | 17
50 other styles, & 200 2d hd wheels, greatly reduced. Cata. free. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St. Peoria, Ill.



Agents Wanted

... FOR OUR ...

NEW BOOK..

This is an opportunity which should be improved. This book is entirely different from any heretofore on the market, and will be in greater demand because it will be enjoyed by business men as well as by their families. Not many books are written which appeal to business men as this does. Those who have read it voluntarily testify to its merits in this direction. A prominent and wealthy business man of this city who employs

HUNDREDS OF MEN

Wishes to place it in the hands of each one that they may be benefited by its teachings. This is valuable indorsement. It will be of especial help to young men

JUST STARTING in BUSINESS LIFE

Employer and employed, as showing where the shoals lie upon which they may make shipwreck. The influence of

HOME LIFE

is also portrayed with power, and that of a noble-minded daughter, in restraining destructive tendencies is outlined in detail in the course of the narrative. The fallacy of the belief, "I can use it or let it alone" is fully exposed. The circulation and reading of this book will be a blessing to thousands.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
THE TEMPLE
CHICAGO

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Opinion of an L. T. L.

BY JENNIE A. STEWART.

I've heard all about the Fair,
All the great things to be there;
Wondrous sights for those who go
To the coming monstrous show;
Such ne'er seen beneath the sun
Since World's Fairs were first begun.

When I think of all there'll be
For us little folks to see,—
All the rare things, new and old,
That its treasures will unfold—
Sometimes I can hardly wait
Till the op'ning of the gate.

. . . . .

But, oh! what is this I'm told?
Maybe there'll be liquor sold?
Lovely buildings and lagoon
Just a part of a saloon?—
Surely this cannot be true.
Is there nothing I can do?

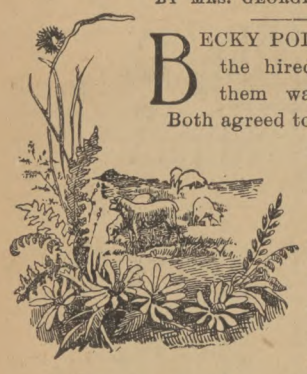
I can ask our Father dear
Who will my petitions hear,
Not to let King Alcohol
Get within the World's Fair wall.
Pray, good people, everywhere,
Battle for our great World's Fair!

Chicago, Ill.

SEEING THE ELEPHANT.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.



BECKY POLLUS went to the Fair with the hired man because neither of them wanted to see the elephant. Both agreed to that before they went, and each declared the intention of protecting the other.

Becky had seen the elephant once, when she made that long journey to New York, and she hated the thought of it. The hired man had seen it a great many times, so Becky heard the hired girl say to Farmer Gibbs' hired girl. "He'll go to the Fair, of course," Sarah Dibble had said, "and he'll see the elephant, too." "Yes, and one of these days he'll see snakes, too, it's my opinion," replied Samantha Sharp.

Becky ran away at that. An awful terror took hold of her. Elephants were dreadful, as she well knew, but snakes—O! O!!

When she came upon John Gorham piling up the sawed and split wood in the big shed, her forehead was quite damp with perspiration. Part of this was the effect of a hot September day and part her horror at the thought of elephants and snakes.

She seized John's coat-tail. It was an old-fashioned, long coat-tail, and parted so freely in the middle that she swung around perilously and would have fallen if she had not grasped John by his sturdy left leg.

"I declare! What you at?" exclaimed John, laying hold of her. "You ain't trying to rassle with a fat feller like me, be you?"

"Will every one that goes to the Fair have to see the elephant?"

"Well, no—I guess not," answered John, with an odd smile. "Why? Who said so?"

Becky told what she had heard, and went on: "I'd rather stay home than to see any elephant, wouldn't you?"

"Well, I can't say. What makes you so 'fraid?"

"Don't you know?" asked Becky. "Oh, you don't, because you didn't work here then."

"Work here when?" questioned John, taking up several sticks and beginning to lay them on the nice, even rows.

"When I went to New York and saw the elephants," said Becky.

"No, I didn't, that's so," said John. "Can't you tell me about it? Here, just set on that pile of wood. I'll put my coat under you. It's too warm anyway."

And John pulled off his coat, folded it, and laid it across the pile indicated, seating his little visitor comfortably.

"Now go on with your yarn, and I'll go on with my wood."

"What yarn?" asked Becky.

"Why, your story, I mean," answered John.

"Well," began Becky, "when I went to New York with pa, we went to Aunt Mary's. She don't live in a whole house, she lives in six rooms all along together, without any upstairs or outdoors."

"Pshaw!" said John, "where do you go to when you go anywheres if there ain't any outdoors?"

"Oh, just straight in the street. And lots of people live the same way. You go right across the hall from Aunt Mary's, and Henry Cross lives there, and he took me to Central Park to see the elephants. He is sixteen years old and he ought to be ashamed when I was only seven."

"What'd he ought to be ashamed for?" asked John, with interest.

"Why, Aunt Mary wanted me to be took to Central Park, and she hadn't any time, because I was only there four days, and Henry said he'd be glad to. So she fixed me up and I went, and in the park is a monstrous big house where animals are, and I wanted to see the elephants. And Henry he took me, and there is a big window close by them with a slanty window-sill, and he set me up there, and said he was just going a little ways away to see a young man he knew, and to sit there and not stir till he came back, and I could see the elephants lovely."

"Well, couldn't you?"

"I believe," went on Becky, her big eyes getting bigger with the memory, "I sat there two hours, and the window-sill kept getting slidier and slidier, and I was afraid I couldn't hang on without falling off, and then maybe the elephants would eat me. And lots of folks kept going by, and I darsn't tell them I was afraid, for fear they would steal me. Little girls do get stole in New York."

"That was too plagued mean!" exclaimed John with sympathy. "That boy ought to have been whipped."

"Yes, sir, he ought to," said Becky with enthusiasm, remembrance and sympathy firing her indignation, "and by and by he came back and lifted me down and said, 'Well, had a good time, little sis?'"

"Pshaw!" said John, "what did you tell him?"

"I didn't tell him anything, only my name wasn't 'sis.' And I never said a word all the way home. But when I saw Aunt Mary I cried awful, and I kept waking up and crying all night."

"Well, if I had that fellow by the collar," said John indignantly, "I'd just fairly shake him till his teeth rattled."

"I wish you had," said Becky. "You wouldn't have took me to see the elephant and left me, would you?"

"No, I just wouldn't," said John, looking admiringly at the hard, red little cheeks, and the stout, jolly little figure. John had been the faithful friend of Becky ever since he came to work on her father's farm.

"Are you 'fraid of elephants?" asked Becky.

"Why, no, I ain't. But I would be if I wasn't but eight."

"Well, you've seen so many, I suppose, to all the Fairs. I never went to the Fair till this one that's next week, and I won't go to that if I've got to see the elephant."

"Oh, you won't have to see no elephant," said John assuringly, "there ain't any to County Fairs."

"Goody!" cried Becky. "But Sarah and Samantha said you always saw one."

"That's just their get-up," replied John, looking much redder than his work warranted.

"Nor don't you see snakes either?"

"No, I don't, nor never did!" said John rather wrathfully. Becky noticed his face with a troubled look.

"Are you mad to me?" she asked presently, with hesitation.

"Bless you, no!" said John, catching her and kissing her. "I couldn't never get mad to no little girl like you. Oncet I had a little sister as big as you, and I never got mad to her in my life."

"Is she dead?" asked Becky in awe.

"No," replied John, "but she most better be."

"What for?" went on Becky.

"Oh, you're too young to ask everything. But she's growed up and married."

Becky was a sharp little maid, through all her simplicity.

"What's the matter with her husband?" she said.

"Now I declare! If you don't beat all. Well, Becky, to tell the truth, he likes to go and see the elephant, and it don't agree with him any better than it did with you."

"I wouldn't think he'd do it," said Becky. "Seeing elephants is perfectly horrid fun."

But Becky's mother calling her just then she never knew what John would have said had he responded. It certainly would not have been anything to let such an innocent child know that "seeing the elephant," is a phrase often coarsely used to mean that men drink liquor and are dissipated when they go into town or off for a recreation.

But Becky, being full of her talk, told her mother all about it, and listening thoughtfully, her mother commissioned Becky to wait until next day, and then invite him to go to the Fair with the family. She hardly expected the invitation to be accepted, but it was. And all day the honest, well-looking, kind fellow was the faithful servant of Becky, and I am sure when he rode home at night, loaded down with fans, sample yeast-cakes and picture cards, he felt much better because he had met plenty of old acquaintances, good farmer folks, and visited, and viewed the sights, and talked of crops, cattle, farm inventions, and other interesting things, than he would have done had he gone with Sam Lawler, Gray Kline, and Ross Johnson, and come singing and shouting back past midnight as he heard them do.

The reason, I am sure, is because he said next day to Becky, when he and she were alone awhile in the orchard: "We had a powerful good time yesterday, didn't we?"

"Just lovely," replied Becky. "We saw more things, didn't we?"

"That's what we did. And we didn't neither of us see no elephant, neither, to dream about, did we?"

"I'm real glad, ain't you?" said Becky.

"Yes'm. I just am!" said John. "I said I'd take care of you, an' I did, and you took care of me."

Elmira, N. Y.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Have you ever thought what a "Fair" is for? You go and spend some time among the exhibits which crowd our State and County Fairs and are pleased and interested. But have you ever thought for what purpose the Fair is held? How many of you have? This bright nephew from Vermont says, "To let other folks see what you have worth showing." That is so. And also that people may learn from each other regarding the best ways to do and the best things to have. We go to a Fair to learn something as well as to have a good time, do we not?

The great Columbian Exposition at Chicago next year will bring together the products of every land, and will no doubt be the greatest Fair that was ever held. Every country will be benefited by it. If you do not go you will enjoy reading about it and learn from the accounts many valuable things. I hope that many of you can go and enjoy the wonderful show.

Aunt Jane

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

I, too, am one of your little temperance nieces, not a very little one either, for I will be fifteen years old next January. I live in Nebraska where I can see the great prairies on one side and the city of David on the other. I enjoy our "Cozy Corner" very much, but I am like one of your other nieces. I think we ought to have more room devoted exclusively to the "temperance children."

"We are little temperance children,
Working with hand and heart;
We are united in our efforts
Though we be far apart."

David City, Neb. VONIE BOLES.

We are all glad to hear from you, Vonie. Do you get refreshing breezes from the "great prairies" these August days?

We have lots of saloons here; one-third of all the stores are saloons, nearly two thirds are grocery stores, and the rest are meat shops. One of the girls in the chief saloon told me if it were not for the bar there would be no hotel.

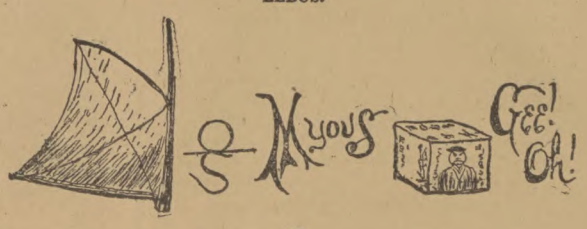
Lilly, Cambria Co., Pa. BUTTERCUP.

Do you think that girl's remark is true, children? We think if it were not for the bar (and all the other saloons) there would be a better hotel.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

77.

REBUS.



78.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

I am composed of twenty-two letters and am interesting the world just now.
17, 10, 14 is a number.
15, 5, 18, 12, 19 is to indicate.
9, 6, 11, 20, 22, 3 is a great American statesman.
4, 21, 8, 13 is an invitation.
1, 2, 16, 7 is a personal pronoun.

79.

BURIED CITIES WHERE GREAT EXPOSITIONS HAVE BEEN HELD.

1. The spar is broken.
2. That somber linnet sings beautifully.
3. The stick is either new or leans slightly.
4. Don't pull on Donald's coat.
5. Lavie N. Nathan is the way she writes her name.
6. The owner of this phonograph I. L. Adelph, I am sure will loan it.

80.

DIAMOND.

1. A consonant, sometimes used as a vowel.
2. A tippet.
3. The universe.
4. The entire amount.
5. A consonant.

LOIS ELDRIDGE.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JULY 21.

68. "Lifting others as we climb."
69. Sunset.
70.
C
B I B
C I D E R
B E T
R

Correct answers: Earle C. Anderson; Myrtle Bailey; Annie Laurie; Royal J. Davis; Ora Palmer.

COMPETITION

THE JUSTLY CELEBRATED

Manitou

MINERAL WATER is above competition. Its superiority over all other mineral waters is acknowledged by all who have tried it.

This water is not only a pleasant drink, but is a sovereign remedy for dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaints. If you try it once you will use it always. Ask your grocer or druggist for it. Drink it with your dinner at club or restaurant.

Unexcelled for Family, Club and Restaurant use. Packed in cases of 100 Pints and 48 Pints.

Convenient forms for Dealer and Consumer.

Address for literature,

Manitou Mineral Water Co., Manitou Springs, Colo.

Sold by all first-class groceries. Also by all druggists.

A Modern Miracle

MRS. MAGGIE THOMPSON, of Marshall, Clark County, Illinois, writes: "For five years I suffered with Inflammatory Rheumatism. The constant pain and sleepless nights which I lived through made my very existence miserable. I could not work or even wait on myself. My joints broke out in running sores, and I became so weak and wretched that death seemed only a question of time. Hope for recovery seemed in vain until I learned of the wonderful work of ABBOTT BROS. RHEUMATIC CURE. I had used it only a few days when I noticed a great change for the better. Many of my friends did not believe I was getting well until they saw me for themselves. Six bottles of Abbott Bros. remedy cured me I am now fifty-three years of age. Everybody who knew of my suffering says that it is a miracle that I am alive to-day. Thanks to ABBOTT BROS. RHEUMATIC CURE. Any one wanting further particulars of my case can write me at Marshall, Clark County, Ill."

ABBOTT BROS. CURE

$1.25 PER BOTTLE.

Cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, & Purifies the Blood.

Write for Full Particulars.

ABBOTT BROTHERS,

290 S. Franklin Street, Chicago, Ill.

Hay-Fever Sufferers

Should read our new 112-page book on the treatment and cure of Hay-Fever and Asthma. Sent free on application.

"I have been a sufferer from Hay-Fever and Asthma from birth—26 years. I have tried all remedies that came to my notice without permanent relief. I am pleased to say that your medicines certainly cured me to stay cured.
W. L. WEDGER, Roslindale, Boston, Mass."

P. Harold Hayes, M. D.,

716 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Publisher's Notes.

THE UNION SIGNAL.

Subscription Rates for 1892.

UNIFORM RATES.

One copy per year in advance	$1.00
" " " " not in advance	1.50
" " " " 3 months	.25
" " " " 1 month	.10
For distribution at Conventions, County Fairs, etc., per 100 copies	1.70

OTHER PAPERS ISSUED BY THE W. T. P. A.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf, published monthly. Price per year	$ .25
Young Crusader, monthly one copy, (12 Nos.) per annum	.15
Per 100 copies	1.00

Address all orders to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
The Temple, Chicago, Ill.

HOW DELICIOUS!

When properly prepared for the table, nearly every variety of fruit is indeed delicious.

For best methods and greatest variety, we refer you to

Fruits and How to Use Them.

It tells how in healthful ways fruits can minister to human comfort and health.

Price, $1.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

W. C. T. U. FOUNTAIN.

Local presidents and secretaries, and especially local treasurers, superintendents of departments—especially the Fair department; county officers, state officers and superintendents, together with all W. C. T. U. workers and helpers should at once investigate what can be done with our W. C. T. U. fountains. Two points we emphasize here:

1. They will furnish refreshing and healthful drink to the thirsty multitude, and at the same time

2. They will earn money for the W. C. T. U., and thus enable the organization to carry on a much broader work.

Do you want to know particulars? Send for circulars to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

HARVEST HOME.

The supplement of The Young Crusader for August contains the program for the celebration of Miss Willard's birthday, September 28. It is entitled "Fairy Folk," and is a happy picturing of the work of the Seed-fairies, Blossom-fairies, etc., and the mischief done by the evil spirits that spoil the grape juice and the grains. It closes with a fine recitation entitled, "The Fairies in the Grain-field." The September number of The Young Crusader will have other exercises for the day.

Children's Harvest Home

EDUCATE! EDUCATE!!

The effort to educate along the line of the principles of the W. C. T. U. should never relax, yet, if possible, special attention should be paid to it during campaign periods. Now note. To help do this we can furnish a variety of leaflets and papers, and that you may see what these are, we have arranged a campaign package which contains 20 Timely Talks.

6 Song Leaflets.
2 Voters' Leaflets.
12 Signal Lights.

We will send this package for 10 cents.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

DO NOT FORGET,

In planning decorations for your booth at the Fair, that we still have some of the aquarelle-tint pictures of Miss Frances E. Willard. You should introduce her to all new comers. So send for one or more copies. A letter recently received says of it:

"The picture of Miss Willard was duly received. It is very beautiful and far surpasses my expectation in every respect."

Price 50 cts. each.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

The Advance Guard is gaining favor everywhere. It fills a "long felt want." Send for sample copy and see.

Price 5 cts.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Send for Campaign package. Price 10c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

THE WORLD'S FAIR

Will enable you to buy a lot in SOUTH HARVEY and get your money all back next year and have the property left.

DO IT THIS WAY.

Buy a lot, build or have built a cottage costing $400, and the rent will bring your money back to you during the Fair. We will furnish you the money to build the cottage. If you do not sell, continue to rent at a figure which will bring you two or three times the present rate of interest.

No suburb of Chicago offers greater inducements to the investor than South Harvey. Lots are large, cheap, high, dry, near the depot, in line with the most rapid growth of Chicago, near immense manufacturing interests, in short, South Harvey is possessed of all the advantages necessary to make one of the finest residence suburbs, and double and quadruple in value in a short time is very accessible to the World's Fair Grounds.

South Harvey

The choicest inside lots are still being sold at $250 each; corner lots $300 and on payments of only $10 per month.

To secure the best location send $10 at once, and the best unsold lot will be marked down to you, and a plat sent showing location. If you are not suited you can change it or have your money refunded.

Title perfect. Abstract and Guarantee Certificate of Title with every deed.

Builders and Carpenters are wanted to locate here at once. There is steady work.

Address

CHARLES G. FRENCH,

185 Dearborn Street, Chicago, - - or Harvey, Ill.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.

MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE

Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents, F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co. 134 Van Buren St. Chicago, Ill.

If not to be obtained of your druggist Send 50c for Sample box of four odors.

SEELY MFG CO. DETROIT, MICH.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION.

A SAMPLE BOX of Dr. O. P. BROWN'S

Tissue Builder

for Plumping the Figure, Preserving and Beautifying Face and Hands sent for 10c. with Lady's paper illus. Woman's Life, and devoted to care of Face and Body. The Physical Beauty of the Romans was largely due to anointing and Dr. Brown's TISSUE BUILDER serves the same purpose. Druggists or mail $1. Dr. Brown, 47 Grand-st., Jersey City, N.J.

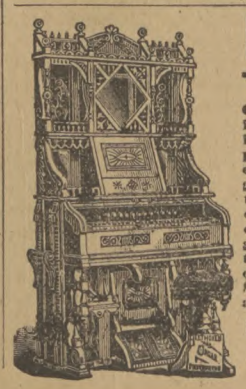
DELSARTE'

Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.

Agents Wanted. Also

DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.
111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.



FREE.

Our large, 24-page Catalogue, profusely illustrated, full of information on the proper construction of Pianos and Organs. We ship on test trial, ask no cash in advance, sell on instalments, give greater value for the money than any other manufacturer. Send for this book at once to

BEETHOVEN ORGAN CO.
WASHINGTON, N. J.
P. O. Box 701.

GIRLS!

Who would like one of these beautiful rings can have their choice FREE without paying a cent. No. 1 is solid gold set with a genuine diamond, No. 2 is solid gold set with a genuine pearl, No. 3 is a solid gold band ring beautifully engraved. Will you agree to do a few hours work showing our new goods to your friends if we will give you your choice of the above rings? If so send to-day as we only want one girl in each neighborhood. I. M. Association, 269 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE COBLENTZ CURE

Morphine, Opium and Whiskey habits cured at home. No pain, no exposure. Trial on Morphine free. One case in every county cured free. Address, COMPOUND OXYGEN ASSOCIATION, Fort Wayne, Ind.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY.

$12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.

OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEP'T 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

BORSCH-OPTICIAN
CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT
SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill

We do not sell liquors in any shape.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New Articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. CHIDESTER & SON, 28 Bond St., N. Y.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box C Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.

McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FOR SUMMER WEAR

Send for circular.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists

are now made in

VENTILATING CLOTH,

also in FINE

Single Ply CLOTH.

SINGLE PLY for Children, Misses & Ladies.

GOOD SENSE Waists are superior to all others. —Tape-fastened Buttons. Cord-edge Button Holes— Clamp Buckle at Hip securely holds Hose Supporter. Shape permits full expansion of lungs. Gives Satisfaction. Be sure your waist is stamped "GOOD SENSE."

FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers and Patentees, 341 Broadway, New York.

For Sale by ALL LEADING RETAILERS.

MARSHALL FIELD & CO., Chicago, Ill., Wholesale Western Agents.

THE

Total Abstinence Life Association OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.

902-904 Royal Insurance Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.

Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.

SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

HOUSEHOLD ARTICLES. Agents Wanted. Catalogue free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Wash. st., Chicago.

EDUCATIONAL.

STUDENTS IN JENNINGS SEMINARY

will have special privileges at the

WORLD'S FAIR.

For information address

REV. C. C. LOVEJOY, A. M., Pres., Aurora, Ill.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE.

(Formerly Morgan Park) removed to Auburn Park. 18th year begins September 14th. New building. All departments. Ornamental branches taught by artists. Send for catalogue to JULIA H. THAYER, Auburn Park, Chicago, or 247 State Street, Chicago.

SHORTHAND Typewriting, Book-keeping & Penmanship thoroughly taught. Twelve teachers, 700 students, cheap board, and the finest Commercial College building in America. Graduates readily secure situations. Beautiful Illus. Catalogue free. Address D. L. MUSSELMAN, Principal. Gem City Business College, Quincy, Illinois.

MONTICELLO Opens September 24th. Full and superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art. Address MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal, Godfrey, Ill.

THE CLAVERACK COLLEGE

And HUDSON RIVER INSTITUTE

For Boys and Girls, will open its 39th year September 19th. For catalogues, address

REV. A. H. FLACK, A. M., Prest., Claverack, N. Y

TODD SEMINARY, a delightful home school for boys 44th year. Send for circular to NOBLE HILL, Woodstock, Ill.

Publisher's Dep't.

AUGUST BULLETIN OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Bible Reading.—The Model Worker.
Mrs. J. K. Barney.
Responsive Reading.—Railroad Work.
Jennie Smith.

Voters' Leaflets.

No. 1. Thy Battle. John G. Woolley.
No. 2-3. Christian Patriotism.
John G. Woolley.

These are the opening leaflets in a series designed for campaign use—not alone the Presidential campaign of 1892, but adapted to use everywhere where the voter's conscience is to be reached. Two more are in preparation, and others will follow.

National Leaflets. L. T. L.

No. 205. Part of a Boy. Estelle Thomson.
No. 207. His Name. Charles Barnard.
No. 209-210. At Dragon Corner.
Martha Fairbanks Blanchard.

These leaflets are especially adapted for boys; they are bright stories, which boys will read, and each has an important lesson. "His Name" is on profanity, and was written for this series. It is just the word needed to emphasize the teaching of that part of the triple pledge.

Department Leaflets.

No. 5. Saloons and Railroad Men.
T. B. Crothers, M. D.
No. 17. Temperance Jack. (Department of Work among Miners.)
Frances E. Willard.
No. 21. "Sow beside all Waters." (Literature Department.)
Margaret B. Platt.
The Advance Guard.—Studies on the history of the temperance movement, the platforms of the Prohibition and People's party, etc.

FINE, LARGE PHOTOGRAPHS

have been made of the National Prohibition Convention held at Cincinnati, size 10x12. There is both a front and rear view, one being taken from the gallery, opposite the platform, and the other from the platform. Any one desiring these can secure them by sending with their order 60 cts. for each one desired.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU SEEN

Our Day for August? If not, you certainly should send for a sample copy. It discusses ably the questions of the hour. Dr. John Henry Barrows writes of the "Religious Possibilities of the World's Fair"; Chauncey M. Depew discusses "Religious Work of the Young for the Young"; Rev. W. F. Crafts talks of "The Sabbath-school as a Factor in Public Education"; the editor writes of "Riots at Homestead," and other live topics. In addition to this there is one of Rev. Joseph Cook's celebrated Monday lectures. Send for a copy, or better still, subscribe for one year.

Price $2.50 per annum; to ministers and students, $2; sample copies, 25c.; to ministers and students, 20c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

EVERYBODY'S FRIEND.

When a friend is at hand to give the information needed just at that very moment how that friend is valued. We can send you such an one on short notice. It is a book of 440 pages, containing a million facts, historical, geographical, agricultural, commercial, legal, medical, etc., and fifty-five maps. It is a very valuable compendium of information and is called The Handy Manual and Atlas of the World. Price was formerly 50 cents in paper. We will send it postpaid to any address for 25 cents, or we will send The Handy Manual and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for only

One dollar and ten cents.

Send orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

Put the Handy Manual and Atlas of the World in the hands of the children. They will be delighted with the facts they learn from it—valuable information, all of it. Price 25 cents. We will send it and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for only

One dollar and ten cents.

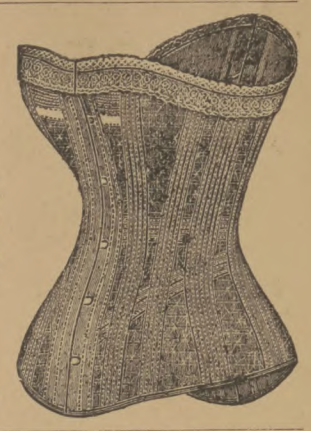
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
THE TEMPLE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER LIBERAL OFFER FROM THE

JACKSON CORSET CO.,

The "EBONY GAUZE" CORSET.

RETAIL PRICE $1.00.



The "E. G." Corsets are made from a very strong Summerette, trimmed with English Sateen. The binding is also made of Sateen and the cording from best German Reed. True shaped Camel-back Side Steels, Five-hook Clasps and evenly tempered Clock-spring Steels only are used in the manufacture of this Corset. It is warranted absolutely Fast Black. It is one of the most satisfactory garments ever put upon the market.

Sent Postpaid Upon Receipt of 60cts.

Address JACKSON CORSET CO., JACKSON, MICH.

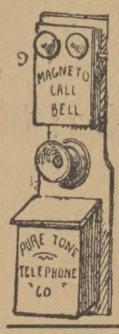
The ONLY manufacturers of the GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAIST.



Pure Tone Telephones

Are used to connect Offices, Residences, Stores, Factories, Mines, &c. The Pure Tone Telephones are sold outright No Rental! $3 No Royalty! for only three dollars each. For distances of two miles or less, give better satisfaction than a Bell Telephone which costs $75 per year rental. No toy, but a perfectly practical, reliable telephone.

GUARANTEED to give Perfect Satisfaction or money refunded. Special Inducements to Local and State Agents. Send for circulars to the PURE TONE TELEPHONE CO., 210 Metropolitan block, Chicago, Ill.

TOKOLOGY A COMPLETE LADIES' GUIDE IN HEALTH AND DISEASE.

A mother writes: "We have a TOKOLOGY baby two months old. She came before the nurse could get in from the next room. We did not have a doctor in the house. I never got along so well before, and this is our tenth baby." Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.

ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO., 277 Madison-st. Chicago.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT

or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted.—Men and Women. $200 a month. Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms. and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION.

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR CO.

Publishers.

740 & 742 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Books treating the Great Questions of the Day relating to the Church, the State, and the Conditions and Tendencies of American Civilization.

Send for Catalogues and Descriptive Circulars.

KODAKS

20 STYLES FROM $6.00 UP.

CAMERAS AND SUPPLIES. DEVELOPING AND PRINTING.

Everything used in Photography.

Douglass & Shuey Co., 111 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

CHASE BROTHERS

CHICAGO PIANOS GRAND RAPIDS

PRINCIPAL OFFICE AND FACTORY, MUSKEGON, MICHIGAN.

VOSE & SON'S PIANOS

EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH

HOME BAKERIES EVERYWHERE

Do you want one in your town? Address

MACHINERY DEPT.,
THE WOMAN'S BAKING CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

WALL PAPER. Good Paper, 3c. Gold Paper, 5c. Large package of beautiful samples and guide, "How to Paper," sent FREE. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant. 136-138 W. Madison St., CHICAGO, ILL.

BEATTY Piano. Organ. $23 up. Want agents. Cat. free. Dan'l F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N. J.

How TO MAKE A Fortune

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser; patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen to whom we give EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new, will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO., 184 Hermon Street, Worcester, Mass.

HEADQUARTERS for LOW PRICES

We save all our good cash customers from 25 to 75 per cent. on a large variety of useful articles besides 400 Kinds of SCALES which we manufacture, Send for Circulars and Prices. The following are among the Articles we sell: Bicycles, Watches, Organs, Pianos, Safes, Sewing Machines, Carriages, Wagons, Road Carts, Sleighs, Buggies, Harness, Portable Forges, Anvils, Vises, Feed Mills, Bone Mills, Cider Mills, Etc. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago.

GENUINE STANDARD SINGER

Sewing Machines. Latest improved. Best made. Noiseless. Warranted 5 yrs. SAVE MONEY now while you can get a Complete set of attachments FREE. Adapted for light or heavy work. Light running. Nicely finished. Send for catalogue. $35.00 Machine for $9.50; $45.00 " " $14.00; $55.00 " " $18.50

CASH BUYERS' UNION, 353-366 Dearborn St. B. 149 Chicago.

Wash-Day Made Easy.

"THE WORLD'S WASHER"

Saves Time. Saves Labor. Saves Clothes.

I would be glad to hear from every lady who wants an honest washer at a reasonable price. Circulars free. Mrs. C. E. ROSS, Lincoln, Ill.

Wherever the Rocker Washer is used the washboard becomes a relic of barbarism. It is warranted to do an ordinary family washing of 100 pieces in an hour as clean as can be washed by hand. Write for description and price. Rocker Washer Co. Ft. Wayne, Ind. Agts. wanted

AGENTS WANTED ON SALARY or COMMISSION, to handle the New Patent Chemical Ink Erasing Pencil. Agents making $50 per week. Monroe Eraser Mf'g Co. x 213 LaCrosse, Wis.

Fat People You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by Dr. Clarke's Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials Free. F. B. Clarke, M. D. Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

Cuts a Circle.

No Good Kitchen complete without a Chicago Rotary Biscuit and Cake Cutter, they sell at sight. AGENTS WANTED. Sample mailed for 15c. Columbia Specialty Mfg. Co., 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order. American Desk & Seating Co. 270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

SPECIALTIES for AGENTS Ladies and Gents. Rubber Gloves & Dress Shields, Convertible Wire Baskets' Self Threading Needles, Handy Button, and many others. Catg. free. CHICAGO SPECIALTY CO. 134 VanBuren St. Chicago

There are Many Arts and many Artists—our particular art is pretty effects in wall papers. 100 samples mailed for 8cts. Prices, 5 to 50c. a roll.

A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Phila.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill

$2.25 FREE

No Money Required.

Cut this out and send it with your order, and we will send this watch by express for your examination; after you examine it, and find it as represented, pay the express agent $2.25 and express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. This is positively the first Genuine watch ever offered on the face of the earth at this price, and we warrant it a perfect timekeeper. With each watch we send our mammoth catalogue and a lovely gold plated chain and charm free, also a printed guarantee which gives you the privilege of returning the watch at any time within one year if it does not give satisfaction. Address

THE NATIONAL MFG. & IMPORTING CO.,
334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

Absolutely Safe, Thoroughly Established

OWNED AND MANAGED BY WOMEN.

IT HAS PAID ANNUAL DIVIDENDS SINCE 1885.

Capital Stock, $125,000.

Members of the W. C. T. U. who desire a safe investment do not need to try new things so long as a little of the capital stock of the remains unsold. We are offering now about $20,000—all that is left. It is

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION

ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE.

PRICE, PER SHARE, $25.00.

For further particulars, address

Mrs. F. H. RASTALL, Mg'r.,

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,

THE TEMPLE, - CHICAGO, ILL.

1 AND 1 = 3 FOR 1 1/4

This is not a puzzle but represents one of the most generous offers ever made.

Everybody subscribes for THE UNION SIGNAL, a paper too well-known to need commenting upon. That's 1.

Everybody wants to subscribe for GOODFORM—a magazine for the people—probably the best household magazine published in the United States. That's 1 also.

The price of THE UNION SIGNAL is $1 a year and the price of GOODFORM magazine is $2 a year, either is a bargain at the price —$1 and $2 makes 3.

Now comes the offer, not an ordinary offer, but a most EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

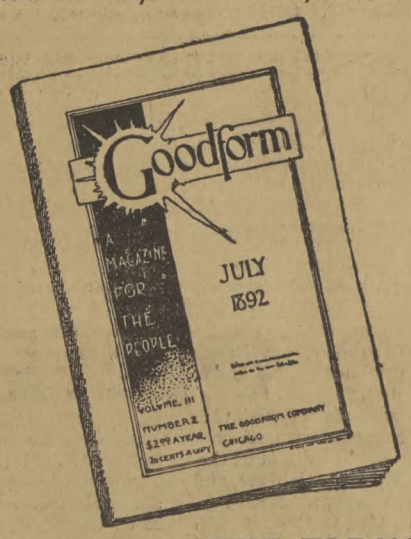
We will send you THE UNION SIGNAL and GOODFORM, an 80-page home magazine, for one year, postage paid, for only 1 1/4—One Dollar and Twenty-five Cents, or $1.75 less than everybody knows they are worth.



You know the excellent qualities of the UNION SIGNAL, and probably know all about GOODFORM. If you do not, send us five 2-cent stamps (which is one-half price) and we will send you a sample copy.

We cannot begin to tell you all the good things about GOODFORM, but will say that the August number contains articles by Miss Willard, Lady Somerset, "Amber," and other well-known writers, including three timely educational articles; stories by Stanley Waterloo and Opie Read, lots of pictures, poetry, and a most unique series of departments on the subjects of "Woman's Sphere," "Health-the Nursery," "Bodily Grace and Beauty," "Matters of Dress," "House Affairs," "Home Decorations," "Plants and Flowers," etc., etc.

SEND TODAY AND SECURE

1—THE UNION SIGNAL at $1.00
1—GOODFORM MAGAZINE at $2.00
} $3.00 for only $1.25

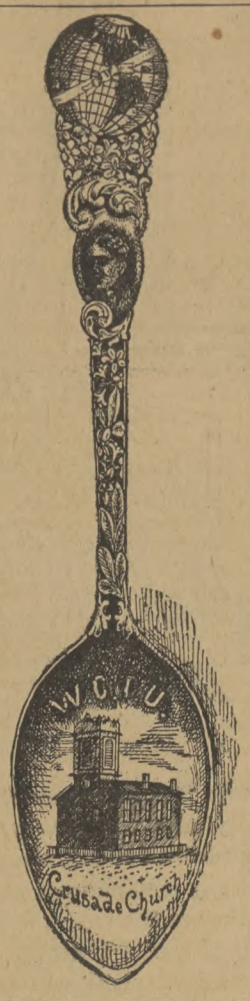
Address, THE WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION, THE TEMPLE, CHICAGO, ILL.



WHAT?

Why, the beautiful

Souvenir Spoon

which we have been preparing for our workers and all making a collection of spoons. Could it be more complete in design? It shows the beginning of the Great Reform in the bowl, where is pictured the little Crusade Church in Hillsboro, whence it sprang.

The culmination is emblemized in the World, belted with the White Ribbon at the extreme end, while the Medallion of the President of the National and the World's W. C. T. U. is embowered in the National Floral Emblem, the trailing arbutus.

On the reverse side are the World's Floral Emblem, the water lily, as also are the initials of the great Official Publishing House, which secured the production of the spoon.

Of course, every one will want one or more of these spoons—want them for personal use and as gifts. And we have decided to reduce the profits on the same to the lowest point of safety, so as to enable more to buy them.

NOTICE.—They are offered at a lower price than any sterling silver spoon on the market. Here are our rates for the different styles, all made of Solid Sterling Silver:

TEA SPOONS.

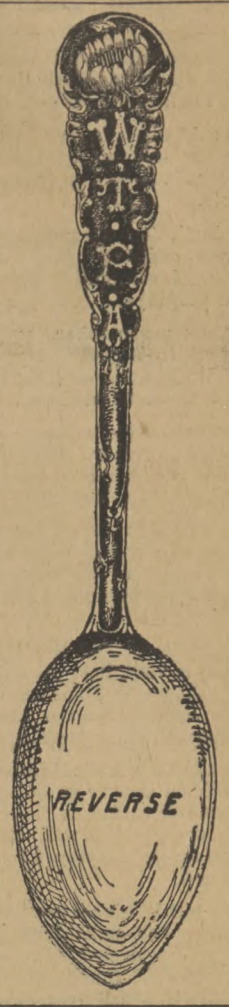
For single spoon,	$ 2.25
Per set of 6,	12.50
With bowl gilded,	2.75
All gilded,	3.25

ORANGE SPOONS.

For single spoon,	2.50
With bowl gilded,	3.00
All gilded,	3.50

AFTER DINNER COFFEE SPOONS.

For single spoon,	1.50
With bowl gilded,	1.75
All gilded,	2.00



MONEY FOR W. C. T. U. WORK....

Now is Your Chance

THE W. C. T. U.

Automatic Fountain

WILL SOLVE THE PROBLEM

A FRESH DRINK AND A NEW CUP FOR EVERYBODY

If You desire to furnish a cool drink to the thirsty multitudes; if you desire to secure money honestly earned for your work, send for circulars and terms upon which they can be secured, to the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Ass'n

THE TEMPLE
LA SALLE AND MONROE STREETS
CHICAGO

FOR YOU!
WHAT?
OUR LATEST BOOK.
WHY?
BECAUSE IT WILL HELP YOU!
LISTEN!

"A YOUNG WOMAN JOURNALIST"

Is a delightful book; Instructive to the Young; delightful to those no longer young. It is edited by LADY HENRY SOMERSET and MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD. It contains Miss Ames' letters from Europe, three of the literary papers she wrote, MISS WILLARD'S SERMON or FUNERAL ORATION, and much more of interest. Beautifully illustrated. Price $1.50. Send orders to WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASS'N, The Temple, Monroe and La Salle Streets, Chicago. N. B.—Agents wanted.

Signal Notes.

"Excessive drinking is a devil of devils, Moderate drinking a little devil paving the way for the larger one."—Dr. Holbrook.

It is said that a league has been formed among the students of the University of Pennsylvania to do away with wines at class banquets.

One death for every three hundred and fifty-seven, and one injury for every thirty, tell a tale of criminal carelessness among railroad employes.

France, once so sober, is now at a loss to know what to do with her topers. Cheap bars and absinthe easily explain the increase of alcoholic madness.

A strong total abstinence movement in the western provinces of Russia is in progress. In one province there are no less than sixteen active societies.

The Midland railroad company of England have built a nice hall for the use of their workmen, to be used as a reading room and for temperance and gospel meetings.

The Children's Aid Society of Chicago, organized in 1891, has provided homes for over one thousand homeless and friendless children. Older boys are placed in homes where they can learn farming or a trade.

Since 1827 the Philo-Judean Society has been working quietly among the poor Jewesses at the East End in London. A Bible and sewing school is well attended, and a Bible reader is employed to visit them in their homes.

The ill-fated Chinese are barred out from Australia as well as America. To open the interior of unclaimed Australia to Chinese enterprise would change the whole face of the country in a few years, but the Australian legislators fail to think so.

The late Emile de Laveleye, of Belgium, was an eminent thinker and philanthropist, as well as an authority on economic science. Too much can hardly be said in praise of his work for international peace and social purity. He was one of the class known as international men.

At a recent political meeting in Glasgow, a gentleman testified on his honor that when he and two friends made the rounds of the streets between eleven and three o'clock they met fully five thousand people. Of this number, at least four thousand were either wholly or partly drunk. They saw girls under fourteen decidedly under the influence of liquor.

Mrs. Dora Evans, of Clay Center, Kan., goes, by request of the General Officers of the National W. C. T. U., to Wyoming (the only free state!) to organize and develop unions there. She begins work about the 15th of August. Mrs. F. H. Rastall—whose sagacity is a proverb in the W. C. T. U.—knows this Wyoming ambassador well and says no mistake has been made in her appointment. Mrs. Evans is a woman of devoted spirit, attractive presence and power on the platform, and knows the work of the W. C. T. U. as an old lady knows her knitting.

The American Sunday-School Union gives very encouraging reports of its work for the past year. One thousand and sixty-four Sunday-schools, with fifty-nine thousand scholars have been organized in places otherwise destitute of all religious advantages. Aid was given to over ten thousand other schools, besides six thousand Bibles and nine thousand Testaments were given or sold. The missionaries report over six thousand conversions and two hundred and sixteen churches have been developed. Who can estimate the wide-reaching results of this one year's work?

The bust of Susan B. Anthony, by the rising young sculptor, Lorado Taft, of Chicago, is now completed and has been passed upon by critics as a satisfactory solution of the problem: How fittingly to put in marble the senatorial head that has thought so long for woman and the face that reflects the sorrows of her martyrology. The required amount to pay for this bust has not yet been received for the reason that so many testimonials of similar sort and other busts of Miss Anthony have shared the attention of progressive women. An appeal is now made to men who (since "the woman's cause is man's") appreciate one who has done more for their advantage than most women that have lived. Send your dollars, your V's and your X's to Mrs. Mary E. Holmes, of Galva, Ill., leader of the prairie state suffrage forces, treasurer of the fund.

Good Cooking

Is one of the chief blessings of every home. To always insure good custards, puddings, sauces, etc., use Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk. Directions on the label. Sold by your grocer and druggist.

Lady: "Your recommendation is certainly a good one. I am especially glad to know you do not use 'washing powders.' The last laundress I had, I discharged, because she would use them, contrary to my instructions, and completely ruined the house linen and the clothes of the entire family."

Laundress: "I never use any kind of 'washing powder' or 'soap powder.' I always use Ivory Soap, for it is as easy to wash with as anything I ever saw, and it does not burn my hands nor make them sore."

Copyright 1892, by The Procter & Gamble Co.

WHY YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT

HARVEY.

The triumphant success of any great industrial enterprise, having for its object the financial and social improvement of twenty thousand people, ought to be of interest to every man, woman and child in America.

To you, for one.

For you may be one of the fortunate twenty thousand.

The Harvey enterprise in two years' time has so benefited nearly five thousand, and before the close of the century will benefit four times as many more.

By giving them pleasant homes, plenty of work, moral surroundings, nearness to Chicago, and scores of consequent advantages.

There is but one Harvey; the model manufacturing town of America.

Its history is unique, interesting, illustrated; it has helped hundreds to such a start in life as they never got before.

Don't you want it—the History? The start?

Then say so in a letter to The Harvey Land Association, 819-825 The Rookery, Chicago, mentioning this paper.

You will get the History by return mail; the start—that depends.

OUTDOOR HAPPINESS.

You learn in a day—it's easier than walking—more fascinating than tennis—takes you near to Nature's heart—gives you acme of healthful happiness.

Finest cycling catalogue free at Columbia agencies, by mail for two 2-ct. stamps. Pope Mfg. Co., Boston, New York, Chicago.

CONOVER PIANOS

GRAND AND UPRIGHT.

. . . FOR . . .

QUALITY

DURABILITY

. . . AND . . .

BEAUTY

ARE UNEXCELLED.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE OR CALL AT OUR WAREROOMS.

CHICAGO COTTAGE ORGAN CO.,
SOLE FACTORS,
215 to 221 WABASH AVENUE,
CHICAGO.

THE PEERLESS STEAM COOKER

Cooks a whole meal over one burner on gasoline, oil, gas, or common cook stove. The best selling article made; the housekeeper's Friend, the agent's bonanza. Agents wanted, either sex; big profits; exclusive territory. Address, with stamp,

C. E. SWARTZBAUGH & CO.,
334 Dearborn St., Room 921, Chicago.

AUTHORS, Manuscripts revised, criticised, or sold on commission. Address, with stamp, The Western Literary Bureau, 55 N. Oakley-ave., Chicago.

"A GOOD, CHEAP NORMAL, SHORT-HAND, BUSINESS AND MUSICAL COLLEGE, at Stanberry, Mo. No Saloons in the County. Board and Tuition, $2.75 per week. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write for free catalogue.
JOHN E. FESLER, Pres't and Prop'r.

☞ See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

THE BABY will be given a beautiful birthday card if the mother will send baby's name and age to Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. This is done to advertise LACTATED FOOD. The food that SAVES BABIES' LIVES.

The angels make lemonade by mixing sugar, lemon juice and "Manitou Mineral Water." Try it.

CHAUTAUQUA LAKE

can be reached in the most comfortable manner over the Erie Lines. This is the only route from the West which does not require a change of cars from Chicago. If you are thinking of visiting Chautauqua, write to F. W. Buskirk, A. G. P. A., Erie Lines, Chicago, Ill., for full information as to route, rates, etc.

DELAVAN LAKE.

Friday and Saturday of each week the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway sells excursion tickets to Delavan, Wis., and return for $2.65, good for return until Monday. Special Delavan Lake train leaves Union Depot every Friday and Saturday at 3 p. m.; additional trains, except Sunday, at 8:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. Delavan Lake is one of the most attractive resorts in Wisconsin, has plenty of good hotels, good fishing and boating, and is in every respect a delightful place to spend a short or long vacation. For further information apply at ticket office, 207 Clark Street.

THREE HARVEST EXCURSIONS.

Half Rates via the Illinois Central.

Aug. 30th, Sept. 27th and Oct. 25, 1892.

The Central Route will sell Excursion tickets to the Agricultural Regions of the West, Southwest and South, at one fare for the Round Trip, from stations on its lines north of Cairo, on August 30th, and September 27th. A third excursion will be run to the South and Southwest on October 25th. Your Local Ticket Agent will give you full particulars in regard to these Harvest Excursions; arrangements can also be made in this connection to visit the desirable Railroad Lands for sale by the Illinois Central in Southern Illinois on obtaining special permission to do so by addressing the Company's Land Commissioner at Chicago, Mr. E. P. Skene. In addition, a few weeks before the first Excursion date, your Local Ticket Agent will be able to furnish you with a special Folder, issued by the Illinois Central, which will give you particulars of these Harvest Excursions in such form as will enable you to plan your journey at home. Should you not be within call of a railroad ticket agent, address A. H. Hanson, G. P. A., Illinois Central R. R., Chicago, Ill.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad.

Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 723 Monadnock Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

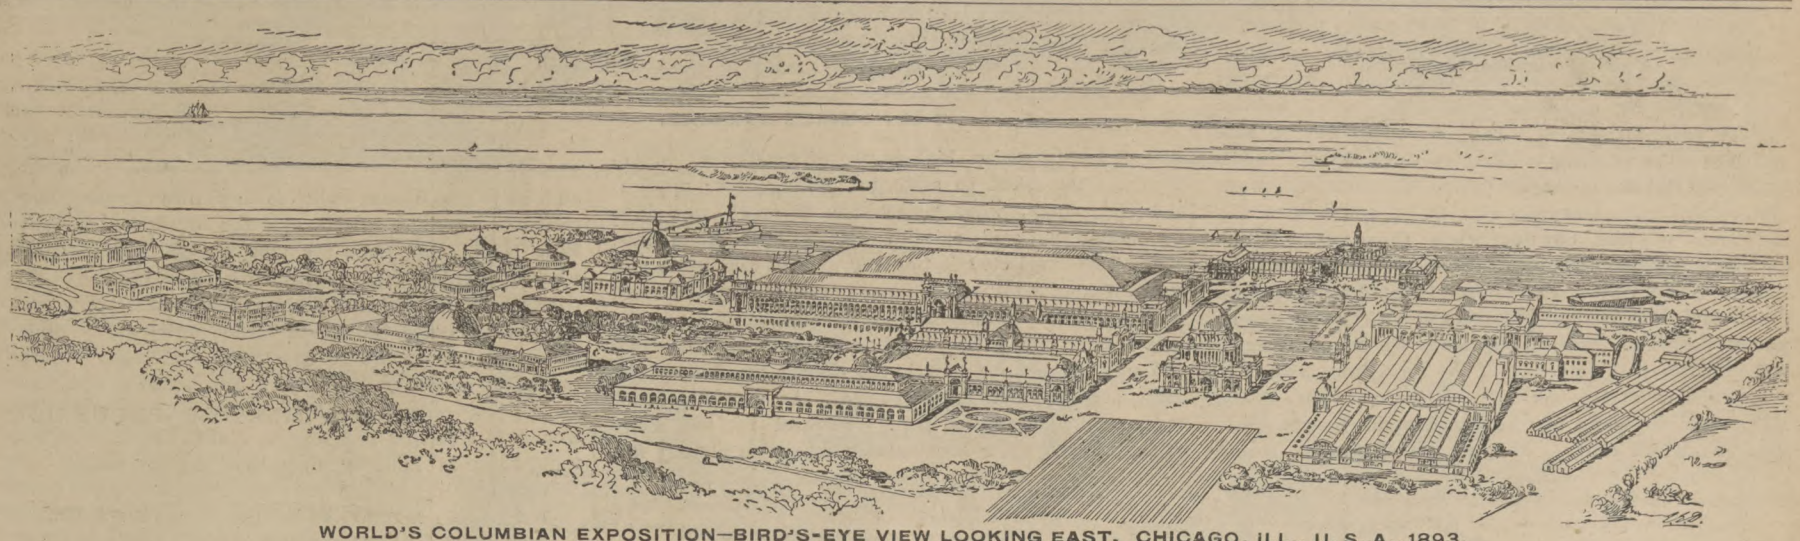
VETERANS' RETURN TO WASHINGTON.

The Grand Army Encampment at Washington in September will be the occasion of the reunion of thousands of veterans who parted in that city in 1865, after the Grand Review following the surrender at Appomattox and the capitulation of Richmond. Again, after a lapse of 27 years, thousands of veterans will march down Pennsylvania Avenue to be reviewed again by the President of the United States, members of his Cabinet, and other distinguished personages. It will be a spectacle seldom equaled in the magnificence of the display and in the number of men participating. Excursion tickets to Washington via the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will be sold by all the roads in the West at exceedingly low rates. The chief delight of the trip to Washington will be the journey via the Picturesque Baltimore and Ohio, which crosses the Allegheny mountains and for 250 miles traverses territory fraught with the most thrilling incidents of the war. For more detailed information as to time of trains, rates, and sleeping car accommodations apply to L. S. Allen, Asst. Gen. Passenger Agent, The Rookery, Chicago. Upon application, Chas. O. Scull, Gen. Passenger Agent, Baltimore, Md., will send free of charge a handsomely Illustrated Guide to Washington.

THE UNION SIGNAL

WORLD'S FAIR SUPPLEMENT.

CHICAGO, August 11, 1892. No. 32

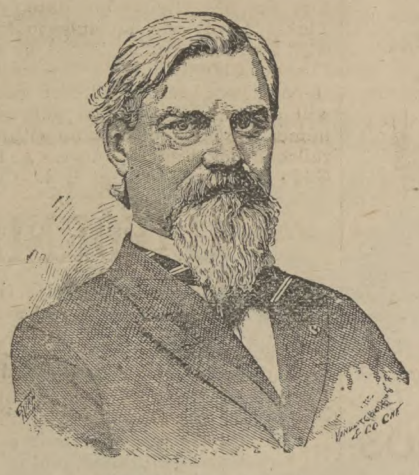


WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION—BIRD'S-EYE VIEW LOOKING EAST. CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A., 1893.

THE RELATION OF INDUSTRIAL WOMEN TO THE EXPOSITION.

Perhaps nothing gives a better idea of the progressive spirit of the age than a careful study of its Fairs. In early times, Fairs were only commercial conclaves for purposes of barter; really, temporary markets, where each displayed his wares for sale or exchange. Later, they became competitive, and prizes were offered; exhibitors brought their best products to place beside their neighbors' best, for reward, from which each returned to his home

MRS. POTTER PALMER.



GEORGE R. DAVIS.
Director General.

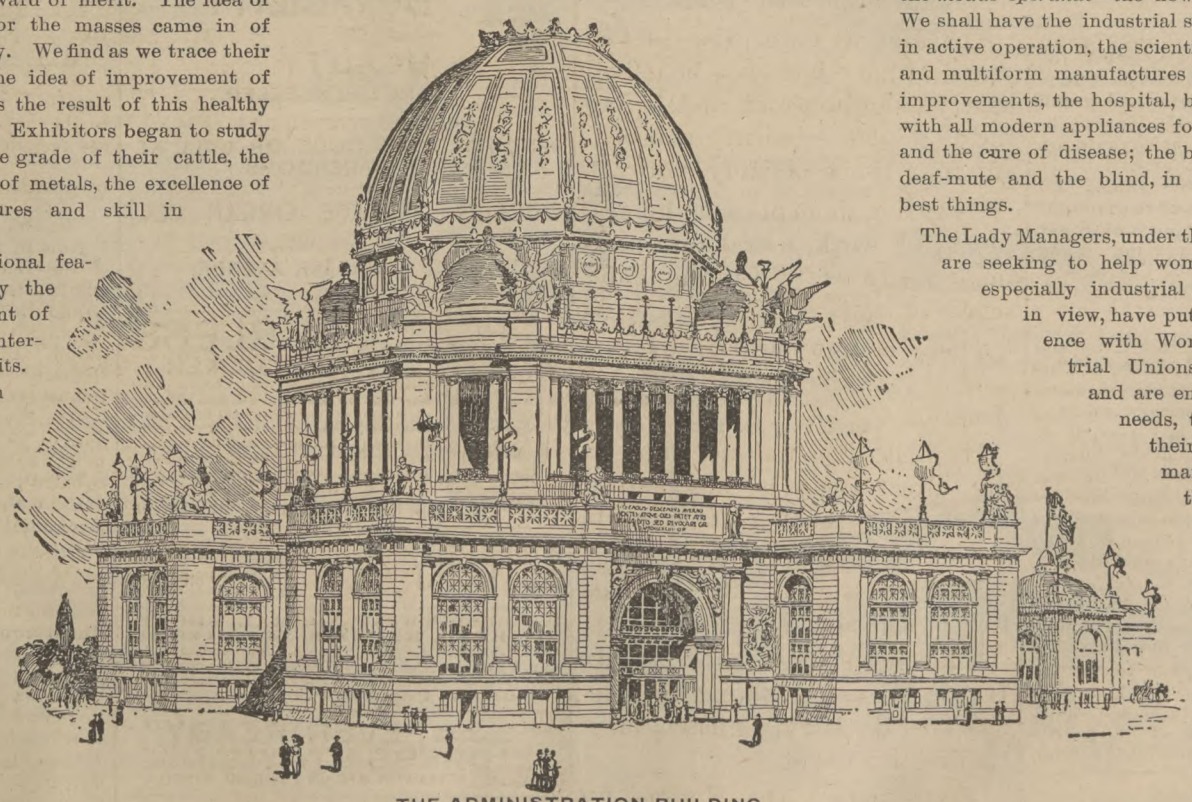
THOS. W. PALMER.
Pres't National Commission.

resolved to so improve his exhibit for the next year's Fair that he should bear off the reward of merit. The idea of amusement and recreation for the masses came in of course, but was only secondary. We find as we trace their history that more and more the idea of improvement of exhibits became prominent as the result of this healthy comparison and competition. Exhibitors began to study in earnest how to improve the grade of their cattle, the texture of fabrics, the purity of metals, the excellence of art, perfection in manufactures and skill in handiwork.

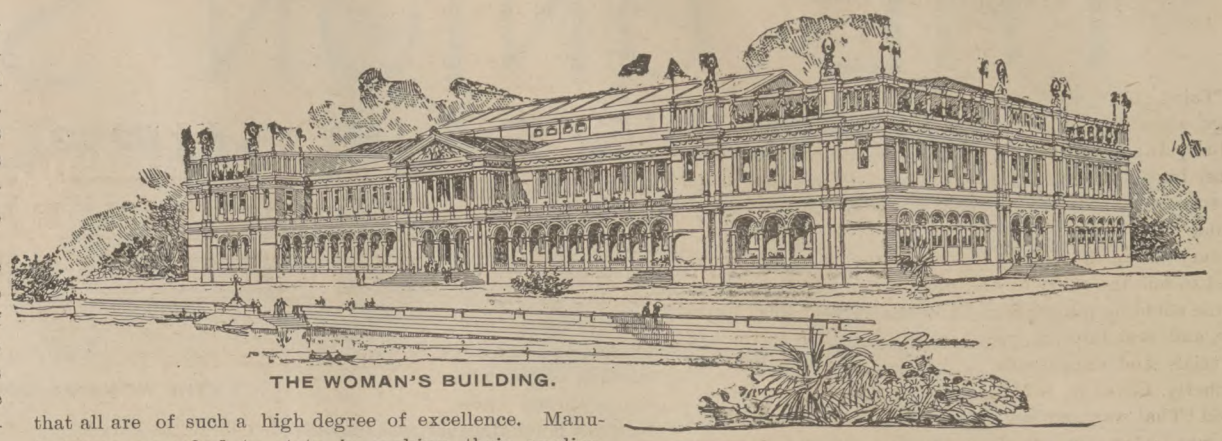
More recently the educational feature has crept in, and to day the chief aim is the improvement of the people and their various interests, rather than their exhibits. The Columbian Exposition will emphasize this feature—the education and elevation of the people—as no other has done. The work of "The Congress Auxiliary," a comparatively new feature of World's Fairs, will be entirely along this line. Every phase of philanthropy, every form of religion, every charitable organization, every industrial society, every educational institute will have an opportunity to bring before the people its best methods of work, to show the results accomplished, and set forth the aims for which it labors and prays. In the familiar conference, the simple talk, the more studied address, and the scholarly lectures every educator will be lifted to a higher plane, every philanthropist will receive new inspiration, and every laborer will be impressed with the dignity and blessing of work as a result of this commingling and communion of the best thought of the best workers of the world in all lines.

In every department the industrial phases of work will be prominent; not only what has been done as shown in the way of perfected machinery and manufactures, but the modus operandi—the how to do it—will be exhibited. We shall have the industrial school and the kindergarten in active operation, the scientific cooking school, different and multiform manufactures showing the latest and best improvements, the hospital, both English and American, with all modern appliances for the alleviation of suffering and the cure of disease; the best methods of teaching the deaf-mute and the blind, in fact, the best way to do the best things.

The Lady Managers, under the leadership of Mrs. Palmer, are seeking to help women of all classes, but more especially industrial women, and with this end in view, have put themselves in correspondence with Working Girls' Clubs, Industrial Unions, Girls' Friendly Societies and are endeavoring to ascertain their needs, to help them to exhibit their work, and through the manufacturer to secure for them a recognition they have never had before; and they confidently hope that the place given to women in this Exposition will help in many ways the wage-earner, the professional woman, the teacher, the artist and the housekeeper, as well as the philanthropist and reformer.



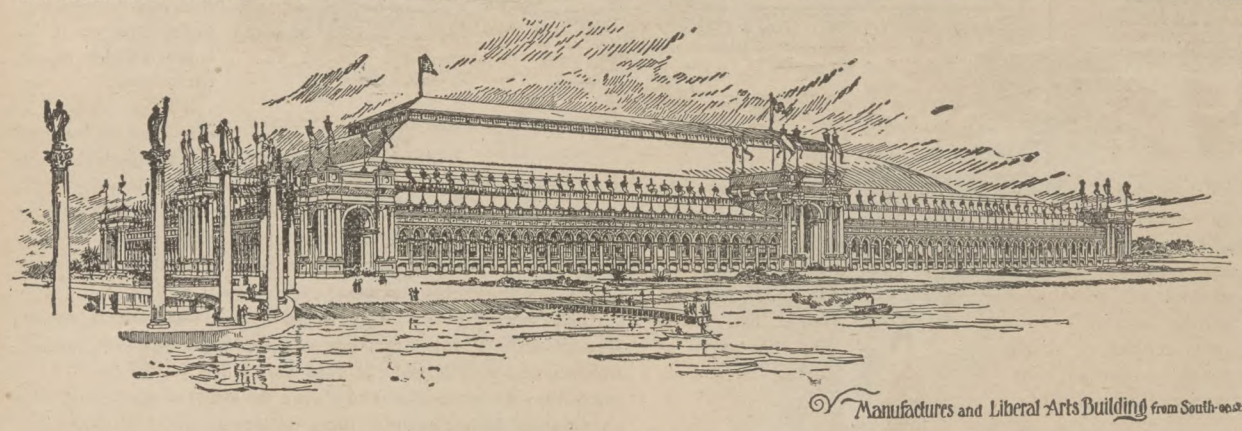
THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING.



THE WOMAN'S BUILDING.

We note with pleasure the deference shown to the Lady Managers, not only by their co-workers, the Commissioners, but by foreign commissioners, sent over to learn all possible about the Fair. The presentation made by Mrs. Palmer in her audiences with these foreigners of woman's work and of the desirability that women of all countries should take part, has resulted in the formation of committees of women in England, France, Germany, Sweden, Switzerland, Russia, Cuba, Mexico, Peru and others.

Many of the members of these foreign committees are of the nobility, who work side by side with their more humble, but not less noble sisters, the working women of these nations, who can measure the good that will result from the joining of hands of the women of all nations in this work for women. Lady Aberdeen will be here with her corps of girls, to show the Irish cottage industries, lace makers from Italy and Belgium will work side by side with American girls that labor in the many industries of this country, while the expert Indian maiden will weave and paint her baskets beside the artist that models in clay or chisels the block from the quarry. From Syria will come the fine textiles of the East to be placed beside the gem cutting from the West. The rich embroideries and paintings of the past, long buried in the seclusion of the convents of Mexico, Italy, Spain, France and Germany, will be placed beside the art treasures of modern times. While we are anxious to secure that all are of such a high degree of excellence. Manufacturers are asked to state, in making their application for space, what percentage of work was done by women in said exhibit. Many have done this, others have neglected it, but it is evident that, more and more, woman is taking the place in the work of the world that God meant she should when He designated her as the help-meet of man. She should and will be his help-meet not only in the home, but in the church, the factory, the mart, in society and in government. An encyclopedia of woman's organizations, being compiled by the Lady Managers, will show how wide a field she is already filling, and how rapidly new avenues are opening for her willing feet.



Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building from South-east.

this brilliant array of work, we believe the worker greater than the work, and are more eager that the worker shall be benefited by the Fair, than that the Fair shall be enriched at the expense of the worker.

All charitable, philanthropic, industrial, reform, literary and educational societies of women will undoubtedly have headquarters upon or near the grounds of this great Exposition, with ample opportunity to promulgate their principles and methods of work as well as to set forth the resultant good for which they hope. The conservative woman from the South and East will find herself in many enterprises heart to heart with the progressive and not less intelligent woman of the West, and each will return to her home to think more kindly of her sister worker and her work.

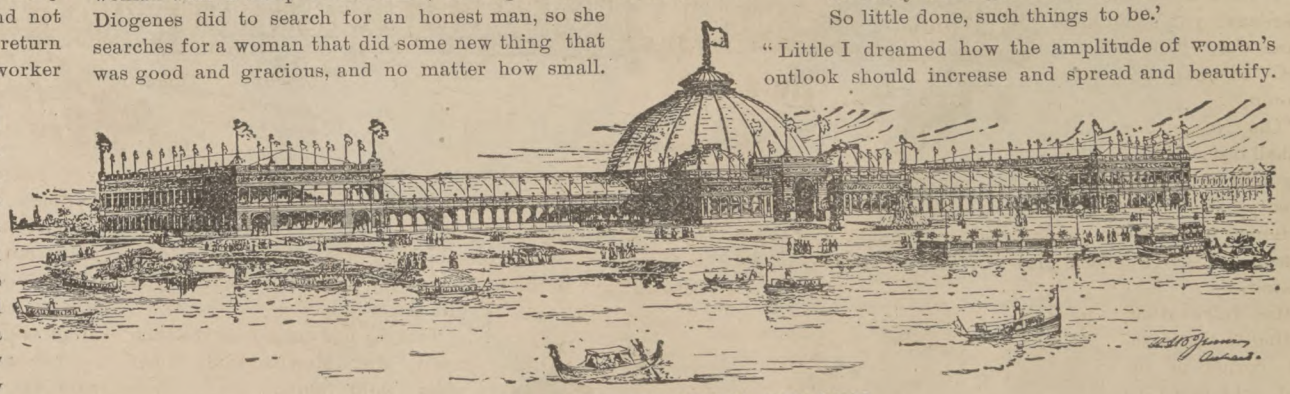
In the Woman's Building will be a room finished in the rich redwood of California, decorated with its varieties of cacti, its art work and draperies; another will be finished and furnished by Ohio. The library will be the result of the labor of the energetic women of New York, while nearly every state and territory will contribute carved panels for the wainscoting, draperies for portieres. Florida will furnish a standard for electric light, in form of a palmetto tree; Michigan will send copper; New Hampshire and Vermont marble and granite; New Jersey, tile work; Montana, copper, jasper and a fountain; North Carolina will give a pedestal of gray or white marble; Pennsylvania will send art draperies, windows, etc.; Tennessee will furnish marble; Texas, woodwork and lovely roses; Virginia, plants; Washington, six vases; West Virginia, woodwork in one room; from New Mexico and Arizona will come petrified woods, onyx and chalcedony.

These contributions to this great National Woman's Building are all the result of woman's work. Among the carved panels received from twenty-six states, it can truthfully be said that some of the most artistic come from the far West and the extreme South, and it is a matter of surprise

* * * * *

NOTHING more helpful has been said than was spoken at the Woman's Federation of Clubs in May, by the editor-in-chief of THE UNION SIGNAL, and which must be repeated here for the inspiration of all women because other women ask it:

"Let it be remembered that this Columbian Exposition is to be made up of every creature's best, that it is the woman with a lamp in her hand; coming forth even as Diogenes did to search for an honest man, so she searches for a woman that did some new thing that was good and gracious, and no matter how small.



THE HORTICULTURAL BUILDING.

"For above all things it is the desire of the women commissioners to develop the talents of women and let them see what women have done, and to let young women coming here see that which will cause them to say: 'I, too, could work in these various arts handicrafts': then, besides all this, to show them to what place they had better go to learn any particular line of work. Mrs. Palmer says we want to know whether all the schools are open to women, and whether, when they have taken the course of study they are allowed to have their diploma—for sometimes they are not. We want to know whether they have equal wages for equal work. We want in every way to build up, and elevate, and help the woman who is her own bread-winner, so that her weapon may be held the firmer in her brave little hand. God bless the true hearted sisters of ours who are making their brains work like a Corliss engine over the problem of how to extend the outlook of women all over the world, not in our own country only. Emerson says that we are so egotistical that when we turn our backs on Niagara we think it has ceased to flow; and we are just so egotistical that we did not dream that the women in Bohemia had formed clubs! I did not know that down in Ecuador they have an exposition—and they're going to send the women's part to our World's Fair. I did not know that in Finland they had a woman's council. I did not know that in Italy, Russia, and Sweden they are among the very best experts in lace work; and one of the hopes of our women here is, that through the Exposition, women who are working and not getting adequate pay for their lace work may find an enlarged sale for their wares. All honor to the Countess of Aberdeen, who has formed a contract with the women of Ireland, that she will bring their laces into the market more and more in England and America. There never was given such a send-off to women as is going to come in the nick of time in the Columbian Exposition; and let us remember that we can each stand in our lot and place, and spread the good news until every little item we hear is scattered abroad, and thus help to bring into this storehouse of the common good, the wonderful pageant of the ages. This is to be the world's school of methods. This is to be the kindergarten of the world, its encyclopedia, its object lesson, its gleaming picture gallery, its whispering gallery, where every whisper shall be heard the world around.

" 'So many worlds, so much to do;
So little done, such things to be.'

"So spoke the laureate in 'In Memoriam.' On a prairie farm, long ago, I read the words:

" 'So many worlds, so much to do;
So little done, such things to be.'

"Little I dreamed how the amplitude of woman's outlook should increase and spread and beautify. Little I dreamed how, like the genii of Arabian story, she would escape from her kettle-bondage and 'expand her pinions in nebulous bars.' Coming west in 1846, urging our way in a white-winged emigrant wagon, settling ten miles from any railroad, waiting ten years for a market, I remember how my father, as we passed through Chicago, said to his six-year-old girl, 'See there, Frankie, can you read that sign? No bottom here!' That was the sign on the principal streets, to keep out of what we called, in those days, the slew, better known in these days as slough. But look about you! We don't have sloughs any more, least of all any sloughs of despond, in the streets or in a woman's outlook either. We have Chicago elevated out of the marsh, Chicago standing on firm foundations, with its magnificent buildings, with its beautiful welcome for women, with the women of money and the women who haven't money, hand in hand, heart to heart, understanding each other better than we ever did before, the reformer finding she can learn any amount from the woman of fashion, and the woman of fashion learning any amount from the reformer; and all of us more intent on building up the Republic, that has been the kind mother of thrice happy daughters, than on any meaner aim. So may God help and bless us all, as we work on, remembering, that 'The brotherhood of man shall begin with the sisterhood of woman.'"

The Dairy Building from South-east.

THE BANNER COUNTY FAIR.

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

"'Taint the gittin' thar that costs," said Grandma Biggs, wresting a green cucumber from the chubby fist of Baby John, who was exploring the hidden parts of a roomy lunch basket. "It's the stayin' thar that keeps folks away. You know husband and me went to the Centennial."

Every one in the county knew, but the dear old lady so loved to tell the story of the one outing of her life, that no one could help listening. Now the subject was opportune, and real interest was manifested in her account of the trials and expenses of a pilgrimage to the "City of Brotherly Love" in 1876; and all assented when she declared "That want nothin' to what it'll be in Chicago, for that was jes' the United Statses' show, and this'll be the whole world's."

It was four o'clock in the afternoon of the "biggest day" of the County Fair. The women had seen the display of orchard and garden, kitchen and dairy products; knitting, patchwork, embroidery, lace, painting, wax flowers and paper flowers—all the charming, useless or useful collection under the meaningless name of "fancy work," had been viewed and discussed.

They were not interested in the races—some of them wished their husbands and sons less interested—so they dropped into the cheery reception room of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to wait, until their "men folks" were ready for home going.

Naturally they talked of the World's Fair, and of that phase of the topic which weighed so heavily upon the lady managers, until a way to dispose of the problem of women with small means "staying there" was thought out and wrought out.

"I doubt if the Exposition itself will entertain me as much as my boys' plans for going." A slender woman with shining eyes said this.

"You deserve a deal o' credit for raisin' them boys as you have, Mrs. Merritt, their father dyin' when they was little, as he did. I hope they'll be comfort enough in your old age to pay ye for it."

"Why, Grandma, I'm paid every day of my life! Many a heart under a diamond pin aches and breaks for just such comfort as I take with my boys. I only wish there were one or two more of them. They will be grown up and off all too soon."

"I don't think they will ever leave you," said little Anna Coe. "Joe told me last winter he never should."

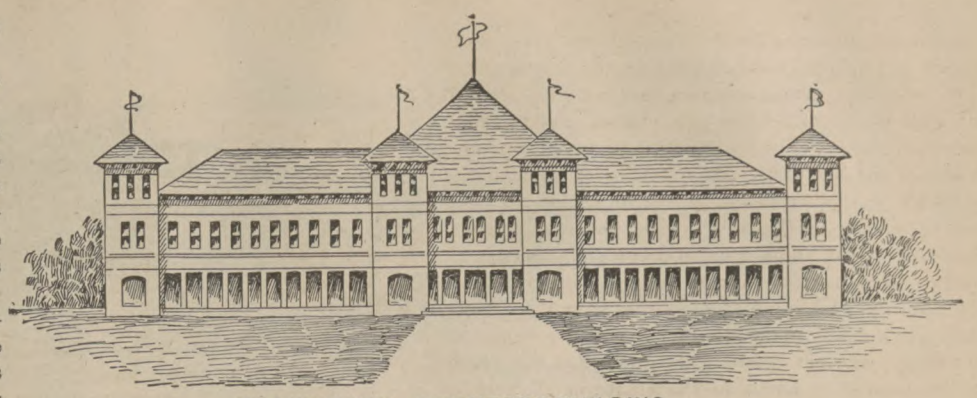
"Oh, yes, they will! I shall insist upon Joe hiring land to put in a crop of his own next year. He is twenty-one in the winter, and I want my sons to settle in homes of their own while they are young." For some reason the girl's cheek grew pinker at Mrs. Merritt's answer.

Mrs. Fairweather, sitting in the farthest corner of the tent, whispered to Mrs. Skinflint, "Did I ever tell you that right after James Merritt died my husband offered her a place in the store at good pay if she would let out the farm — it wasn't paid for then—and move into town? She was so ladylike he thought she would draw trade, and then he was sorry for her."

"How did it happen that she didn't come?"

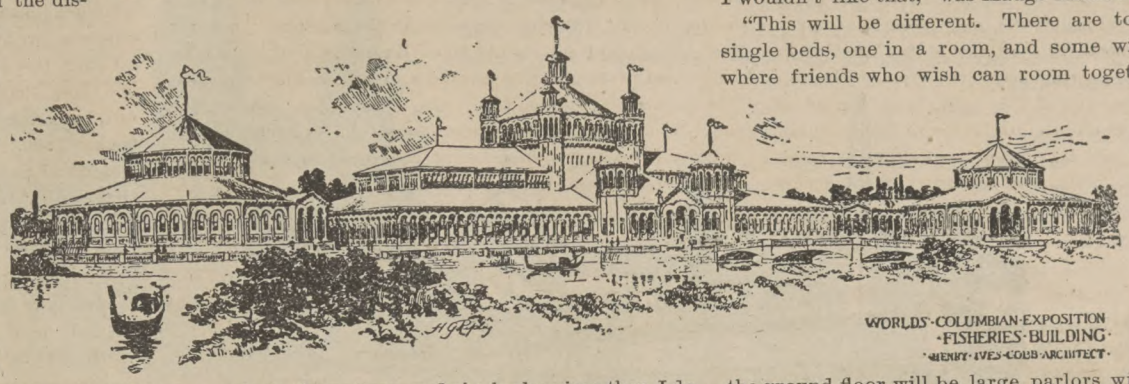
"Why, she just said that when her boys came home from school she must be there. It seemed dreadful foolish at the time, but they say she's made the last payment on her farm, living right on it."

"I think she was wise. There was Caroline Mincer, left a widow about the same time, who got work in a newspaper office—she wasn't really as smart as Helen Merritt, but she had notions—leaving home all day, and her boys running wild after school till she came. Now one is tending bar, and the other is behind the bars."



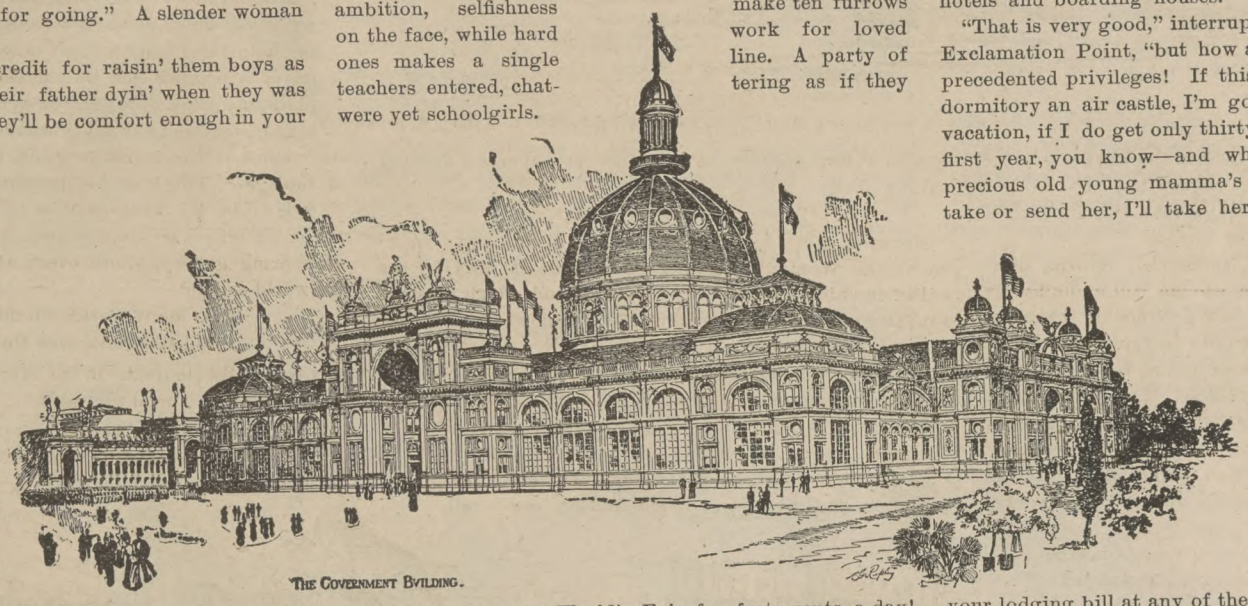
THE WOMAN'S DORMITORY BUILDING.

"It don't take anything to dress Mrs. Merritt. That's a six cent calico she has on, and not an inch over nine yards in it. This gingham was thirty-nine cents at wholesale, thirteen yards in the pattern, and she looks nicer than I do this minute!"



WORLDS·COLUMBIAN·EXPOSITION
·FISHERIES·BUILDING·
·HENRY·IVES·COLB·ARCHITECT·

Ah! love, peace, personal cleanliness bestow beauty that fadeth not, and that asks no odds of fashion. Vanity, ambition, selfishness make ten furrows on the face, while hard work for loved ones makes a single line. A party of teachers entered, chattering as if they were yet schoolgirls.



The Government Building.

"A room near the World's Fair for forty cents a day! Why, Miss Garson, it is impossible! Such rates cannot be found in the city now!"

"Very well, Miss Exclamation Point, if I can sit down here and get to the bottom of my bag I will prove to you the impossible."

Talking had ceased in the tent, until Mrs. Merritt said, "Let your light shine afar, Miss Garson. We have been discussing the impossibility of going to the Exposition because we cannot pay hotel bills. How did you learn of anything better?"

"I read that an old friend of mine, Mrs. Barker, was in the Fair Headquarters, and wrote to her to engage me a room now if possible, and make a deposit to secure it. Instead she sends me this scheme of the lady managers for dormitories."

"In a dormitory aren't the beds all in one great room? I wouldn't like that," was Madge Miller's comment.

"This will be different. There are to be rooms with single beds, one in a room, and some with double beds, where friends who wish can room together. There will be a woven wire mattress, feather pillows, good bedclothing, rocking chair, mirror and toilet articles in each room.

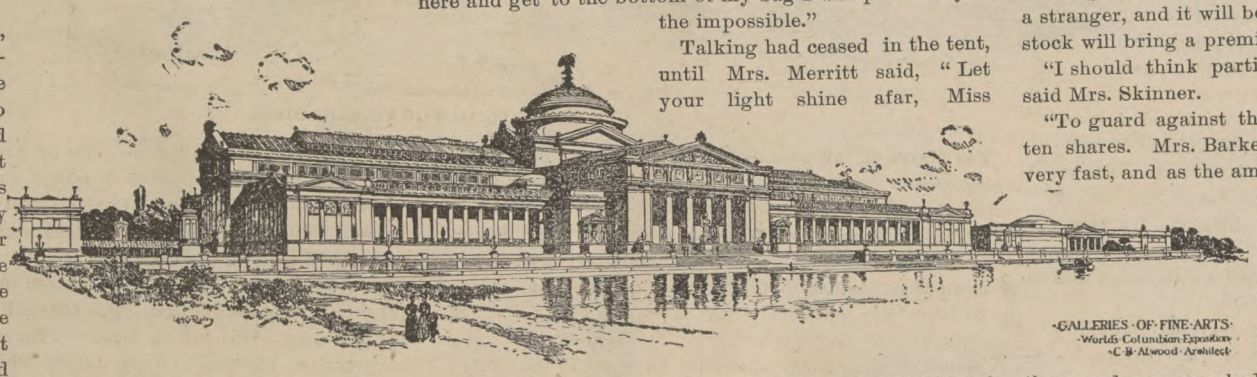
"The buildings will be two stories high. On the ground floor will be large parlors with fireplaces. the sleeping rooms being above. Perfect sewerage is guaranteed, and as the buildings and furnishings will be new, they must be clean, which cannot be said of the cheaper hotels and boarding houses."

"That is very good," interrupted Prue Bebee, alias Miss Exclamation Point, "but how are we to secure these unprecedented privileges! If this isn't pure fiction and the dormitory an air castle, I'm going to see the world next vacation, if I do get only thirty dollars a month—it's my first year, you know—and what's more and better, my precious old young mamma's going too. If papa don't take or send her, I'll take her at my own expense. But you haven't said how to do it."

"A room is secured by taking stock in the association. Each share is ten dollars, and entitles the holder to twenty-five days' lodging; or she may take a friend, and the two stay half that time. You send your ten dollars, and get a certificate of stock, which will be accepted in payment for your lodging bill at any of the dormitories. There are to be four. This stock certificate is non assessable, which I understand to mean that the stockholder is not liable for debts contracted by the directors. It is transferable, so that if you cannot go you can give it to a friend or sell to a stranger, and it will be honored. There is no doubt but stock will bring a premium before the Fair is over."

"I should think parties would invest for speculation," said Mrs. Skinner.

"To guard against that, no person can buy more than ten shares. Mrs. Barker writes that the stock is going very fast, and as the amount is limited to $150,000, it will soon be taken. She thinks many will be disappointed by and by when they apply for stock and find there is none left. Another advantage in subscribing immediately is that you have choice of the month you wish to spend there, and you are asked in every case to state your preference. If not already filled for that date it will be assigned to you. I shall send for two shares on Saturday."



·GALLERIES·OF·FINE·ARTS·
·World's Columbian Exposition·
·C·B·Atwood·Architect·

"To whom do you send?"

"Now let me read that to you, then you will make no mistake, and you can all copy it.

"Make out draft or money order to:

ELBRIDGE G. KEITH, TREASURER,

Write a letter giving your full name and post-office address, enclosing this draft or money order, and mail it to

HELEN M. BARKER,
Care Board of Lady Managers, W. C. A., Chicago, Ill."

"You're sure there ain't no trick about it, Miss Garson? These city schemes is risky. The big fish is too apt to swaller the minnies. I have confidence in you, Miss Garson, but have you really looked into it?"

"I feel that I have, Grandma Biggs. I have known Mrs. Barker, the secretary of the association, for years. She is honest, and further, she is sagacious,

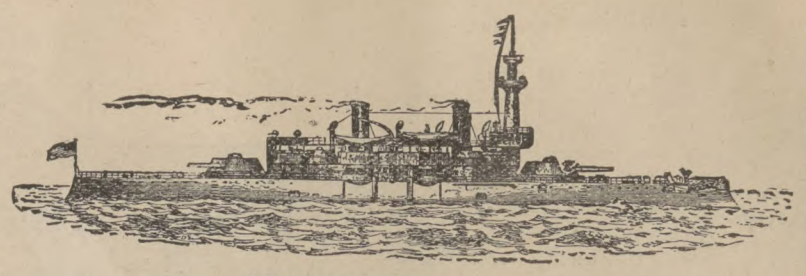
Agricultural Building from North-east level headed—a business woman. Then, Mrs. Carse, of the Temple, is president, and Mr. Keith, the treasurer, is widely known as one of the most solid business men in Chicago. Mrs. Palmer, president of the Board of Lady Managers, is one of the directors, also Miss Frances Willard. They are too well and widely known to lend themselves to any swindling scheme. Really, I see no chance to lose by it. The rooms will be there, and we get our money back staying in them, whether there are any dividends or not."



U. S. COAST LINE BATTLE SHIP

"I declare, I'd a-most like to go myself, jest to see how it compares with Philadelphy!"

"Bless your old heart!" cried Prue, "you raise the ten dollars and go when we do. I'll take care of you. Wouldn't it be grand to get up a big party from this county, to stay the twelve days? We could go in August, after the threshing is done, and get back before the schools open."

There was a chorus of "Wouldn't it!" and Grandma Biggs wiped her eyes.

"You always was a darling, Prue, but I don't know as I could enjoy it 'thout Zekle. He was with me at Philadelphy, said it was our weddin' tower, though we was married thirty-nine years that fall."

"I know I couldn't enjoy it without the boys," said Mrs. Merritt.

"Well, how are any of us to 'enjoy it' without our boys and our 'Zekles,' I'd like to know?" asked Mrs. Homens.

"There are many hotels for men in the city," replied Miss Garson; "I have a friend who owns one, and he told me last spring that a party of Englishmen had already engaged forty rooms for a month, at a dollar a day. Of course that is much cheaper than at regular hotels."

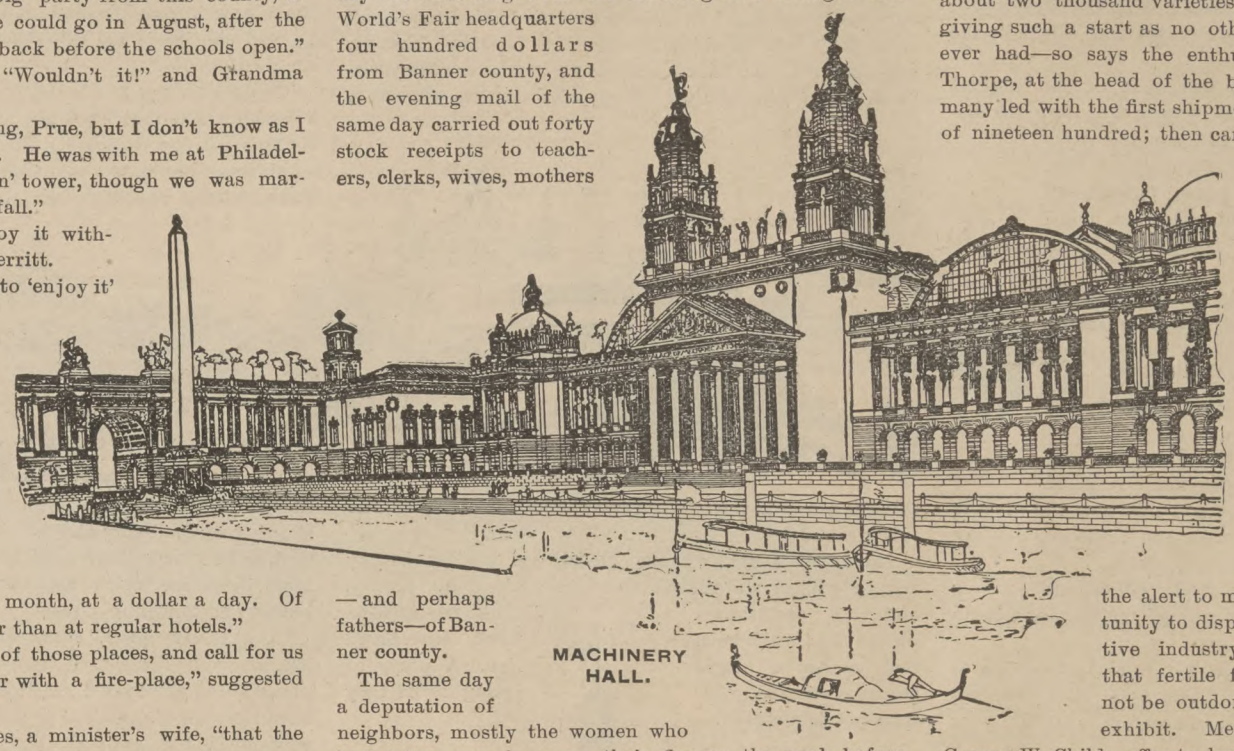
"The men can go to one of those places, and call for us mornings in the big parlor with a fire-place," suggested Prue.

"I think," said Mrs. Jones, a minister's wife, "that the Young Men's Christian Association must be planning a similar enterprise for men. It certainly is needed as much, and I will ask Mr. Jones to write to-morrow to Y. M. C. A. headquarters in Farwell Hall, Chicago, and learn what is being projected in that line. But I hope no woman here will be so silly and babyish as to neglect this great opportunity for recreation and improvement, if it is found that her husband cannot share it. We can go with our daughters to the dormitory and our husbands and sons will find some way of seeing the Fair, either with us or without us. If women, especially poor women, have the advantage of men on this occasion, it will be the first time in the world's history, and I hope they will not fail to avail themselves of it."

This plucky speech from the parson's popular young wife arrested the stampede, and while all who can go in families will do so, even Mrs. Merritt whispered to Mrs. Jones that if the doctor would let her boys go in company with him and Frank—provided they raise the money to go at all, and each of them on his own account is working for it—she would take a share with Grandma Biggs and go for the twelve days.

Those present agreed upon a date, and every one declared she knew of half a dozen others who would "want to be in it."

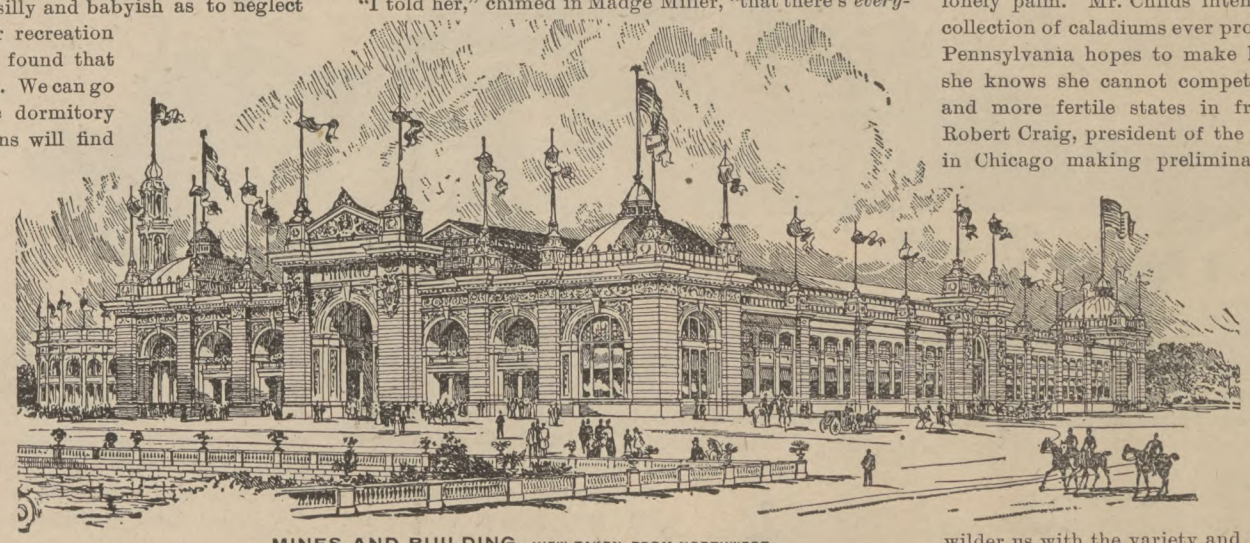
The W. C. T. U. had secured the banishment of liquor from the Fair ground years before, so the men were sober, and all but a few churls were converted to "that dormitory scheme of the women's" before they reached home that night. The following day Miss Garson received a communication from Mrs. Barker saying that the directors had anticipated the objection to coming without "the boys and Zekles" and at their last meeting voted to set apart one dormitory for the use of families, provided the stock sells readily enough to insure the erection of a fifth building as there is every reason to believe it will. This was published in the county paper, and one day the following week the morning mail brought into World's Fair headquarters four hundred dollars from Banner county, and the evening mail of the same day carried out forty stock receipts to teachers, clerks, wives, mothers — and perhaps fathers—of Banner county.



MACHINERY HALL.

The same day a deputation of neighbors, mostly the women who had taken premiums on their flowers the week before, waited on Miss Garson. Grandma Biggs said: "The chief pleasure in my life's my garden, and if I ain't going to git no satisfaction outer flowers at the Fair, I don't know that I care to wear myself out a-going."

"I told her," chimed in Madge Miller, "that there's everything, and it stands to reason flowers wouldn't be left out. But I came to ask you what's to be done in art, for that's my excuse for such a royal trip as I mean that Fair shall be to me."



MINES AND BUILDING. VIEW TAKEN FROM NORTHWEST.

"Oh, 'Nature and Art at the World's Fair' is a subject I've been studying up for a newspaper article. A friend who is a secretary in the Woman's Department at headquarters gave some interesting facts which I will tell you. The sweetest spot in Jackson Park will be the Rose Garden. It covers nearly two acres, surrounded by a light wire fence, which will serve as a trellis for the choicest climbers that can be grown in this climate. In the center a wire pagoda, thirty feet in diameter and forty feet high, will rise to support the same matchless drapery and form a bower of beauty. The four arched entrances will be so masked that it will be impossible to see the roses outside the enclosure.

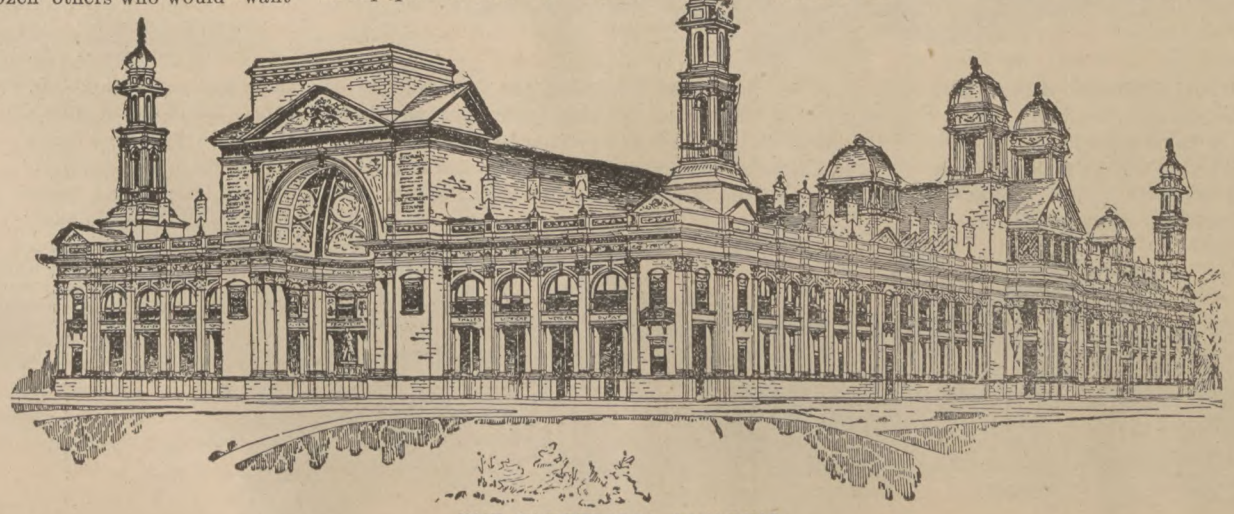
"A hundred men worked for a week on this posy bed, just to get it laid out and planted. Fifty thousand plants of about two thousand varieties are already in the ground, giving such a start as no other Exposition rose garden ever had—so says the enthusiastic gardener, Mr. John Thorpe, at the head of the bureau of floriculture. Germany led with the first shipment of plants, to the number of nineteen hundred; then came England and France with two thousand apiece, and other countries followed. All these are donations.

"The judgment of the horticultural department will be sorely taxed in the matter of granting space, as applications far exceed the available amount. Arizona, for example, asks for two thousand feet inside Horticultural Hall and five thousand feet of outside space in the horticultural department. Arizona fruit growers are on the alert to make the most of this opportunity to display the rich and remunerative industry they are developing on that fertile frontier. Pennsylvania will not be outdone by any one in the plant exhibit. Messrs. A. J. Drexel and George W. Childs offer to loan the choicest specimens in their unrivaled collections, some of which cannot be duplicated in this country. One palm, the property of Mr. Drexel, cannot be duplicated in Europe or America. He also has some very rare ferns, which will accompany the lonely palm. Mr. Childs intends to contribute the finest collection of caladiums ever produced in the United States. Pennsylvania hopes to make her mark in floriculture, as she knows she cannot compete with some of the newer and more fertile states in fruits and viticulture. Mr. Robert Craig, president of the American florists, has been in Chicago making preliminary arrangements for this beautiful exhibit. It is hinted that both these flower-loving gentlemen intend to make rare gifts to Chicago parks at the close of the Exposition.

"Jamaica, whose flora is as rich and varied as that of any island in the world, is preparing to bring a luxuriant exhibit of large-sized tropical plants, expecting to bewilder us with the variety and beauty of ferns, palms and orchids.

"Tree planting prospers this cool, wet spring. Half a dozen trees ranging from seventy to one hundred feet in height have been successfully set in the open space between the Woman's Building and the Horticultural. They are of elm, ash, linden, sugar maple, Wisconsin willow and hackberry. Two big trees, the first ones permanently planted, are known respectively as Grant and Sherman. Apropos of trees and plants, the secretary of the Board of Lady Managers will very cheerfully correspond with any one wishing to contribute to the roof garden of the Woman's Building."

"That will do," said Grandma Biggs; "thank you, Miss Garson, I never dreamed of the like o' such gardens. I guess I can't be kept at home when the time comes. But the sun's down and you won't get your art this time, Madge."



THE ELECTRICAL BUILDING.

The Union Signal

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Volume XVIII. CHICAGO, August 18, 1892. Number 33.

Ursula Dietrick 2119 19th St

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Silver reached its lowest recorded price August 13,—82⅛ cents an ounce.

The National convention of American florists met in Washington, August 16.

In the Crimea and Caucasus districts, Russia, cooler weather has caused a decrease of cholera.

Measures are being taken for the re-building of the burned portion of St. John's, Newfoundland.

War veterans of both the blue and the gray, numbering thousands, held a reunion at Lebanon, Ky., last week.

Popular opposition, to which Emperor William is obliged to submit, has decided that there will be no international exhibition in Berlin.

Earthquake shocks occasioned great consternation but little serious damage at Ems, Coblentz and other places in Germany last week.

The latest rebellion against the Honduras government has been crushed by the defeat of the rebels, several hundred of whom were killed.

New Orleans has decided to hold two celebrations of the quadro-centennial of the discovery of America, a religious one October 12, and a civil one October 21.

News of a battle in which nearly one thousand men were slain comes from Trinidad. This places the city of Bolivar in the hands of opposers of the government.

Last Friday Lord Salisbury's government and ministry came to an end in England. Mr. Gladstone, by command of the Queen, visited Osborne House the same day to receive instructions to form a new cabinet.

On August 13 the most powerful electric search light ever made threw out its brilliant rays from the summit of Mount Washington, a mile and a half, enabling coarse print to be read at Fabyan's, seven miles away.

The census returns according to figures given in an address by Robt. P. Porter, in Washington, last Sunday, show that the Methodist church with 4,255,377 communicants and a church property value of $130,018,070 leads the Protestant churches of the United States.

REFERENCE was made in our issue of July 7 to the Demorest diamond contest held in connection with the Prohibition Convention in Cincinnati and the number of contestants was given as four. This was a mistake; there were eight contestants, according to the rule for diamond contests. This is an important point and should be borne in mind.

THE Belfast camp-meeting in Ohio has two rules that we wish might be vigorously enforced on all camp-grounds, religious and philanthropic: First: Sabbath observance laws to be strictly enforced. Second: The sale and use of tobacco prohibited. Let us have some clean places on the face of the earth, just to prove that it is possible.

THE census shows that in 1890 the deaths in France exceeded the births by more than thirty-eight thousand. This is the result of conscripting the sons of France as soldiers. A similar result would doubtless be revealed by the statistics of Germany and Italy. In the proportion that standing armies increase, and war is the ultimate motive of any nation, its homes must decrease and its home life perish.

MRS. M. H. DUNHAM, president of Iowa W. C. T. U., has inaugurated a movement for the Temple that would pay for it by May 1, 1893, if every state would fall into line. The plan is that each member of a union shall raise two dollars for the Temple fund. Mrs. Dunham reports the white-ribboners of Iowa as enlisting eagerly and says she shall "keep at it" till the last woman has sent in her two dollar bill.

IT should be remembered that the World's W. C. T. U. holds its second convention in Chicago in the first week of June, 1893, and is immediately preceded by the World's Congress of women, commencing May 15, 1893. These dates are fixed with special reference to the fact that the temperance women of the world would be here the first week in June, and would wish to participate in the Congress, also that the women of the Congress wish to be present at our great convention.

MRS. I. N. BARD, a ranch woman of Laramie county, Wyoming, lacked but nine votes of the nomination for Governor in the recent Democratic state convention. In a speech ably reviewing the platform and counseling harmony, she withdrew her name. Mr. Halliday who desired the nomination lost it because he was a high license man. John E. Osborne, a wealthy young wool man, was nominated on the thirty-seventh ballot. This is the first political step forward that the Democrats have thus far taken on the woman question.

A MISTAKEN statement has been going the rounds, and was printed in our own columns to the effect that woman suffrage had been made a binding article of faith and works in the British Women's Temperance Association. The facts are that while the principle was indorsed at the convention of this society in May last, there is nothing whatever that is compulsory in this action. Our neighbors across the Atlantic Ferry seem to agree with their American cousins in the statement of our famous "Nashville By-Law," that "no auxiliary union shall be bound by any principle espoused, or plan devised by the National W. C. T. U., except that all must subscribe to the total abstinence pledge, and to the constitution of the National."

CLARA C. HOFFMAN is to have from twenty-five to thirty appointments in Colorado before the great Convention. Mrs. Woodbridge has just returned from a helpful tour in the same section, and we rejoice that strong sympathy has been given to the efforts of our white ribbon comrades yonder by the expectation of the Convention next October. How much more that impetus will be when we have actually brought to the "shadow and shine" of the Rockies the expert workers from every one of the forty-four states, the five territories and the District of Columbia! We are glad that Mrs. Frances J. Barnes is to remain and gather in women into the societies when the Convention is over. Our Colorado women take time by the forelock. Already they have provided for all the lunches required by the great Convention and for most advantageous hotel rates, and excursions, etc., are now being arranged. We shall find everything thoroughly in readiness, and doubtless shall have the greatest Convention of our annals.

A PENNSYLVANIA correspondent desires us to refer to the action of the Academy of Science, Philadelphia, in sending out the ship Kite on an expedition of succor to Greenland hoping to find Lieutenant and Mrs. Pearey who it will be remembered, sailed on a voyage of exploration one year ago, Mrs. Pearey being the only white woman who ever went on such a voyage to the northern clime. We well remember being in Nova Scotia in July last when these intrepid travelers and their party were there. Our correspondent says: "This is the first opportunity ever enjoyed by an educated lady of our country to observe this most inhospitable and unfrequented portion of the globe. Think of the deplorable circumstances surrounding Mrs. Pearey, the Lieutenant having had his leg broken at the vessel's wheel and requiring the care of his wife under the most painful and difficult circumstances. It would be very interesting to know whether liquor was used in his case. If not, it is another victory for temperance on a new battle ground in the far north. It is also a new victory for woman, the display of fortitude in the brave lady who dared to accompany her husband in the desolation, danger and loneliness of that far off country."

THE sure perquisite of happiness is doing. Nearly every difficulty vanishes when one begins to do. We puzzle ourselves about theories of religion but when we begin to act religious this very acting puts the theory out of our minds. The very core of religious fanaticism, whether it be in the medicine lodge of the savage, among the fetish-makers of the East, or in the cathedrals of Europe and America, is the dwelling in doctrine instead of doing for those about us. The curse, canker, rust and blight of the religious life have been that we theorized instead of practicing, and that we antagonized those who differed from us as to our theories. The modern teaching is to seek harmony rather than discord. When you find yourself alongside of another human being settle it in your mind that you will study the correspondencies, the agreements, the amenities, rather than the antagonisms and differences between you two. The whole code of good manners, not to say Christian behavior, is found in this one precept.

THE question comes to us, is the collection to be taken September 22, on World's W. C. T. U. Day, for Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt? We answer: No, that day is the date of Mrs. Leavitt's birthday and for that reason was chosen in her honor, but this year, as last, the money raised goes to strengthen and extend the work pioneered by her in foreign lands. The President of the World's W. C. T. U. said in her address in Boston last autumn: "We ought to put to Mrs. Leavitt's credit in the bank a sum as large as that we raised for her at first, and which she declined to use. We ought to place her portrait on the walls of our great gospel hall in the Temple, at Chicago, and to make the date of her birthday, September 22, World's W. C. T. U. day throughout Christendom." The last of these three suggestions was adopted, and we are confident the others will be. We hope some action to that effect will be taken at the convention in Denver. But the annual World's W. C. T. U. day is for the purpose of presenting that society to the public, not only in its own interest but in the interest of the local unions, that it may be seen that they are by no means isolated, but are the links of an ever lengthening and ever brightening chain, and also for the purpose of circulating our literature and securing a free-will collection from the audience, not from the W. C. T. U., that shall help us to send out each year more expert workers into the countries that know least about the spirit and method of the white ribbon host.

WE are sure that there are no white-ribboners who will not learn with sincere pleasure that Lady Henry Somerset has taken passage on the Cunard steamer Etruria, sailing from New York, August 27th, for Miss Frances E. Willard and Miss Anna Gordon, inviting them to be her guests at Eastnor Castle. They are weary and worn; the entire change of climate and of scene, with the sea voyage, may be expected to do them a great deal of good physically, and their complete exemption for a few weeks from public work and the routine of office duties, will be their first approach to the "rest" which has twice been voted Miss Willard at National Conventions by her considerate comrades. The correspondence will be left in charge of Miss Alice E. Briggs, office secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill., and the usual corps of assistants at Rest Cottage. Miss Willard's editorial duties will be discharged to the best of her ability under the disadvantage of absence, while her coadjutors in the office of THE UNION SIGNAL will do their utmost to maintain the present high standing of the paper. Misses Willard and Gordon will return in good time for the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Denver, Col., October 28 to November 3. Miss Willard desires us to say that she is "most tenderly grateful to that loving, loyal host who in the loss of her nearest and dearest one who have by prayer and sympathy expressed in word and deed, by cable and telegram, letter and spoken comfort and condolence, hallowed with heavenlier meaning than ever before, the hymn we sing so often, 'Blest be the tie that binds.'"

MY CROSS.

BY FRANCES E. TOWNSLEY.

It lies beneath my raiment so,
The world gives little heed;
O Thou, whose eyes are very keen,
Forget it not, I plead.

"It is not heavy," say my friends,
Passing another way;
O Thou, whose balances are just,
Discern its weight, I pray.

I do not faint because of this;
I only some days cry;
And though it grieves my spirit sore,
I dare not lay it by.

Oh, hidden cross, oh, secret thorn,
So small, so sharp a thing;
Paul, with his own thrice offered prayer,
Had never felt thy sting.

Mary, whose faithful worshipers
Her seven sorrows mourn,
Could bring no solace in her touch
To heal my soul, so torn.

But hark, a voice the silence stirs
Of Love's strong agony,
And breathes a true heart's trustful words
From out Gethsemane.

"Thy will, my Father, unto pain
And scorn and anguish sore,
Yea, unto death—Thy will be done."

. . . . . .

List, 'tis a conqueror!

Low in the dust I bow. I trust.
Henceforth no cross, no chain,
No sorrow open to the world,
No galling, secret pain

Can harm me. As the Conqueror prayed,
I pour my garden prayer:
"Father, Thy will—I cannot see;
Thou, Lord, art everywhere."

"Thine is the Kingdom, reign in me;
The power, bend lower down;
The glory—Lord, at Thy dear feet
Behold my cross—a crown."

Ashland, Neb.

SOME PASSAGES IN THE PRACTICE OF DR. MARTHA SCARBOROUGH.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

CHAPTER II.

Dr. Martha had fixed her eyes on the door of the little red house, wondering who was sick, and if here, too, there was a story. For, in their long hours of riding up and down the valley and over the hills on either side, she had come to think of the circuit they daily made as a great story book in which "to be continued" was at the end of each. From the unpainted, weather-stained, two-roomed little house under Savin Hill, where dwelt deaf and dumb Martha Baynes, weaver of rag carpet and gatherer of herbs, to the old tavern in the hollow, deserted and long ago given over to the rats and the gypsies who camped about and in it once a year, each and all had known a tragedy or a comedy. Both words Dr. Martha fully understood, and she knew, too, that both, in this human life, were very apt to march side by side, the happiest being those who laughed even when tears were nearest. Often her father rushed toward the buggy, caught the reins, and as they sped away, burst into tumultuous laughter, in which Dr. Martha knew a story was bound up, or, if not story, some extraordinary theory or saying of a patient for which she waited, knowing that not only story but all it suggested would be given. Whether a method of treatment, a speculation over causes, or some bit of family history, Dr. Scarborough poured it all out, now and then pausing to explain a word or two, as Dr. Martha knit her pretty brows in the effort to comprehend. The old buggy was school-room and sometimes theater, and no one knew how various were the lessons learned under its hooded top. Slate and pencil went with them, and in long stretches she had learned to decline many a Latin noun, and to make easy sentences, which she wrote on the slate as she held the reins and waited.

To-day Dr. Martha had her small task quite ready when her father came out slowly, with the look on his face, half frown, half puzzle, that it often wore in dealing with his cases. Reading, writing and drawing were coming to her at one and the same time, with her Latin and German, for in the first lesson ever given her, her father had drawn a cat on the slate, and watched till her uncertain fingers had caught the trick of the lines and copied the word in print and script, transferring it at home to the little blackboard he had set up for her in her own corner of the library. Miss Malvina shook her head as she looked at it. Such methods were irregular and the destruction of any sound education. The child would never know anything properly, and everybody would blame her for neglect when they ought to know she was not responsible; but Dr. Scarborough laughed when she remonstrated, the twinkle in his eyes only bearable because of the kindliness that shone always behind it.

To-day Dr. Martha had drawn on her slate a spray of leaves, and filled one side with the customary work, which she would finish at the next stopping place. She had just time to print on the other side, Dorcas and Daniel, as a reminder of another something to be learned, before Dolly lifted her head to the pat her master gave in passing, and broke into her steady trot; he took his place in the buggy, with a nod of satisfaction as Dr. Martha held up the slate, and a smile as she turned it over.

"I want to know about them," she said. "You never told me, but I suppose it was because they haven't any house anywhere."

"Dorcas was born in the little house we have just left," Dr. Scarborough said, leaning back comfortably, "and Daniel was the judge's nephew, and came here with his mother when he was sixteen or so; Daniel Pike and Dorcas Plummer, and both of them predestined old maids. The married old maids are the worst sort and have hardly a saving grace."

"What are old maids?" Dr. Martha asked seriously.

"The salt of the earth and two-thirds of the time better mothers than the real ones. They are people who have happened not to marry, and who are often better off than if they had. In short, child, you can study it out for yourself by and by. Dorcas Plummer grew up with her mother, the widow Plummer, tall and thin, and the color of a venerable tallow candle, and both of them certain that some convulsion of nature would take place if a chair in the best room was an inch out of position. They rubbed and scrubbed from morning till night. They shut out the sun and shut in the damp and struggled along there like two potatoes in a cellar, sending out hopeless sprouts toward a darkened window. They lived on strong tea boiled in a tin teapot because it had more body to it treated in that manner, and ate odds and ends of cake and pie, and the trash that women take to who live alone.

"That was Dorcas. Daniel, being precisely of the same order and living with his mother who was made on the same plan, spindled up, and when he knew arithmetic enough, took to clerking in the village store. He played the bass viol in the choir, and Dorcas, who had a sweet, high voice, sang something you will never hear, called counter. Twenty years almost the two were side by side in that choir, from which couple after couple married and went their ways, and how at last it dawned upon Daniel that he had wasted twenty years, nobody knows. It was not till Dorcas lay dying that she told him she had loved him ever since she was sixteen. As to what Daniel told her, who shall say? All I know is, that I used to look up to the gallery when I was a boy and see the two, for they stayed on in the choir after they had married, and I used to wonder what they thought about each other. Neither of them spoke often and I never heard them laugh. But Dorcas always offered me pie when I went to see Timothy. Timothy was the son and had pie three times a day and between, which moved the envy of other boys who seldom had it more than twice; pie and hot doughnuts. Daniel liked them hot, and there was always a smell of frying doughnuts in the house. Strength is not born of lard and sugar and starch, and naturally in due time, Dorcas took to her bed and died slowly and decorously of old-fashioned consumption. Prissy Ann Perkins nursed her and kept the house, and being also a champion pie maker, had always a piece on the little stand by the bed. Timothy generally ate it when he ran in, or some caller took it, for Dorcas wanted less and less of anything and after awhile died."

"But Daniel, he is in the graveyard, too," said Dr. Martha's soft little voice, after a period in which it was plain Dr. Scarborough had fallen into a reverie and was not to be depended on to finish the tale unless reminded.

"Daniel? Oh! Daniel continued to eat pie till his bones were brittle as peppermint stick, and there was no health left in him, and came to a state in which he could eat no more and then he died; and when the cousins came over the hill from Chester to the funeral, and asked Prissy what Daniel died of, she made answer, 'Daniel died because his digeesters was all wore out.' So they were, little Martha, so they were, and so are most of the 'digeesters' in these houses."

"And Timothy?" said Dr. Martha, after another pause, in which she puzzled out as usual an interpretation of what she had heard.

"Timothy took the store at the Corners where Simmons is now; was as silent and considerably less efficient than his father, and would have died of too much pie in the same manner if he had not been drowned in Black river in a spring freshet which carried away the bridge. He tried to ford at a shallow place, but was swept down by the current, and so ended the dynasty of the Plummers and Pikes."

"Would he have lived if he hadn't had so much pie?"

"Hardly, child. Drowning hurried the matter, but he was going the same way his father and mother had traveled before him."

"Does eating right things make people live a long time and be well?"

"Nothing less. Good food, good water, good air and sunshine. There you have four natural methods of defying doctors. Medicine is nonsense except for an emergency. Always remember that. No rational being need take it."

"Could there be such a thing as a food doctor?"

"Heaven send the time when all doctors will be food doctors!" said Dr. Scarborough fervently.

"Then that is the kind I will be when I am big," returned Dr. Martha after another pause. "I didn't tell you before, but I'm going to be a doctor, and cure everybody."

"You'll have to, for the old graveyard is full, and it wouldn't answer to start a new one just as you are ready to begin practice," said her father with a twinkle; and then he was silent till Dolly stopped of her own will at the gate, and Miss Malvina looked from the open window with the words:

"Hurry, Nathan, we've got the first cherry pie of the season."

THE ALCOHOLIC COMMISSION OF INQUIRY—A BIT OF HISTORY.

BY AARON M. POWELL.

The bill now pending in both Houses of Congress to provide for a national commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic has been before Congress since 1872, or about twenty years. In the Senate of the Forty-second Congress, January 9, 1872, Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, presented a petition for a national commission of inquiry, and on the 7th of February, 1872, Senator Pomeroy, of Kansas, introduced at the request of the American Temperance Commission—a small temperance committee—a bill to provide for a commission of inquiry concerning the alcoholic liquor traffic. The bill was read twice and referred to the Judiciary Committee, but was not reported again to the Senate and no further action was taken upon it in the first session of the Forty-second Congress.

In the succeeding session of the Forty-second Congress, petitions were presented from the National Temperance Society, which has since been chiefly responsible for the commission measure, and from other temperance organizations which have joined in the petitioning. On January 10, 1873, Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, introduced, at the request of the National Temperance Society, a bill to provide for the proposed liquor traffic commission which was referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws.

In the House of Representatives, on the 20th of January, 1873, a commission bill was introduced by the Hon. Wm. H. Lamport, of New York, but beyond the introduction of bills and their reference to committees, no further action was taken by the Forty-second Congress upon the commission measure. In the Forty-third Congress petitions were again presented from the National Temperance Society, the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, national and state, and a large number of temperance and religious bodies, and bills were introduced in both the Senate and the House of Representatives to provide for the proposed commission.

In the Senate a bill was introduced by Senator Howe, of Wisconsin, and referred to the Committee on Finance, and subsequently reported favorably by Senator Wright, of Iowa, and passed for the first time by the Senate, March 6, 1874, by a vote of twenty-six to twenty one. Of the twenty-six yeas, all were Republicans; of the twenty-one nays, four were Republicans and seventeen were Democrats. It is an interesting, historic fact in connection with this long-pending measure, that the last vote given in the Senate by the Hon. Charles Sumner was for this Commission Bill on the occasion of this first yea and nay vote in the Senate.

In the House of Representatives of the Forty-third Congress, the Commission Bill was introduced by Hon. Wm. P. Frye, of Maine, and referred, with a large number of petitions, to the Committee on Judiciary, and was subsequently reported favorably by Hon. L. P. Poland, of Vermont. The bill was not reached in its regular order, on the House calendar. Two unsuccessful requests were made for unanimous consent to have it taken up and passed, and a motion to take it up out of its regular order and pass it, requiring two-thirds vote, was lost by yeas 133, nays 83, not the necessary two-thirds. Of those voting on this motion to take up the bill out of its regular order and pass it, were 127 Republicans, 1 Independent Republican, 1 Liberal Republican and 2 Democrats; voting in the negative were 62 Democrats, 20 Republicans and 1 Liberal Republican.

In the Forty-fourth Congress, the Commission Bill was re-introduced, reported favorably and again passed January 24, 1876, by a vote of thirty seven to twenty. No action was taken upon the bill in the House of Representatives beyond referring it to the Ways and Means Committee.

In the Forty-Fifth Congress the bill was again introduced, and in the Senate referred to the Committee on Finance, of which Senator Morrill, of Vermont, was then chairman, was favorably reported, and passed for the third time, March 11, 1878, by a vote of twenty-nine to nineteen. In the House of Representatives the bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee, but no further action thereon was taken by the committee or the House.

In the Forty sixth Congress the Commission Bill was again introduced in the Senate and referred to the Committee on Finance, of which Senator Bayard, of Delaware, was then chairman, but it was not reported, and no further action was taken by the Senate. In the House of Representatives of the Forty-sixth Congress, through the efforts of Hon. Wm. P. Frye, of Maine, a Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic was ordered by the House, May 16, 1879, by a vote of one hundred and twenty-eight to ninety-nine, to which committee the petitions and bill for a Commission of Inquiry were referred. The committee reported the Commission Bill favorably, and it was placed upon the House calendar, but was not reached in the regular order of business during that Congress. In the Forty-seventh Congress the Commission Bill was passed by the Senate for the fourth time, by a vote of thirty-four to nineteen. In the House of Representatives it was reported favorably and placed upon the calendar, and a motion made by Mr. Joyce, of Vermont, February 6, 1882, to suspend the rules and pass the bill, was lost by a vote of one hundred and twelve to ninety-eight, not the necessary two-thirds, and the bill which could not be reached in the regular order of business failed to pass.

In the Forty-eighth Congress, the bill again passed the Senate for the fifth time by a vote of twenty-five to sixteen. In the House of Representatives the bill was reported adversely by a majority (Democratic) of the select committee on the alcoholic liquor traffic, with a minority (Republican) report in its favor. No further action was taken upon it by the House.

In the Forty ninth Congress the bill again passed the Senate, March 18, 1885, this time without a division and without a dissenting vote. In the House of Representatives the Senate bill was reported adversely, with a minority report in its favor.

In the Fiftieth Congress, reported favorably from the Committee on Education and Labor, Senator Blair, chairman, the Senate again passed the Commission Bill for the seventh time, and without a division; but in the House it again failed to reach a vote.

In the Fifty-first Congress it was reported favorably in both the Senate and the House of Representatives, but failed to pass in either body. No vote was taken upon it in the Senate; in the House, just on the eve of the adjournment at about midnight, a motion was made to take up the bill and pass it out of the regular order, which required a two-thirds vote, and there were ninety-seven yeas and one hundred and nineteen nays; not voting one hundred and thirteen. Of those voting for the bill there were, Republicans, ninety-three, Democrats, four; against, Democrats, one hundred and four, Republicans, twenty-two.

In the Fifty-second Congress the bill was again introduced in both the Senate and the House. In the Senate it was reported favorably, and was put upon the calendar. It was reached once and was passed, but in a very thin Senate, and at the request of Senators Voorhees and Vest, the action was reconsidered and further action deferred until a full Senate with opportunity for discussion. In the House the bill was referred to the select committee on the alcoholic liquor traffic. The committee gave a hearing to friends of the measure, but Congress adjourned on August 5, without further action on the bill.

This is a condensed history of the measure in the several Congresses of the past twenty years. Although the bill calls for no technical legislation concerning the liquor traffic, and only contemplates an exhibit of the underlying facts of the great national drink problem, it has been accepted as a measure for prohibition. It has also been made a party measure, most of the votes for it being Republican, and most of the votes against, Democratic. It is well understood by both the friends and the opponents of the proposed inquiry, that if it be made thorough and impartial, it must, of course, bear heavily against the drink traffic, and against the license system, high and low, as a legislative method of dealing with it. The petitions for the measure for the twenty years from the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, National and state, Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, the various state temperance societies, the National Temperance Society, and many religious bodies, represent an enormous aggregate. But over and against there is the opposition of the brewers, distillers, and the various liquor sellers' organizations, which have a tremendous grip upon the congressional representatives of both the great political parties, and for the time being they are masters of the situation. The Commission measure is accepted by the liquor men as an attempt to turn an electric light upon their business, from which they naturally enough shrink, and they are shrewd enough to see that with the well-authenticated facts concerning it brought to the general public notice, a powerful incentive would be furnished for additional restrictive and prohibitory legislation, both state and national.

Though nearly two decades have passed since the initiation of the Commission measure, and the sought for official investigation of the liquor traffic has not yet been obtained, the prolonged effort has by no means been lost. Indeed, its educational value has been very great. It has sufficed also to keep the liquor question continually before Congress. The very reasonableness of the measure, asking for no technical legislation, but simply an exhibit of facts important to every one, whatever the technical view as to methods of dealing with the liquor traffic, has helped to reveal in a strong light the dominance of the liquor power in the national government.

Of course, if there had been the will, there would have been made a way for the passage of this measure on many occasions in the Congresses which have intervened since 1872. During the period of President Grant's occupancy of the White House, on one cold winter night the stables which sheltered his beautiful horses were burned; the horses were rescued alive, but they were, for the time, shelterless. On the following day some humane member of Congress introduced in the House a bill to provide new stables for President Grant's horses. In an incredibly short space of time, I believe without a precedent in the legislation of Congress in previous years, the bill was passed by the House of Representatives, sent over to the Senate, hurriedly passed by the Senate, sent into the President's room, President Grant being in waiting therein to give it his official signature, and in less than one hour this bill had become a law, and Congress had appropriated money for the needed stables for the President's exposed horses. This was good for the horses, and eminently creditable to the humane Senators and Representatives. We will hope that the time is not very far distant when there may be a kindred feeling with reference to exposed humanity under the ravages of the drink traffic, and that then Congress will not hesitate to pass the Commission of Inquiry Bill, and will also be prepared speedily to initiate other national prohibitory measures under the operation of which the brewery, distillery and saloon may be speedily and forever banished from our land.

New York City.

MADAME SEVERINE.

BY BILLA NORTON.

If Parisian high life is not yet committed to socialism, many prominent society people are socialists, and some noted socialists are in society.

On one of the opening days of the French salon, pushed about in the crowd, vainly attempting to get a peep at the pictures, I was conscious for an instant of a brilliant smile, a firm, magnetic hand grasp, and turned to follow with my eyes the head, crowned with its rich mass of blonde hair, and the retreating figure of Madame Séverine.

Paris, as well as Victor Hugo, likes antitheses. There is a piquancy in the contrasts suggested by some of its notables that does not detract in the least from their fascination. You might have guessed the exceptional literary talent of that graceful, elegant Parisienne, but I am very sure the vision would not have led you to dream, for one moment, of socialism. Yet that perfectly gloved hand wields one of the most brilliant and formidable pens that socialists have at their command, and the woman who had just left me under the spell of her charm is one of the ablest and staunchest friends of the poor and oppressed. In Madame Séverine we have not the pariah-like Louise Michel, but the finished woman of the world, a member of society, with whose weapons she does some very delicate and telling fencing.

There are some natures capable of the highest career in life—devotion to the good of others—that yet need the touch of some masterful spirit, some heroic character to awaken in them their profound energies, and to captivate their imaginations, which are ever at unrest in the commonplace. Madame Séverine found in Jules Vallès the one who was to do all this for her. She was a woman grown before she met him by chance, in Brussels. Brought up in Paris, in the retirement and simplicity of a modest bourgeois home, the gifted woman was fascinated at once by his nature, intellectual and daring her own.

Jules Vallès, son of a university professor, a distinguished journalist, was a man of dauntless courage, whose life was full of variety and strife. His violent polemics brought him into antagonism with the second empire. He had his share of persecution, became known as a bitter enemy of social oppressions and a merciless opponent, and has left some powerful and graphic pages on the miseries of life.

Madame Séverine with untiring ardor keeps up the warfare. The energetic invective of the master becomes a fine withering scorn under the pen of the disciple, and the many-sided woman's nature gives delightful richness and grace to the thought, expressed in a style which is elegant without being effeminate, and forcible without harshness. Whatever is signed "Jacqueline" or "Renée," her pseudonyms in two leading Parisian journals, or "Séverine" in the Figaro, is always worth reading. Besides writing for numerous other periodicals, Madame Séverine was for a time editor of the Cri du Peuple, bound volumes of which stand upon her bookshelves. Between their covers are many articles from her pen, articles quivering with pity, burning with wrath over wrong and misery, or melting in exquisite tenderness over some act of heroism or charity.

The memory of the man who shaped her life is to this woman almost a religion. Her rooms, full of souvenirs of socialistic heroes, have many reminders of the beloved master, including several portraits and a bronze bust.

It was by the fading light of a late afternoon that we once entered the salon of Madame Séverine. The gracious hostess gave us a cordial welcome, and fell to talking in a most sympathetic and agreeable voice of what is nearest her heart, her work. There was an exhilarating vitality and force in her every sentence and movement, tempered by that grace which is inborn with a French lady. In her eager, captivating, but most natural manner, as if talking with old friends, she told us of her early life, her meeting Vallès, her conversion to socialism, her trials as a journalist, her hopes and discouragements as a reformer, the "little done, the undone vast," and of the sympathy she felt for America, which was doing so much for the workingman. The minutes flew, an hour had gone, and we were still listening. We had read the clear and vigorous articles of this, before unknown, personality, and the echo of their unspoken words, heard only by the mind, added a harmonic chord to the melody of the interview.

One has said of Madame Séverine that she is, above all, sincere. Her opponents grant her this, even such an one as the Duc de la Rochefaucauld. You feel it true in the grasp of her hand, the splendid glance of her beautiful eyes, and the earnestness that does not leave her even when her mobile face is in repose.

Her motto is, Bread for all. Perhaps nothing could give a better idea of the woman and her work. No round-aboutness, no gilded fancies, no pet theories, are hers; but a woman of purpose, clear, simple, unanswerable as logic—such is Madame Séverine.

Reforms are not always blessed with leaders of talent. Good causes are too often burdened with incompetent and one-sided advocates. It is a double pleasure to find in an enthusiast a person of solid ability, an "all-round" man or woman.

Madame Séverine knows many things besides socialism. She is an authority on many a literary and artistic subject. This is due in part, doubtless, to her life spent in the most educating of old-world cities, but also to a well-balanced mind and a healthy physique. She does not mistake her purpose for the whole of life, nor allow what she holds most sacred to blind her to the ideals of others.

In an article written to controvert slanders of Victor Hugo, she speaks in her most characteristic way in defense of the dead genius. Her style, limpid and rhythmic, becomes almost lyric under the majestic scorn that shapes it; the thought, rich and varied, is controlled by finished form, worthy in its grandeur and simplicity of a Greek poet.

Art, literature, history, life are all thrown into the crucible of a brilliant imagination. A strong, well-trained mind, fused and welded at will by a fiery spirit. What wonder if the image of the poet she speaks for is worthy of him and of her!

One lays down such an article as one goes from the presence of her who wrote it, with the deepened conviction that there is no eloquence in life like the eloquence of purpose, no eloquence in literature like the eloquence of ideas.

Shoreham, Vt.

If the people about you are carrying on their business or their benevolence at a pace which drains the life out of you, resolutely take a slower pace; be called a laggard, make less money, accomplish less work than they, but be what you were meant to be and can be. You have your natural limit of power as much as an engine—ten-horse power or twenty or a hundred. You are fit to do certain kinds of work, and you need a certain kind and amount of fuel, and a certain kind of handling.—George S. Meriam

WHY SHOULD NOT A WOMAN BE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES?

[Lawyer John Hooker's letter in THE UNION SIGNAL in the early spring brought many responses into this office in answer to his startling proposition, as stated in the above title. It may enliven the monotony of these dog-days for our clientelle to laugh over them, to grow indignant, or to inflate with a noble purpose—according to the "p'int o' view." At any rate here they are, invoiced at their full value.—EDS.]

KNOW NOTHING.

"Why should not a woman be President of the United States?" With emphasis on the should, I must reply I don't know. JOHN LLOYD THOMAS.

New York City.

ANTIQUITY OBTRUDES.

"Why should not a woman be President of the United States?" No reason save hoary-headed prejudice.

REV. D. C. KELLEY, D. D.

Springfield, Tenn.

NO REASON.

I know of no reason why a woman should not be President of the United States. JOHN P. ST. JOHN.

Olathe, Kan.

ENGLAND'S PRECEDENT.

I should like to say that I see no reason why, as a woman holds the reins of government in what I naturally consider to be one of the foremost nations of the world, a woman should not be equally the President of the United States. ISABEL SOMERSET.

Eastnor Castle.

WAIT.

To be frank, I do not see any urgent reason why a woman should be President of this country yet. Plain suffrage is enough to begin with. Let us wait till we get that before we agitate the question of official position. That will come in its own time.

ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

Andover, Mass.

CANNOT GET THE NOMINATION.

I know of no reason why a woman may not be President of the United States, except that she is not likely to get a nomination by either of the great political parties, one of which is sure to win. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to hinder a woman's being President, Senator or Representative. She lacks only votes to enable her to reach the highest offices in the gift of the electors. I might well add neither of these, the nomination nor the votes, is she likely to receive so long as all women are political nonentities! Given woman's enfranchisement and her chances will equal a man's for places of honor, trust and emolument!!

Rochester, N. Y. SUSAN B. ANTHONY.

WHY NOT?

A woman for President? Mrs. President? Why not? There is nothing but ignorance and prejudice that bars the way.

Here is a land where custom crystallizes in a day, where precedents have no precedence, where the dominance of character, even in politics, is prophetically assured by the growing intelligence and conscientiousness of the Christian church, and where the Bible, as God's book for woman, is before the Committee of Millions for its final revision.

It may not be that a woman will sit in the chair of state at Washington until the Christian church shall place her there. But in that hour theology will dare to go even to the farthest verge of Paul's inspired audacity. Gal. 3:28: "There can be neither Jew nor Greek, there can be neither bond nor free, there can be no male and female, for ye all are one man in Christ Jesus."

Boston, Mass. REV. ALFRED A. WRIGHT.

THE CONSTITUTION WOMAN'S VINDICATOR.

"Why should not a woman be President of the United States?"

A woman is eligible, under the Constitution, to be President of the United States. This is so clear that there can be no doubt that if electoral votes were cast for a woman, they would be counted. Always clear, it is doubly so, since Congress, by the admission of Wyoming into the Union, solemnly declared that, by the law of nature, women are not to be held excepted from the rule of republican equality which the Constitution prescribes. No legal impediments to the recognition of the right of women to political equality have ever found place in the National Constitution. State legislatures, in directing the manner of the appointment of presidential electors, are not in any way affected by the state Constitution. This last doctrine was settled during the war in the case of the Soldiers' Voting Acts in several states, and with the unanimous approval of the Supreme Courts in New Hampshire and Vermont. Nor is there any practical reason why a woman should not be President of the United States and worthily fill the office.

The right of women to vote will be recognized in presidential elections before it is in state elections, and fortunately so, because into no other election enters so much of patriotic sentiment and of unselfish concern for the large and permanent interests of the republic. Women should learn to look to the National Constitution and its republican principles for the vindication of their rights.

EDWIN C. PIERCE, Atty.

Providence, R. I.

SUBJECTION OF MAN'S LOWER NATURE MEANS JUSTICE FOR WOMEN.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Ever since reading Mr. Hooker's letter and yours of March 3, I have racked my brain to find a reason why a woman might not be President of these United States, and I have not succeeded. On the contrary I find many why she should. History shows that many of the most illustrious, successful and best sovereigns of the world have been women—then why may they not act as President if they have the brains and the people desire their services? I do not think this people would suffer much if some women I know occupied the White House as the President and chief executive of the councils of this nation. Our own W. C. T. U. President's last annual address at Boston covers the whole ground, and sounds the keynote through which we are to solve the question of civilization and human progress. The truth is, all this unjust discrimination against woman as a political factor is a relic of barbarism, the continuance of the brutal idea that might makes right. Just in proportion as men subdue their lower nature and bring it in subjection to their higher will they deal justly with woman and each other.

Cataract, Ind. ZERELDA WALLACE.

A GRAND OBJECT LESSON.

1. Why should not a woman be President? It needs no change of the Federal Constitution to make a woman eligible to the presidency. All that it requires is that the President be a citizen; and that women are citizens as much as men is an indisputable proposition. One of our ablest Attorney-Generals declared, before the war and before the later amendments, that they are so under the original Constitution; while the fourteenth amendment puts the matter beyond controversy by expressly declaring them to be so. It is therefore clear that the way is open for the election of a woman to the presidency whenever the people desire it.

2. Nothing will redeem our politics from uncleanness, nothing will rescue us from the grip of the saloon-keeper on the one hand and the plutocrat on the other, but the admission of women to equal power with men at the polls. This requires legislation, and in some cases a Constitutional Amendment; but the elevation of a woman to the presidency would at once give us, not only a grand object lesson on the whole woman suffrage question, but immediately a clean and honest administration, above partisanship and all those low ends and methods that have been the curse of our politics. If some grand woman (and we have many such) could be our President, she would be a mother to the people, and under her matronly administration old party lines would, in a great measure, fade out, and we should fuse into a stronger union and a higher patriotism. It would be a great blessing if present party lines could be wiped out and we could begin anew.

3. The Prohibition party declares for woman suffrage. Why did it not lead off and nominate a woman for President? I know a woman who, if she could have been nominated, would have attracted thousands of votes that the party will not be likely to get, and if she could have been elected she would have given us an administration that would have ranked with Washington's and Lincoln's, and would have filled a great place in our American history. I am one of the old Simeons who would have said, "Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

Hartford, Conn. JOHN HOOKER, Lawyer.

AMERICA NOT SUFFICIENTLY CIVILIZED.

I can think of no reason why a woman should not be President of the United States except the fact that the United States have not yet become a thoroughly civilized and enlightened constituency. So long as one-half of all American citizens are taxed without representation and governed without consent solely because they are women, so long a woman as President would be, indeed, what Wendell Phillips would have called "a glorious inconsistency." Yet that inconsistency, after all, would be more apparent than real. For in all ages and in all countries women have sometimes been rulers though not voters. Under the theocracy Deborah, the wife of Lapidoth, judged the children of Israel, her husband included, and led their armies to victory. She governed with the commission and by the authority of the Almighty. Every nation in Europe recalls among its greatest and most illustrious monarchs the names of women. In England, Elizabeth, in Germany, Maria Theresa, in Russia, Catherine, in Spain, Isabella. Even in France, in spite of the legal prohibition of the Salique law, Joan of Arc and Madame Maintenon were "powers behind the throne." When civil service reform and woman suffrage have done their perfect work, Americans will welcome some splendid woman to the presidency. I predict that she will not pick quarrels with sister republics nor twist the tail of the British lion in order to secure a renomination.

Boston, Mass. HENRY B. BLACKWELL.

TRY THE PHILANTHROPIST.

Why should not a woman be President of the United States? I shall say nothing about the silence of the Constitution and the technical difficulties of the case, but speak merely of the propriety and wisdom of making a woman President. There are occupations for which men are much better adapted than women; occupations for which women are much better adapted than men, and positions which may be filled equally well by either men or women.

The chief executive officer of a nation should have three qualifications: high character, sound judgment, and representative dignity. This union of qualities is comparatively rare among either men or women, and whenever it is found in a high degree of excellence is more important than the question of sex. The reigns of Elizabeth and Victoria will compare favorably with those of any two kings in English history. Victoria's five predecessors were all inferior or mischievous sovereigns. The first two of the five were ignorant, but comparatively harmless. George III was a narrow-minded bigot whose extreme notions of royal prerogative dismembered the empire and laid upon it a burden of debt under which it still staggers. George IV and William IV, by their shameless profligacy brought monarchy into utter disrepute. One or two more such reigns would undoubtedly have led to a change in the form of government.

To Queen Victoria is due the credit of having revived respect for the sovereign and prolonged the existence of the ancient constitution. This great work has been done without any exhibition of extraordinary genius, but simply by average good sense and ordinary womanly virtues. There are thousands of women in England and in America who are intellectually and morally the equals of Queen Victoria, and who, if placed in a position similar to hers, would, by exhibiting the same virtue and good sense, give dignity and stability to the government.

A sovereign or President should be the head of the nation and not the leader of a party. He is irremovable, either for life or for a term of years, and therefore should act on the advice of members of his cabinet who may be held responsible, and removed immediately, if their acts are prejudicial. Queen Victoria has been a wise and conservative arbitrator among contending factions, and has, perhaps, better filled the throne than Mr. Gladstone, Lord Salisbury, or any other party leader or man of pronounced opinions could have done.

In our own country our Presidents have generally been chosen as representatives of party interests, and have often been unable to divest themselves, when in office, of the habits and prejudices that years of partisanship have ingrained. From the nature of the case most men of ability are identified with party or class interests. There would be strong opposition to the candidacy for the office of president of a representative railroad man, banker, manufacturer, or broker. In the same way there is unfitness in the selection of a mere politician. We should have candidates who have exhibited character and ability without class or political bias. There are few such people in the country, and at least half of that small number are women. I think it would be a good plan to drop the politician and try the philanthropist.

Evanston, Ill. C. W. PEARSON.

PRECEDENTS IN WOMAN'S FAVOR.

I believe there is no reason why a woman should not occupy this high office, though explanations of the fact that no woman has yet occupied it are abundant; and many obstacles still obstruct woman's path en route to the presidency.

First, either the constitution must be re-interpreted, or what is probably an easier task, it must be amended. Women must vote on equal terms with men before they can enjoy equal chances for official place.

Analogy is one of the safest, the most conservative methods of reasoning. From Assyria to England, among the brightest pages in the histories of monarchies, absolute and limited, are those devoted to the reigns of queens. When one considers the growth of nations and the achievements of peoples under queenly guidance, at the same time taking into account the numerical proportion of actual scepter-bearing queens to kings, there is no disputing the proposition that the power to govern seems a peculiarly feminine endowment.

Many people find it easy to dismiss the testimony upon this point of such royal witnesses as Zenobia, Catherine of Russia, Eleanor, Elizabeth and Victoria, with the reflection that these women were mere names, powerless figure-heads, whose respective counselors and ministries were the real sovereigns. In the same manner, and with equal support from historians may Solomon, Pharaoh, Charlemagne, Louis XIV, Charles V, and Henry VIII be set aside. Emperors and kings have ministers and cabinets, as well as empresses and queens. If such councils are abler under the latter than under the former, it must be only because women have more discernment in choosing advisers, and more ability in eliciting their best aid, than men have.

Although Americans are fond of saying that the President of the United States exercises more power than any reigning monarch the subjects of some of the monarchs might enter counter testimony; and presidents, like kings, have cabinets.

So far the legal and the military professions have furnished most of our presidents. The military profession must lose its prestige as civilization advances and robs its followers of their occupation; its glory is even now steadily on the wane, despite the Chilian episode and the bluster aroused by the Bering Sea controversy. The legal profession is even now open to women, who in it are making their way to the top. If women may learn civil law, the same faculties will acquire a knowledge of international law.

After all, a President is not a law-maker; his function is executive, and the development of executive ability in women is a leading characteristic of this last half of the nineteenth century. The discovery of this ability in women, the freeing it from conventional shackles, and the application of it to life, in all its various departments, has wrought as many changes in our modes of thought and existence as has the discovery and the application of electricity within the same period. It is generally acknowledged that as yet we have only hints of the transforming power of the electric fluid. I believe the executive power of woman is as far from having received its ultimate test and measure.

I will conclude my discursive answer to this question by two others: Why has a woman not been President? When will a woman occupy that office?

MAY WRIGHT SEWALL.

Indianapolis, Ind.

CORRESPONDENCE

THE WHITE RIBBON WOMEN IN ENGLAND.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—On Thursday, July 28, the first annual meeting of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the new offices in Victoria street, Westminster. Special interest and much enthusiasm were called forth at the dedication of the new offices to the World's work. A representative gathering of ladies, among whom was Mrs. Demorest of New York, listened with warm appreciation to the president's address which followed a helpful Bible reading by Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith.

Lady Henry Somerset, after reading a cable message from Miss Willard, which was affectionately received by those present, referred to the unique importance of the occasion, its mighty future bearing upon woman's work, its present signification and the probable consequence of untold good likely to follow the action taken at that time. Other questions besides the temperance question formed an integral part of all social reform; therefore, at a critical time like the present, English women should be prepared on all sides to battle for truth, so that the hydra-headed evil of state legalized vice should never again disgrace the statute books of the land. "Unless a mainspring is touched," said Lady Henry Somerset, "no real force will come from the woman's movement." Temperance was without doubt essential to all Christian work, but the World's work embraced all questions relating to the uplifting of the human race. Therefore, it was necessary to establish that work in England on the soundest and most comprehensive basis. Referring to the effects of our system of civilization in India, Lady Henry gave an impassioned and eloquent utterance of her deepest convictions regarding the evil that is accomplished in that empire through English example and corrupt habits, adding that the first white ribbon missionary from England was shortly going out with messages of hope and love from the white ribbon women of the world to their sisters in India who are still in the dark shadow of a cruel bondage.

A short devotional meeting followed which was brought to a close by Madam Antoinette Stirling rising up and quite unexpectedly singing Mendelssohn's inspired air, "Oh, Rest in the Lord."

THE NEW OFFICES OF THE W. C. T. U.

The offices are situated in a fine block of buildings about five minutes' walk from Westminster Abbey, and the House of Parliament; the neighborhood being one of historic interest, English white-ribboners feel very proud of the locality. The white ribbon work is well centered here. The offices are tastefully decorated with a pretty art tint of blue paper, beneath which is a deep dado painted in chocolate color. On the walls are photos of American leaders, with the framed presentation addresses to the British President. A delightful "homey" feeling pervades the place already, and it was worth something to see the president installed in her private office surrounded by her officers and helpers, planning out the future campaign.

Yesterday Lady Henry Somerset wore a little bunch of mauve pansies tied with white ribbon. No one in the audience, however, knew that those sweet flowers were placed on the president's table by Miss Helen Hood in memory of "Yolande." Miss Hood, who is much appreciated by English white-ribboners, was made local recording secretary for the W. W. C. T. U. Her wide experience and extensive knowledge of methods make her invaluable to us; and the force and helpfulness of her personality have greatly impressed her friends in England.

We are already enrolling members in the Frances Willard Band and feel full of glad hope for our future work.

A LONDON WHITE RIBBONER.

London, Eng.

THE REMOVAL OF THE SOUTHERN UTES.

ALBION, MICH., July 27, 1892.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In response to Mary F. Lovell's suggestion in THE UNION SIGNAL of July 14, I wrote to Senator Stockbridge and to our Congressman, J. C. Barrows. I have just received the enclosed letter from Senator Stockbridge, which may interest the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL. Very truly yours,

ROBERT S. AVANN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 25, 1892.

Robert S. Avann, Esq., Albion, Mich.

MY DEAR SIR:—In reply to your favor of July 22, I would say that we have not and shall not report favorably the bill for the removal of the Southern Utes. A subcommittee of our committee may visit them before winter, but no action will be taken looking to their removal without our committee is entirely satisfied that it is not only their wish, but well for them to be removed from their present location. I am, very truly,

FRANCIS B. STOCKBRIDGE.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM DISCRIMINATES AGAINST WOMEN.

[The following correspondence but emphasizes the necessity for the combination of all organizations of women, in a mighty stream of influence, with such political bodies as do recognize their citizenship. Making use of woman's power to help, and, after "buttering" them generously, tossing the sisters, like last winter's overcoat, on the National rag-pile, is not a progressive movement.—EDS.]

GRAND RAPIDS, June 29, 1892.

HON. JOHN B. FORAKER:—The Political Equality Club of Grand Rapids, Mich., numbering sixty-two members, has caused to be read with careful consideration the Republican platform as formulated and adopted at Minneapolis, June 10.

With earnest scrutiny they have carefully weighed every word of the declaration of principles of the party which declares for progress and reform. They have hereby instructed the proper officers to ask you, as chairman of the Resolutions Committee and entirely conversant with its full meaning, if, in the declaration beginning "We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot in all public elections," etc., etc. (the full text of which is herein appended)* your committee considered that women were citizens and a part of "all the people"—whose "free and honest ballot," "the just and equal representation as well as their just and equal protection under the laws are," etc., etc.—to whom the Republican party gave their guaranty "to protect in every state."

We believe we are people and citizens of the United States, and are deeply concerned in the full meaning of the phraseology of this resolution. If your committee and party recognize that women are entitled to and shall be secured in the exercise of the same rights granted to the ignorant foreigner, the emancipated slave, and the Indian, that party can command our enthusiasm, our organized activity as well as our allegiance. Awaiting a direct and positive reply to our serious question, we sign ourselves, yours respectfully, EMILY B. KETCHAM,

Pres. Mich. Equal Suffrage Ass'n.

MARY G. PEARSALL,

Pres. Political Equality Club.

ALICE GRAHAM, Sec.

The following reply was received:

July 2, 1892.

MRS. EMILY B. KETCHAM:

President Michigan Equal Suffrage Association, Grand Rapids, Mich.

DEAR MADAM:—In answer to your letter of the 29th ult., I can only say, speaking for myself, that I do not understand the words you quoted to include women, and, therefore, to amount to a declaration in favor of female suffrage. Whether or not any of the other members of the committee understood them differently, I am not advised. With sentiments of high regard, I remain,

Very truly yours, etc., J. B. FORAKER.

*We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot in all public elections, and that such ballot shall be counted and returned as cast; that such laws shall be enacted and enforced as will secure to every citizen, be he rich or poor, native or foreign born, white or black, the sovereign right guaranteed by the constitution; the free and honest popular ballot, the just and equal representation of all the people as well as their just and equal protection under the laws, are the foundation of our Republican institutions, and the party will never relax its efforts until the integrity of the ballot and the purity of elections shall be fully guaranteed and protected in every state.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

The following extract is taken from a very pertinent letter on the Temple addressed to the W. C. T. U. of Mississippi, by Miss Laura Stout, state editor, which appeared in the Jackson, Miss., Leader of last week. It is so well adapted to the unions in each of the states we reproduce it: "My sisters, what are you doing to help forward the payment for our magnificent Temple, which is the pride of our National union, and which stands as a great monument to woman's love and faith? Of course our state will have a tablet in Willard Hall. Many local unions of other states are contributing $100, and will thereby have their names enrolled upon its marble tablets. How many of our unions will strive to have a large personal share in this work, and also secure to our state a corresponding proportion of the pecuniary benefits which will result therefrom for the advancement of our own state work?" A president of a local union in a western state writes as follows: "Our union voted, a few weeks ago, to raise $100 for the Temple fund, and thus to have a tablet. Since then, at the state convention, we were informed that if we secured a tablet our state would not receive credit for the money as it otherwise should. I have looked in vain in THE UNION SIGNAL for information on this subject, and therefore appeal to you." If we should place a separate tablet in Willard Hall for each union that gives $100 it would cost about as much as they give us, but we are not doing it that way. The tablets for the unions are already placed in the great corridor leading to Willard Hall, the walls of which are covered with marble and divided into panels. At the top of each will be placed the name of a state with an explanatory inscription; underneath there will be room for hundreds of names, if necessary; each tablet will also contain name of union, county and town; every union that sends $100 will not only have its name on the panel, but its state union will receive pro rata one half the income derived from all gifts given by either unions or individuals in their state. We hope by September to commence placing on the tablets the names of unions which have given $100. Of course there will be space left on these for the names of unions that have not yet taken up the work of raising $100. We trust those unions who have still to find an unobstructed way to do this will set about it at once, so that they may have the gratification of seeing their names on their state tablet when they attend the Columbian Exposition next year. To see the name of a state on a tablet with only a few names of unions underneath would greatly chagrin the members of the W. C. T. U. of that state when they visit their incomparable National building.

***

Mrs. Emma Newbold Clements, Philadelphia, Pa., wife of the late Rev. Samuel Clements, D. D., sent some time ago $100, a memorial for her husband. The longing to have her name on a tablet beside that of the noble man, at whose side she walked so lovingly for many years, induced her to send $50 a few months ago towards a tablet for herself; she has now sent another $50 which completes her gift. Twenty-five dollars have been received from the New Jersey W. C. T. U. for a tablet in honor of Mrs. Denman; also $40 comes from the same state, which completes its $100 on Mrs. Downs' memorial tablet. T. C. Riley sends $1 with the following words: "From Abbie W. C. T. U. for the Jane E. Weeden tablet; Jane's name ought to be chiseled up high." One dollar comes from Galesburg, Ill., W. C. T. U., for the Jane E. Weeden tablet; and $2 for the same from Mrs. Geo. E. Shipman, Chicago, Ill.

***

The Eau Claire, Wis., W. C. T. U. sends $60, which completes its pledge of $100. Mrs. Eliza Hume writes that the greater part of this money was raised by mite-box collections. The one who had the most in her mite-box was Miss E. I. Frizzell; her box contained almost $15, double the amount raised by any other person. No doubt, you say, she was rich. No, she was the daughter of a Wesleyan minister who died six years ago leaving his daughter without a penny. Then you say she must have been strong and well, able to work and earn money. No the very opposite of this; she has been an invalid, confined to her bed for over ten years. In her little room on Water street, West Eau Claire, you will see nicely arranged a large assortment of little articles, from a fishhook or spool of thread to an album or handkerchief. Persons who know the noble woman purchase these articles from her, and in this way she earns an independent livelihood. 'She has done more temperance work,' says the Dunn county Herald, 'than most persons who are well and think they are zealous workers for the cause.' Not long since a friend called on Miss Frizzell and found her helpless upon her bed, but working, in her way, for temperance. She handed the friend a World's Petition to sign, for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and also presented a mite-box for a penny donation to the Temperance Temple." Mrs. Hume says: "Since the very beginning of the Temple work Miss Frizzell has taken a deep interest in it, praying for it, talking about it, working for it." We have given all this space to tell about this lovely Christian woman, in order to show that "where there is a will there is a way," and that no member of the W. C. T. U. is so poor and helpless but she can have a part in "Our House Beautiful," if she but sets about it.

***

A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, the Temple, Chicago, will secure a mite-box, descriptive card and bulletin; remember, all who fill a mite box ($2.65) before next April will receive a photographic group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple. All drafts should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh. All matters pertaining to the Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Carse.

FETTERED WINGS.

BY HELEN A. BUTLER.

The front door of a long, low farm-house stood wide open, and though the sun shone with unusual fervency this hot summer morning, there, on the shady western side of the house the air was still comparatively cool, and, oh, so sweet!

The yard was full of old fashioned flowers. Ragged robins gaily flaunted their red tatters; spicy pinks and southernwood, sweet Williams and balm perfumed the air for rods around. At each end of the high steps grew huge bunches of dark blue larkspur covered with great, buzzing, pollen-coated bees.

Two little girls came tripping through the hall and out at the door. Brown-haired Bessie's cheeks glowed pinker than ever with the heat and pleasure of a whole day's visit with Libbie, who lived at grandpa's all the time. A great contrast these little cousins presented; but they were devoted friends, and Libbie's somewhat reckless spirits were often tempered by Bessie's more quiet thoughtfulness. Just now they were brimful of delightful plans for the day. Each had a wide-mouthed bottle and an old iron spoon.

"You stay at one end of the steps and I'll go to the other," whispered Libbie, "and we'll soon catch one."

What could they be after! The bees? Yes; each little girl was intent upon capturing one of those big, yellow-banded honey-seekers. First, they put a few flowers in their bottles, then, watching until, in his hunt for honey, a big fellow had disappeared within a flower, they held the mouth of the bottle ready, and the spoon deftly applied sent him into his prison where he set up a tremendous buzzing in futile efforts to get out.

Holding the spoons snugly over the bottles, the little girls sat down on the steps to enjoy a good look at their prisoners, and discover, if possible, "how they got honey." But the bees were very perverse and seemed to have but the one idea of how to get away.

"Why," said Libbie, "he acts just like a drunken man stumbling along and falling over; his wings don't seem to do him a mite of good."

"Oh!" said Bessie, with a frightened look coming into her face, "that reminds me of something to tell you—something awful! Dan Becket hung himself last night in his mother's barn!"

Libbie uttered a little scream, and the two children edged nearer together as the awfulness of that act took form in their quick imaginations. Bees and bottles were forgotten as Bessie tried to tell what she knew of the dreadful story.

"Papa said it happened just before he came by the house on his way home from market, and that Dan's poor old mother was crying and telling the people how good her boy always was to her. And papa said if Dan could have let the drink alone he would have been a good man. I suppose he got 'scouraged trying," continued Bessie, stumbling a little over the long word.

"He was ever so good to poor folks and little children, and was real funny and pleasant. Sometimes I've heard him singing nice songs when he went by our house on his way to work. My papa said the poor fellow couldn't get past a saloon, no way, and that Dan said once he should be a happy man if there wasn't a saloon to be found. Oh! I wish there wasn't one in the whole world!"

"I wish that God would send His lightning right out of the sky and tear 'em all to pieces!" burst forth the excited Libbie.

"And that every bit of money the saloon-keepers get for their whisky would turn into great bumble bees and sting 'em just awful!" added Bess, with tears falling over her hot cheeks.

Then, reminded of their happy occupation, the little girls turned to the forgotten bottles and found that the prisoners had escaped and were using their wings again to some purpose.

Somehow the children dimly realized the incongruity of the brightness of the sweet old garden with the dark story just related, and could not continue their play just then; so, with one accord, they sought the loving arms of dear grandma, who would be sure to soothe and cheer the troubled little hearts. Gleeful laughs from the cool back kitchen soon showed how well she had succeeded.

Sadness or gloom abide but momentarily in the heart of a child. Not so with those of mature years, and a young man, resting on a lounge in the dark upper hall found it impossible for many days to shake off the depression caused by Bessie's sad story. At first he had listened in quiet enjoyment of the children's unique play and talk—they never dreaming that jolly Uncle Ray was so near, but the shocking story had reached his ear with startling distinctness and power.

He sprung to his feet, horror stricken. Through his mind swept swift memories of Dan Becket's careless, idle boyhood, when he had known him well; the weak-willed young man; his love for liquor and spasmodic efforts to combat it for the old mother's sake; the fitful gleams of a nobler nature—all these passed in review through Ray's mind.

With a groan he realized the utter ruin of another's life, and the desolated heart of a feeble old mother. Then visions of his own life-path came before his eyes. He had to confess that it was a downward one, and growing more dangerous. Few as yet suspected it; least of all, his honored parents. But it was true that their sailor son had learned to love the social glass, and more than once, when in some distant port, had drank until almost overcome.

"His wings don't seem to do him a mite of good" echoed in his ears. God was using an innocent child's playful words to bring an imperiled soul to a sense of its danger. Ensnared by a bottle! But the bees had escaped and so would he. The struggle with himself had begun and must go on.

Pacing back and forth in the dim silence, Raymond Lane vowed, then and there, with God's help, never to touch the accursed drink again.

Right here, we will say that he never did. The wings of purpose, enfeebled by desire, grew strong and uplifting once more, and, as the years went on, the young man mounted, with unfailing vigor, higher and higher in the path of purity and noble endeavor.

As tired little Bess said good-night to her mamma, she added, "Oh! I forgot to tell you that Uncle Ray has just come home, and he's splendider than ever, though I didn't see him much. He hugged me ever so tight and told me I was a precious little girl, and that my wings had begun to grow already. What did he mean by that, mamma?" But sleepy Bess was too near delightful Dreamland to wait for an answer.

Rockland, Maine.

HOW SHALL WE SPEND OUR MONEY?

BY ADDIE NORTHAM FIELDS.

Here we are, all ready for our talk. What shall we talk about?

Johnny says money. Very well. Bring our baking-powder temperance chart and let us study that first.

See that long, long column—$900,000,000 spent for drink, a little more than half as much for bread, and more for tobacco than for bread.

The money for public education is less than one-tenth of the liquor bill, clergymen's salaries less than one-fourth of the school money, and all the money for missions, home and foreign, less than half paid to preachers.

That means about $30 for every man, woman and child in the United States spent for liquor and tobacco, and only eleven cents for missions.

We do not spend any money for liquor and tobacco, so some one else must use our share. I wonder if we let some one else give our share for missions, too?

That long, black column that stands for our liquor bill for one year is the drunkard's drink bill. Then just think of the jails and penitentiaries, asylums, poor farms and all kinds of institutions that care for the people made criminals and paupers or in some way unable to care for themselves because of the drink.

We call this the sober man's drink bill, for the sober man has to pay most of the taxes to keep up these buildings and care for those who are kept there.

Why do men want to keep saloons and such places, and why will good men let them do it? Love of money, I fear, and the Bible says, "the love of money is the root of all evil." Let us be true patriots and love God and home and native land more than gold and silver.

Lager bier means lying beer, and we think that's a good name for it. Some people really think it makes them strong. You can get a loaf of bread or a glass of beer for a nickel. Which pays best? Leibig, a wise German, tells us that if a man drinks eight quarts of the best beer every day in a whole year it would contain only as much that would make him grow as there is in five pound loaves of bread. Boys and girls, get your pencils and paper and find out how much the beer would cost him, and how much the five loaves of bread? Which pays best? Then think of the poison he has taken in that seven hundred and thirty gallons of beer, so that the next hot day he is very likely to be overcome by the heat, and the next epidemic is almost sure to cause his death.

The Bible tells us of the evil of loving money. Who remembers another verse about money? "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not." Bread means to us anything that is food for our bodies, minds or souls. Is it not very foolish to spend our time and money for something that will do no good to us or to our friends?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Are your eyes open these summer days? If they are, and I am pretty sure that is the case, you see many things of interest. Will you not make a note of these as the vacation days go by, and then write a letter to the Cozy Corner about the most interesting things of all that you see? How many will remember this? Let us have a number of these vacation letters to brighten our column.

So many good answers were received to the riddle No. 71 that I must tell you about them. The correct answer, as you will see below is Ought, meaning duty. Four answers gave Bible; three said Truth and Faith; Jesus and Water were also named. These are all equally good answers as you will see on looking up the riddle and reading it over.

Aunt Jane

COZY CORNER LETTERS.

I am twelve years old and my brother is nine. Whenever we have Children's Day at Sunday-school, mamma selects the speeches out of THE UNION SIGNAL for us to recite. I thought I would like to tell the little folks in Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner that I won a gold medal for reciting "The Martyred Mother."

ANNIE LAURIE LEGGAT.

Tyler, Texas.

Our congratulations to the winner of a gold medal. May she wear it proudly and faithfully through all the coming years.

I am an L. T. L. boy, and wear the silver cross, and do all I can for temperance. RALPH PARTRIDGE.

Fair Haven, Minn.

This brief sentence from your letter, Ralph, is worth a volume. I am proud of our L. T. L. boys and girls.

I am secretary in the Band of Hope, and wish that the boys and girls who belong to a band would write to the Cozy Corner. I am twelve years old.

ROSA N. VICKERS.

Solomon City, Kansas.

Is this not a good suggestion? Aunt Jane would like to hear from the Band of Hope children.

Our grandmother takes THE UNION SIGNAL and we had a good time last night over the puzzles in the Cozy Corner. We send our replies with love to Aunt Jane and her nieces and nephews. MARGARET N. FOLGER, PHILIP W. DAVIS.

Fryeburg Highlands, Me.

I am glad you enjoyed the soft-shelled nuts, every one of which you cracked. Will you not provide some for our Cozy Corner, with the help of the dear grandmother, perhaps?

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

81.

CHARADE.

Ev'ry sublime object
Wonderful and grand,
Claiming your attention,
Will my first command.

When you go a-sailing,
If you don't take note
Of my second's coming—
Over goes your boat!

Pompous is my whole,
Don't you know the word?
Blazing sun it always brings!
That's what I have heard.

82.

BEHEADINGS AND CURTAILMENTS.

1. A quadruped beheaded is a quadruped.
2. Curtail a tree and leave to fasten.
3. A fruit beheaded is an adjective.
4. Curtail a fowl and leave a plant. WATT.

83.

TEMPERANCE PI.

"Ew era ginmoc ot eth screue dan het rutufe si rous!"

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, THE UNION SIGNAL, the Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

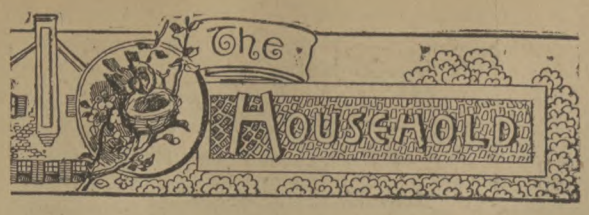
ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED JULY 28.

71. 'Tis not with costly money bought
'Tis wisdom's priceless, holy "Ought."

72. Loyal Temperance Legion.

73. Peach, each, beach, ache, chew.

Correct answers: Howard Hawley; Jessie Taylor; Jennie Greenhalgh; Otis D. Baldwin; Ora Palmer; Hugh and Meda Nunemaker; Mary B. Gates; H. Seville Spaulding; Clara F. Braman; Rebecca; Isabel; Helen Smith; Carrie A. Seager.



OUR INGLE NEUK.

BY J. E. RANKIN, D. D., LL.D.

Warm welcome to our ingle neuk,
Fa' to an' crack, or tak' a beuk,
  Or gae to knittin';
Or in the bleezin' embers leuk,
  While ye are sittin'.

O' hamely joys we ha'e our share,
For warl'y anes we dinna care
  Snap o' the finger;
Ha'e time enough for sang an' prayer,
  Though wark may linger.

We bring nae temptin' glass to stan',
Gi'in' its color in your han',
  Blushin' like syren;
To touch ye wi' transformin' wan',
  Your passions firin'.

We welcome gi'e a' neebor folk,
Wha stap to gi'e or tak' a joke,
  An tell the uncos;
But canna bide the gossips' talk,
  The leein' flunkies!

A' bairnies are fu' welcome here,
An' maun receive true hielan' cheer,
  An' ha'e their frolic;
We tak' nae risk o' fa' or tear,
  Or e'en o' colic.

An' auld folk, too, crownit wi' snaw,
Wi' lads an' lassies, strang an' braw,
  We like to mingle;
For happy be! 's the anely law,
  Beside our ingle.

Lang may God's angels hover roun'
To mak' it consecrated groun',
  Whate'er the weather;
Then what care we for soughin' soun'?
  We're snug thegither.

Washington, D. C.

A TALE OF A CIDER PRESS.

BY ELIZABETH CUMINGS.

(Concluded.)

The press proved to be a large and complicated hand affair, capable of doing excellent work, and the men in charge were using the cider simply to advertise it. The boys drank a long draught without stopping to taste the fluid. "Bah!" said Jim, when he had brought his lips together, "it tastes to me dreadfully sickish. I'd rather get the juice out of the apples with my own teeth."

They strolled away to look at the gigantic swings, which were slowly carrying people into the air in what looked like wood boxes, and then at the merry-go-rounds, in which, for a nickel, one could take a ride on a red or blue horse, as fancy dictated. Then there was a platform before a booth, in which sat four fat men, one with a bass viol, one with a cornet, one with a fiddle and one with a flute, discoursing the strains of "The Irish Washerwoman," while six people danced in a solemn way, as if it were a serious business. Beyond this dancing platform was a row of curious puppets. Above the head of each one appeared a name. There was Henry the Eighth, Mary, Queen of Scots, Captain Kidd and other celebrities, at which one could shoot with an arrow for a penny. The shot was never fatal, even when it hit what ought to have been a vital spot. The puppets recovered themselves at once, unless struck in the head, and then they went off into a doleful sideways cramp, and had to be adjusted. Perhaps if Jack and Jim had had some pennies and had been able to take their thoughts from their sensations, they would not have felt quite so ill from pain in the stomach and nausea. "I'll tell you what," said Peter, "father was sick a-drinking new cider yesterday, and he went back and drank some out of the hogshead. That's worked. He said it was splendid."

The Edgett boys knew very little about cider. Their father had planted his land almost exclusively to small fruits and vegetables, and part of the orchard was very old, and the other part was very young, so there had not been, till the past year, more apples than the family and stock needed. "Anything to feel better," said Jim, and they made their way back. For a moment the hogshead was alone. One had to reach far over now, after its contents. "My, that is good!" said Jim, when he had finished his pint cup, and he drank another. Then Jack and Peter each drank two cups. The cider sparkled and had a keen taste. They would have drunk more, but men had begun to come up.

In the meantime Mr. Edgett had seen the cider press and had taken in its utility. "Jest th' thing to grind up my extra fruit," he told himself, "and those boys o' mine hain't nothin' better to do mornin's afore they go to school than to work it. How much is it?" he asked the agent.

"Ten dollars, and cheap at the money."

"Oh!—ah!" grunted Mr. Edgett. "'Pears to me that's ruther dear."

"No; it's a patent concern," said the agent. "That's the bottom price; I've been a-sellin' 'em for fifteen dollars straight along back. But durin' the fair I'm advertisin' 'em, and I'll sell for ten."

Even the money that should have paid for the family dinner had dribbled out of Farmer Edgett's pocket. Fine corn, choice onion seed, a prize calf, and a new rake had consumed it. There remained, to be sure, the rent money, but that was going into the bank that very afternoon. He remembered the egg money, and it seemed to him that his wife had looked as well as the other women, when he had left her at the door of Floral Hall. Ten dollars of that money would buy that press, and the big crop of apples now on the trees would make cider enough to keep them in vinegar all winter, and cider, too, if cider they wanted. If they did not want it, there were plenty of people who would down in Zoar, where there was a hundred thousand people or more who did nothing but keep shops, or tinker with iron or wood, while farmers were wearing themselves into the ground for nothing. "I'll git that money, and she can buy her dress jest as well next month," he said to himself, and started to find his wife.

Floral Hall seemed to be in a ferment about something. One of the lounges held somebody, and at the door everybody was talking at once, ordering carriages, doctors and restoratives. "You're just the man we've been sendin' high and low for," said Mrs. Deacon Scrann putting out a long arm and grasping Mr. Edgett by the sleeve. "Your wife fainted dead away, a spell ago, and she'd ought to be taken home."

Just then there was great shouting near the race track and men began to run. "I should desire to know what's the matter now!" growled Mr. Edgett. Astonishment had produced in him a sort of anger. The stir on the track had saved him from exclaiming, "I'd like to know what she fainted for!"

"For the land's sake!" cried Mrs. Scrann the next instant, "if there isn't your twins in your wagon with another boy, and they're speeding your team around the track against Sam Tucker's span o' racers."

Now the young horses Mr. Edgett had driven to the fair were the pride of his eyes. They had a pedigree to brag of, and were beautiful bays, gentle, intelligent, and only four years and a half old. No hand but his own had ever driven them, and here were Jack and Jim, one holding the lines, the other the whip, while the horses were blindly running, yes, running away. The wagon was heavy, but it bounced from side to side like a feather. If Mr. Edgett's first thought was, "Those horses will be ruined," his second was, "those boys will be killed," and he ran swiftly across the grounds hoping to be able to head them off. People sprang out of his way. He was so white, so terrible in his haste, no one needed to be told his relationship to the boys.

"You'll be dragged!" cried lame Ira Bliss, hobbling after his old school-fellow.

"You'll be dragged, and perhaps crushed," echoed Tom Dickson, the most fearless horseman of the county. "Hold on there, I say!"

The father set his teeth together. There was in him that madness of courage that nerves the weakest creature to save its young. In an instant the horses were upon him, trampling, dragging, plunging. Nobody could tell just what happened, but the surgeon said Farmer Edgett had three ribs broken, and with many tears, an hour later, Jim confided the story of the runaway to Tom Dickson, and his own sisters, Tilly and Emmeline:

"It was that cider in the hogshead that put us up to it," he said. "It made Jack kind of wild, and when he heard Sam Tucker a-bragging of his team, and folks asking him to drive it round the track, nothing would do but he must get our team. I didn't know enough to stop him, for the stuff had made me kind of heavy, and I did just as he said, and so did Peter."

Bad news travels fast and goes everywhere. Mrs. Scrann could no more have kept it than a muslin bag could have kept in the gas of soda water.

"My Solomon's got two ribs broken!" cried Mrs. Edgett trying to draw herself up from the red plush lounge. "Help me up!"

"Now lie down, Mis' Edgett," said Mrs. Scrann pushing her back. "You look fit to drop. I didn't say two ribs, I said three, but Dr. Hitchcock'll bring him round. They've got him bandaged up pretty comfortable."

"I'm not sick a bit," said Mrs. Edgett, sitting up this time with determination if not strength. "I've been kind o' beat out lately." And then without a sign of warning, she fainted dead away again.

The leopard is proverbially slow to change his spots, but in the year that followed a few changes took place in the Edgett household. Never since he was a very small boy had Solomon Edgett been ill, and the suffering he endured when fever set in with his broken ribs, however unpleasant for him to bear, was an excellent discipline for his soul, and when he was able to go about he told Mary Ellen he'd give her two dollars a week to stay at home, and one Sunday afternoon he astounded his wife by suggesting that, as she made the butter, she'd better keep half of it, with all the egg money, to spend as she pleased for her own and the children's needs. But he hadn't any mildness of spirit for the agent of the patent cider press, who came with one of his machines all the way up Muller Hill, expecting to make a trade.

"No," said the farmer, scowling. "No. I haven't a mite o' use for a cider press."

"U—r-r-, why?" asked the agent, scratching his head. He had a distinct remembrance of the interest Mr. Edgett had shown in the press at the fair, and could scarcely believe his ears.

"Why?" The brown fist was brought down on the rail of the snow-white stoop with a force that made it quiver. "Why? Because I've found out there's a devil in cider. Yes, sir, a devil"—he hesitated an instant, and a simile heard in childhood came to his aid, "as big as a woodchuck! You can't sell a press to me, not if you talk a week."

Terre Haute, Ind.

WORDS TO THE WISE:—AWAKE, THOU THAT SLEEPEST!

BY ABBY MORTON DIAZ.

The question is often asked, If women are naturally men's equals why are they so far behind? Also, Why have not their names been as prominent as men's names in science, in philosophy, literature, art; why have they not been distinguished as inventors, as discoverers, and as leaders of thought generally? How has all this come about?

A moment's reflection will show that it has come about naturally enough. In the beginning of things this world of mankind was run chiefly on a physical basis. Owing to the unsettled state of affairs the tenure of property was insecure, and the rule was that "He who has the power may take, and he may keep who can." Life was a struggle for existence, just animal existence, and the means for it were gained by the direct bodily effort of tilling the soil and by tending flocks and herds, and by the chase, and by raiding.

As woman's special duties, household and maternal, barred her from these necessary pursuits she came to be considered chiefly in regard to her special duties, and as these affected man, her own life was not important excepting as it was necessary to the comfort and sensual gratification of man, and to perpetuate the race. She must bear children to her husband that they might inherit his property, and his name; her own property and name and very existence being merged in his.

In a time when nearly all occupations demanded physical prowess and out-door life, woman could not possibly come to the front. Thus her inferiority became established for the simple reason that in the then recognized aims of life she could not be other than inferior. It was not an age of thought. The thinking was done by a very few, and the thoughts they thought, and the beliefs they believed, and whatever came to them by inspiration and intuition, all this was hedged about with mystery and secrecy as being too sacred for the people, and useless, and, indeed, dangerous, except for the initiated.

Things are different now. Ours is the age of thought; thought is busy in every direction, discovering, inventing, planning all sorts of plans for righting wrongs, yes, and for inflicting wrongs as well, for when a trust or a combine, or a "corner"-maker thinks out ways of increasing the prices of food and fuel, or ways of securing laws for self's individual advantage, all this is but a so-called civilized way of carrying out the old barbaric raiding by the rule that "He may take who has the power, and he may keep who can"; though now substituting brain force for brute force.

But for women there is hope and surety of gain in the very fact that thought power does now take the place of physical strength, for the region of thought is common ground, and the best thought will ultimately rule, irrespective of sex or condition; and in this way the right will be made to displace the wrong as light displaces darkness.

Now, then, since the best thoughts are to rule let woman think the best ones—best for the race. But in order to do this she must keep herself informed of what is going on in the world about her. She must feel that it is in all respects just as much her world as man's world, and that equally with him she is concerned in the management of its affairs. Business methods, political methods, these are her concern, hence, she must keep an eye on these as they are shown up in the daily journals and others.

